The MODEL Extension Carnation Support.

LANCASTER, PA., June 17, '99.

MR. THERON PARKER, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Dear Sir:—Your Model Carnation Support is a right in every way and will no doubt be considered as necessary as good plants with growers when better known. I consider it the best on the market, and if your other specialties are equally as good, they should make another addition to the money makers of 1900. Respectfully,

ALBERT M. HERR.

FLATBUSH, BROOKLYN, N. Y. Feb. 13, '97.

MR. THERON PARKER.

Dear Sir:—Your wire stake is certainly a gem. Without hesitating we indorse it as an up-to-date carnation support. Yours truly,

DAILLEDOUZE BROS.

W. HOBOKEN, N. J., Feb 18, '97.

MR. THERON PARKER.

Dear Sir:—It gives me much pleasure to congratulate you upon your success in getting up carnation supports. I think that those I have had from you are about as perfect as anybody will be able to make them. They certainly fill my bill for an ideal carnation support, a thing I have been looking for a long time. Wishing ery success in the sale of them, I am Yours truly E. ASMUS.

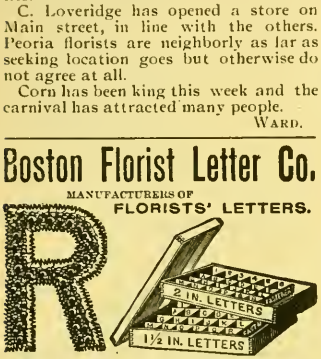
AFFAIRS IN THE SECOND CITY OF ILLINOIS. MURRAY'S FINE CHRYSANTHEMUMS.—A NEW STORE.

Trade is good at present, there having been an active demand both for cut flowers and plants since the frost killed outside stock. J. C. Murray was the first to cut violets and chrysanthemums. Henry Baer, who has charge of the stock, has produced the finest chrysanthemum plants ever grown in this city. There are nearly 100 buds on some plants and they are furnished with foliage down to the pots. Joseph Reeve is foreman for Mr. Murray. Cole Bros. are cutting a great many good roses, especially Beauties.



C. Loveridge has opened a store on Main street, in line with the others. Peoria florists are neighborly as far as seeking location goes but otherwise do not agree at all.

Corn has been king this week and the carnival has attracted many people.

GREENHOUSE WOODWORK.

Open-air-dried Cypress Lumber is more durable, and better suited to Greenhouse conditions, than kiln-dried stock. But you cannot get it from those that are engaged in the business in a small way—even though their entire business is confined to greenhouse material—for it takes a long time for the lumber to thoroughly dry and this means an investment in lumber that only those of large capital can make. The only way to have air-dried lumber is to buy green lumber and hold it until it dries. Those that order dry lumber from the producers of Cypress get kiln-dried stock. It is cheaper for them to kiln-dry than to hold the stock long enough to season it in the open air. We carry a large stock and fill all orders with open-air-dried Cypress clear of knots, sap and all other defects.

Peabody, Mass.

Persistent effort has built up a splendid trade for J. M. Ward and 10,000 feet of glass is hardly sufficient to supply his wants. This year he put up an additional rose house 25x100 and has it planted with as fine a lot of budded stock, Brides and Bridesmaids, as one ever saw. One house is devoted to chrysanthemums, from which Mme. Bergmann was cut the first of October. Lizzie McGowan is by far the best white carnation on the place, except, perhaps, a white seedling of Silver Spray crossed Anna Webb which has so many merits that I predict a future for it. Another good seedling is a cross of Daybreak and McGowan, with habit decidedly like the latter. A sport from McGowan, a shade darker than Scott is also being grown. Other stock on the benches is Jahn's Scarlet, Daybreak, Mrs. Bradt and Scott. Among the violets Lady Campbell shows abundant health. TAP.

Cottage Gardens in Fall.

When Cottage Gardens are mentioned one is sure to think of carnations. It is not so well known, however, how extensively geraniums are grown there or that it boasts the best selected collection of these in the United States. All the new varieties of whatever origin, are given a trial, their character and behavior under various conditions closely compared and their value as bedders or conservatory bloomers determined. The various classes into which geraniums are now divided are kept distinct, an entire house being given to one division, sometimes. The number of varieties under test or cultivation is very large and those enumerated herein are only a selection of the finest of the novelties as seen under Mr. Ward's guidance in a visit about the middle of October. The advance over the geraniums of a few years ago is remarkable and the steadily increasing demand in all classes gives the best of assurance that, whatever may become of the rest of the so-called bedding plants, the geranium's popularity is greater to-day than ever before.

Among the doubles, in scarlet and vermilion shades, Mr. Ward recommends John Doyle as unexcelled. It is bright scarlet, bearing an immense bloom and stands the exigencies of the weather, being presentable when all others have succumbed. Leonard Kelway is a glorious flower but is too stunted in growth and is easily supplanted by Lafayette, which has all its good qualities and is a good grower. Its color is identical with S. A. Nutt. Canovas, a cardinal scarlet, maroon shaded, bids fair to supersede Nutt, its habit, color and size of bloom being all that could be desired. Pasteur is a pure scarlet vermilion, full of life; Raspiel an unequaled scarlet with a model flower; Richelieu a semi-dwarf, flowering low; J. J. Harrison an enormous scarlet bloom but flowering too late to be valuable in this section; Emmanuel Arene a vermilion with white heart, in fact a double Hoste, and Malgache an orange vermilion which is in a class by itself, as yet being the nearest approach, so far, towards a pure yellow.

Among pink bedders Frances Perkins is the peer of all. It is pure in color with a white eye and although the trusses are not large there are plenty of them. Modesty can best be described as a double Madonna. Its color is a lovely peach blossom. J. B. Varrone and Herbert Charron are excellent double aureoles, the first deep rose fading to white in the center and the latter soft pink with vermilion rose edge, and Surprise is a good deep pink bedder. Of the lighter tints one of the best is Mme. Jaulin, white and pink flushed in the manner of apple blossoms. It has Poitevine habit and cannot be beater as a Christmas bloomer. Fraicheur is a very distinct variety in the new picotee section, pure white with a dainty pink edge and porcelain texture in the petal. In salmons Mme. Charotte is a strong rival for Poitevine. It is softer in color and the leaf zone is more pronounced. More brilliant than Poitevine is Mme. Landry, a florilerous, healthy dwarf-growing variety that should be in every list.

In crimsons there is the Pride of Ryecroft and Dr. Despres. The latter bears a very large individual flower. Of the newer carmine shades, Cæsar is a good type. It may be called a carmine lake with a scarlet flush at the base of the petals, a most unusual combination not popular until this year, when it seems to have "caught on" and made a place for itself. The best in this section is Klaber, which Mr. Ward says made an incomparably brilliant show on the lawn the past season. Henry de Parville is a fine crimson, one of the best. It might be said in passing, that many of the varieties reviewed here are described in English catalogues very differently as to color. The difference in climate accounts for this mainly, our bright sun bringing out scarlet tints where none appear under the moist, cloudy conditions prevailing in England.

In single varieties of recent origin, J. P. Cleary, an American scarlet sort, is worthy of mention. It is possible the claim may be made that this variety is identical with Universe, for they are very similar, but growing side by side it is seen that Cleary is taller in growth, has a larger truss and rounder flowers. Ben Schroeder and Gertrude Pearson are fine single pinks, the latter with a white eye, and Granville is one of the best for outdoor work. Pouschkine is an elegant aureole, pure carmine with clear white heart, and Blanche Jamais a brilliant carmine thickly veined toward the center on a white ground.

A most interesting section is that known as the English round-flowered. They are almost exclusively for conservatory decoration and practically useless as bedders. They represent the highest advance in form and size of floret. In scarlets, there are Lillian Duff, flame scarlet, described as crimson in English catalogues; Oliver, which is an improved Mme. Hoste; Lord Kitchener, vermilion; Andrew Laing, which resembles Oliver but with larger and brighter flower; Hall Caine, a handsome light vermilion; Pierre Le Brun, a large scarlet; De la Vigne, a strikingly brilliant cardinal scarlet slightly veined maroon; Chaucer, called in England a cerise but nearer to vermilion as seen here; Herrick, a glowing scarlet with vermilion tendency rather than crimson as described by the introducer, and Paul Maurice, which is a French variety scarcely distinguishable from Herrick but may show a difference in growth and habit after further trial.

Barbara Hope, Mary Pelton and Ian Maclaren are all handsome salmons the two first being white towards the center, flowers of enormous size and Ian Maclaren being remarkable for its full round blossoms. The largest bloomer of all is Mrs. Williams which bears pink flowers full three inches in diameter, each floret borne on a long individual stem. George Sand is a blush white thickly sprinkled with carmine dots and Daumier is similarly dotted on a deeper pink ground with white eye. Rudyard Kipling is a crimson overlaid with purple with a scarlet eye and Mark Twain a fine aureole flaked with carmine and veined to the margin with scarlet lake.

Among the best of the newer ivy leaved geraniums are Centenaire, with deep rose flowers; Beauty of Castle Hill, a salmon rose; Rycroft Suprise, a pure rose; H. T. Wooderson, also rose; Beauty of Jersey, deep rose, and Achievement, which is a cross between the ivy leaved and zonal sections and is the cream of the whole collection.

A look at the carnations is always in order at Cottage Gardens. Mr. Ward expresses satisfaction with the fall trade in field plants, which has been very steady, and the stock of most varieties is well depleted. In his own planting Mr. Ward has gone most heavily into Crane, Maceo, New York and White Cloud with a strong representation, also, of Gomez, Mrs. Bradt and Mrs. James Dean. He has suffered much from stem rot on Melba, America, Glacier and New York. In the case of America he believes that the change from the heavy clay soil of its native place to the rich loam of his location is largely responsible and this rule seems to hold good especially with all varieties of large, succulent growth, such as America and Glacier. He regards New York as the most profitable pink variety with him and has discarded all other yellows for Gold Nugget. Gov. Griggs looks very promising. Gov. Roosevelt also impresses favorably. It appears to have improved its habit considerably since last year. A new seedling of Dorner's looks as though it might be a dangerous rival for Mrs. Jas. Dean. It is on the same type but blooms much freer. A sport from Flora Hill, possessing the much desired stifler stem, is being watched with deep interest.

Winter Treatment of Pansies.

IN MASSACHUSETTS.

Pansies are usually wintered in cold frames by retail florists. The seed is sown in July and August and transplanted to the frames three to four inches apart in September, October and November. Care should be taken to have the surface of the soil in the frames enough higher than the paths outside to prevent water from running in. The frames are usually covered with sash, in which case plenty of air is given on mild days. If the frames are only covered with shutters or boards the covering should not be put on till late in the season, after the ground has frozen pretty solid, in which condition it should be kept through the winter by excluding the sun. Put on sash as early in spring as it is desired to start them into growth.

Wholesale growers, some of whom have several hundred thousand plants to carry over winter, transplant them to beds which are made three to four feet wide in the open field. In this latitude transplanting should be done not later than October 10, so as to give the plants time to become well rooted before winter. The pansy is a very hardy plant and will stand almost any amount of cold, but the plants are often killed in winter by alternate freezing and thawing and by water standing and freezing around the stems.

To prevent injury the beds should, if possible, be located so that the water will easily run off and have the paths between the beds at least five or six inches deep and a foot or more wide. Care should also be taken to make the surface of the beds firm and smooth and a little higher in the middle than on the edges. To prevent injury from alternate freezing and thawing, cover the plants very lightly with coarse swale hay, only just enough to cover them from sight, for too much or too close a covering is worse than none at all. To prevent the hay from being blown off by high winds, put on some evergreen boughs or brush, which will also give the ground a little more shade without excluding the air.

THE LATE C. W. SCHIRRMACHER.

If we could depend upon snow covering the ground from the first of December to April, there would be no need of protecting the plants with anything else, for there is no better covering for the protection of plants in winter; but if pansies are treated in the above manner any quantity of plants can be carried through the winter in good condition in the open ground and will come out in spring as green as leeks, no matter what the winter may be.

L. W. GOODELL.

IN ILLINOIS.

We find it necessary to make two sowings of pansies for our trade, one in the fall and another early in the new year. The reason for this is that we have a big demand the latter part of May and by that time the fall sown plants have become too large to give as good satisfaction as the later stock. Where they are wanted for planting out in beds in early spring the plants should be put into their winter quarters as soon as possible to become thoroughly established before the severe weather sets in.

Pansies need a light, rich soil but stiff enough to allow the plants to make a sturdy growth and not become weak and straggling. We set our plants out in frames and encourage them to make as good a growth as we can before it starts to freeze. The sash are not yet put on at all except during heavy rains. The plants are given this treatment until the beds are frozen hard, when the frames are covered with shutters and banked up around the sides with leaves and straw. They are allowed to remain this way until the weather becomes very severe, when additional material is covered over them, in which condition they remain till spring.

The main thing we find is to have the beds frozen before covering and to keep them so till light is given in early spring. The greatest enemy we have to deal with are the field mice, which rout the beds all up if they are not thoroughly frozen before being closed up for the winter.

We find the best demand for the rich velvety kinds, no matter if they are not of the largest size. Beaconsfield is a good seller as also are the yellows and whites together with the peacock varieties. The blacks do not seem to do at all here and our customers have not fancied the new red and brown shades yet.

C. W. JOHNSON.

IN PENNSYLVANIA.

So far as I have observed and have been able to ascertain, the growing of pansies does not obtain to such an extent in Philadelphia as in some other cities. Most all who grow plants for market have them with other plants, for they are mostly for local use. The usual course of treatment is much as follows:

Seeds are sown about September in light, rich soil, and in situations where they may be shaded from strong sunlight in the hottest part of the day. The seedlings, from their first appearance, must have a free circulation of air at all the times. As soon as the young plants are large enough to handle they are dibbled out, either into flats or a cold frame, and in this way are wintered, either by protecting the frame from freezing or, if the plants are in flats, removing the latter to some quite cool greenhouse. As is well understood, the pansy is the better for being in a temperature of about 40° through the winter months.

The soil for pansies should be quite rich, as this ensures to healthy plants, rich green leaves and full-sized flowers. When well decomposed the soil can hardly be too rich. Rich food, coolness of temperature and lots of air in winter, are essentials.

When grown in flats, a dozen or two in one of them, they are often sold in that way, customers setting them in beds in early spring direct from the boxes; they are likewise taken from frames and set out in the same way. When pots are used, the old way and still the best for general convenience, the potting is done in early spring, just as winter closes. It takes but a few weeks for new roots to take hold of the fresh soil and by planting out time new growth of root and top has well set in.

CLEMATIS PANICULATA IN A PRIVATE GARDEN AT PLYMOUTH, MASS.

I do not think there is anything in this different from the usual method of growing the pansy. If the plants were grown for wholesaling there might be something to be said of new wrinkles in the management of the pansy in winter, which such a business would necessitate.

JOSEPH MEEHAN.

Clematis Paniculata.

This plant is suited to the climate and the wants of this country so well that one wonders where it was so very many years before its introduction to our gardens; it is by no means a new plant, having been sent to Europe from Japan so long ago as 1796. But that it takes a long time for a good thing to become known is shown in the case of many of our best shrubs, such as the Japanese Judas tree, the Exochorda grandiflora, Japanese hydrangea and snowball. It can be said of nearly all these that, though in nurseries here for thirty to forty years, they have been really unknown until recently in very many collections.

Clematis paniculata completely eclipses the old C. flammula, itself a valuable species, and before the advent of C. paniculata, universally planted for its feathery white bloom and sweet scent. In many situations C. flammula would partly die back in winter, but this C. paniculata never does. It blooms here in September, while C. flammula is an August bloomer. In shady places I have seen it flowering in the early days of October.

The rapid growth of this vine enables it quickly to cover a trellis, and it is thus excellent for shading purposes. Two other feathery white ones are good in the same way, C. vitalba and C. Virginiana, but these are not its equal either in beauty of foliage or flowers, while most all of the large-flowered section are not productive enough of foliage to have value for shading purposes.

The grounds of many of our well-to-do people are enclosed by an ornamental railing, and I have seen this clematis planted at the posts, sometimes alternately with the honeysuckle, to great advantage. There is a looseness of growth about it which is a relief to the formal posts, which would otherwise be seen.

Last summer one of our florists grew a lot of this clematis in 7-inch pots. The plants were vigorous, three years old. A little triangular arrangement of stake was used, tied together at the top. The plants were cut back when potted; soon the fresh growth covered the framework, and many plants were disposed of then and later when bedecked with their clusters of white flowers, the whole lot quickly disappeared.

It is a beautiful vine for a doorway and even set to a stout stake in a garden or to any object desired covered, it is most useful. Many an ill-shapen shrub or decaying evergreen could be made beautiful by giving them up to this clematis, letting it ramble over them. Though flowering late in summer it is not too late for the seeds to ripen, and they can be gathered by the time freezing weather comes. Plants are easily raised from seeds. Though I have not personally raised C. paniculata from seed I have grown C. flammula and have no doubt the same treatment would answer for both. Sow the seed in shallow boxes any time after thoroughly ripe. Place them in a cool greenhouse, under a stage, the boxes covered with glass. Probably no water will be needed all winter, the damp ground and soil in the box affording the little moisture required. In late spring or early summer the seedlings should show, when the boxes should be brought up to receive more light.

JOSEPH MEEHAN.

[The illustration shows a plant of C. paniculata in a private garden at Plymouth, Mass. It grows about 200 feet from tide water, writes the owner, and is fully exposed. The plant was placed in its present position five years ago and was then two years old. It is cut down every autumn to within eighteen inches of the ground and has no protection against the severity of the winter.—ED.]

About Retailing Cut Flowers.

The question of buying and selling cut flowers may be dismissed with a word, for every retailer thinks he knows his business, but if it is discussed thoroughly it will run through several chapters. When I ran a retail store I did not stop to question the wholesale prices. I was always looking for the finest stock on the market and figured that if the quality was there the price cut little figure. That is to say, if I paid a cent or two more for first-class flowers they would keep better and would always command 25 cents or 50 cents a dozen more than would the lower grades. I could always get better prices than my neighbor, who paid less, because I did not have to rush off my stock; properly handled it was worth even more the second day than it was the day I bought it, for it improved in water.

But to-day, with so many commission firms, the retail buyer runs around looking for the lowest price and often gets left, for the choice stock which he could have secured at one place is sold while he is on his unsuccessful search for a cheaper price. Then he consoles himself with the thought that the public doesn't appreciate the difference in flowers and takes what he can get. That is where he makes his mistake for while there are many who do not know a first-class flower from a medium one there are many who do and are willing to pay the price for the former.

Cut flowers should be retailed with a profit of at least 100 per cent and if a storeman has good stock and firm prices he makes as much on one sale as the cheap competitor makes on half a dozen sales. Now-a-days, when people run around for bids on a job, you can set it down that they know nothing about flowers and you must take a different course than cutting prices to make the sale. Suppose a customer comes in and asks the price of a 24-inch pillow. The very question betrays the "shopper." Then is your chance to tell not how cheap you will make the piece but to ask what is expected for the money and to tell what you will use for this price or that. Don't let the other fellow out-do you in glowing description. Then when you have the order do the very best you can but you will find that you can work up a lot of your odds and ends with perfect satisfaction to the customer.

You might say that one cannot do this kind of work if he buys the best stock, but that is not so. If your flowers are too good for such an order you can always pick up a lot of cheap stock at times when it might be hard to get material for first-class work. However, one of the greatest troubles to-day is that the retailer depends too much on the wholesaler. He thinks he can get what he wants at the time he wants it, but that is an error, for the commission house sells over a large part of the United States and hustles to get its stock moved. The local buyer has the first chance but if he don't speak quickly there are other cities which want fine flowers and are willing to pay for them.

CHARLIE'S AUNT.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

CULTURAL NOTES.

October 21.—The chrysanthemum will be the king of the flower market for the next six weeks; they are making their appearance from every quarter now, though nothing striking has come under my notice. The varieties are the same as last year and the year previous, Mme. Bergmann, Marquis de Montmort, Lady Fitzwigram, Yellow Fitzwigram and a few Glory of Pacific.

The only novelty worthy of mention so far is Soleil d' Octobre, a fine yellow of easy growth. It is very similar in color and form to that well known variety, Mrs. J. G. Whilldin, but it seems to be earlier than any other yellow of its size, which should make it valuable. We have a few plants of a pink variety named Adele. The blooms, nearly ready to cut, are a beautiful color and if it stands shipping is worthy of further trial.

The midseason varieties are fast expanding their petals and our principal work connected with them is to maintain a dry atmosphere and even temperature and remove any decayed leaves or suckers. The soil in the beds should be kept a little on the dry side now but not enough to cause the plants to wilt in the least. The blooms should be allowed to stand in water over night before shipping. Flowers with stems three and one-half or four feet long, with heavy foliage, should have at least fifteen inches of water to stand in. Be sure the blooms are kept as near upright as possible and in a dry place with the temperature as near as possible to 50°.

JAMES HARTSHORNE.
President-elect Chicago Florists' Club.

Specimen plants that are intended for the shows early next month should be well along in color by now and if any are at all backward get them into a warmer place and as near the glass as practicable and keep a little on the dry side. This will help them along considerably but it must not be overdone so that the shoots become drawn and weak or the effect of a fine specimen will be lost.

If the plants have not had their final tying it is almost too late to do much except arrange the shoots if they have become bunched, and care must be taken in doing this so as not to bruise the petals at all or the blooms will soon have the appearance of being old. As soon as you have the blooms at the stage where you can feel sure that they will be on time it is a good plan to harden the plants up a bit by giving a little lower temperature with plenty of ventilation to bring out the character of each individual bloom, which adds greatly to the beauty of the specimen.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY'S SILVER CUP.

The officers of the Cheysanthemum Society of America have decided to award a silver cup valued at $20 to the seedling chrysanthemum which averages the highest number of points. To be eligible in this contest, the seedling must be shown to at least three committees, and from their scoring an average will be made.

Dinner of the New York Gardeners.

The New York Gardeners' Society gave a dinner on October 14, at the Mott Memorial Hall, 64 Madison avenue. After a short business session, in which the regular November meeting was advanced one week to allow the members to attend the Tarrytown show, the society and its guests, representing the Tarrytown, Westchester, Putnam and New Jersey societies, sat down to the sumptuous repast prepared for them and when the convivial mercury had risen they were like the little boy who, in the absence of his father, was invited to ask the blessing and said, "O Lord, open thou our lips and our mouths shall show forth thy praise."

Patrick O'Mara presided as toastmaster, with his accustomed eloquence and wit, and the company, catching the spirit from him, responded and it was a late hour before the diners separated. Samuel Henshaw, of the Botanical Gardens, spoke of that work and urged the use of their collections by gardeners, promising in the near future a gathering that would bring together the gardeners of New York and outlying suburbs for the purpose of making them acquainted with the collection and each other.

James I. Donlan responded to "Decorative Art as Applied to Flowers," with a few words upon this but poorly understood and often neglected branch and his remarks were well received. Mr. Hamilton, of the New York Park Gardeners, interested all present with the efforts of that society to raise the position of the gardener in the public parks above that of the mere laborer, telling also how the pay had been advanced through their effort and a large greenhouse built, costing $35,000. He was warmly applauded.

The secretary of the New Jersey Floricultural Society alluded to the coming of the S. A. F., with its tendency to bring a closer union between the florists of New York and sister societies, where all would labor shoulder to shoulder for its success, and expressed the hope that future flower shows, instead of being regarded from a monetary point, would be viewed only as an educating influence and would be supported by the patronage of some institution like the New York Botanical Garden or from a sinking fund cheerfully contributed to this end. The president of the New Jersey Floricultural Society eloquently bore testimony to the excellence of the repast and the fraternal feeling everywhere manifest.

Thomas Coleman responded for the Tarrytown, John Shore for the Westchester and Richard Griggs for the Putnam county societies. Robert Angus played the violin and songs were given by Alfred Dimmock and George Smith.

A first-class certificate was awarded to Ernst Asmus for some fine Liberty roses and honorable mention to Richard Griggs for chrysanthemum Glory of Pacific. A vote of thanks was given for the beautiful and extensive table decorations.

A Floral Urn.

A detailed description of the handsome design illustrated is unnecessary, so well does the engraving show the details of its make-up. There is much in its conception that is artistic and pleasing to even a critical eye and no one will doubt that if the correct taste displayed here prevailed more generally in the designing of floral pieces much of the criticism that has brought the very name of "floral design" into disrepute might have been disarmed. The piece was made at the establishment of Julius A. Zinn, of Boston, to whom we are indebted for the photograph. The cherub perched on the arm of the urn adds greatly to the interest of the picture, but this is Mr Zinn's own property and not every florist is fortunate enough to possess a duplicate.

CARNATIONS.

CULTURAL NOTES.

October 21.—Our plants ought to be growing vigorously now; in fact we need to watch them carefully to see that the equilibrium is maintained between the top of the plant and the root. Root action can be induced by keeping the soil moderately dry. As nearly as I can learn the best rule to follow is to apply about one-third the amount of moisture to your soil that it will hold. We do not often get our operations down to quite such a fine point as this but we can use the rule as a sort of guide. This treatment may be maintained until about November 1 and by that time all plants housed early in September should have plenty of roots to carry them through the winter.

While chrysanthemums are not cutting quite so big a figure as in some former years, we carnation men do not want to cheapen the carnation by over-stocking the market with our flowers at this time. It is far better wisdom on our part to cut out all weak and inferior buds and allow only the very best to form flowers. Possibly these choicer flowers may not bring us as much money as we really ought to have for them, while the chrysanthemums are on, but if they do not we can rest assured that poorer ones would bring us scarcely anything. Even if we are not well paid for the better grade of flowers during October and November we are sure of their imparting as it were, a "tone" to our stock, which is bound to make our season's cut profitable.

The high prices of the past few weeks may have tempted some growers into forcing their stock but it is far too early in the season to ask extra work of our plants. I have seen forced plants on which there were on October 15 as many as eleven buds to a plant, requiring the whole strength of the plants for their development. To cut out seven or eight of these buds seems like throwing good money away, but it should not be looked upon in that light; it is simply an investment on which you draw dividends later in the season. The flowers left to open may not bring you as much money as the eleven would but instead of having eleven flowers within the next month, when they are little wanted, and possibly only one or two for Christmas, you will have three good ones now, and at Christmas enough to make a good dividend on your investment.

It is a pity the growers for the larger markets, who sell through the commission men, cannot make some arrangement to regulate the supply of flowers for dull seasons. There are other things beside the production of flowers that are necessary to our success in business and we are very apt to overlook them through our love for our work and products and the desire for quantity.

AMERICAN VARIETIES IN ENGLAND.

Among the carnations of American origin now offered by English growers are America, G. H. Crane, Maud Adams, Melba, Flora Hill, Triumph, Bridesmaid, Daybreak, Victor, Mrs. McBurney, Bon Ton, Evelina, Lily Dean, Mayor Pingree, Mrs. James Dean, Painted Lady, Empress, Mrs. Geo. M. Bradt and White Cloud. The favorites so far appear to be Flora Hill and White Cloud.

WITH THE GROWERS.

JOSEPH HEACOCK, WYNCOTE, PA.

One of the most successful American Beauty growers for the Philadelphia market is Joseph Heacock, whose greenhouses are situated at Chelten Hills near Jenkintown. Here he has about 75,000 feet of glass in houses of good size, all of which are quite up-to-date in their various appointments. Like most other Philadelphia growers, Mr. Heacock is conservative and has done little building the past few years, although some little increase in glass was made this season by lengthening and widening two houses.

A recent visit to the place showed everything to be in "apple pie" order. There seemed scarcely a square foot of table space that was not covered with stock that was, to use a nautical phrase, pulling grandly. American Beauties are Mr.

Heacock's specialty. House after house, each one of which seemed to look better than the other, is filled with splendid plants of this rose. This state of excellence is not the result of chance, but was brought about by patiently working away, not being discouraged by failures, but noticing the mistakes and carefully avoiding them in future trials, until finally a system was perfected that is reasonably sure, always of course, with the exercise of the proper vigilance, to produce abundant crops of high grade flowers.

One of the houses is filled with plants of Beauty, the cuttings for which were not put in the sand until after the first of April. The bushes are now thirty to thirty-six inches high and growing vigorously. All the roses are on tables about three feet from the ground and the situation of the houses, on rising ground, enables one table to be set from six inches to one foot above the other. There is a walk in nearly all the houses next the outside, or, I should say, along either end and in the front or lower side of the house, the back table at the upper part being next the wall. This modern plan of moving the front table back and taking this space for the walk and placing the steam pipes against the front wall is, in Mr. Heacock's estimation, one of the greatest advances in greenhouse construction and arrangement. By keeping the walls dry the life of the house is greatly lengthened and, having the heating pipes at the coldest part, the temperature is kept more even. With the old arrangement the front table was always an annoyance, the plants so soon reaching the glass, when they had to be continually tied down and produced many crooked-stemmed buds.

The black spot used to be a great trouble but now good growers like Mr. Heacock are careful to not let it get ahead of them. He is continually picking off the affected leaves and keeping the plants as clean as possible. Keeping down red spider without encouraging spot requires nice syringing. Lonsdale's evaporating pans are the best thing Mr. Heacock has found for combatting greenfly. He uses five pans to a 100-foot house and has them in every house on the place. These pans are filled every afternoon with a strong tobacco water and as long as they are in use they are never troubled with greenfly. It is by far the best and most economical way to use tobacco as an insecticide. There are several oil barrels distributed about the sheds, which are kept filled with fresh tobacco stems, one filling of stems making two barrels of liquid, which is drawn off at the bottom by a spigot. Each day, as soon as emptied, the barrel is filled with water so as to be full strength when wanted.

The watering of the place is all done with tepid water, the heating of which is arranged for automatically by a thermostat which turns steam on or off a coil that is in the water tank. Manure water is also applied with a hose connected with a tank erected on the highest ground on the place. There are two tanks in fact; into one the manure is dumped from a cart and flooded with water which is strained and run into the other, from which, by force of gravity, it is carried to all parts of the place. The system is very complete and convenient.

The steam heating pipes are arranged in a novel manner. They are all carried on chains and suspended from the cross supports below the tables or from the roof of the house. This gives free play for expansion and contraction without interfering with the supports, as is often the case in the old methods. The steam main is always carried to the farthest end of the house, being covered to prevent condensation before the return or radiating pipes are reached, the steam returning through as many pipes as are necessary to keep the temperature at the required degree.

In addition to roses Mr. Heacock makes a specialty of palms and has a number of houses filled with arecas and kentias. Although comparatively a new departure, their cultivation being undertaken only about five or six years ago, he has been very successful and his stock is quite up to the standard of the best growers. He finds the areca to do best on the ground or table, rather than on a pedestal, as they require too much water to be grown that way. He uses considerable sand and peat in his potting soil, to make it quite porous. He, in common with other growers, has been trying to get up a large grade of arecas but the demands of the trade have kept using up the young stock so that it is hard to keep any to grow on. "We put on a good price to keep them," he said, "but the rising market catches up to our figure and we have to let them go." A few large twenty-five dollar plants which he has been able to get up are fine specimens.

A change in his partition doors between houses has saved Mr. Heacock quite a lot of valuable space, the doors all being made to slide on rollers instead of swinging. Mr. Heacock is one of the few growers who keeps a careful record of what each house pays him in the course of a season and soon drops an unprofitable crop. He is a hard worker but is at all times glad to entertain visiting craftsmen and show them about the establishment.

FINE BERGMANN BLOOMS IN MARKET.—ROSES MORE PLENTIFUL.—"MOCK LIBERTY" OBTAINABLE BUT NONE OF THE REAL THING.—MANY ORDERS FOR PLANTS.—PENNOCK'S MODEL PLACE.—CARNATION MEN ARE SATISFIED.—FAKIRS SEEM SUPPLIED.—PARKER HAS DAHLIAS.

While chrysanthemums have been a trifle slow in making their appearance in this market the few that are in are of good quality and a look over some of the houses of the later kinds shows them to be in first-class shape, with an unusually heavy growth, larger flowers and entire freedom from disease. The Mme. Bergmann, sent in by Zimmer, of Collingswood, is clearly the best of this variety every seen here. The price for the best stock of all sorts has been $2 per dozen. Roses are about as last week. The warm weather, more like summer than fall, has increased the quantity considerably and prices, with the exception of Beauties, which have increased to $3.50 for the first grade, have weakened a trifle; $4 and $5 will now buy the very best, the lower grades selling down to $1 per hundred.

Liberty is not on the market as yet but the "Mock Liberty" is being offered. It looks something like a strong growing Agrippina or Louis Phillipe and can be cut with a very long stem. It blooms in clusters and several small buds generally surround each open flower. When the Liberty was first seen here and its virtues recognized a firm of growers not very far from Philadelphia imported this new crimson under the impression that they were getting the famous Liberty. They soon found out their mistake. It, no doubt, has a name, but it is sold by merit and not by name at the present time. While the color is good, in substance it appears to be too soft and single to become a standard sort. "The demand for the Liberty increases with each mail," says Alexander Scott, of Robt. Scott & Son. "I doubt if we can raise enough plants by the date advertised for delivery to supply the demand."

S. S. Pennock's improved storage plant is a model. It is probably the most perfect system in this country for handling cut flowers economically and keeping them in a perfect condition. There are two cool rooms each eleven by twenty-two feet, inside measure, and twelve feet high, every square foot of which is made available by specially arranged shelves. By the refrigerating machinery placed in the cellar and driven by an electric motor the temperature is kept at from 40° to 45°. The cooling pipes, attached to the ceiling, are out of the way and take up no otherwise available space. Mr. Pennock's establishment is now open all night, three night men being employed, who receive flowers and ship orders. Stock that formerly arrived early in the morning is now received at night, the flowers sorted, graded and made ready for the earliest morning trade. Four clerks in the office and nine in the store are required to manage this large and increasing business.

Lily of the valley is becoming more plentiful. Three large out of town growers now have agencies in this city and with the local talent are likely to keep the market fairly well supplied. Carnations are coming in more freely and are steadily improving; $1.50 to $2 per hundred is the price, with a few specials at $3. All the carnation specialists are well satisfied with the situation and say their plants never looked better. Scott, Daybreak, Victor, Triumph and Dana lead in the pinks, Flora Hill, White Cloud and McGowan in the whites while Liberty, America and Portia furnish the reds.

Business is good though a trifle slower than last week. There is not much surplus apparent but the fakirs seem to have no trouble to keep their cases full. Violets, particularly the single varieties, are now plentiful; prices range from 30 cents to 50 cents per hundred. Doubles are improving but are far from standard as yet, 50 cents to 75 cents per hundred is the price.

Edward Parker is handling some nice dahlias, having found a grower whose plants were in a sheltered situation and escaped the killing frost of two weeks ago. Several patches of cosmos seem to have survived as well, as quite a little of this fall favorite is seen.

OVER-STOCKS THE RULE.—ROSES SUFFER MOST.—VIOLETS AND ROSES VERY POOR.—THE FIRST PAPER WHITES.—COMMISSION MEN OFFER LIBERAL PRIZES.

There is an over-stock of flowers in all lines at present, due mainly to the prevailing warm weather, and this, added to the effect of the rapidly increasing chrysanthemum cut, has made the situation exceedingly unpalatable to growers and commission men in the rose market. Carnations suffer less than the roses and are of better average quality. Roses have never been much poorer than at present and it will take cooler weather to make any change for the better. Violets, as a rule, are equally poor, but there are a few growers who seem to be able to manage their violets regardless of what the weather may be and these are sending good flowers and getting good money for them. The first paper white narcissi were seen at Raynor's on October 11. They were of excellent quality.

Young & Nugent have offered a prize of $50 for a collection of one hundred roses to be competed for at the exhibition of the Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Society at Madison on November 7 and 8.

SLUMP IN THE ROSE MARKET.—GREAT GLUT OF STOCK.—CARNATIONS IMPROVING.—CHRYSANTHEMUMS NOT PLENTIFUL AS YET.—DEWEY KILLS THE FLOWER TRADE.—NORTON STEALS THE ADMIRAL'S THUNDER.—CARNATION MATTERS AND OTHER JOTTINGS.

The warm weather of the past week has brought to this market a perfect avalanche of roses. Rarely at this time of the year has such a glut been precipitated. Growers are sending in four or five times the cut of two weeks ago and buyers are calling for about one-third of what they wanted then. The result is that values have gone to pieces and the big accumulation is gladly unloaded, even at $5 a thousand, on the street fakir. American Beauty has increased in quantity so much that it is impossible to maintain rates on any grade. Meteors are very poor, for some reason, but sell perhaps better than any other variety just at present. Roses in the aggregate are soft and show the ill effects of the high temperature.

Carnations are improving greatly and those coming in now are of good winter quality, but the quantity offered is so large that prices have dropped away back. White varieties are selling much better than the colored sorts. Violets are exceedingly poor, being unable to stand the weather which seems to have been so beneficial to the carnation, and the sale drags. In chrysanthemums, Glory of Pacific and Bergmann are the principal varieties offered in quantity, the former bringing about fifty per cent the better price. Of yellows there are but few seen as yet and they, on account of their scarcity, are easily sold at a considerably higher rate. Lily of the valley holds its own fairly well. Cosmos is still seen occasionally, from beds protected by glass, evidently, as the outdoor crop was completely killed by the early frost.

Last Saturday was "Dewey Day" in Boston. In the flower trade it was noticeable particularly for the fact that no flowers were sold and so it was the worst day in that respect seen this season. The decoration of the City Hall and surroundings with laurel festooning was done beautifully by W. E. Doyle but other than that the decorations were universally of bunting or electric lights. M. H. Norton was mistaken for the great admiral while driving down Beacon street and was forced to doff his hat to the crowd of admirers that followed him, cheering.

Donald Carmichael, of Wellesley, is cutting flowers from two handsome seedling carnations which appear to be much above the average. One is of Scott habit and Tidal Wave color; the other is a white with Tidal Wave habit.

Cassidy & Fitzgerald, two young men formerly in the employ of W. E. Doyle, have opened a flower store at 315 Broadway, South Boston.

A. J. Howard & Son are sending carnations of unusually fine grade to Welch Bros.

It is said that the Lawson carnation is to be put on the market the coming spring.

GOOD OUT OF TOWN TRADE.—STOCK MUCH MORE PLENTIFUL.—VIOLETS IN THE DUMPS.—CORDREY RETURNS TO THE TRADE.—MEETING OF THE HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.—PLANS FOR FALL SHOW.—ANNUAL MEETING OF FLORISTS' CLUB.—JOTTINGS HERE AND THERE IN FLOWER CIRCLES.—VISITORS.

This week began with some of the best shipping business ever recorded in mid-October and prices remained reasonably firm on good stock. True, there have been too many Bride and Bridesmaid roses for ten days past but Meteors and Beauties have not been in over supply. Neither have carnations exceeded the demand, although the cut is increasing in quantity and improving in quality. There are a great many Daybreaks again this season although they were too extensively planted last year. Chrysanthemums are now in force and will hold the center of the stage for a month or six weeks. It is the general report that the blooms are a little late this year but are better than usual. Some good Glory of Pacific and Mrs. Robinson have been in this week and have moved promptly. In fact many of the dealers are anticipating better results with chrysanthemums than for several seasons. Some of them are even counting that the heavy rose cut will be off shortly and leave a wider range for the fall flower. Violets are already fakirs property! Never since the memory of man runneth not to the contrary have there been so many and so good violets in this market at this season. On Tuesday afternoon one house claimed to have 20,000 in the ice box and others had their share.

There was a large attendance at the annual meeting of the Florists' Club, Friday evening, October 20. The sum of $50 was appropriated for premiums for the fall show of the Horticultural Society of Chicago and the following officers were elected: President, James Hartshorne; vice-president, F. F. Benthey; recording secretary, C. W. McKellar; financial secretary, John Degnan; treasurer, Edgar Sanders; trustees, J. B. Deamud, A. L. Vaughan, Alex Henderson, C. M. Dickenson, E. F. Winterson. Four new members were accepted, J. B. Deamud, J. V. Merrion, Alex. Newitt and Ernest Marland. It was decided to give a banquet to the visitors during the flower show.

At the regular quarterly meeting of the Horticultural Society last Saturday much routine business was transacted in connection with the coming chrysanthemum exhibition. Twenty-five new members were elected and the day of meeting was changed from the second Saturday to the second Tuesday of each quarter. The executive committee held a meeting Thursday, advancing exhibition work materially. The show prospects are excellent, except that chrysanthemums are reported late.

T. J. Corbrey, who for a number of years previous to March, 1896, was in the wholesale commission business, has secured a ten-years' lease of the property at 1409 and 1411 W. Madison street, and is erecting a retail store connected with a showhouse. The store is 22x38 feet with front of buff pressed brick with stone trimmings. The show house is 24x30 feet, even span, the rafters being 12½ feet on either side, with a 12-foot ridge. The sash are furnished by the Jno. C. Moninger Co., who are also putting in their new ventilator. Both store and house will be heated by hot water. Mr. Corbrey does not expect to have things in shape until about December 1.

Mangel has a very fine store in the residence district at Forty-seventh street and Lake avenue. It is a large room and he is enabled to carry a good stock of plants and bulbs as well as cut flowers. Trade is starting well with him.

Poehlman Bros. have specimen chrysanthemum plants which are selling well at from $1 to $2 each. Some of the larger ones have as many as seventy-five blooms and all are well shaped.

The Hinsdale Rose Company will cut 4,500 chrysanthemums this season, an increase of fifty per cent over last year. They have twenty-nine varieties on the place and report them all in good shape.

Capt. H. Schuenemann, who is up the lakes for his annual cargo of greens, is reported to have orders for 60,000 feet of roping from South Water street houses.

Wietor Bros. are now cutting a good crop of carnations and of all the new varieties on the place are most enthusiastic over G. H. Crane.

Bassett & Washburn are selling violets for Robert Klagge, of Mt. Clemens, Mich., who is one of the best growers in the country.

The chrysanthemum committee viewed no seedlings on the first two Saturdays of its season.

Peter Grosse has embarked in business as a grower at Touhey avenue and Robey street in Rogers Park.

Lincoln Park will have a revenue of $241,000 this year.

Visitors: B. Eschner, of M. Rice & Co., Philadelphia; Henry Smith, Grand Rapids, Mich.; Mrs. C. W. Pike, Racine, Wis.; Adam Zender, Milwaukee; Walter Mott, representing H. A. Dreer Co.; E. G. Hill, Richmond, Ind.

REFERRING to thrips, a careful experimenter recommends pyrolignite of nicotine, one part of the pyrolignite to ninety of water, applied in the form of spray, as an efficacious remedy and preventative. We shall be pleased to hear from any grower who may have tried it.

Lilium Rubellum.

A circular on this plant and its culture, apparently written by G. W. Rogers, of Yokohama, Japan, is being circulated in the trade. The author, however, is none other than our esteemed friend Peter Barr, of London, England. It is unfortunate that Mr. Barr was not given credit for the valuable information which this circular conveys. With all due respect to Mr. Rogers, the opinion of Mr. Barr on this and other bulbous plants is the more significant.

Chrysanthemum Society Committees.

The committees judging seedling chrysanthemums will be in session October 7, 14, 21 and 28, November 4, 11, 18 and 25. Exhibitors should make their entries, for which a fee of $2 is charged for each variety entered, to the secretary not later than Tuesday of the week they are to be shown. Helpful Reminders.

Your salesroom or front house should be fitted up and arranged to display to advantage the best you have to offer. Do not try to show all you have at once, however. Palms and ferns are best adapted for the permanent decoration of such a house but asparagus and other foliage plants may be used with effect. Arrange the plants so that a few specimen chrysanthemums may be raised on stands to show conspicuously with a background of green. After your customer has admired them, should he want something not displayed, invite him into the houses, where you should be able to meet his wants. You must have a room in which to show seasonable stock. You may have pretty things in several out of the way corners but if you wish to sell them you must let the people see them.

Hydrangeas should all be housed, and potted carefully in the very best soil you have. The plants prefer at present a temperature cool enough to prevent new growth but the proper ripening of the foliage is necessary, for the nutriment stored for the starting of new growths is produced by the natural ripening processes. If short of room the space under the edge of a bench will do with a fair light, provided there is not much drip from above and no heating pipes near by. Many rules are given for growing this plant but the important point is to preserve the old foliage until it has dried without allowing either decay or wilting to take place.

Lopezia rosea should receive its final shift now and the plants should be placed a good distance apart and raised on a stand or inverted pot to permit some of the stems to droop. Solanum Seaforthianum should also have an opportunity to droop as it is then extremely valuable in boxes of assorted flowers. After cutting it should stand in water over night before use.

Troubles of Petunia Roots.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—Under separate cover I am sending you some roots taken from a double petunia which I lifted from the garden. It was planted where last year I had some roses which I was suspicious were infested with eel worms. Please give probable cause of the peculiar growth of roots? Do eel worms attack other plants than roses? U. P.

The peculiar growths on the petunia roots received from "U. P." are root galls, which have been produced by nematodes, or eel worms. After their attack on the roses on the same ground last season they doubtless remained in the soil. These worms also injure tomatoes, cucumbers, violets, petunias and numerous other economic and ornamental plants. There are many species of nematodes, but it is probable that the "root knot" disease is always caused by the species Heterodera radicola, which also attacks other parts as well as the roots. B. T. GALLOWAY.

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE FLORISTS' CLUB.—ELECTION OF OFFICERS.—REPORT OF SECRETARY HENDERSON.

The Nebraska and Iowa Florists' Club held its annual meeting October 12 in its new hall at 1415 Farnam street. There was a large attendance and much good fellowship. In the election of officers President J. J. Hess and Secretary Louis Henderson were retained, Sam. Faulkner was chosen vice-president, J. H. Hadkinson, treasurer, George Swoboda, Paul Paulson and Wm. Ellsworth, trustees.

Secretary Henderson presented his report, which told, in poetic language, of the prosperity which has attended the club during the past twelve months and of the good work which has been done in the interests of floriculture and by uniting the trade in Nebraska and Iowa in the fraternal spirit which has pervaded the eleven meetings which the club has held.

Sympathetic resolutions were adopted upon the demise of Mrs. John Ederer.

Resolutions of New Jersey Society.

Following are the resolutions upon the demise of Wm. Macmillan adopted by the New Jersey Floricultural Society:

WHEREAS, In the death of William Macmillan, superintendent of the Essex County Parks and one of our active members, not only this society, but the whole community, has sustained a great and irreparable bereavement; therefore be it

Resolved, That we lament a valued fellow-member, and a kindly and sympathetic man seeking unceasingly for opportunities to advance floriculture, the art for which we all labor and in which he had risen to a recognized prominence.

Resolved, That we cherish with loving recollection the memory of his bright example, of his pure and generous nature, of his tender solicitude for the material success of others, of that gentle and considerate disposition that during a long and unselfish life, accompanied the strictest integrity, the highest honor and the most exalted piety.

Resolved, That the secretary be directed to transmit to the family of the deceased a copy of these resolutions and that they be included in the minutes of this meeting.

Resolutions of Nebraska and Iowa Florists.

At a meeting of the Nebraska and Iowa Florists' Club October 12 the following resolutions were adopted:

WHEREAS, It has been the will of Almighty God, by the hand of death, to take from our midst Mrs. John Ederer, be it

Resolved, That the members of the Nebraska and Iowa Florists' Club feel a personal grief in her death and a loss to the community.

Resolved, That we tender Mr. Ederer and family our sympathy in the sorrow they are called to bear.

Resolved, That these resolutions be spread on the minutes and that a copy be transmitted to the family of the deceased.

OBITUARY.

CHAS. BATES.

The recent demise of Charles Bates is chronicled at Hingham, Mass., as the result of disease of the heart. Mr. Bates was a veteran of the Civil War, aged 58 years, and had been in the florist business at Hingham for twenty years.

CHAS. WIESE.

Charles Wiese, who has, for the past ten years, been gardener upon the W. W. Law estate, one of the finest at Yonkers, N. Y., died at Ossining Hospital on October 6. Cancer was the cause of death. Mr. Wiese was 50 years of age and was well known in his profession.

W. A. FERRIS.

William A. Ferris, nurseryman at Darien, Conn., died quite suddenly on October 6 while visiting at the home of his father at South Norwalk. He was 35 years of age and his untimely demise was the result of a cold which quickly developed into congestion of the lungs.

C. W. REHBEIN.

Charles William Rehbein died at his home 115 Washington street, New Haven, Conn., October 6, after a brief illness, with pneumonia. The deceased had a fine business on Howard avenue. He was not married but leaves three brothers and two sisters. He was a member of Humboldt Lodge, I. O. O. F., and Connecticut Rock Lodge, F. and A. M., the latter conducting the largely attended funeral on Sunday, October 8. Interment was at Evergreen Cemetery.

GOOD BUSINESS.—CHRYSANTHEMUMS ON IN FORCE.—MEETING OF THE CLUB.—SELECTION OF JUDGES.—A GOOD SPECIMEN OF ASPARAGUS.—ROBERTSON TO LEAVE.

Social events, weddings and funerals have used up nearly all available flowers the past week and the stores have done a good business. Chrysanthemums are coming in freely and will soon have possession of the market. Julius Schuman, of Newport, Ky., had some well grown Bergmann pot plants in market and will cut his first yellow and white Robinson this week. Roses have been quite equal to the demand, with prices firm. Carnations have advanced in price to $1.50, which is considered a good figure at this time of the year. Violets are more plentiful but there is only a light demand. Princess of Wales makes the best showing.

On Saturday, October 14, the regular monthly meeting of the Society of Cincinnati Florists was held, with President Wm. Murphy in the chair. The various committees reported and after the regular routine business had been transacted some time was taken up in selecting judges for our monthly shows, which are to be held on a more elaborate scale than in previous years. Theo. Bock, Fred. Walz and Geo. Corbett were chosen. The schedule for the ensuing season was distributed and was well received. Any one wishing a copy may apply to the secretary, Geo. Bartlett, 34 Main street. W. Robertson, gardener to G. G. Schmittlapp, had on exhibition a specimen plant of Asparagus Sprengerii with sprays six feet long. Mr. Robertson will soon leave to accept a position as foreman at the Colgate Hoyt grounds, Oyster Bay, L. I., and we regret very much to have him go. H. SCHWARZ.

VALLEY.

Beginning October 15th, the forcing of Lily of the Valley will be commenced at the Rosebank Nurseries, and shipping will begin three weeks later. From that time on Valley will constitute one of the special products of Rosebank and will be constantly on hand, both summer and winter.

It is the intention of the management to make the Rosebank Nurseries headquarters for this product, and to that end a special offer of three dollars per hundred has been made to the trade on a contract for a year's supply. This offer is now withdrawn, and a new price of $3.50 per hundred is made to hold throughout the year to regular customers.

THE SEED TRADE.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

ALEXANDER RODGERS, Pres; ALBERT MCCULLOUGH, Vice-Pres; S. F. WILLARD, Wethersfield, Conn., Sec'y and Treas.

THE yield of onion seed is surprisingly less than was anticipated, due to mildew.

VISITED CHICAGO: J. A. Robinson, representing Jerome B. Rice & Co., of Cambridge, N. Y.

VISITING NEW YORK.—S. F. Willard, Wethersfield, Conn., secretary American Seed Trade Association.

THE sugar beet crop in the vicinity of Kalamazoo, Mich., will be short, but the prospects are much better than they were a few weeks ago.

H. CHEESEMAN, representative of the Cox Seed Co., of New York and San Francisco, is on crutches, having been in a runaway accident while on a visit to Watertown, N. Y.

L. L. MAY & Co., have recently published a Spanish seed catalogue for the extension of their trade to our new island possessions and the South and Central American republics.

NAVY or pea beans have advanced to $1.60 from about $1. There seems to be but few carried over and the new crop is short. For December delivery, however, they are selling a little lower.

ARTHUR H. LUCK, late with the J. A. Everitt Seed Co., of Indianapolis, passed through Chicago enroute to DesMoines, Iowa, where he will take charge of the mail order department of the Iowa Seed Co.

THE tomato seed crop in Michigan will not turn out as good as indicated in our last issue. The damage done by the frost of Octoher 1 has been found to be much more serious than at first appeared and it will shorten the anticipated yield very materially. Definite figures, however, cannot be had as yet.

Long Island Seed Crops.

The Long Island seed crops of 1899 have been the most complete failure we have ever known here. An unusually cold winter, during which the temperature reached a much lower point than we usually experience, resulted in the rotting of about one half of the heads from overfreezing. As a consequence the acreage this summer was cut down, and the stock which was planted was not in first class condition. The seeding season, from April 1 to August 1, proved to be exceptionally dry. So severe had this drought become in June, at the time when the crop most needed rain, that only a small percentage of the seed pods filled, and the result has been a crop averaging about fifteen per cent of what we might reasonably expect under ordinary conditions. L.

Corner in Flaxseed.

Flaxseed at $1.30 a bushel is twenty-five cents higher than it was during the first week in October It looks as though flaxseed was cornered. According to reputed authority, Armour & Co. and Counselman were covering their shorts freely Tuesday and an advance of eight cents a bushel attended the operations.

It is generally understood that the American Linseed Oil Company and the "Little Quakers," as the traders refer to Albert Dickinson & Co., have carried on the bull campaign. These companies have a habit, grown out of the necessities of business, of keeping men busy just before the flax harvest, taking samples of maturing flax from all sections of the country, counting the seeds in the pods of a few stalks in each sample, figuring the average from which the sample was taken and carrying on the deductions to such a fine point that an excellent estimate of the crop of the season is in their possession long before the harvest. It is shown that the stock of flaxseed in this city is 98,000 bushels, as compared with 410,000 bushels a year ago.—Chicago Journal.

Detroit.

THE FLORISTS' CLUB MAKES THE MOST OF AN OUTING.—VISIT TO SEVERAL GOOD GROWERS.—THINGS THAT WERE SEEN.—STATE OF TRADE.—PLAN FOR CO OPERATIVE PURCHASE.

Thirty members of the Florists' Club shared the pleasures of the first outing of the season on Thursday of last week. Leaving Breitmeyer's store at two o'clock we first visited Geo. A. Rackham's place, where the neatness in all his houses brought out many words of commendation. Four large houses are devoted to carnations, Cerise Queen and Scott being more largely grown than the other varieties, which are white Daybreak, Flora Hill and G. H. Crane. All were planted early and are already producing fine flowers with long stems. A house of early chrysanthemums, which are extra fine, will soon be cut and the beds planted with carnations. Another house is given to cyclamens, which are always a success here. Two houses are devoted to asparagus and small ferns and one to late chrysanthemums, which will later be used for longiflorum lilies. Mr. Rackham is a strong advocate of solid beds and butted glass, and the excellent condition of the stock in all his houses seems to justify his theories.

Breitmeyer's Mack avenue greenhouses were next visited. This branch of their establishment is in charge of Chas. Breitmeyer, whose skill as a grower is shown in all his houses, where thousands of palms, ferns and lilies are grown, and what is deserving of special mention is the splendid stock of poinsettias. The popularity of this flower here is shown by the fact that although they have over 3,000 plants Mr. Breitmeyer regrets that he has not still more to meet the demands of his retail trade. We next repaired to Pfeifler's gardens near by, where, under the palms and banana trees of the large conservatory, supper was served, after which bowling and card playing was indulged in until a late hour.

The bright, warm days of the past week have greatly increased the local supply of flowers. Roses are now quite plentiful, carnations in fair supply and chrysanthemums fast making their appearance in the stores. Trade is brisk and improving daily and supply and demand are pretty well balanced.

The club meeting Wednesday evening was well attended and the matter of local co-operative purchase was the chief subject of discussion, many signifying their willingness to avail themselves of the benefits that the plan offers.

Richard Irvine, of Bay City, was a visitor last week. J. F. S.

WHITESTONE, N. Y.—Hitchings & Co. have been securing some very good business here, building a range of 37,500 feet for Louis Dupuy and the furnishing heating and ventilating apparatus for three new houses 17x100, built by J. McMullen.

ENCOURAGING STATE OF THE MARKET.—BEAUTIES IN DEMAND.—VOLK MAKES A HIT.—VISITORS.

Warm, bright weather has brought stock in just a trifle faster than was wanted for one or two days, but not fast enough to break prices. Violets are quite plentiful; the larger singles are at present most desirable. Early chrysanthemums are well received. American Beauties sell about as clean as anything which ever came to this market. Some grades were scarce this week on account of a large number being used for the McKinley banquet; it would seem that $12 a plate would afford good quality blooms.

Mr. Volk is sending out a very taking box of mixed flowers, consisting of one Beauty and one fine Kaiserin, a bunch of marguerites, sprays of lemon verbena, a bunch of single violets, heliotrope and Asparagus Sprengerii.

The Boston fern is in demand and good potted plants are becoming scarce.

Recent visitors were A. J. Fidler, Racine, Wis.; Mr. Ohlman, Calumet, Mich., and John Muno, Rogers Park, Ill. C. B. W.

PONTIAC, MICH.—A. B. Lewis is in fine shape for the winter and has a splendid stock of chrysanthemums with which he proposes to make a public show.

UTICA, N. Y.—F. E. Shaw has leased the store at 244 Genesee street and will fit it up as a fine flower store. W. J. Crowe has leased the business of his father, Peter Crowe, established in 1872, and has opened a handsome store at 4 Lafayette street.

The Minnesota Apple Prize.

A. W. Latham, secretary of the Minnesota State Horticultural Society, 207 Kasota block, Minneapolis, is sending out a folder containing much information in regard to the society and a list of fruits recommended for the guidance of planters in Minnesota. With this is enclosed the regulations governing the award of the premium of $1,000 offered by the society for a seedling apple tree which shall fulfill certain requirements. The competition is open to all and the conditions of the contest are plainly set forth in the circular and are only such as are deemed necessary in determining that the seedling is "as hardy and prolific as the Dutchess, with fruit equal to the Wealthy in size, quality and appearance, with the keeping qualities of the Malinda." A copy of the regulations will be sent to any person interested upon application.

Fruit Trees Not Root Killed.

On looking over the plums in nursery rows last spring the writer confidently believed that fully 60 per cent of all the trees, even those on American plum stocks, would die during the summer, owing to root injury. The roots last spring in most instances were somewhat discolored and in many cases were entirely blackened. Good cultivation was given the stock, and this, coupled with abundant rains during the early and growing part of the season, has encouraged a wonderful repair of this root injury. At the present time not more than six per cent of the trees are unsalable. These unsalable trees have made little growth and the roots appear to be permanently injured. At the same time, in many cases new fibres are being thrown out and it is possible that in time the tree will become established on a new root system. In the case of the other trees—those which made a good growth—the roots have entirely recovered their normal color and appear to be in as healthy and vigorous a condition as ever.

With regard to the apple trees many curious conditions may be noticed. It is a common occurrence to find a nursery tree now entirely on its own roots. This is brought about by the killing of the seedling root from the point of union with the scion, downwards. The roots from the apple scion were, as a rule, much less injured than the roots from the seedling stock. These scion roots were, in the majority of cases, the salvation of the tree. It is probable that if the season had been one of limited rainfall, the loss to nursery stock would have been much heavier. As it was the trees made a normal growth in most cases and have now a really well developed root system. These trees should be planted somewhat deeper than they originally stood in the nursery, and I believe will make, on the whole, more reliable orchard stock than those of the seedling roots. I am of the opinion that many plums and apples which were dug out in early spring owing to their injured appearance would have made good trees by the autumn had they been allowed to stand in the nursery row and been given good cultivation.

GOOD STOCK IN THE SOUTH.—ROSES IN FINE FORM.—THE GOLDEN GATE.—VIOLETS IN PROFUSION.—CURREYS HAVE THE FIRST CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

The cool weather of the past few weeks has brought about a wonderful improvement in roses. Bridesmaids are especially good and Beauties are fine. The supply is abundant. Joy & Son are showing the Golden Gate and think well of it. They will plant it largely next year. Scott and Triumph are the favorite carnations, and are more largely grown than other varieties. Violets are already in the market in profusion. The florists are not the only successful growers of violets for some of the finest blossoms are grown by amateurs and sold on the streets, in the market house and drug stores. Some beautiful novelties are shown in the way of violet boxes. And no more beautiful gift could he presented than one of these filled with fragrant blossoms. Currey & Co brought in the first chrysanthemums October 16. The variety was George S. Kalb. M. C. DORRIS.

WAKEFIELD, MASS.—John Walsh & Son, of Melrose Highlands, took first prize for palms and ferns at the Middlesex East Agricultural Fair, held here last week.

DEMAND LEADS THE SUPPLY.—STOCKS WHICH ARE AVAILABLE.—HARRISII ALREADY SHOW DISEASE.—NOTES.

Business has been fairly brisk but stock has been in short supply, limited practically to roses and carnations. A few dahlias have been seen and cosmos is coming in with the early chrysanthemums. The latter are still very short in supply, although quite good in quality. The varieties are mostly Bergmann, Glory of Pacific, Marquis de Montmort and a few Marion Henderson. Good roses are quoted at $4 per hundred. Carnations are of improved quality and bring about $1.50 per hundred. The best varieties at present seem to be Flora Hill, Scott and Portia. Jubilee is good in some cases, but, like Daybreak, is usually slow in recovering from transplanting.

Lilium Harrisii already begins to show disease with some growers. One lot the writer has seen runs from forty to fifty per cent diseased stock.

Smith & Fetters have extended their greenhouse to their store and have stocked it with an excellent line of palms and other plants. They have installed a hot water heating system.

Walter Mott, representing the H. A. Dreer Co., and Mr. Fotheringham, of the F. R. Pierson Co., were recent visitors.

A.

LYNN, MASS.—Wm. Miller, the city forester, has annually given away a quantity of the plants used in the summer in the Public Garden and recently began his distribution, when, one evening, a body of school children helped themselves, carrying away 1,000 plants which were Mr. Miller's personal property.

Chicago Club Chooses Officers.

On Friday evening, October 20, the Chicago Florists' Bowling Club re-elected President Phil. J. Hauswirth. The other officers chosen were: Vice-president, M. Barker; secretary and treasurer, Alex. Henderson; captain, Ed. F. Winterson; official scorer, John Degnan.

Flatbush Retaliates.

On October 9 Flatbush visited New York and was defeated; on Thursday evening, October 19, the Brooklyn players were the hosts and retrieved themselves by taking the Gothamites into camp for three straight games. The third and deciding contest will be on New York alleys at an early date.

At Minnespolis.

The bowlers of the Twin Cities made a pretty fair record at their last session. They will practice weekly until spring and expect each evening to show a similar improvement:

At Chicago.

On Friday evening, October 13, a team representing the Chicago Florists' Bowling Club repaired to Kenna's alleys to trounce a team known as the West Madisons, but after taking two games the florists, particularly Henderson, displayed their magnanimity and gave their hosts the consolation of winning the third game. There were some excellent scores, but George Asmus put his colleagues quite in the shade by making 215 followed by 200. Here are the figues:

GOOD TRADE DESPITE SUMMER WEATHER. —SOME HANDSOME NEW STORES.—JOTTINGS HERE AND THERE.

Weather almost like July is not good for flowers or the flower trade but we have had a fair trade and are looking for cooler days. Roses are in abundant supply and there are plenty of violets but chrysanthemums are not yet obtainable in quantity and prices are pretty high.

C. D. Zimmerman has moved into his new store at the corner of Chippewa and Franklin streets and has one of the handsomest places in the city. It has electric light, refrigerator all in glass, green burlap on the walls and the woodwork all in white. In the rear there is about 1000 feet of glass for a show room for plants.

It will be June or July before Prof. Cowell has his place in the shape he is aiming at but there are some fine ferns and dracænas there now and when the collection is ready it will be one of the best in the country.

J. H. Rebstock is now in his remodeled store, which is a daisy. It is paneled in green and white with gold trimmings. The new ice box is a show of itself.

S. A. Anderson and his bride returned on Tuesday to find their home placarded from foundation to roof, the decorative work of his best man and a few others.

Palmer had a very fine window of roses this week and Anderson and Scott made good showings of chrysanthemums and orchids. W. A.

NEWS NOTES.

KENNEBUNKPORT, ME.—The greenhouses of W. A. Emery have been sold to C. H. Perkins.

RED WING, MINN.—John Sten, florist at the Training School, was badly cut in a bicycle collision recently.

HOLYOKE, MASS.—E. H. Howland is growing cattleyas on the "board plan" very successfully.

SAN DIEGO, CAL.—Francis H. Fowler, an old-time florist and retired sea captain, is now a resident of this city.

WILLIAMSPORT, PA.—Evenden Bros. report a fine fall trade. They grew 45,000 chrysanthemums this year.

ROSE HILL, N. Y.—F. B. Mills, the seedsman, has been shipping large quantities of sweet pea and gladiolus blooms to New York the past season.

NEWPORT, R. I.—An illustrated lecture on Hawaii by J. K. M. L. Farquhar is promised for the Newport Horticultural Society's meeting on the evening of October 25.

FORT WAYNE, IND.—Wm. J. Vesey, a prominent lawyer and florist of this city, has been appointed judge of the Allen county Superior Court.

MERIDEN, CONN.—Mrs. E. B. Gallivan has made extensive improvements on her store, including the raising of the floor to the level of the sidewalk.

MT. PLEASANT, MICH.—E. T. Hammond has finished restocking the Mt. Pleasant Greenhouses. He lost heavily in the cold weather of last winter.

WOBURN, MASS.—F. E. Gustin, of Winchester, has purchased forty-four acres of land at Cummingsville and will erect a large range of forcing houses thereon.

TOLEDO, O.—B. Schramm now has a thoroughly modern range of up-to-date houses, about 9,000 feet of glass, with 1,000 feet in hot beds. The place was entirely rebuilt this season. Hot water is the heating medium.

SOUTH WEYMOUTH, MASS.—The Weymouth Agricultural Fair was attended by immense crowds and the flower and plant display was better than ever before. George Hollis was a large contributor of plants and took most of the best premiums in this section.

NEWPORT, R. I.—The last meeting of the Newport Horticultural Society was devoted to a discussion of insect pests and remedies therefor. The meeting was addressed by Prof. Field, Prof. Card and Mr. Frost, of the Rhode Island College of Agriculture; Prof. Kirkland, of the Massachusetts Gypsy Moth Commission, and Thos. S. Hazard, of Kingston, all the speakers favoring the appointment of a state entomologist.

The recent sudden change of temperature cut off the supply of outdoor flowers and caught many a napping. The mercury dropped to 22°.

Last week was a busy one, occasioned by the obsequies of Eugene J. McCarthy, the flowers for which filled a moving wagon; there were seventy-six pieces in all. Of this number James B. Canning made twenty-seven.

The new firm, Hazard & Wood, make a very attractive display in their store on Westminster street.

The store formerly occupied by the New York Florist on Weybosset street, now in charge of Mrs. Miller, is much improved in general appearance.

CHAPTER III.

WHAT I CLAIM TO HAVE DONE.

EVERGREEN, ALA., ——, '99.

Dear Sirs:—I began shipping Southern Wild Smilax in 1889. I have worked and studied to improve the product. I do not claim to have introduced it. I believe now that the honor belongs to A. O. Oelschig, of Savannah, Ga.; but I do claim that I boomed it, pushed it and spent thousands of dollars to introduce it to you; that I hammered at the express companies till I got the very low express rates you now enjoy of 25 per cent less than merchandise rates; that I invented and first used the very light wooden boxes used in this trade, which saves you hundreds of dollars in express charges; I also gave away tons of these goods to Chrysanthemum Shows and Florists' Club Dinners.

The pushing by me of Southern Wild Smilax introduced to you one of the most valuable products used in the trade to-day. I don't think anything has been introduced to the Floral trade in the past decade that has proven such a boon as this. Don't you remember what a hole it put you in last Easter, when by the freeze of Feb. 11th the entire Wild Smilax crop was destroyed? Well, it put me in the hole, too, and the cow, poor thing! she almost starved to death. Yes, I worked hard for my trade and have a good one, but I can handle more still and am still improving the product. You often receive shipments of Smilax that look dingy, dusty and wilted; that is because it is sometimes hauled for miles in an open wagon over hot, dusty roads, exposed to the full glare of a southern sun. By putting in my telephone line I get right into the heart of the Smilax Woods, with no distance to haul, hence no exposure to the sun. It is packed in half a mile of the woods and brought to the shipping point, Evergreen, Ala., fully protected in cases. One improvement I have added this year is that I have the Smilax washed. It is put into a lattice Cradle and a strong jet of water, pure and cold, is thrown on it; then it is allowed to drain and absorb all the moisture it will take up.

THE RESULT.

It reaches you clean, bright, crisp and will retain its beautiful glossy color a great deal longer than the old style. This improvement is of great importance to you in large decorations where you have to begin hanging the Smilax three or four days before the decoration is completed, so that by the time the work is done the Smilax has already begun to shrink, making little gaps in your work that are annoying. I consider this the greatest improvement I have made yet. Don't forget the price, $2.00 per case, f. o. b. Evergreen. 24 hours' grace expected on orders over 5 cases.

Yours truly,

CALDWELL, The Woodsman, Evergreen, Ala.

Cyclamen!

We have a fine and healthy lot of Cyclamen Giganteum, well set with buds, growing in 3-in. pots, ready for repotting into 4-in pots or larger; or three plants in 8-in. bulb pans will make a fine display and grow into suitable gifts for Christmas, or they could remain in the size pots they are in at present and would be most useful with which to make plateaus or "French" baskets of growing plants in bloom for Christmas or any other worthy occasion.

Plants in bloom for the gay and festive Christmas time are becoming more and more popular.

No better time than the present to be thinking about this matter and making necessary preparations.

Orange, N. J.

The opening meeting ot the season of the New Jersey Floricultural Society, took place on Wednesday, October 4. A short business session was held in which resolutions were adopted on the death of William Macmillan and the matter of a fall exhibition referred to a committee with power to act, the date fixed being November 15. The remainder of the evening was spent socially to the accompaniment of an orchestra provided by the committee. George Smith, George Alcock and John Hays sang and refreshments were served. Representatives were present by invitation from the New York and Morris county clubs. Among the familiar faces there were those ot William Scott, W. Bartholomae, S. S. Butterfield, J. A. Penman, Frederick W. Kelsey, James W. Withers, Dr. J. M. W. Kitchen and Joseph Manda.

Denver, Col.

There has been quite a little building about Denver this season. Daniels & Fisher have put up a carnation house 14x150 at their Shrawford farm. Mr. Glauber, formerly Glauber & Webb, has built a Beauty house 25x125 and the plants are fine. F. H. Hall, late of Hall & Pollard has put up five new houses 18x100 for roses and carnations. Theo. Loken, of the Berkley Greenhouses has a new violet house. Grimes & Son have built two houses 20x100, one for carnations, the other for palms and begonias. N. A. Benson has built a house 25x100.

Newtown, N. Y.

Referring to the universal inclination of florists to run together in one rut and thus ruin the market on certain things by over production, a bright light in the business was once heard to say that "if we could only know what our neighbors are or are not going to do, the question of what to do ourselves becomes an easy one." Gus. Schraeder, who has one of the best modern ranges of glass in this vicinity, is evidently determined to let his neighbors monopolize the competition and results of same in roses, chrysanthemums, carnations and similar commodities and devotes his establishment exclusively to "green goods." Here are four large houses of smilax, several of ferns and one very large and lofty house of asparagus. The latter is but a beginning, probably, of what should be a very profitable industry. Adiantum Farleyense is planted right out in the solid bed and seems to thrive like a weed under this treatment.

Next door is the establishment of A. F. Schraeder, father of "Gus." Three of the houses here have been recently rebuilt. Bedding plants are a staple commodity with Mr. Schraeder but, as an alternate crop, chrysanthemums and carnations are now doing duty. Scott is in excellent health and McGowan plainly finds soil in this particular locality much to its liking, for the plants of this variety have a sturdiness not often seen. Mr. Schraeder cultivates dahlias extensively and has a big field of them which, however, is now a total wreck owing to the late disastrous freeze.

W. T. Bell & Sons are putting the finishing touches to a new carnation house, 20x116 in which a feature worthy of notice is the arrangement of the benches. These are four in number, terraced, one above the other, with paths between, the outer bench being about eight or nine feet above the ground. The space under this bench will be graded, cemented and transformed into a track for hauling soil and plants, a little car built for the purpose, taking the place of the wheelbarrow. The houses are so arranged that distribution to and from any of them is easily managed.

Little Chris, Mr. Bell's dwarf chrysanthemum, is inclined to sport, a few yellow flowers having made their appearance upon the original stock plants. Little Chris itself is well worth all the space allotted it and Mr. Bell is growing more of it this season than he ever did before.

Carnations, chrysanthemums and roses are plentiful here now but trade is good. During the recent carnival Cole Bros. had two fine decorations at the Greenhut's home, the occasions of President McKinley's and Governor Tanner's visits.

In the industrial parade J. C. Murray had two finely decorated wagons. Murray will handle nursery stock again this year, having done well with it last season.

Louis Miller's violets are in fine shape. He grows Marie Louise in solid beds.

H. Lockycar is now with C. Loveridge. Walter Adams takes his place at Murray's.

TRADE IS PRETTY FAIR.—STOCK PLENTIFUL.—MEETING OF THE CLUB.—BOTANICAL SOCIETY'S HERBARIUM GOES TO CARNEGIE MUSEUM.

Business is all that could be expected for the early fall and stock is now coming in plentifully. Roses, carnations, violets and chrysanthemums are all available.

At the recent meeting of the Pittsburg and Allegheny Florists' and Gardeners' Club the winter's programme was the principal topic for discussion.

At the last meeting of the Botanical Society of Western Pennsylvania it was voted to present the herbarium of the society, some 15,000 specimens, an almost complete collection of the flora of Allegheny county, to the Carnegie Museum, Pittsburg. Seven new members were accepted at the meeting and Superintendent Wm. Falconer, of Schenley Park, exhibited several new botanical specimens, among them the first seed of Lodoicea Seychellarum ever brought to this country. It weighs twenty pounds and an attempt is being made to germinate it at the Phipps conservatory.

G O.

Lincoln, Neb.

During the season C. H. Frey built six new houses, about 17,000 feet of glass, giving him a total of 40,000 feet. Three of the new structures, 21x160, long span to the south, are now planted with roses. Two of the other houses are for miscellaneous plants, one 12x160 and the other 12x86; the remaining structure is for propagation and is 12x160. Cypress, 16x16 glass and the Chicago Ventilating Apparatus were used. An eighty-five-horse-power boiler was also put in, supplementing two of forty-five-horse-power each.

Other growers were active during the building season, Frey & Frey putting up a violet house and rebuilding two old structures, while Chapin Bros. built two carnation houses and C. B. Keller rebuilt his entire range, four houses.

Trade has been good this fall, both in plants and cut flowers. Roses and carnations are coming in now in good shape and violets are excellent for mid-October. Chrysanthemums will be ready in a few days.

Cypress Greenhouse Material.

We are the pioneers in Clear Cypress Greenhouse Material. We discovered that Cypress is better than any other wood for greenhouses from top of posts up and we introduced it, and fought for it against many prejudices, and finally succeeded in bringing it into general use.

Others have attempted to follow where we lead, others are trying to reap what we sowed, but we have the experience and are recognized as experts in greenhouse construction.

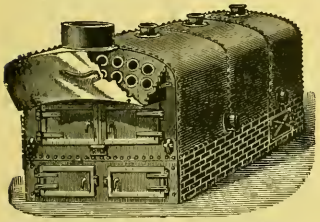
Scranton, Pa.

The advent of a prosperous season is evidenced on all sides. Never in the history of this wide awake city has there been such a stir among the florists nor were they, as a whole, ever better prepared to do business. Among those who deemed it timely to brush up are G. R. Clark & Co., who put all their greenhouses in perfect repair and modernized their downtown store. Marvin & Muir, in the Muhr building, also have a very fine place and a good trade.



T. B. McClintock's houses invariably present a neat and attractive appearance, while his general stock, especially roses, carnations and chrysanthemums, show that he knows their requirements and treats them accordingly. During the summer, Mr. McClintock has added two structures each 10x110, having now a range of ten well equipped, modern houses. Being located near one of the principal cemeteries he does an extensive business in bedding and nursery stock. It is Mr. McClintock's intention to go more extensively into the nursery business and to make a leading feature of hardy roses.

R. W. Palmer's carnations never looked better. Mr. Palmer divides his time between his greenhouses and his centrally located downtown store. He enjoys a fine trade and, generally speaking, has no kick coming.

W. H. Davis has put his houses in the best of order and with his stock coming on in fine shape he expects to be well equipped for the winter trade. He has a well appointed store on Spruce street.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SPORTS.

It is an interesting fact that the white chrysanthemum Mrs. Jerome Jones was cultivated by our growers about half a dozen years before it produced a yellow sport, and then it produced yellow sports simultaneously at many widely separated points.

The above paragraph appeared in our issue of October 21, and is commented on by Prof. H. J. Webber as follows:

"Such changes, or sports, are very probably reversions to the original color. Several cases of similar reversions have been recorded. For instance, Darwin says of the chrysanthemum: * 'This plant frequently sports both by its lateral branches and occasionally by suckers. A seedling raised by Mr. Salter has produced by bud variation six distinct sorts, five different in color and one in foliage, all of which are now fixed. The varieties which were first introduced from China were so excessively variable that it was extremely difficult to tell which was the original color of the variety and which was the sport. The same plant would produce one year only buff-colored and the next year only rose-colored flowers, and then would change again or produce at the same time flowers of both colors. * * * Mr. Salter informs me that with all the varieties the commonest kind of bud variation is the production of yellow flowers, and as this is the primordial color these cases may be attributed to reversion. Mr. Salter has given me a list of seven differently colored chrysanthemums which have all produced branches with yellow flowers, but three of them have also sported into other colors. With any change of color in the flower the foliage generally changes in a corresponding manner in lightness or darkness.'

"The synchronism of the variation above is somewhat remarkable, but it may probably be analogized with the reversions which occur late in the life of an individual plant, and in the case of a chrysanthemum propagated by cuttings all the plants grown from the cuttings are portions of the same individual. Many such reversions are recorded in literature, but they should not be confounded with the synchronism of variations in seedlings of certain sorts, which results in the production of the same novelty in various localities at about the same time. A case of reversion occurring late in the life of the individual plant came under the observation of the writer a few years ago. A seedling orange tree which had been bearing normal, sweet, smooth-skinned oranges for eighteen years, began in the nineteenth season to bear somewhat sour fruit, with very thick, rough skin and small pulp similar to the citron. The two kinds of fruit grew irregularly over the entire tree, often being found on the same branch not more than four inches apart. The tree was kept under close observation for two years after this peculiar character developed, but it was destroyed by the freezes of 1894-95."

*Darwin, Chas., Animals and Plants under Domestication, Vol. 1, p. 455.

NOTES ON SPECIMEN PLANTS.

The growing season with specimen chrysanthemums is ended. The flower buds and blooms are now developing. Whether they will be on time or not I do not think will depend on anything we may now do. I have never found that the plants can be hurried by any of the ordinary methods of forcing. Plants in a cool house are just as forward as those in closer quarters. Neither will any fertilizer I know of help them to any appreciable extent. Years ago some expert friends called on me a few days before the exhibition and decided I could not get W. H. Lincoln in. Nevertheless I had it in good condition on show day. They supposed I had given it a strong dose of sulphate of ammonia. I did nothing of the kind. A competitor placed a plant in the same condition of lateness in a forcing house, but failed to bring it in. It is stated that sulphate of ammonia and nitrate of soda will help the blooms to mature. I have never found it so. I have used nitrate of soda in small quantities during the past growing season with more satisfactory results than formerly.

Last season my plants were a week late. They are now full early. I stopped pinching earlier and disbudded closer, and this may, in a measure, account for it. One plant I have already in cooler, shady quarters to retard it. I have done this because it is the only thing I can do, but do as I will, the plant will come out with a lack of freshness, even if it does not loose some leaves. The condition of the foliage is always an important consideration with judges, and justly so. More than one decision has been made on it. When the blooms are expanding there is a great demand on the foliage, and unless the plants are in the best of health, with vigorous root action, they are liable to wilt badly when under strong sunlight. When so they have a most dejected look. But if the plants have been carefully cared for, not surfeited with liquid fertilizer up to this time, and have a well developed and healthy root action, they should not wilt, or if at all, only after several days of dull weather.

When wilting occurs there is a temptation to water them, which would be a bad mistake. I prefer to overcome this by dampening the floors and benches, and this season I have done so with liquid manure, but this only as an experiment; whether the results are beneficial I can not say, but certainly it has done no harm. When wilting occurs I cannot help thinking the flowers must suffer in size and fullness. I have noticed that they are slower in coming into bloom. Overstaking and late staking must have the same effect and this is one of the disagreeable features of staking as compared with wiring. Against lack of visible evidence the plants must suffer in root energy when a mass of stake-buts are driven into the soil; and it must be greater when the practice is to give a stake to each flower. Rather than leave the staking until the last week or two, we should do it gradually, at two or three times, pulling the stronger shoots, which always make for the outside, into the center and the weaker ones out to light and air, where they will gather strength.

Packing plants for exhibition is critical work. All in between the flowers should be filled in with tissue paper. The plants should be drawn in from two sides at once, with broad bands of cotton cloth. We set them in boxes for a better traveling base, putting a cushion of hay beneath them, as well as making firm about the pots.

T. D. HATFIELD.

IN CHICAGO PARKS.

Washington Park was the first to install its chrysanthemums in the show house and the display is the largest and best in some years. There are more standards than ever before and each one is a good plant. There are not so very many sorts for so large a showing, not more than fifty, and the varieties are such favorites as Mutual Friend, W. H. Lincoln, Miss Agnes L. Dalskov, Glory of Pacific, President Smith, G. W. Childs, Ivory, Pink Ivory, L. Canning and Viviand-Morel. Hill's Black Beauty makes a hit, contrasting the lighter colors, and the best of the yellows is Georgiana Pitcher, especially six big bush plants in handsome jardinieres. There is in the lot one decidedly new seedling which Mr. Kanst has labeled, most appropriately, Queer. It is a bronze, Japanese, reflexed, of most peculiar form and color and may be good because it is different. He also has a good seedling as yet unnamed. It makes a fine, low round bush in a good-sized pot and is liberally covered with large red flowers with a yellow center. Nathan Smith & Son and others have been given it for trial and all pronounce it excellent for borders. An experiment was tried this year with a few plants of Midge, a compost of one-third wood ashes being employed, but there seems to be no difference between these and the plants in the regular soil.

At Lincoln Park there is every opportunity for the commercial grower to gain a number of very good points on the relative value of varieties. The stock here is a little late and will not be moved into the show houses until next week but there are 5,000 plants showing rapidly developing blooms and about 100 sorts, to say nothing of twenty varieties of anemones. The best of the old sorts have been preserved and a considerable number of the latest introductions are being tested. Among them are Idavan, White Flyer, White Plume, Carrie Belle, Independence, Xeno, Negoya, Kuno, Admiral Dewey, C. W. Ward's deep chrome yellow; Eclipse, the W. H. Chadwick sport; Adula, May's late white incurved; Queen of Plumes, Smith & Son's delicate lilac pink, and Mme. Ferlat, white tipped with gold. Of these plants 3,000 are grown to single stem and the show will be of much merit when ready. The bush plants and standards are all well shaped and well set with half open buds. Among the anemones there are several good sorts, among them Zoraida, Aglaia, Timbale de Argent, Tanager, Falcon, Toucan, Yellow Hammer and Titmouse.

Superintendent James Jensen, of Humboldt Park, has nearly doubled the number of chrysanthemums this year, having in all about 2500 plants. Of this number 1200 are grown on single stems, 1000 are bush plants in 6-inch pots and fifty are specimens in 10-inch pots. Three now measure from three to five feet in diameter and by the time they are at their best will measure fully seven feet. Fifty standards are also included, among the most noteworthy of which are Miss Florence Pullman, Mrs. Perrin and Mrs. J. G. Whilldin. In all there are about fifty varieties, among which the principal ones are Geo. W. Childs, Viviand-Morel, Miss Florence Pullman, Mrs. J. G. Whilldin, Niveus, Major Bonnaffon, Eugene Dailledouze, The Queen, Mrs Perrin, Mrs. W. C. Egan and Ivory. Of the latter variety there are 250 single stemmed plants and ten bush plants all of which look very well. Among the newer varieties the most noteworthy are Kuno, White Flyer, Xeno, Adele, John K. Shaw, Mdlle. Lucie Faure, Frank Hardy, Golden Wedding, Dean Hole, Maud Adams and Mrs. H. N. May. The plants will be ready for exhibition about November 2. Although Mr. Jensen is growing a larger number of plants this season, the general condition of the stock is not up to that of last year, due to the crowded condition of the plants as well as the poorly ventilated houses.

Douglas Park is growing about the same number of plants as last season, the total number being 1600, as many as 125 different varieties. There are 500 single stemmed and 500 bush plants, the remaining 600 being all standards. The principal pink varieties are Louis Boehmer, Waban, President W. R Smith, Viviand-Morel, Elmer D. Smith, Geo. W. Childs, E. W. Clark and Mrs. A. J. Drexel. In white the principal ones are, Mayflower, White Swan, Ivory, Mrs. H. Robinson, Mrs. Gov. Fifer and The Queen, the yellow being principally of W. H. Lincoln, Kioto, Georgiana Pitcher,

CHRYSANTHEMUM YELLOW FITZWYGRAM.

NEW ENGLAND PARK SUPERINTENDENTS AT PROVIDENCE, R. I.

Mrs. J. G. Whilldin, Golden Gate, Yellow Queen, Major Bonnaffon, Eugene Dailledouze and Harry L. Sunderbruch. The plants are all in fine condition, although, as in general, somewhat late. They will not be on exhibition to the public until November 4.

Head-gardener John Sell has just put his chrysanthemums on display at Garfield Park. He has only about 2000 plants, but enough for a larger showing than he is able to make in his limited space. There are upwards of 100 varieties in the lot, including some remarkably well grown bush plants of Mrs. J. G. Whilldin and Georgiana Pitcher. In fact these are the best varieties on the place, of whatever form. The stock here has not been replenished lately because of the lack of both space and money but the skill of the growers makes the display fully as attractive to West-siders as though the varieties were all this year's introductions.

CHRYSANTHEMUM R. HOOPER PEARSON.

I note what C. W. Johnson says about new varieties of chrysanthemums in the last issue of the AMERICAN FLORIST. The most pleasing new variety I have bloomed up to date is R. Hooper Pearson, an English sort introduced and offered by John N. May last spring. It is the first early yellow I have found with a perfect, deep golden shade. With me it is fully as early as Marion Henderson, larger and more compact in bloom; handsome in foliage, which is strong and healthy; stem very stiff without clubbiness. There is nothing fluffy or soft anywhere about the plant and I predict that it will take its place in commerce as the best and most beautiful early yellow in every respect. R. W. S.

CHRYSANTHEMUM YELLOW FITZWYGRAM.

This is the yellow sport of Lady Fitzwygram, known as Yellow Fitzwygram, which is in its third year with E. G. Hill & Co., of Richmond, Ind. The color is perfectly fixed and it is of a deeper shade than Mrs. Bassett, and not so bright as Marion Henderson. The plant has a stronger constitution than Lady Fitzwygram; but its chief merit is found in its being the earliest of the yellows—a fine companion for the latter variety and Mme. Bergmann. The Fitzwygrams can easily be had in bloom the last week of September, and even as early as the 21st of that month when early cuttings are used and the buds taken by July 25. Most failures with Lady Fitzwygram arise from neglect in these two important particulars. It is the most beautifully formed of all the earlies, lacking the stiffness of the Bergmann type.

WORK OF THE COMMITTEES.

October 21, 1899.—New York; Hewey A. Molatsch, Brooklyn, N. Y., exhibited Walter Molatsch, a yellow Japanese incurved variety, scoring commercial scale 89 points.

Philadelphia; above variety by same exhibitor was shown and scored commercial scale 87, exhibition scale 86 points. Wm. Paul Binder, Rider, Md., exhibited Georgiana McDonald, a reflexed white, which scored commercial scale 82, exhibition scale 83 points.

Cincinnati; Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich., exhibited Monrovia, a yellow Japanese variety, scoring commercial scale 85 points.

Chicago; Monrovia, by above exhibitor, scored commercial scale 83 points.

No report from Boston.

ELMER D. SMITH, Sec'y.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY COMMITTEES.

The committees judging seedling chrysanthemums will be in session each Saturday up to and including November 25. Exhibitors should make their entries, for which a fee of $2 is charged for each variety entered, to the secretary not later than Tuesday of the week they are to be shown. All exhibits forwarded to the following addresses, express charges prepaid, will receive careful consideration:

Boston, Mass., A. H. Fewkes, Horticultural Hall, Tremont street.

New York, N. Y., E. Dailledouze, care New York Cut Flower Co., 119 West Twenty-third street.

Philadelphia, Pa., A. B. Cartledge, 1514 Chestnut street.

Cincinnati, O., A. Witterstaetter, care Cincinnati Cut Flower Co., Fourth and Walnut streets.

WITH THE GROWERS.

J. M. KELLER, BROOKLYN, N. Y.

One has only to glance at the plants to see the edges of the Christmas and Easter dollars sticking out in profusion among the boronias, heaths, cyclamens, acacias and ardisias in this establishment. Mr. Keller takes it all as a matter of course, just as though it happened by chance, but it did not. Heaths and boronias that last spring were midgets have just been potted in 6 and 8-inch pots and make an imposing array on the benches after their summer in the ground outside. It is needful that the boronias be kept very cool until buds are formed, otherwise they will start into rapid growth and then there will be nary a flower this year.

Mr. Keller finds the greatest difficulty with these plants to prevent their rotting off in the summer, especially those that are in their second year, and it is necessary to protect them from rain. This is done by a frame placed over them on stilts, open at the sides for air. Even with the greatest caution fully twenty-five per cent of the two-year-old plants have been lost during the past summer from this cause. Ardisias are seen here in one, two and three-year sizes, a regular succession being kept up from seed each year. They are as fine as they possibly can be and the advantage of importing this plant is not apparent when it can be so readily grown locally into much better plants than any imported stock can be after the confinement of a voyage.

Acacia paradoxa, which is said to be an improved form of A. armata, excelling in freedom and brightness of bloom, has come into such lively demand for Easter that much rubbish was worked off into the shipments from Europe last spring. Still, it is purchased at so low a figure abroad that it would not be possible to compete against the imported stock with home-grown plants under present conditions. Mr. Keller's cyclamens are sufficiently advanced to be well worth seeing. They have been culled out until only the finest are left. The advance in foliage marking is very striking, many of the plants being as effective as begonias in this way, without considering the flowers.

Poinsettias in pans are grown in considerable quantities. They are now in shallow pans, five or six plants, twelve or fifteen inches high, to each, after having been started in small pots, and must now be kept as cool as possible until ready for market. Primula obconica, in the improved forms, seems to be gaining in popularity now that the exaggerated fright over its poisonous properties has subsided. Those in bloom now show a great advance over the original forms, some of the individual flowers being equal to the ordinary strains of Chinese primrose. Those sowed last May are now in 6-inch pots. The baby primrose is too insignificant in flower to become popular, apparently, for the demand is exceedingly light. A splendid house of genistas, one of marguerites and several of azaleas in various sizes completes the list of flowering plants grown in quantity here.

The orchids, which are grown for cut flower purposes, comprise mainly Cattleya labiata and C. Trianæ and Dendrobium Phalænopsis. The latter are now in full bloom, rather earlier than usual. It has been claimed that Dendrobium Phalænopsis "runs out" after a year or two of greenhouse life, but Mr. Keller's plants, which he has had for four years and which are still in the original pots, show no indication of running out, the growths made this season being finer than any of the old bulbs on the plants. They are kept all summer in a house that is used as a cool house in winter and are given plenty of natural heat, an abundance of moisture and very little shade. The cattleyas, of which there is an immense quantity, spend the summer in the azalea houses, being transferred to the palm houses in winter, where they hang overhead and take up no room that could be utilized otherwise. C. labiata is just finished and C. Trianæ is beginning to slip out of the sheaths.

In the palm houses the kentia reigns. The custom of putting three young plants in the pot, around the stem of a larger one, has become popular, especially with K. Forsteriana. Latanias are sometimes used in the same way but do not "take" as well as the kentias. Livistonia rotundifolia is raised here from seed entirely and makes nice plants in a short time. Cocos Weddeliana are also raised in quantity from seed. They are very cheap now and sell best when in quite a small state, for ferneries, etc. A new, or rather little known, plant for the center of ferneries is Pitcairnia aphilandræflora. The foliage is glossy and the spike of scarlet flowers is exceedingly pretty. It is deserving of more general use.

Pandanus Veitchii and P. utilis have both been good sellers during the past season. The demand for these is rather uncertain, varying greatly from year to year. Dracæna Godseffiana's greatest drawback is its slowness. When it becomes sufficiently plenty to be lower in price than at present it is likely to take its place among the indispensable staples. Japanese fern balls have not met with the approval expected, but they take up no valuable room and can be suspended from the roof and left there till the demand materializes, which should be the case eventually.

A New Arabis.

The illustration shows a plant which bears the cumbersome name of Arabis alpina, var. Alba Plena Snowdrift. A more appropriate name, at least for commercial purposes, would be simply Arabis Snowdrift. The flowers are more or less double and are said to last well when cut. Florists may find the plant worthy of attention. The introducers are Hubert & Co., of Guernsey.

ARABIS SNOWDRIFT.

CARNATIONS.

PRUNING AND DISBUDDING.

It is impossible to lay down a series of set rules for growing carnations of the first grade. The soil, the houses and the condition of the plants vary so much that what is desirable in one place is just the opposite in another. We can, however, look to nature and be guided by some of her general laws, varying our practice to suit our conditions.

One of these laws is that judicious pruning will improve the quality and sometimes even increase the quantity of a crop. Some years ago it was predicted that pruning carnation plants would eventually become as universal as is disbudding. This prophecy has not yet been fulfilled, but the time is certainly ripe for its general adoption.

One of the first things to take into consideration in this matter of pruning is "that plants left entirely to their natural growth maintain a reciprocal action between the top and the roots and every branch removed must exercise an influence either beneficial or injurious." This thinning or pruning will therefore have to be done by a man with judgment and knowledge of the requirements of the plants. If left to careless or ignorant help the effects would undoubtedly be disastrous.

It is always in order to prune carnation plants if they are overcrowded through being planted too closely in the beds or are what carnation men call "grassy." These conditions are frequently unavoidable and the only relief is in the use of the knife. For the first operation remember that you are destroying the equilibrium between the top and the roots, so take out only enough branches to allow the light and air to get in among the branches which remain. Be careful to not over-water the plants for at least ten days after the pruning, so that the roots can more successfully adapt themselves to the reduction of the tops.

Crowded or "grassy" plants will be greatly improved by the thinning out of all dead, weak, deformed or misplaced branches, but if too many such branches are allowed to accumulate before pruning it rather disorganizes the root action of the plant, so that this form of cutting should be attended to quite as regularly as disbudding.

Disbudding itself is simply a modified form of pruning and the two should go hand in hand to produce the highest quality of blooms. The trial of a portion of a bench, treated as described above, beside another portion cared for by the old method, will convince you as to the profit in the course, as applicable to your market, or the uselessness of it. Is it not worth a trial? ALBERT M. HERR.

INDOOR-GROWN CARNATIONS.

It is our practice at this time to give the carnation beds a light mulching of well rotted manure and we find that the plants derive great benefit from it. Before putting on the mulch all the plants are neatly staked and tied and the soil cleared of weeds, when a light sprinkling of wood ashes is raked into the surface, after which the mulch is applied and watered with a rose to settle the whole evenly. The material for the mulch is made as fine as possible by being passed through a rough screen, which gives it an open texture which prevents its caking, also making it much better to handle.

Experience has taught us that to give a mulch at this time is better than to resort to applications of liquid fertilizer so early in the season. The principal aim now is to improve the constitution of the plants, which cannot be done by forced growth, which will be the result, especially during a period of bright weather, when liquid stimulants are injudiciously applied. This, too, is one of the causes of weak stems and bursted calyxes during the mid-winter days.

Every new growth now brings longer stems and finer blooms, which should be encouraged by disbudding and removing the side shoots. This should be done as soon as they are large enough to rub out. We do not advise syringing at all from now on but careful attention must be paid to ventilation so as to maintain an even temperature as a precaution against red spider. Of course should this pest appear in some close corner they will have to be disposed of by a few good syringings.

It is a good plan to fumigate occasionally, whether there is any greenfly to be seen or not, to prevent them obtaining a foothold, for if the plants are allowed to become infested when a full crop of buds is on it will be a hard matter to get rid of the pests without considerable loss.

Keep the soil in the same condition clear through. Do not allow the beds to dry out too much but when watering do it thoroughly; it is much better than to give the beds a light sprinkling every day or so. CHAS. W. JOHNSON.

In Middle Village.

The seeker after up-to-date floricultural information would find Middle Village a barren field for his investigations, although one street in the town boasts of over a score of "florists'" signs. Located midway between Brooklyn city and a number of other communities of more or less repute, although but half an hour's ride from New York, Middle Village is a city of the dead; cemeteries and stone cutters are its most prominent features and funeral processions the principal users of its poorly kept streets. One is not long in the place before he realizes that he is in an almost exclusively German community. "Familienpläke und Gräber werden aufs Beste während des Sommers in Ordnung gehalten" is the inscription on the florists' signs, and many of the features and customs of the place are so unfamiliar to the American eye that one might easily imagine himself suddenly dropped into some obscure corner of the Old World. On Metropolitan avenue, the principal street, which bisects Lutheran Cemetery, florists, stone cutters and "hotels" are strung out in surprising numbers and furnish solace, mental or physical, for the never-ending procession of mourners. A florists' establishment often consists of a little flue-heated sash house, sagging and decrepit with age, a tangled mass of old wire design frames from the cemeteries piled almost as high as the house and a roughly built "stand" on the side of the road hung with dried-flower emblems adorned with mortuary inscriptions and presided over by a dozing damsel seated on a box or wheelbarrow under a row of immortelle wreaths marked "Asleep." Sidewalks and paths, where there are any, littered continuously with scraps of dyed moss, cape flowers, etc., give convincing evidence that, in Middle Village at least, the despised artificial and dried flowers still hold their own.

The older part of Lutheran Cemetery is well planted and is a shady and beautiful place. The newer part is barren as to soil and the few stunted trees that have been planted give no promise of future attractiveness. There are many monuments of high merit scattered throughout the grounds, but, as in all cemeteries where individual freedom in such matters is permitted, many are grotesque to an extreme. Funny little white-painted iron cribs or bed-shaped contrivances indicating the outlines of a grave are very popular and big wooden "Gates Ajar," often of the rudest construction, loom up ten or twelve feet high, here and there, like spectre gallows, well calculated to give one the shivers after nightfall. Away out beyond the cemeteries stretch truck farms which are wonders of order and thrift, under high cultivation and a delight to look upon. Even here, too, the cemetery influence is seen, for a dollar is a dollar however earned, and pansies share the field with the leeks and parsley.

Established over a quarter of a century ago and showing evidences of good business and enterprise is the place of F. Marquardt, formerly Marquardt & Dlouhy. Mr. Marquardt's principal work is the grading and care of cemetery lots, in which he employs a large force of men during the busy season. The greenhouses, devoted principally to bedding plants in the spring are now filled with chrysanthemums, carnations, cyclamens, etc., in excellent shape. Pot chrysanthemums look well and Portia carnation is as good as it can be. Mr. Marquardt, as well as many of his neighbors, is a regular frequenter of the Thirty-fourth street market in New York city and he is "all right" socially and otherwise.

Helpful Reminders.

Hardy shrubbery and roses desired for winter and spring forcing should be cared for now. This stock should have been grown all summer in pots. It is possible to grow them in the open ground and lift them successfully but, with the ordinary florist, who has customers calling on him continually, he can hardly give the careful attention required for open ground culture. Do not cut back such shrubs as bloom on the new growth. As a majority of florists are situated, the most convenient method is to turn them out of pots, placing them on the ground in the shelter of a shed or greenhouse without heat. They can be packed quite high with earth between them. Before hard freezing cover thickly so that if frost does penetrate, it will not get out again until you let it out. The most satisfactory shrubs are forsythias, which come into bloom very soon after being brought into heat; the lilacs, Spiræa Van Houttei and S. Anthony Waterer. Of the roses Crimson Rambler is the most popular.

Tuberous begonias, gloxinias and caladiums should be drying. It is safest to keep them in pots until the foliage is fully ripened; then pack them in shallow trays or boxes with sand. Gladioli should all be stored now; the boiler room is a good place for them.

Roman hyacinths boxed in August should be nicely rooted now and a few may be placed under the bench of a warm house for early bloom.

Make up your mind now what varieties of geraniums and other plants you will propagate for spring. Keep looking for the best and discard the old varieties as fast as you find new sorts of greater merit. C. B. W.

HOT WEATHER MAKES SOFT STOCK AND HARD TIMES.—ROSES SUFFER IN THE EXTREME. — CARNATIONS AND VIOLETS SHOW EFFECTS. — CHRYSANTHEMUMS MISTAKE THEIR SEASON.—ROSE SOCIETY PLANS. — CONVENTION HEADQUARTERS SELECTED.—HAPPENINGS OF INTEREST HERE AND THERE.

Hard times have had their inning this week as far as the cut flower trade is concerned. Most varieties show badly the effects of the warm weather that has prevailed for such an unusual period and all through the list the quality is very inferior. Roses are soft and lustreless, with lots of mildew showing on the teas and with a washed-out, blue complexion on the American Beauties that makes them look anything but inviting. Carnations do not display their weakness when first brought in but they go off in a few hours and it is impossible to keep them in salable shape over night. Chrysanthemums of the early blooming sorts are already showing evidences of age, Glory of the Pacific being so bleached out as to be almost unrecognizable, while the late flowering varieties are coming in two weeks ahead of their regular time. Violets suffer probably more than anything else. They are so soft and their odor has been so thoroughly extracted by the high temperature that they retain but little fragrance after being unpacked and in a brief time they are actually offensive. Retailers are very shy of them, buying sparingly, and it is not surprising, under the circumstances, that 20 cents a hundred has been an acceptable price for many good lots during the past week.

Chrysanthemums in one form or another are the chief decorative features of most of the florists' windows. Frequently they are seen in combination with or set off by a background of mahogany tinted oak foliage and the effect is charming. Cosmos, which is plenty, too, just at present, also lends itself effectively to any combination with oak leaves. One Broadway window was beautifully fixed up with oncidiums this week, the pendant sprays making a shower-like effect in gold.

The wholesalers feel the present unfavorable conditions keenly. Customers are few and they buy gingerly. A favorite pastime with them at such times is to stand in the area in front of their domain and look first up and then down the street with a wistful gaze that would almost extract tears from a heart of stone. Mr. John Weir, when such conditions are on, sets an example in independent indifference that is very impressive and wholly beyond the power of the Greeks to copy.

The executive committee of the American Rose Society met at the Grand Union Hotel on Saturday, October 21. The matter of a schedule for the proposed exhibition and the raising of a guarantee fund was the principal business before the meeting. It was decided that the exhibition should take place in March.

The trustees of the New York Florists' Club met on Monday and a lengthy discussion of the ways and means for ensuring the success of the S. A. F. convention of 1900 was had. President-elect Wood and Secretary Stewart were present, representing the executive committee of the national society, and after a consideration of the available halls in New York the Grand Central Palace was unanimously selected as headquarters for the meeting and exhibition next August.

J. P. Cleary is to have a notable sale next week of Japanese dwarf evergreens and other curios. The catalogue which will be sent out will be on heavy Deckle-edge paper and richly illustrated with half-tone engravings, a work of art worth sending for, and the sale will be worth attending if for no other purpose than to hear "John P." enlarge on the peculiar merits of this stock and incidentally to encourage him with a bid or two.

John R. Weir has finally compromised on the famous flower stand at the corner of Bond and Fulton streets, Brooklyn, which he has been fighting over in the courts for a couple of years and the establishment is now being re-erected but considerably reduced in size. Mr. Weir now acknowledges that the conciliatory plan works best.

A. T. Boddington arrived in company with Mrs. Boddington, from his European honeymoon trip, per steamship New York, on Saturday, October 21, apparently in as good condition as when he started.

H. C. Rath has a handsome dark crimson seedling carnation which he has named Anna Millang, in compliment to the charming wife of Frank Millang.

Mrs. John H. Taylor, who has been seriously ill for a long time, does not improve and there is but little hope of her recovery.

MARKET IS AWRY.—HIGH HEAT HEAPS STOCKS.— FAKIRS IN THEIR GLORY.—PRICES ON BEST GRADES HOLD UP FAIRLY WELL.—ALL CHEAP LINES SUFFER.—BUSINESS QUIETS DOWN.—BEAUTIES AT CHESTNUT HILL.—LIBERTY TO BE OBTAINABLE.

The warm weather which we have had for the past few days is fast taking what little system there is out of wholesale flower selling. Stocks of all kinds, especially chrysanthemums, roses and carnations, are piling up at a great rate and the growers seem powerless to hold them back. Even top grades are affected and while quoted rates still hold, the count is found most generous and tempting. The streets are blooming, the fakir contingent seeming larger than ever. Carnations at 5 cents and 10 cents per dozen are offered on every side. Much of the stock is very good, that is, quite fresh, not later than the day before. Great quantities of roses are also hawked about at ruinous rates, 10 cents per dozen being the price for very fair flowers. The chrysanthemums are also beginning to stick and they will also soon find their way to the street. The only remedy seems to be cold weather and all hands, except the curbstone gentry, will no doubt unite in a little daily petition for the desired change.

Beauties of almost any length of stem are now obtainable; $3, $4 and $5 per dozen is the asking price for the extras; $2 will, however, buy some very fair stock. Teas are down; $3 to $4 per hundred will now buy almost the best, while the price per thousand will discount these figures by half or even more. Carnations are also on the slide, $1.50 now buying the best except for a few of the new and scarcer sorts. In quantities the buyer sets the figure, so anxious are the dealers for room. Chrysanthemums are to be had in any color but red; $3 per dozen is asked for Mr. Harris' Florence Harris, a light yellow and the largest in so far. The best of any other variety can be had for $2, while great quantities of good Ivory and Robinson, Queen and Whilldin are offered for $8 per hundred. Lily of the valley was scarce one day last week, all the stock being cleared up; the price is $3 to $4 as usual.

Business has become quiet, at least there does not seem to be as much doing in the stores as there was a week ago. Quite a number of weddings have taken place at which the decorations were elaborate and this demand helped greatly in using up the stock. A great many more such festive occasions could be handled, however, without drawing on other markets for supplies.

At Chestnut Hill they seem to think there is no demand except for the Beauty, both Edwin Lonsdale and John Burton having turned almost their entire places into this rose. At Mr. Burton's the roses look very well, being in fine, healthy condition. A top dressing of cow manure was spread in ridges between the plants and not placed all over the soil as is often seen. The new way is said to give the best results. A house of Brunners had broken very evenly and seemed as if they would make Christmas nicely. There did not seem to be a foot of table space but what was in profitable form, and Mr. Burton's patrons can rely on being served quite as well as usual, if not better, during the coming season. Mr. Lonsdale has also more Beauties than ever and they are in the best of health, the flowers being especially well colored. He has a good stock of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine in large and small sizes, also some fine Boston ferns.

Pennock has made arrangements to handle Scott's cut of the Liberty rose and will be in a position to supply cut blooms after November 15. K.

SUMMER AND SURPLUS.—LOADS OF STOCK.—CHRYSANTHEMUMS NOT IN HIGH FAVOR.—NICHOLSON'S DARK RED.—SOME GOOD CARNATIONS.—A TALE OF WOE.—TWO SIDES TO THE STORY.—BRIEFS OF BUSY FLORISTS AND OTHER NOTES.

The summery weather continues and so does the surplus, also the chrysanthemums. One grower, in his despair, cried out yesterday "Call off your 'mums or we'll be undone." But the chrysanthemum growers are no nearer to unalloyed happiness than their colleagues in other lines, for the old-fashioned demand and the old-fashioned price are no more. In fact, chrysanthemums seem to no longer awaken any special interest in the public.

On account of the bulky chrysanthemums many of the habitues of the flower market find it necessary to ride to their destination in the morning in hacks. The entrance to the market on some mornings during the past week might easily have been taken for the scene of a wedding, with its procession of carriages. They say, however, that with the exception of a few specialties the prices realized are not in keeping with this stylish riding. Nicholson has been bringing in a dark red, Mons. Benj. Geroud, that he has been running on for two or three years, which is as early as Bergmann and brings a better price on the average than any other sort handled by him. Pierce still sticks to Gold Lode as a winning yellow. Chrysanthemums pale, however, before a bunch of his Bradt carnations, which are very fine.

Donald Carmichael has two seedling carnations which he regards as sure of popular favor. One, a cross between Scott and Daybreak, has Tidal Wave color and Scott habit, with growth taller and stronger than the latter. The other is a white, Daybreak crossed with Edith Foster, and has the habit of Tidal Wave.

The woes of the hapless wholesaler at such times as these are many. A shipment of 800 carnations reached one of them on one of the worst mornings of last week, from a grower who had never sent any before but had been a good buyer, with the kind assurance that satisfactory returns would bring a regular succession of shipments. A return of $4 was made for them, in a spirit of conciliation, which, however, worked the other way and brought a mighty protest from the shipper. The wholesaler's response to this was the return of 650 of the carnations which were still unsold and a foot-note to the effect that $4 for 150 carnations just now ought to be satisfactory.

The Massachusetts Horticultural Society awarded a silver medal to Oakes Ames last Saturday for a cross between Cattleya Bowringeana and C. Dowiana and a certificate for a cypripedium hybrid between C. Lawrenceanum and C. ciliolare named C. Smithii var. Lucie.

L. C. Margot will, on November 1, move into a new store at 696 Center street, Jamaica Plain.

E. D. Kaulback bought the D. L. Taylor greenhouses at Malden at the recent sale.

One man is reported to be growing 22,000 longiflorum lilies for this market.

F. Sawyer is sending to N. F. McCarthy & Co. a promising scarlet seedling carnation.

The Horticultural Club held its first meeting for the season on Thursday evening, October 26.

The annual chrysanthemum show of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society will take place November 7 to 10.

E. M. Wood's annual invitation exhibition will occur at Natick on November 2.

HOT, BRIGHT WEATHER CAUSES A GLUT OF POOR STOCK.—GOOD ROSES SCARCE.—UPS AND DOWNS OF THE MARKET.—AN EXPERIENCE.—AMERICAN BULBS AT LINCOLN PARK.—DOINGS AT REINBERGS'.—SALE OF JAPANESE PLANTS.—IMPROVEMENT PLANNED FOR GARFIELD PARK.—BEREAVEMENT IN THE KENNICOTT FAMILY.—MUCH COAL, THE FIRST SEEDLING CHRYSANTHEMUM AND OTHER NOTES.

"The melancholy days have come, the saddest of the year." There are twice as many roses as can be sold at a profit and not half enough of the quality demanded by the shipping trade. It is true that the crop is off with some growers but with the majority this condition promises to come with the cool weather, which cannot be far distant. The heat has made all the stock soft and even good Beauties are hard to get. The carnation cut is increasing and the quality is not bad. As yet there is no serious overstock in this line. Early last week violets were a glut; on Saturday and Monday they were scarce; since then they have again been an overstock. Chrysanthemums are on in fair force. There are all grades, all colors and all prices. The hot weather has also had its effect on some of this stock, but as a rule the quality is good and the sale immediate. As yet the autumn belle has had little effect upon other stocks in market and it is anticipated that the cut, even when it is at its height, will move off without any such serious disturbances as have sometimes developed. Asparagus is scarce.

As an example of what sometimes happens it may be related that a grower at something of a distance wrote to a local commission house and complained that he had found dealing with his present Chicago consignor highly unsatisfactory and asked if the house in question would not like to pay him a fixed price for his cut. The house replied that it wouldn't, but that he might send in a sample of his stock. It came this week, soft, open Brides, Bridesmaids and Meteors, all in a dilapidated pasteboard box, and the express charges were 60 cents. A considerable display of indifference on the part of the commission man finally induced a fakir to give a quarter for the lot. Probably the grower will think he has another "kick" coming when he finds it out.

At Lincoln Park they have planted a big circular bed of hyacinths grown by George Gibbs at Orcas Island, Washington, and a consignment of tulips is on the way from the same place. The gardeners all agree that the hyacinths are splendid bulbs, noticeably larger than the Holland stock, hard and perfectly sound. A characteristic is that they are rougher than the Dutch bulbs. The varieties are Gen. Pellis, King of the Blues, Gertrude, Norma, Marie and Robert Stieger and Andreas Simon, of the Staats Zeitung, has samples of each which will be shown at the Florists' Club.

Reinberg Bros. made their first venture with chrysanthemums this year, growing three houses. The varieties are Mrs. Henry Robinson, Yellow Queen and Marion Henderson and so good are the blooms now coming in that chrysanthemums are likely to be a regular thing there hereafter. On October 24 this concern cut within a very few of 19,000 roses and the production is expected to nearly double within ten days. They are getting 6 cents for good Golden Gate and have regular orders for about all they can supply. They find the variety a prolific bloomer.

Williams, Barker & Severn have in progress at Steinway Hall an auction sale of rare Japanese plants. There were 360 specimens in all, some of them very old and some very unique. It was one of the best collections of this character ever brought here and was from the well known firm of Yamanaka & Co., Osaka, Japan, which has stores in New York and Boston. Four years ago the Boston branch established a nursery at Dorchester, Mass., to which point horticultural subjects are consigned and kept for a time before being offered for sale. In this case wealthy residents rather than florists are the buyers.

Let all those who are interested in floriculture and the extension of public patronage join in the wish that the West Park Commission may promptly secure from its insolvent treasurer, Dryer, or his bondsmen, every penny which they claim, for it has been announced that, in the event of its becoming available in season, from $60,000 to $100,000 will be expended for new conservatories and propagating houses at Garfield Park.

The Kennicott family has recently suffered bereavement in the death of Mrs. Hiram Kennicott, an octogenarian, an aunt of the Kennicott brothers, and a niece, Mrs. E. S. Beck, wife of the city editor of the Chicago Tribune, whose death followed within one week that of her baby daughter.

Bassett & Washburn have already housed 1500 tons of coal and expect to have 3,000 tons on hand December 1. Last winter they burned over 8,000 tons and in June contracted for another similar supply. Since then the market price on their grade has advanced 55 cents a ton.

The chrysanthemum committee viewed one seedling last Saturday, a yellow Japanese variety named Monrovia by Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich., to which they accorded eighty-three points on the commercial scale.

Ed. Roehrs, representing Julius Roehrs, of Carlton Hill, N. J., was in town this week disposing of a large shipment of cattleya blooms.

John Carson, of Chicago, is reported to have been robbed of his bicycle and $5 at Philadelphia, whither he had ridden in search of work.

C. A. Samuelson and his force went to Dubuque, Iowa, Tuesday night to put up an elaborate wedding decoration.

C. M. Dickinson is happy over the arrival, October 22, of a ten-pound son and heir.

O. P. Bassett leaves to-day to spend several weeks in the east.

Cleveland.

GOOD WEATHER HELPS BOTH STOCK AND TRADE.—MEETING OF THE CLUB.—AN AWAKENING PROMISED.—CHRYSANTHEMUMS TO BE FIRST DISCUSSED.

The phenomenally fine weather that we have enjoyed for some time past, still continues and stock generally, as well as business, has been greatly benefited thereby. Prices have not varied materially and, although the supply of carnations has increased somewhat, there is no good stock wasting. The quality of both carnations and roses has greatly improved. The latter are somewhat off crop just now with many growers.

At the club meeting October 23 the initial steps toward an awakening on the part of that organization, were taken. It has seemed for some time that the Cleveland Florists' Club was not fulfilling its proper mission and Mr. Cushman, the president, announced at the time of his installation, that there would be an attempt made to shake things up a little this winter, a work in which he will undoubtedly be supported by the members by their presence and active assistance at the meetings. Hereafter the second Monday in each month will be devoted to the discussion of some particular subject, which will be chosen and announced at the preceding regular meeting. The committee appointed has selected chrysanthemums as the most seasonable and suitable topic for the first attack, which occurs November 13. Everybody is invited and everybody will have a chance to talk so let everybody come.

WINDSOR LOCKS, CONN.—H. A. Pinney has leased the building back of Coogan's pharmacy and will remove his flower store from the Mather building.

BROCKTON, MASS.—Each purchaser of a season ticket to the annual show of the Brockton Gardeners' and Florists' Club is to receive a present of a plant.

SEWICKLY, PA.—R. W. Hutchinson, chief florist for the Pennsylvania Railroad, is shortly to make a public showing of chrysanthemums in the company's greenhouses here.

LAWRENCE, KANS.—C. M. & S. E. Luther have put in a new hot water heater, made by the Ideal Heating Co., Oskaloosa, Ia., expressly for soft coal, and it works like a charm. Trade is good.

THERE is in progress of construction for the College of Agriculture at Champaign, Ill., an agricultural building which is to cost $150,000. Among other subjects horticulture in all its branches will be taught here.

Fall Exhibition of the Horticultural Society of Chicago.

In addition to the 201 premiums offered by the society, the following special premiums have been offered by Messrs. Kennicott Bros. Co:

Class 6 A.—Best twenty-five blooms, chrysanthemums, Major Bonnaffon, $10.

Class 179 A.—Best three vases of fifty blooms, carnations, any varieties, $10.

Class 179 B.—Best fifty blooms of any variety of carnation, introduction of 1899, $5.

The Quaker City Machine Works offers as a second premium in Class 74, the International Competition in chrysanthemums, a $25 set of the Evans Challenge Ventilating Apparatus.

Having secured the Auditorium, perhaps the finest hall in America, for its exhibition and offering the most liberal list of premiums of any society in the country, the Chicago society feels sanguine of having a record-breaking show. The winner in the International Competition will receive $56 for a dozen chrysanthemum blooms.

The final announcements are now out and may be had by addressing the assistant secretary, room 1002, 185 Dearborn street, Chicago.

Growth of the Hail Association.

The following is a record of the growth of the Florists' Hail Association as shown by the annual reports on the first of August of each year:

Year.	Glass insured.	Reserve fund.
1888	811,951 Square feet	$ 491.23
1889	1,327,240 "	743.07
1890	2,132,118 "	1,322.46
1891	3,104,583 "	1,855.84
1892	4,078,725 "	2,542.13

1899	11,209,865 "	6,649.25

The square feet of glass insured has been increased nearly half a million square feet since August 1, 1899, and the reserve fund is now over $6,800.

The Liberty Rose.

Your Philadelphia correspondent, page 326, states that a spurious "Liberty" is being offered for sale.

Those who have seen flowers of the true Liberty would not be deceived.

Mention has also been made, I believe, that young plants were being offered to publishers of catalogues some months ago, and that some plants had actually been sold as Liberty and delivered!

The Simon-pure Liberty has been announced far and wide that it would not be disseminated until the spring of 1900.

Then who was the deceiver and whom the deceived? It would be interesting to know!

"The firm offering 'Mock Liberty' imported it under the impression that they were getting the famous Liberty!" Ha! ha!

Can such a state of affairs be possible in this enlightened age?

No honorable firm would undertake anything so reprehensible and questionable.

Indeed they would not. For Liberty could not legitimately have been obtained from the firm owning it other than through the legitimate and recognized sources.

Indeed it could not.

Then what standing has a firm in an honorable calling which offers for sale something which they could not possibly have in their possession honestly?

An interesting case, very.

And one that deserves investigation at the hands of the S. A. F. and a motion is hereby made that a committee be appointed for that purpose. H. G.

Blue Hydrangeas.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—What treatment should be given plants of Hydrangea Hortensia in order to make them produce blue flowers? W.

If the question were reversed growers in some sections would be puzzled to reply. There are plenty of localities where every plant grown comes uniformly blue. Any mineral agent in the soil will turn the color. Water impregnated with iron, applications of nitrate of soda, localities near the sea shore and other factors all tend to the same result. Our difficulty has always been to keep the color pink. A pot full of rusty water, oxide of iron, will turn the color of the pinkest hydrangea if given early, before the heads develop. E. O. ORPET.

I do not know how to produce blue hydrangeas nor have I ever found any one who could tell me. There is nothing certain about the blue hydrangea. As is generally understood it is but a change of color from pink to blue of the common Hydrangea Hortensia and H. Otaksa. Plants of the common form may be grown in tubs and after awhile one may take to producing blue flowers. Others in the same position and under the same treatment will maintain their typical pink color for years without change.

In this vicinity these hydrangeas are fairly hardy, and in many gardens and in cemeteries they are not uncommon. It is curious to note that without exception, so far as I have observed, these planted out ones invariably produce blue flowers after being out a year or two. I am told much the same thing exists at Newport, R. I. In a near-by cemetery is an immense bush hydrangea. Three years ago when I saw it, it carried over 500 heads of flowers, and they were all bluish pink, not so blue as others I have seen.

I have some H. Otaksa planted four years ago. These were frozen down last winter, not having been protected, but a few heads of flowers came on the shoots made from the base, as sometimes happens, and these were of a beautiful blue. Some years ago William Falconer showed me a batch of perhaps a dozen plants all raised from the same plant, and all had been treated alike and were planted in one spot; and there were normal pink, blue and intermediate shades in the lot.

It has long been known that cuttings from blue ones generally, if not always, go back to pink and it therefore seems impossible to propagate this color. It seems so universal here to see blue flowers on those left outdoors permanently, that I would advise a trial of it by those desirous of having them. The plants must be well protected, that the shoots are not frozen down. The loss of flowers follows loss of shoots, as, though the plants push up afresh from the ground, such shoots rarely give any flowers. In this respect this species differs radically from H. paniculata grandiflora, which rejoices in being cut down to the ground.

OBITUARY.

FRANCIS CASEY.

A native of Galway, Ireland, 52 years of age, Francis Casey died at Bangor, Me., in early October. He had gained no little fame as a landscape gardener and leaves a widow and five children.

C. T. FLETCHER.

Charles T. Fletcher, a well known landscape gardener and ex-member of the legislature, died at Lancaster, Mass., his native town, October 22, aged 73 years. In 1856 he became gardener to Nathaniel Thayer, retaining his connection with the family to his death, through three generations. He had held numerous public offices.

ALOYS MUELLER.

Aloys Mueller died at New Brunswick, N. J., October 8, aged 59 years. He was of German birth but had been in business at New Brunswick for thirty years. Besides being a successful florist Mr. Mueller was a botanist of uncommon attainments, a kind hearted man of erudition and strict integrity. Mrs. Mueller survives and has the sympathy of many friends.

WM. HANNAN.

The senior of the firm of Wm. Hannan & Sons, Dorchester, Mass., was the recent victim of failure of the heart. He was born in Ireland sixty-six years ago and in early youth was employed in his father's greenhouses. Coming to America at the age of eighteen years, the greater part of his life was spent in the vicinity of Boston. He had been in business at Dorchester nearly thirty years. He leaves eight children. The sons will continue the business.

ALEXANDER WALLACE.

The death is announced in the European horticultural press of Dr. Alexander Wallace, who had achieved no inconsiderable degree of distinction through his work with lilies. He was the author of "Notes on Lilies and their Culture," which had passed through two editions. Dr. Wallace was 70 years of age. He was educated at Winchester and Trinity College, Oxford, and practiced medicine successfully many years. The firm of Wallace & Co., imported largely of lilies, calochorti and brodiæas from Japan and the United States. These were cultivated successfully at the Kilnfield gardens, Colchester.

JOHN CASSIDY.

This veteran of horticulture, for he was in his eighty-fourth year at the time of his death, at Montreal on October 17, emigrated from Ireland in youth. He spent several years as a private gardener in Eastern Canada before establishing himself as a market grower. After thirty years in business, his land being required for building purposes, he became gardener for Thomas Peck, a position which he filled until three years ago. Mr. Cassidy was an enthusiastic and skilled plantsman and a member of the Montreal Gardeners' and Florists' Club, which organization was represented at the obsequies by a majority of its members and a handsome floral emblem. Mr. Cassidy is survived by one son, three daughters and a number of grandchildren.

GALION, OHIO.—John C. Engelhorn is successor to Fisher & Son.

CAMDEN, N. J.—Harry Sharp has painted and refitted his store, making a great improvment.

VINCENNES, IND.—Wm. A. Reiman is completing an addition to his already extensive establishment, a carnation house 16x66. He reports trade very good.

SECAUCUS, N. J. — H. Ram has six houses of Bonnaffon chrysanthemums that are in the exhibition class. He sent the first blooms to Bradshaw in New York on October 23, which is rather early for that variety in this section.

GARDENER WANTED

To take charge of our greenhouses. Excellent opening for the right man.

W. N. RUDD, Mount Greenwood, Ill.

Danville, Ill.

A number of large funerals and a few receptions gave the trade a much needed boost the first ten days in October and kept most of the boys hustling for stock to fill orders. The demand for Beauties is increasing. Carnations remain scarce. Most of the roses are Brides and Bridesmaids. F. B. Smith & Son have nearly finished moving their plant back of Vermillion street and will cut up the former site into building lots. Steam is used in place of hot water and the boiler they have put in is a beauty, being large enough to take care of double the amount of glass.

There is an unconfirmed rumor that the florists will organize a bowling club in 1926; at present it is composed of one member, Wienold, of N. Admiral's, average score in ten games 57.

Duke was first in with chrysanthemums, Glory of Pacific and Mrs. Whilldin, but another week on the plants would have been better.

H. L. Harman, representing E. H. Hunt, of Chicago, visited the trade last week.

VALLEY.

Beginning October 15th, the forcing of Lily of the Valley was commenced at the Rosebank Nurseries, and shipping will begin three weeks later. From that time on Valley will constitute one of the special products of Rosebank and will be constantly on hand, both summer and winter.

It is the intention of the management to make the Rosebank Nurseries headquarters for this product, and to that end a special offer of three dollars per hundred has been made to the trade on a contract for a year's supply. This offer is now withdrawn, and a new price of $3.50 per hundred is made to hold throughout the year to regular customers.

THE SEED TRADE.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

ALEXANDER RODGERS, Pres; ALBERT MCCULLOUGH, Vice-Pres; S. F. WILLARD, Wethersfield, Conn., Sec'y and Treas.

C. P. BRASLAN, representing the government seed contractor, Charles Parker, of Santa Clara, Cal., is expected east this month.

VISITED CHICAGO: T. Lee Adams, of Kansas City, Mo.; J. M. Kimberlin, of Santa Clara, Cal.; T. P. Sperry, with the Livingston Seed Co., Columbus, O.

THE United States Department of Agriculture is making an experiment in the growing of Lilium Harrisii upon the grounds of E. F. Sperry at Orlando, Fla.

K. WEZELENBURG, of Hazerswonde, succeeds the late Jac. Wezelenburg and will continue the business at Sassenheim, Holland, under the style and title of Jac. Wezelenburg.

ROCKFORD, ILL.—R. H. Shumway, Jr, accompanied his brother this week to Chicago where the latter was operated upon for serious throat trouble. The operation was successful and the patient is doing well.

NEW YORK.—Of the 870 cases of damaged longiflorum bulbs bought from the United States authorities, Mr. Dreyer, the purchaser, has sold enough to clear a profit of upwards of $600 on the transaction. The disinclination of many dealers to bid on the stock is said to have been due to a distrust of the forcing qualities of bulbs that had undergone such a heating.

Indianapolis.

MEETING OF INDIANA FLORISTS.—REGRET AT ABANDONMENT OF FLOWER SHOW.—A CHANGE IN NAME.—COAL SCARCE.

At the last meeting of the Society of Indiana Florists chrysanthemum shows were the main topic of the evening. There was surprise when it was learned how many inquiries had been made from all over the state regarding a show. Many members are deploring the fact that there will be no show here this year. In connection with the November meeting an exhibit of chrysanthemums will be held. Premiums will be offered on market plants, single stems and cut flowers.

Sonnenschmidt & Junge have changed their firm name to The Indiana Plant Co., to avoid embarrassments from their somewhat unique cognominal appelation. This establishment is erecting an up-to-date propagating house 10x50 feet which will be piped for both steam and hot water.

Coal continues scarce and very hard to get, some of the coal dealers being as much as six weeks behind with their orders. This causes much apprehension among the florists.

We are glad to report that Alvin Schreiber's little daughter, who has been critically ill with typhoid fever, is recovering. H. JUNGE.

Columbus.

BUSY TIMES IN THE BUCKEYE STATE.—UNDERWOOD'S NEW ROSE.—JOTTINGS HERE AND THERE AMONG THE GROWERS.

The advanced price of glass and pipe did not seem to deter Underwood Bros. from building an additional carnation house 20x165. It is a fine structure, well adapted for the purpose; and right here I will remark that there seems to be a general realization of the fact that the larger the house the better will carnations thrive in it; hence old structures and old methods are rapidly yielding to improvements. Mrs. S. J. Morton is a brand new rose, carmine in color, graceful in its general make up and borne on a long, stiff stem and a continuous bloomer. It originated with Underwood Bros., who intend putting it on the market next year.

At the Franklin Park Floral Co.'s establishment I found things in splendid condition. Mr. Knapp, the genial manager of the place, certainly has ample reason for being proud of his roses. His carnations, though a bit slow in coming, look well.

John R. Hellenthal has made a substantial addition to his fine residence on Moler street. As a grower Mr. Hellenthal is a decided success, while his geniality has become proverbial among the "bulb men," both on this and on the other side of the pond.

Gus. Drobish, the veteran florist, has no complaints to make. His mailing trade this year shows a marked improvement over that of the previous season, while local trade is improving all along.

S. F. Stephens, the cemetery florist, is very much alive, notwithstanding his surroundings. His chrysanthemums this season are as fine as any I have seen during my recent travels. HOMO.

TIFFIN, O.—The orphans' home here will shortly have another greenhouse.

WESTVILLE, N. J.—Louis Duncan is rebuilding the boiler house recently destroyed by fire.

RUTLAND, VT.—C. H. Miles now has a good range of 22,000 feet of glass, having added several houses during the past season, with a new office and potting shed. He has a fine stock and expects to largely increase his trade, both local and shipping.

Grand New Pink Carnation

THE MARQUIS.

100,000 ALREADY SOLD.

HAS received Five First-Class Certificates, including that of the American Carnation Society, and the Silver Cup at Philadelphia for best Pink, also Silver Medal of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society at Boston. It is, without doubt, the finest Pink Carnation ever introduced and has been so pronounced by experts.

ITS COLOR
is distinctive, being unlike that of any other Carnation. It is a TRUE PINK, with no trace of purple or magenta. It is an exquisite shade, soft and rich, and possesses a peculiar glow which makes it very attractive. It is equally beautiful by artificial light or daylight.

ITS FORM
is exceptionally perfect. It is very full and double and unusually well rounded and built up in the center. Its petals are beautifully serrated and quilled, giving it a unique and very graceful form. Its calyx is strong and ample and does not burst.

ITS SIZE
is phenomenal—3½ to 4 inches in diameter under ordinary culture—and often exceeds that.

ITS STEMS
are strong and average 2 to 3 feet in length.

ITS FRAGRANCE

ITS KEEPING QUALITIES
are excellent. Cut flowers will keep from one to two weeks. Flowers shipped from Syracuse to Chicago have kept finely for eight days after their receipt.

IT IS VERY PROLIFIC, at least as free as the freest of the standard varieties and far freer than any other large variety. It makes no "grass." Every growth produces a flower. It is an absolutely continuous bloomer.

ITS HABIT
is strong, vigorous and healthy—free from rust or other diseases.

IT PROPAGATES READILY.
The loss in propagating is practically nothing.

IT LIFTS EASILY
and, owing to the mass of fibrous roots it makes, receives no perceptible check.

In a word, its COLOR, FORM, SIZE, FRAGRANCE, STEM and HABIT are ideal.

Strong rooted Cuttings, March to April, 1900, $10.00 per 100; $75.00 per 1000.

THE NURSERY TRADE.

AM. ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.
W. J. PETERS, Pres.; D. S. LAKE, Vice-Pres.; GEORGE C. SEAGER, Rochester, N. Y., Sec'y.

THE Pecos valley in New Mexico is gaining a reputation for its apples.

OF plum, peach and cherry most nurserymen recommend trees one year old for planting.

A NEW cherry maggot, unlike the grub of the plum curculio has been discovered in Massachusetts and New York.

PROF. JOHN CRAIG made some 5000 crosses of fruits in Iowa during the present year, his first at the Iowa Agricultural College.

GRIFFING BROS. Co. has removed its headquarters from Macclenny, Fla., to Jacksonville, in an endeavor to expedite business.

THE newly appointed nursery inspectors in Pennsylvania are Geo. C. Butz, State College; Prof. S. B. Heiges, York, and F. M. Bertram, Philadelphia.

THE Great Northern Nursery Company, established at Baraboo, Wis., last spring with M. F. Foley as manager, is reported to be shipping about ten cars of stock this fall.

S. D. WILLARD, Geneva, N. Y., has 100 acres of fruit stocks and has been making some particularly strong displays of plums. Mr. Willard is 64 years of age and has lived in New York State all his life.

THE W. & T. Smith Co., Geneva, N. Y., report that this has been one of the busiest seasons they have had in some years. Nursery stock is advancing in price every day on account of the great shortage. Their trade in roses and ornamental shrubs has been particularly brisk.

Los Angeles.

A SPLENDID RAIN PUTS NEW LIFE INTO THINGS IN SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA.—RIVERSIDE WANTS EXPERIMENTERS.—LYON TO COMPILE FIGURES.—NEW STORES.—A BUG FAILURE.

The heaviest rainfall in early October for many years bathed, refreshed and greatly benefited the entire state last week. The dust deposit of the summer months is entirely removed from all foliage, which has changed to a lively green, and many varieties of trees and shrubs are already showing new growth, the result of the copious watering. Ofcourse all the florists are wonderfully pleased with such weather and, as rain in this country means prosperity, all are looking forward to good business during the coming season.

The horticulturists of Riverside county are wide-awake people and, with the vast amount of capital invested in horticulture, they believe their vicinity to be the proper location for a United States experiment station and are therefore endeavoring to persuade the Agricultural Department at Washington to establish such a station at once. We all hope success may attend their efforts.

William S. Lyon, of this city, has been appointed horticultural statistician for California for the census of 1900. The appointment was made by Jas. Wilson, Secretary of Agriculture, and the selection was made solely because of Mr. Lyon's competence to perform the duties of the position.

With the arrival of autumn all the stores are "sprucing up" and are being made as attractive as possible. This is also the season for new ventures. We already note the new store of E. R. Meserve, at 217 West Second street, in charge of the veteran florist, B. F. Collins. The Brose-Fleur Plant and Seed Co. have a cut flower department in their store on West Fourth street and we have heard of two other stores which are expected to materialize about November 1.

Among other "bugs" forwarded from the Hawaiian Islands by George Compere was a colony of cryptolœmus. This has almost entirely rid the islands of mealy bugs and it was hoped it might prove advantageous in destroying mealy bugs under glass but after a thorough test the result is disappointing, as they do not seem to thrive in the atmosphere of a greenhouse.

Fred. Rafferty, the widely known florist of Santa Ana, made a profitable trip to this city a few days ago, disposing of nearly all his surplus stock. D. R. W.

LINCOLN, ILL.—W. H. Gullett & Son are building a new house, the fourteenth in their model range.

CHATHAM, ONT.—Miss F. Tissiman has a fine range of eight houses and has added a new boiler. Prices are very low on both plants and cut blooms.

EVERGREEN, ALA.—Geo. W. Caldwell has incorporated under the name of Caldwell the Woodsman Co., and has a reliable business man in the office, himself "taking to the woods" to watch the cutting and packing of the crop of wild smilax. The company proposes to put this industry on a solid footing.

I have a large stock of 2 to 3 year old, extra strong field-grown

At Philadelphia.

Eighteen players started in a handicap contest at Philadelphia last week but only nine finished, Connor winning the silver-headed cane offered as a trophy. The records of the past two months were employed as a base for the handicaps, the man with the high average was placed at "scratch" and each man with a lower average was given seventy-five per cent of the difference between his average and the "scratch" man's average as a handicap. This gave the high men some protection against a chance score by a weaker player and at the same time gave the low men the chance that those above them would not equal their two month's record. There was much interest and some good scores, George Moss making 214 and W. J. Baker 222. Play was begun on Thursday but was not finished until Saturday, each man rolling three games. Here is the record of those who finished:

Player	Pins	Handicap	Total

Flatbush Defeats New York.

There were happy hearts in Flatbush last Thursday night, for the bowlers had "got a move on" and the haughty New Yorkers had been humbled and the series of games tied in a brilliantly played trio of strings in which Louis Schmutz had covered himself with unfading glory. It was evident, from the bearing and manner of the great six, that they realized that the eyes of the world were upon them, as at the call of time Riley stepped to the line and delivered his first ball. But when Burns shuffled up in his white slippers to the chalk mark with a "now watch me" air and sent one of his famous cross-balls singing down the alley for the first strike of the evening, it was plain that New York was primed for a game struggle. As the game progressed neck ties were taken off, then collars, and other items of apparel and as one strike after another and successive difficult spares were made on both sides, enthusiasm ran high until Louis Schmutz set friends and opponents alike to cheering wildly over a whirlwind finish of five successive strikes and thus clinched the first game. "Jimmie" Donlan served as umpire and kept a sharp look-out for fouls. On the observation benches were Papa Zeller, Victor Dorval, W. H. Siebrecht, J. Butterfield, Geo. Bennett, John Phillips, W. J. Stewart, Paul and Henry Dailledouze, and Mr. Rupert from Dreer's. W. A. Prosser scored and this was the state of the blackboard when he got through:

With Philadelphia Gunners.

The gunners had a shoot at Wissanoming last Tuesday afternoon, the final for the prizes offered by A. B. Cartledge, first, a cut glass tea set; second, a cut glass cigar jar. The boys had their "good eyes" with them and some fine scores were made. Miss M. Kirkwood, of Boston, was present and showed the boys a thing or two about handling a gun, coming in second. Wolstencroft was first for the series and W. K. Park second. The score follows:

Name.	Unknown and doubles.	Known angles.	Handicap.	Tl.

Points won in the series—Wolstencroft, 10; Park, 8; Cartledge, 6; Dorp, 6; Smith, 5; Harris, 5; Anderson, 4; Bell, 4; Webster, 3; Westcott, 2; Barrett, 2. K.

Plan for a Handicap Contest.

During November the members of the Philadelphia Florists' Bowling Club will conduct a handicap contest sure to arouse considerable interest and the rules governing the competition are here set forth for the benefit of other clubs which may be planning contests for the winter:

1. Twenty-five games to be rolled during the month of November.
2. Not more than three games in any one day.
3. Two other members must be bowling when game is rolled, and candidate must declare his intention that the game is for this series before he commences.
4. Handicaps to be taken from the members' monthly averages—the most recent three months' recorded.
5. The member holding the highest average for the three months shall be scratch man and all below him shall receive seventy-five per cent of the difference as a handicap added to their score.
6. The entry fee for this series shall be 50 cents, to be paid to the committee before candidate commences the series.
7. The revenue from entry fees shall be used in the purchase of prizes, fifty per cent of it for first prize, thirty per cent for second and twenty per cent for third.
8. All games to be paid for as usual.

CHAPTER IV.

You Can Buy a Case of Smilax for an OLD PAIR OF PANTS When This Gentleman Enters the Business.

EVERGREEN, ALA., 99.

Dear Sir:—For the last year or two there has been a great deal of competition in the Southern Evergreen trade and this year it is going to wage more fiercely than ever. The trade at Evergreen, Ala., is represented by all classes of people, some of whom have been employed by me for a few weeks or a season, having gotten on to the floral trade papers and Florists' Directory, think they are on the road to large packing houses and private telephone lines.

Others that know absolutely nothing of the trade, but by hovering about the express office manage to hook a few names off of other shippers' boxes and send out circulars. There are farmers and truckers, carpenters and laborers; there are merchants who mix bacon, cotton and smilax trades and there are little boys. Every day I am told that So and So are going into the evergreen trade. These people ought to raise a monument to my memory when I die, for I have certainly founded a great industry for the South. But instead of planning to do so the ungrateful wretches are wishing only that I should die pretty quick, or "bust," or something—anything so that they may get the trade that I founded. No matter about that, for you are doubtless getting dozens of price lists, quoting all kinds of prices for this class of goods, and I am of the opinion that before long some of my "nigger" help will be into it too; in that case, my friend, no money at all will be required, for you can probably get a case of Smilax then for an old pair of pants. Now to the point. In the midst of all this competition there ought to be some standard as to what a case of Smilax consists of; how large the case should be; what it should weigh empty; what it should weigh packed; how much it should contain and the amount of wall space it should cover. Competition that cheats is no competition at all. There are standard flower pots, standard cases of holly and 12, not 11, carnations make one dozen. I have introduced every feature that has ever been put into the Smilax trade and I therefore tell you what my standard is. There are two standard cases, one 72x30x20 inches and the other 48x24x24 inches.

MEMORY CALDWELL, WOODSMAN.

These two cases contain the same cubic measurement, there being only a slight difference in the shape and weight of the empty box. The first of these weighs 20 pounds empty with the paper lining only and without the cover. It should contain 35 pounds of clean, selected Smilax, which is as much as can be put in a case of this kind without bruising. The cover weighs 5 pounds, bringing the gross weight of this case to 60 pounds. The other size weighs 17 pounds empty with the paper lining. It should also contain 35 pounds of Smilax and weigh with cover on 55 pounds gross. These cases are accepted at the express office and shipped at 50 pounds weight, the additional 10 and 5 pounds not being charged for. Now when you get cases of Smilax, and there are hundreds of them shipped from Evergreen, that only weigh gross from 45 to 48 pounds, although they are all marked 50 pounds, they are short from 7 to 12 pounds of Smilax or from ⅓ to ¼ of a case. In ten cases lots this cuts a figure in you estimate on a decoration. It will pay you to always weigh your cases. I rejoice in competition; it stirs my fighting blood and makes good business, but do let us have honest competition. Caldwell The Woodsman Smilax is all packed on the scales; there is no guess work about it; it's honest.

Price, $2.00 a case, f. o. b. Evergreen.

Hoping to have your orders, I am

Yours truly,

CALDWELL THE WOODSMAN, Evergreen, Ala.

P. S.—Chapter 5 on Efficiency will appear November 4th. 24 hours' grace expected on orders over 5 cases.

Orange, N. J.

The next meeting of the New Jersey Floricultural Society will be held on November 15 at the usual meeting place, Lindsley Hall. There will be an exhibition which will be worth seeing, if not large, and those of the craft who can be present will be cordially welcomed. This organization is one of the most deserving of all the local societies and numbers in its ranks many commercial and private growers of the highest ability. While as yet unsuccessful in exciting the general public interest in the society's work and welfare that was hoped for by its promoters, it has managed to keep its membership list up and its treasury in good shape. This has been accomplished by furnishing attractive meetings and endeavoring to do as much as possible to keep the society prominent in the minds of the craft. The prevailing spirit here is social and hospitable in an unusual degree. Lindsley Hall is on the corner of Cone and Main streets, one block directly back of Orange station of D. L. & W. R. R., and a trolley car from Jersey City passes the door of the hall. Jos. B. Davis is secretary.

ELIZABETH, N. J.—The greenhouses and out buildings on Patrick Mahr's place on the McGee town road were destroyed by fire on October 16. Loss $2,000; no insurance.

CROMWELL, CONN.—Charles Johnson, one of A. N. Pierson's men, struck a pile of rock in the road while riding his bicycle on the evening of October 19 and sustained painful injuries. The rock was used for street work and was not marked by a red lantern.

GRANDVILLE, MICH.—Mrs. Clara E. Stover, wife of N. B. LOUIS DUPUY, Whitestone, N. Y.

Cyclamen!

We have a fine and healthy lot of Cyclamen Giganteum, well set with buds, growing in 3-in. pots, ready for repotting into 4-in. pots or larger; or three plants in 8-in. bulb pans will make a fine display and grow into suitable gifts for Christmas, or they could remain in the size pots they are in at present and would be most useful with which to make plateaus or "French" baskets of growing plants in bloom for Christmas or any other worthy occasion.

Plants in bloom for the gay and festive Christmas time are becoming more and more popular.

No better time than the present to be thinking about this matter and making necessary preparations.

$8.00 per 100, $70.00 per 1000.

Central New York Notes.

Grove P. Rawson, of Elmira, has a new white seedling chrysanthemum from which he has been cutting fine flowers since the first of October.

Robert Bard, foreman for P. R. Quinlan & Co., Syracuse, is convalescing. He has been dangerously sick with typhoid pneumonia.

L. E. Marquisee, Syracuse, has added three new carnation houses with side ventilation, one 26x70, the other two each 21x46. He has housed 18,000 of his new carnation, the Marquis, and has already booked orders for March delivery for about 80,000 rooted cuttings of this variety.

W. J. Crowe, of Utica, successor to Peter Crowe, has opened a very attractive store. He reports a great demand for cut fronds of his new fern and has planted several new houses of it and grows no other adiantum.

Chas. F. Baker, Utica, who has been seriously ill, is improving.

There will be no chrysanthemum show in Syracuse this season.

Local growers are just beginning to cut chrysanthemums. Roses are becoming more plentiful, but carnations are still very scarce. L.

NORTH CRAMERS HILL, N. J.—Wm. S. Johnson has rebuilt three of his houses and put in new heating apparatus.

SPRINGFIELD, ILL.—August Claus has sold his establishment on North Fourth street to H. H. Hensley, formerly of St. Louis, and with his sister, Mrs. George Wilkinson, will go to California to spend the winter.

Fred. D. Smith will grow vegetables almost exclusively this year having, with his father, purchased a sixty-acre farm in Lynnfield, Mass., which will be devoted to fruit, Mr. Smith being considered an expert at this branch of horticulture.

Owing to the continued ill health of J. W. Tapper, caused by contact with an electric wire by which a current of some 500 volts was taken directly through the eyes and brain, Tapper Bros. have leased their houses to S. M. Gould, formerly with Chas. Otis.

A number of the craft are in hopes that the florists' club will be revived this winter. TAP.

Des Moines, Ia.

Trade is good for this season of the year and prospects were never brighter for a good winter's business. The supply is not one quarter of the demand and as a result large quantities of stock are shipped in. The Highland Park Greenhouses have been leased by Mr. Harter, formerly at the Ames Experiment Station. He will grow carnations and a general bedding stock. J. T. D. Fulmer has disposed of his greenhouses and opened a store at 408 Seventh street, in West DesMoines, where he expects to attend strictly to business. W. L. Morris was married last week. J. F.

Newark, Ohio.

A decade ago, when I first visited Newark, the flower business was either in its infancy or in a state of desuetude. The old, dilapidated shanties containing a miscellaneous collection of bedding plants, were all I could see. The proprietor of the place, long since retired, I well remember, told me a tale of woe, ascribing his failure "to make it go" to the lack of appreciation on the part of the townsfolk. Now mark the contrast: Six modern, well equipped houses, containing about 14,000 feet of glass, where roses, carnations, violets and chrysanthemums are grown to perfection, a progressive, energetic and persevering young man presiding over the establishment, who from all appearances can and does "make it go." It is but five years since Geo. L. Miller embarked in business, yet during this comparatively short time he has made a considerable success. It is Mr. Miller's intention to enlarge his place from time to time. During the spring he built two houses, one for carnations, 30x130, and the other for violets, 12x100. In addition to his greenhouses, Mr. Miller has an attractive flower store on East Park place.

Time and circumstances prevented my calling on A. J. Baldwin, the second up-to-date florist here, whom I understand to have very good business.

HOLLY=VAUGHAN'S XXX BRAND.

THE Holly situation changes nearly every year. For the last four years they've begun to bring it into the country towns like potatoes. Every man has taken to cutting his own—or some other man's Holly, and packs it well, badly or indifferently, or any old way. The result is very bad for the retail florist. When we first started the Holly business, in 1880, our buyer contracted for a man's grove and cut the best and sorted it himself, and established Vaughan's XXX Stock as a brand worth having. Some years it has been the best in the Market; all years it has been as good as any, its average is high, but we wondered why so many culls would show up when we inspected our car lots (to sell to peddlers at half rates) and last fall our Mr. Vaughan located this towo market Holly system and cut it off from our man. We are buying and packing our Holly in the woods ourselves, and it costs more money, but it is worth to the retailer a lot more than it costs. A good case of Holly is easily worth Ten Dollars, while cull stock can't be given away.

We can suggest delivery dates which will keep you in good supply on the best days for selling Holly. Our prices are not advanced. How much can you use?

R. VINCENT, Jr., & SON, White Marsh, Md.

Zanesville, Ohio.

John D. Imlay reports the best trade at this season he has had in years. Between funeral work, which kept him unusually busy during the past week, wedding decorations and his usual run of store trade, he has had all he could possibly attend to. Mr. Imlay, however, and I quote his own words, "can stand prosperity without a murmur." Encouraged by the increased demand for carnations he has recently added a carnation house 22x120. His plants, as usual, look well, and the collection consists of the best varieties extant. One house is devoted to whites, such as Mary Wood, Flora Hill, White Cloud and McGowan and a second house is given to the colored varieties. Roses and chrysanthemums do equally well, while his Ficus elastica, of which he grows a large quantity, both for his retail and wholesale trade, are decidedly meritorious. A general line of seeds and bulbs is carried by Mr. Imlay in addition to his flower and plant business.

HOMO.

Madison, N. J.

The monthly meeting of the Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Society was held here October 11, with an attendance of about fifty members and a number of guests, who enjoyed the rare treat of an illustrated lecture by J. K. M. L. Farquhar, assisted by Robt. Farquhar, of Boston, on the "Gardens, Fields and Woods of Japan." The lecturer was in an enthusiastic frame of mind and literally carried us with him through the land of flowers. No description can do justice to the lecture. The illustrations were superb and lifelike. Entire familiarity was shown with Japan, her people, her customs and her flora. A roof-raising vote of thanks was given to the Messrs. Farquhar.

Lilies and Irises in Japan.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—I arrived here April 12 and you may want to know what I have been doing with myself. I dare say the other day you had printed directions how to grow Lilium rubellum and L. Krameri. I prepared this. Lilium rubellum is a new lily of great beauty. I saw it floweriug here and found it has been three years in the market and found also that the shippers had lost money, that the culture had been a failure generally and the shippers were going to drop it. I said, however, the thing is too beautiful; but the culture needed is exceptional, and I said try it again. I could see the buyers, mostly Americans, would soon get tired of the continual deaths. Now these plants can be grown anywhere if the necessary attention is given to them.

Some four or five years back it was found that the supply of Bermuda lilies did not meet the demand and a New York syndicate applied to Japan and collectors were sent to the southern island where they grew and collected immense quantities and as they are represented by six or more varieties, some with broken flowers, some dwarf, some tall, others early and some late, I found this gave the American florists a good deal of trouble. I therefore set about looking into the matter and I further found that the varieties could be distinguished from the bulbs and this autumn I have induced one concern to make a start in growing the best form, indeed the one that originally was grown in Bermuda, so that in a few years we may have a good clean stock of the sort which gives one stem and from eight to twelve flowers and is medium early. These bulbs are not shipped by the growers. The growing is done by the farmers and the shippers supply the small bulbs (called seed) and they are grown on for them. If an American dealer wants bulbs of this best variety, he can have them at an increased price; they will be specially picked out for him after lifting. I was told the firm above mentioned had this year drowned a large quantity of the bad varieties. The farmer does not understand this throwing away, so the shipper buys and then destroys. The best form has almost always one crown and the scales of the bulb are narrower and run up to a point. One with the broadest and darkest green leaves has the broadest scales. One that gives three or more crowns, weak stems and few flowers and so on. L. longiflorum giganteum, with the stem more or less dark, has a very distinct bulb. It is the intention of the shippers to destroy all but the L. longiflorum giganteum and the one with the long narrow leaves and many flowers, but this is a work of some years. If the buyers would put on the pressure the time will come about sooner, and the buyers will meantime have to pay a higher price for those selected varieties. I think about 4,000,000 of L. longiflorum bulbs must have left this shore for America and London.

L. auratum will become annually scarcer and dearer. At one time the hills about here were covered with it, now there are not many, too few to pay for the collecting, and each year they have to go further ahead. Again, too many small bulbs have been sent out of the country and the very large bulbs are each year, scarce as they are, sent off before they have attained the giant size. Lily bulbs are put on fresh soil annually and the same ground not used oftener than once in three or five years. When the lily is working at the roots liquid human manure is given once a month; as soon as the shoot appears above the ground no more is given. About Yokohama L. longiflorum is largely grown. It likes a damp soil and so is grown in the rice fields with the water drawn off. L. auratum does best on the hills in a dryer soil. In fact the lilies grown for the market have each their own favorite growing place. To get at the bottom of all this I would have to remain another summer. Among the shippers there is great competition and each has his own secret or thinks he has. One man who sends his bulbs to Colchester, near London, took me out a good deal and we appeared to be friends for life. I chanced to call upon him one day when he was among his lilies and in two-twos our friendship was rent asunder.

Iris Kæmpferi is grown in the rice fields and the plantations are flooded as soon as the plants make their early growth. About August the water is drawn off and during winter they are treated with liquid human manure twice a month. As soon as the shoots appear no more manure is given. The Japanese are mostly vegetarians so that cow dung will take the place of human manure. For the nursery grand plant beds should be prepared specially and in summer flooded frequently. In America I should recommend the same treatment as in Japan; in Britian not so much wet; in the west of Ireland the climate might be wet enough, while in other parts water might be needed. In Scotland, only on dry soils would the water be a necessity and in such dry seasons as the past summer when the gardens were burnt up. I arrived at these conclusions going north. I went about 800 miles north to Sapporo, the capital of Yego. All the way up as soon as I got from the warm part of Japan I saw Iris Kæmpferi growing on the banks of the hill sides, but in greater quantities in moist meadows. You may have seen the species of I. Kæmpferi, a small flower. Now they have varieties of immense size, twelve inches in some. It is upwards of 100 years since it became an amateurs' flower. The best collections are now much frequented in the flowering season and are turned into tea gardens where you get tea or sake and if you have a poetic vein you can write poetry on the whole garden or on one favorite flower. Since the Damios were put down, gardening, one may say, came to a close. It was this class who were the gardeners and had their dwarfed trees that were in the family for hundreds of years. PETER BARR.

The Dawson Hybrid Roses.

For the past fifteen years Jackson Dawson has been experimenting in rose hybridization, giving special attention to the natural species as grown at the Arnold Arboretum, and it is only recently that, encouraged by the progress he has made with multiflora, rugosa and Wichuraiana, others have also taken up a similar line of work. The future now appears very promising for this type of roses, whose hardiness, vigor and variety and beauty of flower and foliage are sure to make for them an unprecedented popularity for garden and park decorative purposes. The two varieties illustrated are among the best of Mr. Dawson's productions up to date. W. C. Egan is a hybrid between Rosa Wichuraiana and General Jacqueminot. The flower is double, pink, closely resembling Souvenir de la Malmaison. Minnie Dawson is a single pink hybrid between Rosa multiflora and Mme. Gabriel Luizet. Mr. Dawson uses multiflora, Wichuraiana and rugosa for seed parents invariably, his experience being that crosses of the second generation forms are never so vigorous or hardy as those from the original parents. This is in line with Waterer's method in hybridizing rhododendrons. Mr. Dawson has now some five or six hundred young seedling roses as yet unflowered.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

CUT BLOOMS.

Once more, sweeping everything before it, the chrysanthemum has appeared, boldly usurping the place of honor at every festivity. Of many cultivated flowers it is the most self-asserting, but not without cause. Through a long process of feeding and dishudding individuality is encouraged until, by reason of their size, a lady often deems it sufficient to carry a single large chrysanthemum, when at other times a dozen or two roses would be used. In numerous instances the collective appearance of flowers contributes much to their attractiveness, but here the condition of the individuals measure their value. Upon this requirement, aided by one or two other common sense things, hinges the success of a chrysanthemum arrangement. Since they are large, very many cannot be used together, and simplicity more easily prevails. It is no clinging vine peeping through a crack, but an erect, self-contained unit, symmetrical in general appearance, but not in detail. It is in no sense fantastic, but full and massive. Beauty of texture and surface are not its striking peculiarities. It is better seen at a distance than under its shadow; neither does its odor invite closer acquaintance.

Next in importance to giving prominence to the individual flowers, is the character of the surroundings. The main requisite is plenty of space, both surrounding the group and between the flowers. Picture artists realize the importance of atmospheric effects, vistas and open spaces. These are equally valuable in our art. Large massive flowers like chrysanthemums must not be placed close to a mirror, wall or window, or be allowed to rest against a solid surface. Often a glimpse of the background throws color and form wonderfully in relief. Speaking of backgrounds reminds us that it is often necessary to make our own, and to be able to do this quickly and inexpensively is no mean advantage Of course dull, restful colors are most desirable. Many greens and greys afford these effects when worked with screens and panels of wood ferns, gray and green mosses, autumn foliage, etc. Having found a happy location, it is of next importance to observe that substantial, if not heavy, dishes in deep, rich colors with little or no decoration excepting that suggestive blending of color, are best for displaying chrysanthemums. Here, if anywhere, pottery is preferable to glass. The chrysanthemum does not pose as a hot house pet like the rose, and most glass is too fragile a receiving vessel. The quilled varieties are the nearest approach to delicacy, and these might properly be placed in glass. They are the daintiest for small table decorations and personal use. Owing to the coarseness and size of the commoner chrysanthemums a rustic setting is appropriate, as in the illustration. The varieties used here are mostly Viviand-Morel, Mrs. E. G. Hill and Marie Louise in unequal quantities, the pink predominating.

With chrysanthemums there are opportunities for fine results in coloring, with which we seldom meet among other flowers; for instance, the numerous tints and shades of yellow may be so blended as to form an easy gradation from a rich pumpkin orange to a pale straw, which when supplemented by a creamy white, completes an arc of wholesome light. The coppers and deep reds make another interesting combination. For soft color effects there is nothing lovelier than the pale heliotrope tints running up to the deeper pinks. Care should be taken not to combine these latter with any yellow except the palest and softest. Any scheme in heliotrope pink needs a warm background of green and plenty of light. The yellows, on the other hand, are particularly useful for lighting a dark corner or back of a hall opposite an opening or door. Much depends upon the first glimpse one gets of the interior of a house. Red and yellow are the warm colors that should prevail about the entrance. For extra foliage with chrysanthemums oak leaves seem to be the most suitable, both as regards color and form harmony, on account of their striking similarity in size and shape to the chrysanthemum foliage, and because of their rich yellows and reds. Acorns may be added with good effect; a background of conventional design for a frieze above a wainscoting or picture moulding or over a mantle is a good setting for a bunch of gorgeous chrysanthemums. Wheat sprays make a very pretty tie for a flat bunch, especially if they are of the loose, ragged type. G. B.

WORK OF THE COMMITTEES.

Boston, Mass., October 21; Hewey A. Molatsch, Brooklyn, N. Y., exhibited Walter Molatsch, a yellow Japanese, incurved, scoring commercial scale 93 points.

Philadelphia, Pa., October 28; John N. May, Summit, N. J., exhibited No. 38, a pink Japanese, incurved, scoring commercial scale 84, exhibition scale 83 points. No. 125, by same exhibitor, a pale pink Japanese, reflexed, scored 76 points on each scale. No. 145, also by same Coles Has Company.

The members of the Society of Indiana Florists accepted the invitation of W. W. Coles to visit Kokomo, Ind., Thursday, October 26, seven Indianapolis members and as many more from other cities availing themselves of the opportunity for a good day's outing, arriving at Kokomo about 10 a. m. Mr. Coles said the first thing on the programme would be a ride around the town. We were then invited to get into a lemon-colored "Dewey" express, drawn by a spanking team of Kokomo bays, owned by Mr. Coles, and after a few turns around the corners, it was hard to tell whether we were in an express wagon or aboard the Olympia.

After visiting the principal points of interest we were driven to Mr. Coles' place. There we were first shown the remainder of the Kokomo bays, then the Scotch collie dogs, light Brahma and Langshan chickens, all of which Mr. Coles said had pedigrees galore. After explaining the full workings of his modern barn and chicken house, we were taken to the greenhouses, where we found Beauties, Kaiserins, carnations, palms, etc., in abundance. Everything was in "apple-pie" order. All plants looked vigorous and well kept and in all there was a very encouraging outlook for bountiful returns. Much time was spent in going through the different houses and many compliments were paid Mr. Coles; it was generally conceded that had he had any longer stemmed Beauties or Kaiserins than he showed he would have said so.

On reaching the office we were brought face to face with a problem, but while we did not know the particular brand that was placed before us, everyone was willing to risk Coles' judgment and no questions were asked. Kokomo soft drinks were also provided for those who might have stomach trouble, a nice lunch was served and several minutes were spent in enjoying ourselves. We were then invited to the lower end of his broad acres to see Mr. Coles' heard of Jerseys, among which was a gentleman cow that was three feet by eight feet, and nothing but the bluest of blood runs through his veins.

On our return voyage we were shown a very luxuriant growth of Canadian thistles which Mr. Coles said he exhibited for variety only. Then we come to the turnip patch; after a brief and convincing talk by Mr. Coles as to why his turnips were better than others, we were invited to partake sumptuously of the watery vegetables. This all hands did, and the scheme worked so well that Mr. Coles could not withhold his hilarity and it was soon whispered around that it was a shrewd move to fill the crowd with turnips and avoid the complete annihilation of his Brahmas. At this everyone said the turnips tasted bitter any way and at once went into training to offset the desired effect. How well this was done can be best told by Mrs. Coles, who had prepared a most elaborate dinner, and for more than an hour there was a joyous florists' feast, after which cigars were passed and many kind wishes extended to the hostess.

AN ARRANGEMENT OF CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

As some had to take early trains for home the "Dewey" was again brought out. After a safe landing at the depot of those who took early trains the remainder retired to a bowling alley where two hours were spent in breaking records. Mr. Coles made the highest score, but the visiting florists wanted him to do this as they did not think it would look well, being his guests, to beat him in his own town. We will not mention the low man. Now came the time to separate; a vote of thanks was given Mr. Coles and everyone returned home feeling that if more florists had attended, they could have again entered on their labors with a lighter heart.

Among those present were: Henry Rieman, John Hartje, John Heidenrich, Ernst Hukriede, E. A Nelson, R. A. McKeand, J. T. Huntington, Indianapolis; Stewart & Haugh, Anderson; Harry Lemon, of E. G. Hill & Co., Richmond; Ed. Bissell, Marion; Mr. Tinker, Peru; and Meyer Heller, of South Park Floral Co., New Castle.

MARKET TAKES A BRIGHTER TURN.—SCHULTHEIS AND HIS DOINGS.—DUPUY HAS MANY GOOD THINGS.—YOUNG ON BEAUTY GROWING.—TAYLOR TRIES NEW CARNATIONS.—WILL BUILD FOR LIBERTY.—LAWLER GROWS GARDENIAS.—DARLINGTON'S BIG PLANT STOCK.—OTHER NOTES.

Heavy receipts in all lines have been the rule since the last report and there is little change as yet in the conditions of this market, although the outlook is encouraging. Chrysanthemums are everywhere and are generally regarded by the growers and wholesalers as very much in the way. The retailers' sentiments vary with the case but as they are getting the big flowers at practically their own price they have little ground for complaint.

A. Schultheis' place is a busy spot at present The quantity and variety of stock grown here is amazing. There are chrysanthemums for cut flowers and as pot plants, heaths big and little, handsome palms, cyclamens, hybrid roses, poinsettias, lilies, azaleas and bulbs unlimited. Mr. Schultheis forces a quarter million lily of the valley every year. A new bulb storage shed into which a wagon may be driven and loaded has just been completed. One large house is filled with azaleas for Christmas and more are to come in yet, the late shipments being often the best for forcing because better ripened. Mr. Schultheis is enthusiastic over a bench of seedling carnations, many of which promise well.

He will try the old favorite Mme. Plantier rose for Easter once more, the coming season.

Louis Dupuy is again enlarging his establishment at Whitestone by the addition of two houses, one 25x125 and the other 25x75. They will be filled with heaths. Chrysanthemums make a big showing now, and under the benches are the lilies that are to take their place as soon as they are disposed of. Mr. Dupuy is building his new houses without side benches because of the difficulty of getting men to water the back row of plants properly. In pot chrysanthemums Gem D'Or makes a splendid yellow, with flowers of good size and plenty of them. Acacia paradoxa, two-year-old plants, home grown, is seen here in quantity.

George Young, the Beauty expert, expresses the conviction that sooner or later black spot attacks about ninety-nine per cent of all Beauty foliage. Black spot is favored by close planting and with three rows of plants in the bench is less troublesome than with four but Mr. Young says that after trying the three-row plan be returned to the four rows as the most remunerative. One even span house gives such good results that for Beauty growing he regards this style as the best of all, especially if the house runs north and south.

John H. Taylor has turned his attention to carnations once more. One house with a new roof is devoted to a trial of all the likely introductions and is full of interesting things. Brower shows up as one of the best whites. Melba grows elegantly and is one of the few sorts that have not suffered from stem rot this season. Two new houses are about to be built for Liberty rose. Mr. Taylor's Beauty houses are in prime condition, not a trace of spot, and mildew has not come near the teas. Mr. Taylor admits poor results with summer Beauty growing owing to the ravages of thrips.

In passing through Flushing stop off at Lawler's and see his house of gardenias. They are planted out in the beds and grow like weeds, the flowers being in demand at the highest price in New York city at all times. A fine lot of home-grown ardisias are seen here, as well as an infinite variety of subjects that indicate the character and ability of their owner, a plantsman and propagator of the old school.

H. D. Darlington's erica farm has been visited by many this fall who have been astonished to find a place of such magnitude in existence here. Not only are the standard varieties of heaths and the usual run of winter flowering plants raised in quantity but a number of new epacrises and other hard wooded beauties are being tried with a view to their introduction later on.

The Model Carnation Support seems to have been adopted generally by carnation growers in this neighborhood as the best device for the purpose, judging from the large number of these supports seen in use.

Tarrytown, N. Y.

At the last meeting of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society the treasurer read a very satisfactory financial report, showing that he could more than meet all the expenses likely to be incurred at the forthcoming exhibition, November 10 and 11. Wm. Turner, gardener for Wm. Rockefeller, was appointed superintendent of the exhibition. John Boshard, Irvington, Robert Henderson, Steven Bradley and Joe Money, Hastings, were elected to membership. Three others were proposed. Mr. Martin, gardener for Mrs. C. C. Worthington, Irvington, showed a very fine collection of cosmos. Resolutions were adopted expressing the sense of loss in the death of Charles Weise, whose demise was the first in the ranks of the organization. J. T. S.

MARKET PROMISES TO SETTLE DOWN.—OVERSTOCKS MAY BE REDUCED BY CHANGE OF WEATHER.—CHRYSANTHEMUMS IN PROFUSION.—TWOMBLY'S CARNATIONS.—BUTTERCUP STILL A FAVORITE.—CYPRIPEDIUMS ARE SHOWN.—BOSTON AND HER FERN.—A WEDDING AND OTHER NOTES.

A sharp change in the weather, now imminent, seems to presage a change in the condition of the flower business, which has been in an unprecedented state of demoralization for the past three weeks. Much of the stock now piled up in the storehouses of the wholesaler has seen more or less of the conflict and shows unmistakable signs of decrepitude, but should a stoppage in production take place, as now seems likely, it will all be unloaded for a better price than has prevailed for some time, as there is but little left on the plants to open immediately. Chrysanthemums are with us so heavily, however, that the effect of any interruption of the general supply will be greatly modified. Quality is below the average all along the line.

John Twombly has one of the finest houses of carnations in this section, at Winchester. It is even-span, thirty feet wide, and the carnations are planted out on low beds. Jubilee and Joost occupy the entire house. In other houses are Flora Hill, Maud Adams and Buttercup. The latter is still believed by Mr. Twombly to be the best yellow and one of the most profitable carnations grown. His success with it may, perhaps, be attributable to the fact that he grows it in a higher temperature than the other varieties. There are two houses of chrysanthemums that will be filled later on with hybrid roses and one new house just being filled with Princess de Galles violets which have been blooming freely in the field.

On Saturday, October 28, J. Mutch exhibited at Horticultural Hall his first seedling cypripedium, a cross between C. Harrisianum and C. Charlesworthi, also Cypripedium × Brysa, a hybrid between Sedenii candidulum and Boissierianum. H. A. White showed a handsome Cattleya labiata and J. W. Howard vases of Bride, Bridesmaid and Morgan roses of finest grade.

It is worthy of note that while Boston is supplying the country with the stock of Boston fern, Boston retailers have to buy their fine specimen plants of this fern from growers in other cities, who undoubtedly bought the same plants in a young state here. This looks like peculiar economy and is a question better worthy of consideration by Boston growers than the subject of the sale of distant-grown flowers through Boston wholesale houses which has so disturbed local growers for the past few years. If we have not the proper houses in which to grow plants such as our retail trade demands here is a good opening for somebody.

J. M. Cohen and Miss Jennie Hyams were married on Sunday evening at 602 East Seventh street, South Boston. They are now away on a brief honeymoon and on their return the sun will shine with double brightness and business hum with double energy at the Boston Florists' Exchange.

Viburnum cassinoides and Spiræa Thunbergii are both blooming, more or less, in the park plantations, a reminder of spring that seems out of place among the bare stems and brown leaves of autumn.

Philadelphia.

GREAT GLUT SEEMS NEAR ITS END.—CHANGE IN WEATHER WILL HELP EVERYTHING.—FRESH STOCK GENERALLY GOOD.—DEATH OF WILLIAM CRAWFORD.—PERSONAL JOTTINGS AND OBSERVATIONS.

Flowers of all kinds have been arriving in quantities probably three times as great each day as the market will take. Prices have taken a great tumble, in fact there can scarcely be said to be a standard price for anything, as there is so much to be disposed of that almost any offer, like the first bid to the auctioneer, is thankfully received. The fine weather is partly responsible for this state of affairs, bringing the flowers on in spite of all the growers can do to prevent it. Now that the weather has changed stock will no doubt become scarcer and not such a burden to carry. There did not seem to be as many chrysanthemums planted this season as usual, but, as in former years, there appears now to be more cut stock than the market can handle. Business is very quiet, the transient trade being poor. A change will soon come over things, however, as the debutants will now have their coming-out receptions. The first of this season's introductions took place last Saturday to which quite a number of bouquets were sent. It is hoped that the custom will be largely observed this season, as it has come to be quite an important part of the fall business.

The quality of the stock offered is good if fresh. Many flowers are seen that "have just come in" and when the color is objected to it is explained that "it must be the weather." Well, if the weather would only get colder, bookkeeping up above would be easier while there would be plenty of it here below. Prices are about the same as last week with the exception of the chrysanthemums, which have taken a still further drop; the very best now go for $2 per dozen and some of them are beauties. All Saints' day used up considerable of the whites but without any stiffening of prices. Roses are quoted at $3 to $4; Beauties at $3 per dozen with a few extras held at $4. Carnations are very nice but $1 is high for most of them and quantities go for much less. Violets are held at 50 cents to 75 cents for the best but go slowly. Palms are moving a little more briskly in the stores as the people are mostly at home and are fixing up for the coming social season.

William Crawford, greenhouse foreman for David G. Yates & Co., is dead. He was the original Bermuda lily grower in this country. The first bulbs were placed in his care by a tourist who had admired them in Bermuda and brought a few with him to be grown here. They grew almost unnoticed for a year or two, until their early blooming qualities called Mr. Crawford's attention to them; then he began to work up a stock and Mr. Harris, who was also watching the bulbs, bought the lot at something like $3 per bulb. It was not known until several years later that they came from Bermuda. In a conversation recently Mr. Crawford said that the true Harrisii was no more, it having run out by being crossed with the Japan longiflorum by the Bermuda growers.

August Lutz says he finds things much better this season than last as there is not so much haggling over prices. People in buying, if they like a plant, do not dispute the price and seem much better satisfied.

Lemuel Ball, who prides himself that he has the cleanest lot of palms in existence, says that at least forty to fifty per cent of the cost of raising palms goes towards keeping them clean. He says the lay people have no idea of the time and trouble there is expended in keeping down scale and other insects.

Robert Crawford has built himself another greenhouse adjoining the one in the rear of his store. This, with his Delaware county violet farm, almost puts him in the category as a grower.

Wm. W. Crawford, son of Robt. Crawford, was married to Miss M. E. Park, of this city, last Thursday. Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Connelley, of Charleston, S. C., have been spending a few days in this city. Mrs. Williams, of Pittsburg, was also a visitor.

The chrysanthemum exhibition of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, which opens next week, promises to be quite up to the standard of provious shows. Secretary Rust says the entries are coming in very nicely and that the chrysanthemum plants will be finer than for several years. K.

Chicago.

STATE OF THE MARKET.—BAD WEATHER HITS LOCAL DEMAND AND INJURES STOCKS. —GOOD BLOOMS STILL GO.—STORY OF THE WEEK.—RUMOR OF A DEAL IN FERNS. —MICHIGAN MAN REPORTED TO HAVE EFFECTED A COMBINATION.— OPINION DIVIDED AS TO RESULT.—BRIGHT PROSPECT FOR THE SHOW.—PLANS AND PROVISIONS.—UIHLEIN'S NEW SUMMER HOME. —VARIOUS JOTTINGS IN THE TRADE.

This has been one of those peculiar weeks which have kept the wholesalers on the anxious seat. The dismal weather with a couple of bright days like the shaving of ham in the bun has disturbed the sources of supply so that the conditions which are to follow are purely problematical and prices are "subject to change without notice." During the rain which closed last week it was impossible to move the ordinary grades of stock without a sacrifice and even the prime blooms would have hung had it not been for the excellent shipping demand, for local call was almost paralyzed and the fakir could not ply his trade. Then a couple of days of sun brightened the situation, but on Wednesday chrysanthemum show weather set in again. The result is a market not exactly overstocked, for out of town orders use up the good grades, but one on which the indifferent grower stands but little chance. Roses are very soft as a rule and there is quite a little mildew. Carnations are in ample quantities and violets, most of which are excellent, are so plentiful that buyers get concessions in count if not in price. Chrysanthemums are still going off easily. Pretty nearly everything in this line is now obtainable but there has been no glut and no sacrifice, although the big prices for choice blooms of previous years have failed to materialize. The medium grades have so far done about as well as formerly.

It is in the air that the Massachusetts fern dealers have reached an agreement whereby E. H. Hitchcock, of Glenwood, Mich., is to represent them in this market. In fact, one of the Hinsdale men has written several wholesalers here to that effect and it is stated that Mr. Hitchcock agrees to get the dealers considerably more money than they have been receiving for their stock. As yet Mr. Hitchcock has no more than intimated that he would this winter be able to supply this market with ferns, but the new deal was reported to go into effect November 1 and several wholesale men stocked up in anticipation of a rise. Bassett & Washburn have a large quantity in cold storage. They came by express and are sufficient to supply their trade during the season. One house bought 1,000,000 and had them shipped by express the last day of October, as some local dealers have had sad experiences getting Massachusetts ferns by freight, Randall last year losing more than one-half of a big shipment. As other dealers have lesser quantities on hand and some have contracts for their year's supply at a stated price, opinion is divided as to whether the reported deal will stand. At present the wholesale price is $1.50 per thousand, which is less than Mr. Hitchcock will care to lay them down here for if the report is true that he is to pay $1 25 a thousand for his stock after December 1.

There is every indication that this year's show of the Horticultural Society of Chicago will eclipse all previous efforts in this line in this country. With the grandest exhibition room in America, assurance of plenty of exhibits and an unusual interest on the part of society, there can be little doubt of an attendance which will warrant the additional expenditures determined upon this year. The great hall itself will, of course, be devoted to the exhibits and the foyer and corridors will afford popular promenades, for which some splendid music has been provided. The balcony will serve for spectators. The table decorations will, as usual, be a leading attraction for the ladies, while those in the trade will find the International Competition the event of greatest interest. The flower booth is this year to be in charge of the Service Club. Other booths, in the boxes of the theatre, are to be conducted by the McCowan School for Deaf Children. Visiting Nurses' Association, Margaret Etter Creche, Lying-in Hospital and Woman's Exchange. Well known florists have been named as a committee of reception for out-of-town craftsmen, who will be banqueted by the Chicago Florists' Club on Thursday evening, November 9.

At the meeting of the Florists' Club last evening the newly elected officers were installed with due eclat. The banquet committee, consisting of J. B. Deamud, chairman, A. L. Vaughan, C. W. McKellar, Edgar Sanders and Jas. Hartsborne, reported that arrangements had been made at the Sherman House for a sumptuous repast at $2 a plate, on Thursday evening, November 9. Mr. Winterson is chairman of the committee on decorations and Mr. McKellar of that in charge of tickets, which consists of the arrangement committee reinforced by Messrs. F. F. Benthey and John Degnan. Members are requested to wear badges and visiting florists will be warmly welcomed. Club tickets to the flower show may be had of Mr. Degnan by paying dues to November 1.

E. G. Uihlein, well known to every florist in Chicago, has purchased Villa Palatina, Lake Geneva, Wis., as a summer residence and has placed the important landscape work, which will at once be undertaken, in charge of James Jensen, superintendent of Humboldt Park.

C. J. Strombach, the well known superintendent of Lincoln Park, is now confined to his room at the house of his daughter, Mrs. Harris. He caught cold during the festival and still has a cough from which his many friends hope he may soon recover.

The Invalid Appliance Co., makers of the Columbia plant tubs, have removed from Clybourn avenue to much larger and lighter quarters at 150 to 160 Vedder street, where they will have facilities proportionate to their rapidly increasing business.

Robt. G. Stewart, Mrs. Stewart and their daughter, of Palm Beach, Fla., are the guests of C. S. Stewart, who, by the way, had the assistance of a number of friends in the celebration, Tuesday evening, of the twenty-ninth anniversary of his birth.

George F. Crabb, of Crabb & Hunter, Grand Rapids, Mich., was in town early this week. He will be down again next week with an exhibit for the flower show and probably accompanied by a number of the craft.

President Chas. M. Loring, of Minneapolis, and F. L. Olmstead, Brookline, Mass., were in Chicago this week in conference with the local committee in regard to the annual meeting of the American Park and Outdoor Art Association which is to meet here in June, 1900.

Louis M. Noe and Mrs. Noe, of Madison, N. J., have been the guests of Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Brant at Forest Glen for the past three weeks. Brant & Noe are doing a fine business this fall.

One of the greatest disasters which ever overtook a member of the trade was the wrecking of the S. F. Leonard seed warehouse on Wednesday evening, an account of which is given on page 388 of this issue.

W. H. Bruns is cutting some very fine lily of the valley. He is now putting in 1,000 pips a day of the stock which he selected himself while in Hamburg this summer.

Budlong is filling some nice orders with Webers' chrysanthemums. One of the week's shipments was 400 of the first grade to New Orleans.

E. C. Amling is receiving some Major Bonnaffon chrysanthemums of exhibition grade from Gunnar Teilmann, Marion, Ind.

Eli Cross, of Grand Rapids, is sending some very fine violets to J. B. Deamud. Some of them are white.

The Kennicott Bros. Co., reports its October business as twenty-five per cent greater than October, 1898.

O. W. Frese, the State street retailer, formerly with W. E. Lynch, is ill and in the hospital.

M. F. Kyle has gone to Kalamazoo, Mich., to enter the employ of the Dunkley Floral Co.

Visitors: I. L. Pillsbury, Galesburg, Ill.; John R. Fotheringham, representing F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, N. Y; F. Dorner, Jr., La Fayette, Ind; S. A. Baur, Erie, Pa.; F. W. Heckenkamp, Quincy, Ill.

POTTSTOWN, PA.—E. Wichersham & Co. have opened a branch store at Boyertown, in the pharmacy of Chas. A. Smith.

OMRO, WIS.—The fifth annual chrysanthemum show and fair of the Omro Horticultural Society will be held November 22 to 24.

COLUMBUS, O.—There has been a very successful chrysanthemum display in the cut flower department of the Livingston Seed Co. All the stock shown was very good.

PLEASE send advertisements now for the Autumn Number.

EXHIBITORS will note that there have been several recent additions to the list of coming exhibitions.

PETER BARR assures us that Lilium tigrinum and L. Batemanii are the favorite edible lilies of Japan.

MANY florists are gaining valuable publicity by contributing floricultural advice to their local newspaper.

I. C. COBURN, of Everett, Mass., has an excellent strain of pansies, of which we received some fine sample blooms this week.

WE have received an assortment of seedling carnations from Walker Bros., of Flint, Mich. The flowers are of various good shades of pink and some of the varieties are promising in other respects.

MISS GENEVIEVE LORD, for whom H. Weber & Son have named one of the most meritorius of their new seedlings, has offered a gold medal for the best twenty-five blooms of a light pink seedling carnation not yet introduced, to be awarded at the approaching exhibition of the Baltimore Gardeners' Club.

A New Chicago Poster.

The new chrysanthemum show poster of the Horticultural Society of Chicago, has been distributed and proves to be even more striking than that of last year. The bust of a Japanese girl is shown with chrysanthemum blooms and foliage. Some half dozen tints are employed with good effect. K. A. Beuhr is the name of the artist.

A British Method.

A rule which recently came into force in the National Chrysanthemum Society of England provides that "no certificate shall be issued to any new variety unless it receives the support of three-fourths of the Floral Committee present and if only ten members are present the voting must be unanimous." On September 28 W. J. Godfrey submitted plants of a yellow sport of Lady Fitzwygram and, as only eight out of a possible eighteen committeemen were present, missed his certificate. H. Weeks, with whom some excellent varieties have originated, was an exhibitor before the committee on October 10 when fifteen members were present. In this case he missed his certificate by "the third of a man," as a member remarked, the vote being eleven for and four against. The rule has some defenders and many critics.

DEPARTMENT OF PLANT REGISTRATION.

Donald Carmichael, Wellesley, Mass., registers carnation Eleanor Ames, Wm. Scott × Daybreak; Tidal Wave color, Scott habit but stronger and taller growth. Carnation May Whitney, Daybreak × Edith Foster; color white, Tidal Wave habit.

WM. J. STEWART, Sec'y.

The American Carnation Society.

The society is getting ready to issue its premium list for the show to be held in conjunction with the meeting February 15 and 16, at Buffalo, N. Y.

Any member of the florist trade desiring to offer special premiums for this show can have the opportunity to do so if they write the secretary at once for information.

All members of the society will receive this list and any one not a member can obtain it by writing to the secretary. A good, round sum is offered in money premiums and there are already a nice lot of special prizes and no doubt more to come, so that it will be an interesting booklet for carnation growers.

The Lawson medal will be an object of great interest at this meeting and the indications are that it will supersede all of the preceding ones.

Confusion in Orchid Nomenclature.

The growing misapplication of names by those raising hybrid cypripediums was aptly illustrated at the exhibition of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society October 28, when there was presented for recognition and record a hybrid cypripedium under the name of Cypripedium × Longwoodense (C. Charlesworthi × C. Harrisianum). Had the same care been taken in giving to it a name, as apparently had been done in bringing this finely grown seedling to the flowering stage, much confusion resulting from synonymous names would be avoided, as instanced by the notices of the Royal Horticultural Society and the Manchester Orchid Society, in the September number of the Orchid Review, which gives A. J. Keeling the credit of exhibiting at both shows a hybrid of above parentage under two different names; viz., C. Bincleyense and C. rubens. It would seem that so great an authority as the Orchid Review has ceased to be the infallible authority which was claimed for it at its birth, and that, notwithstanding the appeals of "Argus" in its columns for more care in recording synonyms, it has, perhaps unwittingly, fallen into the very error it has so emphatically cried out against. May we not hope that in the near future the orchid enthusiasts may have their national society and their nomenclature committee to whom they may refer such questions for adjudication, their decision to be final?

A National Orchid Society founded on a strictly botanical basis and with a determination to simplify rather than confuse existing conditions, open to all American gardeners whether professional or amateur, would, the writer believes, do much to further the interest in this class of plants and act as a greater incentive to all to use their utmost skill to obtain some new variety which should have the highest recognition possible. Home Grown Bulbs.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—In the last number of your valuable paper I notice a paragraph stating that a bed in Lincoln Park, Chicago, has been planted with hyacinth bulbs grown by George Gibbs, on Orcas Island, Washington, and that a consignment of tulips is on the way from the same place. Will you kindly correct this statement in so far as it relates to the grower of the hyacinths?

Although Mr. Gibbs must be considered the pioneer bulb grower of western Washington and deserves great credit for his meritorious achievements under rather discouraging circumstances, the work of growing Holland bulbs is now carried on quite successfully by another gentleman, near the home of Mr. Gibbs, upon lands selected by the three Holland bulb growers who visited Puget Sound in May, 1898. These bulb fields are located at Fort Bellingham on the shores of Bellingham Bay, Whatcom county, Washington, and were established by C. X. Larabee, of Fairhaven, a gentleman well known throughout the northwest for his public spirit and his exertions to promote the industrial and agricultural welfare of the county he resides in. In the development of the new and promising bulb industry he fortunately obtained the enthusiastic support of C. T. Canfield, who for many years has been a devout worshipper at the shrine of Goddess Flora, and is now rated as one of the most intelligent horticulturists on Bellingham Bay.

It was on the bulb fields at Fort Bellingham that those fine hyacinths now planted out in Lincoln Park were grown and to Mr. Canfield, not to Mr. Gibbs, must be given the credit of having produced such remarkable results as these bulbs show in their extraordinary size and soundness. Quite correct however is your statement that a consignment of tulip bulbs from Mr. Gibbs' fields is now on the way to this city and upon their arrival they will also be planted out in Lincoln Park near the Washington-grown hyacinths, the object being to show to our florists and the public the blooming qualities of these American grown bulbs. A few of each variety will be used by Mr. Stromback for forcing. ANDREAS SIMON.

ANSONIA, CONN.—W. H. Briggs has embarked in business as a grower of violets and lily of the valley. He has two houses.

BAD WEATHER HURTS BUSINESS AT BISONVILLE.—GOOD STOCK AND PLENTY OF IT.—PLANTS FOR SOUTH PARKS.—NOTES.

Trade is just what might be expected with the prevailing weather conditions. Stock is of good quality and there is enough of everything and too many roses. Stroh, of Attica, is sending in some fine violets. The stores all make a good showing of chrysanthemums and Beauties. The funeral of Rev. Francis Lobdell called for many fine designs this week.

J. J. Albright has donated his collection of plants to South Park. The acquisition is principally palms and it is one of the very best collections in this vicinity, containing some remarkable specimens, including an Encephalartos Lehmanii said to be the finest in the country. Prof. Cowell has also bought, at Rochester, the well known Hiram Sibley collection, which will be installed in the new houses.

The 74th Regiment bazaar has a fine showing of plants and flowers, to which the florists contribute for advertising.

The politicians call him "Pinky" Kasting and think he will be elected to the council.

Visitors: S. B. Smilcy, Lancaster; W. C. Stroh, Attica; Martin Reukauff, of Bayersdorfer & Co.; Walter Mott, representing Dreer. W. A.

LAPEER, MICH.—W. H. Watson has recently completed an additional house 16x100.

RUTHERFORD, N. J.—Bobbink & Atkins have begun the erection of a cold storage warehouse covering 10,000 square feet of ground.

VALLEY.

Beginning October 15th, the forcing of Lily of the Valley was commenced at the Rosebank Nurseries, and shipping will begin three weeks later. From that time on Valley will constitute one of the special products of Rosebank and will be constantly on hand, both summer and winter.

It is the intention of the management to make the Rosebank Nurseries headquarters for this product, and to that end a special offer of three dollars per hundred has been made to the trade on a contract for a year's supply. This offer is now withdrawn, and a new price of $3.50 per hundred is made to hold throughout the year to regular customers.

THE SEED TRADE.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

ALEXANDER RODGERS, Pres; ALBERT McCULLOUGH Vice-Pres; S. F. WILLARD, Wethersfield, Conn., Sec'y and Treas.

VISITED CHICAGO: W. J. Prosser, of Vaughan's Seed Store, New York.

PORTLAND, ME.—Eugene Schaettel, of Vilmorin, Andrieux & Co., Paris, called here enroute to Montreal.

DUNKIRK, N. Y.—The Lake Shore Seed Co. received a large consignment of European flower and garden seeds last week. The duty on the shipment amounted to $309.77.

Destruction of S. F. Leonard's Wholesale Building, Chicago.

Just before the close of business hours on November 1, a slight rumbling and trembling warned the employes of S. F. Leonard to run for their lives and a moment later the big, six-story brick building at 139 and 141 West Lake street, Chicago, seemingly rent in halves, came crashing down upon its trailer neighbors, crushing out the lives of at least three employes of the New England Milling Company, two doors to the west. Leonard's people all escaped.

The cause of the accident will probably never be positively known. Two theories are now discussed, one that it was the result of an explosion of flour dust in the nearby mill; the other that the building was unable to stand the strain of the heavy weight of seeds, onion sets and machinery carried in it. Observers on the street say that the first manifestation was a cloud of dust blown into the street in front of the mill; then the larger building tottered and fell, smashing like egg shells the six frame structures to the east and west. Flames sprang up in various parts of the ruin to complete the destruction.

S. F. Leonard had undoubtedly the largest stock of onion sets in the country stored upon the three upper floors, perhaps 40,000 bushels. There were also in the building five cars of peas just received, a small quantity of beans and other new seeds and the stocks carried over from the past season, just how much can never be known, as all records were destroyed. There seems little probability of salvage, as rain fell upon the ruins for more than forty-eight hours, and during that time the firemen threw water upon those portions of the wreck in which fire smoldered.

The insurance is $76,500, one policy for $500 having been issued upon the afternoon of the accident and not received until the following day. Mr. Leonard had this to say of the affair: "I am satisfied that this catastrophe was the result of an explosion in the building of the New England Milling Co. Our warehouse was built in 1897 by C. T. Boal and we have only occupied it since May 1. I have to-day received the assurances of the city building department and of the Board of Fire Underwriters, who inspected it only last week, that the structure was perfectly safe and not overloaded. We are not yet able to state our loss, but it will exceed the insurance. However, we shall not 'lay down'; we filled some orders to-day and will be in new quarters in a day or two. We expect to be able to fill all our orders for future delivery. We have stock at the freight house, more on the way and much yet to be shipped. There will probably be some delay, but we have received many telegrams of sympathy and trust that we may have the indulgence of the trade."

Concession to Seed Shippers.

Railroads have made one concession to the shippers of clover seed that will be appreciated by local merchants. Seed can now be unloaded into the freight houses, the shipper to pay a cent a bag and at the expiration of five days he must pay storage. The clover seed men say they have no objection to paying storage, and they only object to the charge for unloading. This arrangement will give seeds, men an opportunity for inspection and a reasonable time to remove seed from the freight houses.—Toledo Commercial.

Notes of the Twin Cities.

Northrup, King & Co., have put in a Brown Bag Filling Machine. L. L. May & Co, are also installing another one of these machines making three now in use in their establishment. Mr. Brown has been here to look after the machines.

L. L. May has recently purchased a farm of 240 acres located about 14 miles from the city. This will be devoted to growing seed and nursery stock. It is also his intention to erect a range of modern greenhouses for growing cut flowers for his large and increasing trade.

J. M. Kimberlin and grandson were recent callers on the trade, also W. H. Small, of Evansville, Ind. FELIX.

ROCKFORD, ILL.—The case of S. A. Baur was decided in his favor October 31.

COLUMBUS JUNCTION, IA.—A greenhouse owned by J. F. Jacoby was recently destroyed by fire.

RICHMOND, IND.—The numerous friends of E. G. Hill will learn of his illness with regret and hope for his speedy recovery.

PROF. S. A. FORBES has completed the inspection of the 274 nurseries in Illinois at an average cost of $5.38 for each.

ALONG Chicago boulevards large numbers of well-grown trees, killed by the severity of last winter, are being replaced.

THE Missouri State Horticultural Society will make a display of apples at the Paris Exposition and the Armour Cold Storage Co. will hold the fruit free of charge.

C. E. WHITTEN, Bridgman, Mich., reports a brisk demand and a shortage of strawberry plants which he expects to result in an advance of from fifteen to twenty-five per cent.

THE Chase Nursery Company has added to its California holdings, recently buying the large property known as the Armstrong tract, already improved and with one of the best wells in the valley.

Salem, Mass.

At 8 Crombie street, at what is considered the oldest flower and plant stand in New England, I found McGee, Geary & Co. as busy as ever. This concern does an immense amount of funeral work and has every convenience for handling all classes of business. Large quantities of bedding and decorative stock are disposed of annually, especially primulas at this season. They have a fine lot on hand, coming on in good shape. Flowers and plants were advertised for sale from this location as long ago as 1842. TAP.

Do You Know This Market?

In determining the desirability of a commission house as a place for you to buy or sell there are certain points to be considered—the location, size and reputation of the house, its capital, equipment and business methods.

Now, the statements which follow are not a boast; they are plain facts, not comparisons. If you know this market you will recognize these truths. If you do not know these things you will be the gainer by these words; so shall we.

There may be in the United States commission houses handling more cut flowers than we do. If there are such houses they are east of Philadelphia. No one in the west approaches us in volume of business.

Having handled cut flowers upon commission for twenty years, since the trade was in its infancy, we have a thorough knowledge of our business and our field, even of your business. We know what we can do; what we can do for you.

We have capital ample for our needs. We render weekly statements to our growers and pay regularly, upon request, if the grower wants the money.

We have a large force, a thorough organization and equipment; there are no bit-or-miss methods here. Last spring we removed to the best quarters we know of for our business. We have two modern cold storage rooms, one containing 4200 cubic feet, the other 7200. Our packing is perfect, our shipments prompt. In fact promptness and fair dealing are the greatest elements of our success.

This season our business has been the largest in our history. We are selling more stock than ever; not all that comes to this market, but a big part of it and some of the very best. What you can't get here you can't get anywhere.

We have already had a number of growers return to us who had thought they could do better elsewhere, and tried it. We have also added, this fall, several growers who think they see in the above facts reasons why we are best fitted to handle their stock.

But the shippers are coming to us no faster than are the buyers. We are pleased to welcome both. May we welcome you?

Milwaukee to Visit Chicago.

The Milwaukee bowlers, who entertained the Chicago team so hospitably last spring, will be the guests on the evening of November 8, during the flower show. Three of Anson's alleys have been engaged for the contest, two for the match game and another for such other players as wish to participate in the frolic. A lunch will be served.

St. Louis Juniors.

At the regular meeting of the Junior Florists' Bowling Club, Tuesday, October 31, the following scores were made:

F. H. T.

At Chicago.

Although the Chicago Florists' Bowling Club had a small attendance on Friday evening, October 27, some excellent scores were made and all previous records smashed. Asmus reached the exceedingly high mark of 278, thereby breaking his own record of 216, and tying the best score ever made on Anson's alleys. Degnan made the next highest score, 262, also exceeding his best previous record, which was 233, made on August 13, in the match with the Omaha team. Winterson also made a double century with 210, being closely followed by Hunt with 198 and Coulson with 192. Following is the record of the games:

Player	1st	2d	3d	4th	5th	6th	7th	8th	Av
Asmus	129	161	142	180	171	278	177	166	176

At Flatbush.

On Monday evening October 31 the Royal Arcanum, Brooklyn Lodge, Bowling Club and the Flatbush Florists' Bowling Club gave a surprise party to Mr. and Mrs. Jno. B. Phillips, on the twenty-third anniversary of their marriage. The Royal Arcanum boys presented Mr. Phillips with a watch charm and the florists gave Mr. and Mrs. Phillips a loving cup. A game of euchre was indulged in and it is generally understood that while the Arcanums are able to beat the florists at bowling they are not in it when it comes to euchre. P.

At Philadelphia.

A match with the strong Melrose team was played on the home alleys Wednesday evening, November 1. The boys did themselves proud, winning all three games with a total margin of 668 pins. The visitors were simply outclassed, although they are regularly organized and have alleys of their own. The handicap for November commenced with these games. The score follows:

MELROSE.	1st.	2d.	3d.	FLORISTS.	1st.	2d.	3d.

HOLLY=VAUGHAN'S XXX BRAND.

THE Holly situation changes nearly every year. For the last four years they've begun to bring it into the country towns like potatoes. Every man has taken to cutting his own—or some other man's Holly, and packs it well, badly or indifferently, or any old way. The result is very bad for the retail florist. When we first started the Holly business, in 1880, our buyer contracted for a man's grove and cut the best and sorted it himself, and established Vaughan's XXX Stock as a brand worth having. Some years it has been the best in the Market; all years it has been as good as any, its average is high, but we wondered why so many culls would show up when we inspected our car lots (to sell to peddlers at half rates) and last fall our Mr. Vaughan located this town market Holly system, and cut it off from our man. We are buying and packing our Holly in the woods ourselves, and it costs more money, but it is worth to the retailer a lot more than it costs. A good case of Holly is easily worth Ten Dollars, while cull stock can't be given away.

We can suggest delivery dates which will keep you in good supply on the best days for selling Holly. Our prices are not advanced. How much can you use?

BUSINESS GOOD.—MUCH STOCK REQUIRED BUT ROSES ARE TOO PLENTIFUL.—BULB SALES BIG.—NOTES.

Business conditions are even better than last week. Wedding decorations constitute the greater part of the work and some very large orders have been handled. An increased demand for funeral designs, as well, has helped to swell the volume of business. Chrysanthemums of all colors are coming in plentifully, although fine blooms are rather scarce and bring good prices. Mediums are plentiful. Violets are too numerous and of poor color, owing to the warm weather. Some good Roman hyacinths came in this week, the first of the season. There is a glut of roses. The fall sales of tulips and hyacinths have exceeded previous seasons to such an extent that only mixed varieties can be had.

The committee appointed to arrange for the next club entertainment consists of John Bader, J. Semple, L. I. Neff, J. W. Ludwig and E. C. Ludwig. They will report at the next meeting.

Harry Baisley, of Detroit, was in town last week. G. O.

Cyclamen!

are among the very best of flowering plants for home adornment. No flowering plant is more satisfactory than is this for window gardening. I have known flowers to remain perfect on Cyclamen for six whole weeks. This statement is not a mere guess, but is the result of an actual experiment.

We have a few more plants left, ready for repotting into either 4 or 5-inch pots.

Nothing can give more satisfaction as a Christmas gift than a Cyclamen. Now is the proper time to be getting them into good shape for that gay and festive occasion.

We pack light and guarantee safe delivery if sent by express.

TRADE SHOWS LITTLE CHANGE.—STOCK NOW EXCEEDS DEMAND.—DEPARTMENT STORES TO HANDLE FLOWERS.—VISITORS.

The conditions of the cut flower trade have not changed for the last two weeks except that the supply is now a trifle more than the demand. Carnations are in crop with nearly all the growers and are looking very fine. Roses have taken a back seat to make way for the chrysanthemums, which are in their prime. The recent warm weather has brought out violets in great quantities.

New Haven is at last to have flowers handled by the dry goods stores and the prospects are that the trade will be represented in no less than four of the largest. Howe & Stetson are to have a most elaborate display. The Malley Co. also intends putting in a floral department.

Recent visitors: Robt. W. Greenlaw, representing N. F. McCarthy & Co., Boston; John Reck, Bridgeport, Conn; and Mr. Thompson, of Thompson Bros., East Haddam, Conn. G. H.

SIMSBURY, CONN.—The newly remodeled greenhouse of Mrs. A. E. Wood was partially destroyed by fire October 22. The blaze is supposed to have caught from a new heater.

THE EXHIBITIONS.

Chicago.

The most attractive feature of the show here this year is the arrangement of the exhibits. Manager Rudd has certainly made the most of the splendid setting for the exhibits which the Auditorium Theatre affords, and notwithstanding the fact that the chrysanthemum exhibits are hardly up to the standard of former years, the effect of the entire display is charming.

The attendance, according to Secretary Egan, has beaten all records, due, no doubt, in large part to the excellent weather of the first four days, and to the association with the exhibition of a bazaar in the interests of prominent charities. President Chadwick is well pleased with the result, and he and his able lieutenants, among whom must be included the veterans John Thorpe and J. T. Anthony, deserve unmeasured credit for attempting a flower show on such a gigantic scale.

The principal exhibitors of chrysanthemum plants are Mount Greenwood Cemetery Association, Vaughan's Greenhouses, Henry Smith, Grand Rapids, Mich.; Martin A. Ryerson (John Reardon, Gr.), A. S. Trude (Robt. Mueller, Gr.), and J. J. Mitchell (Geo. Woodward, Gr.). In various collections the dwarf pink, single variety Mizpah was noted as exceedingly attractive.

Several extensive groups of foliage plants from Geo. Wittbold, in various parts of the building, particularly that of half-moon shape at the rear of the stage add much to the general attractiveness of the scene, the plants being well grown and arranged with consumate skill.

For well grown decorative plants, however, much credit is due Mrs. Geo. M. Pullman (J. Algots, Gr.) for an extensive central group. Among the plants in this lot we noticed admirable specimens of Polypodium aureum, Latania Borbonica, Kentia Forsteriana, K. Belmoreana, Dracæna Massangeana, Caryota urens, Phœnix reclinata, Alsophila Australis and Pandanus Veitchii.

The collection of orchids and nepenthes from E. G. Uihlein is as usual the center of attraction to a large number of patrons. Mr. Uihlein's gardener, H. Skjoldager, displayed much good taste in the arrangement of this group. In another batch of plants from the same sourse we noticed a nice plant of Phœnix Roebelinii.

In cyclamens there are some fine plants from Kalous Bros. and Anton Then. Rex begonias are shown in good form by Henry Smith, and Humboldt Park exhibits a fine specimen of Anthurium Veitchii and a new heliconia, which Dimmock, of Sander & Co., considers a winner.

A promising lot of new geraniums is shown by W. N. Rudd for Cottage Gardens, Queens, N. Y., and Martin A. Ryerson has a good display of small stove and greenhouse plants (most of them excellent specimens) arranged for effect.

The standard and bush plants of Heteranthe geraniums from the Mount Greenwood Cemetery Association, are a conspicuous and highly creditable feature.

The major part of the chrysanthemum plants are trained specimens, but the collection of untrained plants from J. J. Mitchell is well worth attention as showing what can be done with these plants without any extraordinary expenditure of cash or labor.

Noteworthy among the curiosities of the exhibition are a grafted chrysanthemum with twenty-two varieties on one main stem from Vaughan's greenhouses, a tomato grafted on a potato, showing potato tubers at the base and tomato fruits above, and plants and flowers in blocks of ice from E. G. Uihlein.

Violet plants are shown by Henry Smith and Crabb & Hunter, both of Grand Rapids, Mich., the prizes for cut blooms going to Eli Cross and Henry Smith.

In cut blooms of chrysanthemums the Mt. Greenwood Cemetery Association was principal prize-winner; in roses and carnations, Bassett & Washburn, closely followed by the Chicago Carnation Co in the latter.

Among the novelties on exhibition are blooms of the Asmus and Scott stocks of the Liberty rose, from Vaughan and Bassett & Washburn respectively; the rose Baltimore, from John Cook, of the Maryland capital; Onyx and Mme. Seulberger chrysanthemums, from E. G. Hill & Co.; Admiral Dewey chrysanthemums, from E. F. Lemke, of St. Paul, Minn.; Hibiscus Peachblow and a number of new French cannas, from Vaughan; Ethel Crocker carnation from E. G. Hill & Co.

and No. 11 carnation from H. Weber & Sons, of Oakland, Md.

E. M. Wood, president of the S. A. F., forwarded some of his famous prize chrysanthemum blooms all the way from Boston, and their excellence rather surprised some of the local growers.

Eleven vases of pompon chrysanthemums, exhibited by John N. May, of Summit, N J., attracted much attention.

A word must be said in favor of the effective decorations of cut flowers and plants supplied (for exhibition only) by E. Wienhoeber, Geo. Wittbold, C. A. Samuelson and the Anderson Floral Co.

The final awards for table decorations have not been made as we go to press, but full particulars of these will appear next week. The decoration of a buffet table (not for competition) by J. Curran, for Friedman, was, however, highly commendable.

Following are the awards up to and including Friday:

Philadelphia.

"It's all right," is the answer given to the many queries of, "Well, what do you think of the show?" It is a very good exhibition; there are staged a greater number of well-grown and perfect specimens of greenhouse plants than ever before. These, in addition to the various collections of well-grown chrysanthemum plants, make the show very complete in this department, in fact the best held for some years. There is also a good showing of cut flowers, about equal to that of last season. The arrangement of the various exhibits is much in the old style. Groups are placed around the walls and irregularly in the center of the hall. It is a pity there is so little room for visitors. One of the pleasant features of exhibitions in the old hall was the sojourn to the gallery after viewing the display and there getting a birds-eye view over the whole show and listening to the music. A few seats have been placed on the stage, but as the number is limited, it is somewhat difficult to reach them and then one cannot very well help the feeling that they are on view themselves.

On entering the building the lower foyer was seen to be ornamented with two large groups of magnificent ferns, one of which secured first prize for twelve plants and also a certificate of merit. This was grown by Thomas Long, gardener to G. W. Childs Drexel. Each plant was a perfect beauty and the award of a certificate was well merited. The opposite group was also very well grown. In the center there was a magnificent specimen of Nephrolepis Bostoniensis, which must have been at least twelve feet in diameter, with every frond perfect; these were exhibited by Francis Canning.

The grand staircase was decorated with jars of fine chrysanthemums, leading the way and giving the visitor an inkling of what was to be seen in the main hall above. At the head of the first landing was a fine Boston fern. Entering the corridor to the foyer, on either side were found cut flowers, the principal feature of which was the collection of Japanese varieties imported last March by Percival K. Roberts, Jr. James Cullen, his gardener, made the most he could of the lot and while few, if any, have any commercial value, they are most interesting, being, as it were, the ancestors of the fine varieties that were shown all about them. Some of the flowers were large, while others were very tiny, not larger than a dime. There were over fifty vases in this collection, around which a crowd was always to be seen. Across the corridor the same grower covered a large table with splendid specimens of the best standard show varieties. Mr. Cullen does not believe in long stems and most of the vases contained flowers with stems eighteen inches or two feet in length. This seems to be best where not more than six of a kind are to be shown, as the flowers are always erect and keep their first arrangement throughout the exhibition. There were many other fine exhibits of cut blooms. Among the varieties most noticeable were Modesto, probably also the largest; Major. Bonnaffon, Viviand-Morel, Mrs. Perrin, Maud Dean, Philadelphia and Pennsylvania. These were in nearly every exhibit that called for as many as four or more varieties.

Frank Gould, who won first prize for the best twelve blooms, one of a kind, had Mme. Carnot, Yellow Mme. Carnot, Georgiana Pitcher, Sunstone, Queen Leonidas, Mrs. H. Weeks, Viviand-Morel, Major Bonnaffon, Mrs. Perrin, Philadelphia and Modesto.

A collection of pompons, for which J. N. May, Summit, N. J., received first premium, was much admired, also an exhibit of anemone varieties from J. M. Cleary, for which he was awarded first premium. A vase of twenty Maud Dean, by E. A. Stroud, was given first for best vase of pink.

The cut blooms, take them as a whole, were all good, there being nothing ordinary staged. A large fan plant must not be forgotten; it was exhibited by E. A. Jones and was about twelve feet wide at the bottom and eight feet high in the center. It contained some fifty good yellow blooms, which formed the fringe to the fan, being borne along the outer edge.

A very prominent feature of the show was the group arranged by Hugh Graham. This was a center space, oval, or diamond shaped. Mounted high in the center were a number of Acalypha Sanderi. These are undoubtedly the best specimens of this plant in this country and, arranged as they were, they made a grand showing. Between them and the pedestals on which they stood were arranged Boston ferns, palms and other foliage plants as a background, on the one side for vases of fine, long-stemmed Philadelphia, Pennsylvania and Mrs. Thos. Potter, Jr., chrysanthemums, the latter a new pink, and on the other for a collection of very gracefully arranged orchids. These latter were placed among Adiantum Farleyense and cork bark over mirrors. The whole group was well arranged and, from the arching top line of the "Dewey" plants, was called by the newspapers the Dewey arch. These plants of acalypha were a revelation and show what can be done with this subject by care in cultivation.

The only other orchids in the show were from the Roebling collection at Trenton. This was a choice lot, mostly cypripediums, but one, Cattleya Emily M. Roebling, white with pink throat, was new.

There were several fine wall groups of palms and other decorative plants arranged for effect, John Hobson winning first prize. The committee must have had considerable difficulty in placing this prize, as the groups were all well arranged and contained very well-grown plants. There were fine specimen Boston ferns in various parts of the hall and they attracted great attention on account of their unusual size and luxuriant growth. They should do much to make this plant popular.

H. A. Dreer exhibited a water garden, a tank concealed by ferns and other foliage and backed by tall palms. In this was a collection of water lilies in flower and other aquatic plants. This display was also always surrounded by an interested group of spectators.

The Landreth exhibit in the center of the hall consisted of a bamboo summer house surrounded by a curiously made fence of the same material. About the enclosure were a few palms in Japanese jars.

The Alburger Nurseries sent in a lot of standard chrysanthemums, which were nicely trained and well flowered. They were not in competition. Another exhibit of the H. A. Dreer Co. was a lot of vases of tritoma flowers or poker plant. These were very showy and attracted considerable attention.

In the front foyer there were arranged groups of ferns, caladiums, crotons, and on one table down the center was displayed a number of kinds of begonias, Rex and flowering varieties. Edwin Lonsdale showed twelve plants of the new Gloire de Lorraine, six of which were true and six of a sport from the variety which he has secured. It has a more compact habit, is a little earlier and the flowers seem larger, but the main distinction is the color, which is several shades of pink lighter. It looks like a good thing. Charles Robinson took the first prize for Rex varieties. Jos. Hurley was first with his collection of caladiums, a very beautiful lot of plants.

A sensational plant was shown by John A. Shellum. It was placed beside his exhibit of crotons, which were well colored, and it looked like a very broad-leaved and highly-colored croton, but in reality it was a coleus, one of the new German giant-leaved varieties. It was chameleon colored and the leaves measured nine inches by eight wide. The plant was in an 8-inch pot and stood about fifteen inches high. It was one of the most gorgeous foliage plants we have ever seen.

HUGH GRAHAM'S EXHIBIT AT THE PHILADELPHIA SHOW.

Among the ferns in this room was a specimen Adiantum Charlottæ. This was one of the most beautiful adiantums we have ever seen; it seems to make quite hard fronds and will no doubt come greatly into vogue in cut flower work.

The rose competition on Wednesday afternoon was all right in quality, but woefully lacking in quantity and variety. The list of forcing roses seems to be thinning out instead of increasing. Think of a rose show composed of three varieties! Well, there were two others, five in all, a vase of Meteors and Ernest Asmus' vase of Liberty, the latter fine, by the way. Yes, Beauty, Bride and Bridesmaid were the only kinds on view, save the two exceptions noted. Jos. Heacock took first for twelve Beauties, and Myers & Santman first for the best six. They also got first for Brides and Bridesmaids and Jos. Heacock second. We are glad to know there has been organized an American Rose Society and hope before long to see the list of forcing roses lengthen out a little.

The entries of carnations for the Craig cup were not so numerous as to crowd one another, but what were shown were good. Weber & Sons, of Oakland, Md., won the trophy with a fine large, light pink, about the color of Melba. The flower, however, is larger and longer petaled and slightly fringed. It has good form, is three inches in diameter and is borne on a strong stem. Dailledouze Bros. entered a large white, flaked with pink, something like Mrs. Fisher when grown cold. The flowers are much above the ordinary in size, are deeply fringed and well marked with pink. It has abundance of petals, which make a full flower, but is not very double. It is also borne on a stout stem. It received a certificate of merit.

Ethel Crocker received the first prize of the society for the best twenty-five blooms of an American seedling not disseminated. The vase full was fine. There were but few other carnation entries, although the list of prizes offered was a generous one. It may be too early or perhaps those fellows up in the "belt" have gone to sleep, which may explain the apathy.

FRUITS AND VEGETABLES.

Those of us who remember the very small corner required for the fruit and vegetable department at the Philadelphia shows up to a few years ago, may well open our eyes at the transformation shown in this year's exhibition. The display is as large as last year, fine as that was, and the quality in several instances is distinctly superior.

The credit for this gratifying change in the fruit and vegetable display is mainly due to the liberality and enterprise of the leading seed houses of Philadelphia in offering prizes. This plan was started some five years ago and was cordially supported, especially by the Messrs. Landreth, Michell, Dreer and Burpee. Their reward in the shape of effective advertising for their business is splendid, considering the small outlay, and they have the further gratification of knowing that they have helped to elevate this important branch of horticulture to its true place in the estimation of the public. Its rescue from the miserable proportions of days gone by is complete.

For the society's premiums the principal prize winners were John McCleary, Robert James, Thomas Holland, Joseph McGregor, F. Canning, P. McGinley and R. C. Kaighn. The seedsmens' premiums were well competed for and brought out some very creditable stock. The chief prize winners in addition to those already mentioned, were James Doran, Frank Gould, John Dodds, Joseph Hurley, William Kleinhaus, Wm. Morton, M. Mitchell, James Campbell, James Lawder, W. Henderson, L. A. Couche and Wm. H. Carey.

Richard Kaighn had a table of about 150 square feet on which he showed a grand collection of vegetables, fine specimens of nearly everything "from a to izzard" of a seedsman's catalogues and for this he deservedly received the first premium.

Another noticeable feature was the cauliflowers exhibited by James Lawler. They were magnificent specimens and were much admired. Jno. Dodd's exhibit of Spanish cardoon, for which he received first was also a strong attraction, very few ever having seen this vegetable The attendants were kept busy answering the endless questions of the budding housewives.

In hothouse tomatoes Best of All got first and Lorillard second. To my mind there was not much room to choose between them, both being very handsome varieties on the show table. Best of All is slightly rounded and the judges no doubt represented the general opinion as to their relative value; still, I think Lorillard will occupy the stage for some moons yet as the best all-round forcer.

The judges were W. F. Dreer, Burnett Landreth, Robt. Carey, and J. Cheston Morris.

James H. Bull and Gebhart Huster exhibited some good hothouse grapes, including fine bunches of black Barbarossa, Muscat, Alexandria and Black Hamburg. Peter Peterson was the chief prize winner in apples and pears.

The seedsmen had the usual displays of bulbs and sundries in the same hall as the fruits and vegetables. Michell's was particularly noticeable, not only for the good taste displayed in its arrangement but for the variety and beauty of the jardinieres, stands, flower vases, etc., composing the exhibit. Dreer showed some solid bronze flower vases imported from Japan which attracted a deal of attention.

NOTES ON THE SHOW.

At the Philadelphia show some things were seen that were worth going many miles to view. Mr. Roebling of Trenton, N. J., had a collection of rare and beautiful orchids which were one of the chief attractions. What interested me more than any other among them was a rare variety of the well known Cypripedium insigne, Laura Kimball, discovered by the late George Savage among a lot that had been secured from their native wilds before they had flowered. This is considered to be one of the very best of this class of varieties. It would be interesting and a very great treat to see all this class of C. insigne varieties in bloom at one time. I have an idea that the C. insigne Sanderæ is the nearest to the yellow shade. The one known as C. insigne Earnesti is not so bright nor is it so good in form of flower as is C. Sanderæ. Laura Kimball seemed larger than either. I may be wrong in all these statements, as it is over a year since I saw either C. Sanderæ or C. Earnesti.

When the Ives process of photography in colors is in commerce, rare orchids will naturally form an important part of many collections and very valuable and interesting they will certainly be. In the studio of Mr. Ives I saw three flowers of the famous Liberty rose, as life-like as the natural flower, color of course included. The pictures were taken some time last winter. To see them as they are in real life they are looked at in the same manner as are stereopticon views.

The cyclamens exhibited here are the finest ever seen in Philadelphia. The successful cultivation of this popular plant has been thoroughly mastered in this climate, as exemplified both by Lehnig & Winnifield, Hackensack, N. J., and Robert Craig & Son, Philadelphia. Those grown in New Jersey were much larger plants than were those grown in Philadelphia, but they were none the less healthy. It would be interesting to know at what time of the year Lehnig & Winnifield sow their seed to get such plants. When plants can be grown as well as both those exhibits were grown, the very best strain of seed is none too good for either of these firms to handle. Cost of seed should not enter into the matter to any great extent.

Hugh Graham & Son had the finest grown plants of Acalypha Sanderi ever seen here, and they attracted a great deal of attention.

Carnation Ethel Crocker was out in good form. This variety looks as though it would make its way in the world without much trouble. The carnation which seemed to attract the most attention was a seedling labelled No. 666. It is certainly a stunner! It is large, distinct in color and marking and very fragrant. If some enterprising retailer would only have the courage to give the owners of No. 666 an order to grow a large house of that variety at a remunerative price for their own exclusive trade, make it their own particular trade mark as it were, it would be a wise investment.

Robert Craig & Son had two well grown plants of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine. Edwin Lonsdale had six plants of the two distinct varieties of this valuable begonia, the one with dark pink flowers and the newer variety with delicate pink flowers. Unfortunately the begonias were exhibited at the dark end of the hall, where they could not be seen to advantage as to the difference in the color. There is nearly as much difference between the two shades of color as there is between the color of roses American Beauty and the hybrid remontant, Madam Gabriel Luizet. "Luizet Pink" would be sufficiently descriptive of this new begonia if everybody had seen the beautiful, satiny pink color which belongs to the flowers of the at one time popular Mme. Luizet.

Whenever possible only foliage plants and flowers that are bold and assertive should occupy this part of the building, for whenever the delicate tints in the colors of flowers are their chief charm they should always be given a position where unobstructed daylight shines fully upon them at all times.

HETERANTHE GERANIUMS AS EXHIBITED AT THE CHICAGO SHOW BY THE MT. GREENWOOD CEMETERY ASSOCIATION.

Boston.

Although each year it seems as though the limit of progress had been reached, yet the following year shows undoubted superiority in one line or another over its predecessor. This is especially true of the trained plants exhibited this year. The poorest of the groups shown would have been considered marvels five years ago, while in the best the gardeners seem to have attained the impossible, perfection. The set of twelve staged by John Barr, gardener to Mrs. Cheney, are positively beyond criticism and the expert growers, local or visitors, stand about them and gaze in admiration mixed with awe. Scarcely a point behind them in cultural merit are the plants from Wm. Donald, gardener to J. H. Bailey. Mr. Hatfield's are not so large but they are in ten-inch pots, whereas the other exhibitors show in twelves. Mr. Barr's set includes the following varieties: Miss Georgiana Pitcher, Charity, Georgienne Bramhall, Iora, The Bard, Mrs. E. B. Freeman, Mrs. F. A. Constable, Mutual Friend, Mrs. Henry Weeks, Red Warrior, Silver Cloud and Arethusa. Mr. Donald's twelve are Arethusa, Ivory, The Bard, John Shrimpton, Mutual Friend, Golden Gate, Major Bonnaffon, Garza, Miss Anna Louise Dalskov, Black Hawk, Golden Trophy and Iora. D. F. Roy, gardener to E. S. Converse, Robert Camoron, gardener at Harvard Botanic Garden, and James Garthley were also represented by groups of well grown plants.

The plants grown to single stem and flower were remarkably even and not too tall. The principal competitors in the various classes in this section were Kenneth Finlayson, Chas. Sandiford, gardener to C. H. Souther; D. F. Roy and Jas. Nicol. In the groups arranged with palms, etc., Wm. Thatcher, gardener to Mrs. J. L. Gardner, took first and second prizes and D. F. Roy, third. The center of the hall was occupied effectively by a group of sixty Gloire de Lorraine begonias from Robert Cameron, a group of these with foliage plants from W. W. Edgar and a handsome pan of the same from Kenneth Finlayson.

The lower hall was filled to overflowing with the cut blooms. The large vases of long-stemmed blooms were, as usual, a striking feature. In awarding premiums for these the judges evidently recognized artistic arrangement and general effect as paramount to mere cultural perfection in the blooms used. Some of these vases with their contents towered to a height of ten feet. The prizes were distributed in the following order: Chas. Sandiford, Mrs. E. M. Gill, Geo. Melvin, gardener to Col. Chas. Pfaff; Norris F. Comley and J. W. Howard. The final order may be different as the vases are refilled and judged each day. On vases of ten long stemmed blooms the only competitors were Waban Conservatories, John Barr and N. F. Comley, with the exception of one entry by H. Dumaresq in the red class. Peter Kay, Maud Dean, Mrs. Jerome Jones, Yellow Mrs. Jerome Jones, Autumn Glory, Golden Wedding and Wm. H. Chadwick showed up grandly, especially in the Waban entries, which in size and finish of flower and foliage seemed to have reached perfection.

The Bradlee prizes for twenty-five blooms in twenty-five varieties are always coveted and bring out a grand lot of flowers. The prizes were awarded to John Barr, A. F. Whitin and Geo. Melvin. The lot staged by John Barr were beyond criticism, unrivalled in every point. The twelve incurved class brought out good exhibits from Robert Sandiford and D. F. Roy. Sandiford's winning set comprised Mrs. S. Coleman, Arline, Pink of Pearl, C. H. Curtis, Idealty, Mabel Ward, Dorothy Toler, Jaenne d' Arc, Mrs. Robt. Craig, Francis B. Hayes, Mrs. C. L. Madeira and Mrs. G. Spaulding. Twelve Japanese incurved from John Barr, winning first prize, were Mrs. Egan, Mrs. Morgan, Mrs. Geo. West, Rustique, Marguerite Jeffords, Maud Dean, Peter Kay, Mrs. H. Weeks, W. H. Chadwick, Philadelphia, Shenandoah and Mrs. H. Magee. Geo. Melvin came in second and D. F. Roy third. On the classes calling for six Japanese, six reflexed, and six Japanese incurved Chas. Sandiford won first prize followed by Edward Whitin, John Barr and D. F. Roy. The displays of naturally grown sprays and pompons were disappointing and nobody stopped to look at them. Mr. Sandiford's six reflexed varieties were Inter Ocean, Golden Gate, Viviand-Morel, Miss Gladys Vanderbilt, Lady Hanham and Yellow Mme. Carnot.

Introductions of 1899 were represented by two sets of twelve each, one from Chas. Sandiford and one from J. W. Howard. Sandiford won first premium with Shilowa, John K. Shaw, Zoraida, Mrs. Trainor L. Park, Yellow Mayflower, Silver Wedding, Monstrosum, Idavan, White Flyer, Phenomenal. Mrs. F. A. Constable and Admiral Dewey. Anemones were shown by C. Sandiford, K. Finlayson, D. F. Roy and John Thomas. The Gane Memorial prizes were awarded to Waban Conservatories and N. F. Comley, both showing Mrs. Jerome Jones. Mr. Hardigan, gardener to Dr. F. A. Williams, at the old Gane greenhouses, showed a group of the Gane seedlings and received honorable mention for one of them, the Bessie Jones.

Carnations were shown in fine form by Wm. Nicholson, M. A. Patten, John Pritchard and others. D. Carmichael staged his two seedlings, Eleanor Ames and May Whitney; S. Fisher staged Saxon, a fine fringed scarlet; and C. S. Cooper received honorable mention for the Crawford. J. E. Coburn made a good display of pansies. Lager & Hurrell showed a group of specimen orchids and Ernst G. Asmus a vase of Liberty rose which received a silver medal. John Cook, of Baltimore, exhibited his new rose, Baltimore, and received honorable mention.

Brockton, Mass.

The annual flower show of the Brockton Gardeners' and Florists' Club was held at Canton Hall on November 1. Contributions of orchids and other plants from the Oakes Ames greenhouses, not for competition, added greatly to the general effect and the show altogether was a notable success. In chrysanthemums, James Garthley, F. McRae, C. W. Graham, John McFarland, and F. T. White were the principal prize winners. Of carnations there was an unusually good display, premiums going to L. J. Goddard, H. E. Barrows, F. T. White, C. S. Cooper and Duly Bros., and to C. S. Cooper a certificate for a new dark variety. John McFarland retained his lead on violets and the table-decoration prizes went first to H. E. Barrows and second to W. W. Hathaway, the mantel decorations by these parties also winning in the same order. C. S. Cooper was first on wreath, W. W. Hathaway first on basket and on bouquet.

Browallia Speciosa Major.

This recently introduced variety is a great acquisition to the list of spring market plants. The flowers are much larger than those of the old B. elata and several shades deeper in color. It flowers abundantly and being of free growth can be pinched back frequently and thus brought into any desired form. It propagates readily from cuttings, though probably more economically grown from seed, which can now be obtained from all up-to-date seedsmen. K.

Ericas About New York.

In the general revival of pot plant growing nothing will be more gratifying to the plantsman than the recognition being given to the heaths by our commercial growers. Old time gardeners have been heard to lament frequently the indifference with which these and other beautiful subjects of a like character have been treated and they have told us regretfully of the wonderful ericas and epacrises that the expert growers of a former generation used to produce and glory in. The impression has been deep seated that not only do these plants demand the care of expert specialists but that the right soil and congenial climate are also rarely found and it is not long since it was a commonly accepted theory that heaths could not be successfully grown for commercial purposes in the neighborhood of New York city. We are learning now that there is no foundation for this extreme view and we are indebted to Fremin, Dupuy, Schultheis, Darlington and others for showing their colleagues something of the grand possibilities with these plants without going outside the boundary lines of Greater New York.

Nicholson describes nearly one hundred and fifty species and varieties and makes reference to many other forms of the species enumerated. Besides these there are in continental catalogues frequent varieties not mentioned by Nicholson but as yet not more than a dozen kinds have been put upon this market in any appreciable quantity and when it comes to general use by the florists' trade only melanthera, persoluta and Wilmoreana can be mentioned. Now that the interest has been fully aroused, however, we shall undoubtedly see valuable additions made each year to the list of popular and useful commercial sorts for this market.

In buying heaths the novice will do well to confine his purchases to those that have set their buds. They are then as easily brought into bloom as azaleas are. Imported plants rarely do well and even with an experienced grower the percentage of loss from such is large. Heaths will not endure forcing. A low, even temperature is essential to their flowering, perfect drainage is an absolute necessity and nothing is more injurious to their existence than sudden changes and extremes of temperature. They are grown in pots plunged outdoors in the field or frame all summer and are left out as late as possible, being given an abundance of air night and day when in frames or houses. They will not set buds while in growth and if encouraged to grow beyond their regular season of flowering will not set buds till the following year. Some varieties will not bloom at one year old under any circumstances. Planting too close together or any deprivation of free air and light will result in bare stems and the beauty of the plant is then lost.

Erica melanthera, now well known because of its profuse pink tinted bloom and projecting black anthers, is the great Christmas variety and up to date the most popular kind yet introduced to this market. Perfect plants are feathered to the bottom with abundant bloom and without any young green growth at the tips of the branches. It is customary with growers to lift the pots from the bed about the middle of August, just to break the root growth and encourage the setting of buds early. If this is not done the blooming period will be somewhat later. They should be in the houses or well protected frames by this time, as the buds are now so far advanced that the seasonable cold snaps are risky. Plants with New York growers are this year better set with buds than ever before. With good weather a temperature of 40° will bring them into bloom for the holidays, but if continued cold and cloudy weather should intervene they may require as much as 55°. Four-inch stock of this variety cannot be depended upon to bloom.

BROWALLIA SPECIOSA MAJOR.

Persoluta alba and persoluta rosea are the popular Easter blooming heaths, which have been quite generally grown for cut flower purposes in many localities, especially in the neighborhood of Boston, for many years. The former sets buds more readily than the latter and large quantities of it are now grown in various sizes for the plant trade of New York. Growers leave it out as late as possible, October 20 being sufficiently early to protect it. The most approved plan is to plunge the pots in heated frames where they can remain till in flower. Too close crowding should be avoided.

Of the large tubular flowered species hyemalis and Wilmoreana are the better known. Wilmoreana is by far the best, its rosy pink and white flowers being larger and brighter colored than hyemalis, which also blooms too early in the fall to be a valuable florists' plant. One year old plants of Wilmoreana will not bloom this season. A new one in this section which made a tremendous sensation among New York florists last Easter was transluscens. It is of a peculiarly soft pure pink, a ready and profuse bloomer and strong grower, with grand spikes of bloom. Cupressiana is another splendid new one, almost as good as transluscens, bearing big globular flowers for Easter. Cavendishiana, the yellow heath, is a rather difficult subject but is so desirable that a large number are being grown. Many were lost during the past summer in spite of greatest care. They do best if kept in frames all winter. One year old plants do not bloom. Cerinthoides carnata is a fall bloomer with big scarlet tubular flowers at the apex of the branches but is not free enough to be desirable.

Gracilis is a tall bloomer, purplish pink in color, and in small sizes sells well for ferneries and small plant baskets. Gracilis vernalis is a corresponding spring bloomer. These are not desirable in large sizes because of bare stems. Perfecta rosea is a new mid-winter bloomer, a lovely Daybreak pink in color, and an acquisition on account of its pretty, feathery habit. Præstans blooms too early to be generally useful and Mediterranea is too dull colored to be desirable. A Christmas bloomer that promises well is regerminans. It is practically a Christmas flowering persoluta. It is offered here this season for the first time.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY COMMITTEES.

The committees judging seedling chrysanthemums will be in session each Saturday up to and including November 25. Exhibitors should make their entries, for which a fee of $2 is charged for each variety entered, to the secretary not later than Tuesday of the week they are to be shown. All exhibits forwarded to the following addresses, express charges prepaid, will receive careful consideration:

Boston, Mass., A. H. Fewkes, Horticultural Hall, Tremont street.

New York, N. Y., E. Dailledouze, care New York Cut Flower Co., 119 West Twenty-third street.

Philadelphia, Pa., A. B. Cartledge, 1514 Chestnut street.

Cincinnati, O., A. Witterstaetter, care Cincinnati Cut Flower Co., Fourth and Walnut streets.

Chicago, Ill., C. W. Johnson, care Illinois Cut Flower Co., 51 Wabash avenue. ELMER D. SMITH, Sec'y.

WORK OF THE COMMITTEES.

New York.—Jas. Carstair, New Rochelle, N. Y., exhibited Souci, a bright yellow Japanese incurved, which scored commercial scale 90 points. John N. May, Summit, N. J., exhibited No. 2, a bronze Japanese incurved, which scored commercial scale 82 points. Name for No. 2 will be given later.

Boston.—G. P. Rawson, Elmira, N. Y., exhibited Zaza, a white Japanese variety which scored commercial scale 69, exhibition scale 68 points. John Marshall, Purchase, N. Y., exhibited Col. D. Appleton, a Japanese, incurved, yellow, which scored commercial scale 91, exhibition scale 93 points.

Philadelphia.—John N. May exhibited No. 10, a white Japanese, incurved variety which scored commercial scale 83 points. No. 2, by same exhibitor, scored commercial scale 88, exhibition scale 86 points. Wm. Paul Binder, Rider, Md., exhibited a light pink Japanese incurved variety named Admiral Schley, which scored both scales 86 points.

Chicago.—John Marshall exhibited Col.

D. Appleton, which scored commercial scale 95 points.

No report from Cincinnati.

SOME NEW VARIETIES.

Although not shown early Monrovia was fully developed before such early sorts as Marion Henderson, Harry A. Parr and Gloriosum. It is a Japanese, bright yellow in color, the petals being loosely arranged. It has a good stem well clothed with foliage and averages three feet in height when planted June 20. Nathan Smith & Son speak of it as one of the most promising of their new sorts.

The specimen blooms of Col. D. Appleton sent to the Chicago committee by John Marshall, Hill Crest Greenhouses, Purchase, N. Y., on November 4 were grand flowers, of fine finish and form and of great size; in fact the committee considered the variety one of the best seen in Chicago for a long time. The color, a deep yellow, is of a very even shade from top to bottom, with very little, if any, fading on the lower petals. While not quite up to the graceful outlines of Major Bonnaffon, it being an incurved Japanese shows good qualities for commercial purposes and betrays no sign of being weak in the stem.

Primo is a clear white Japanese variety originating with Grove P. Rawson, Elmira, N. Y., and was the first bloom certificated this season by the committees of the Chrysanthemum Society of America, scoring eighty-seven points at Boston on October 14. Not only is the variety very early but it is of good form and size, the perfect blooms averaging seven inches in diameter by five in depth. The originator claims that it can with ease be brought in during the first week of October.

CHRYSANTHEMUM COL. D. APPLETON.

The Importance of Plant Names.

The oft repeated maxim, "A rose under any other name would smell as sweet" is no doubt quite true; but it is not always a warrant for giving a rose any old name, although one would almost be led to think so, when reflecting on the many long-drawn-out and almost unpronounceable cognomens which have been applied to roses and other plants.

From a business standpoint many argue that this is of little importance; that given a good plant, it will sell, no matter what its name may be. While admitting this to a certain extent, there is still something to be said as to whether it given a more appropriate name it would not sell better. To say that a rose under any other name would smell as sweet is not synonymous with saying that a rose under any other name would sell as well.

It is that point especially which seems worthy of illustrating with a few instances, in order to impress on the minds of the raisers of new plants the importance of selecting appropriate names.

One of the most striking instances that comes to mind is the "Moonflower." When Peter Henderson selected that name for Ipomœa noctiflora, he made a ten-strike. The writer does not know how many he sold, but he does know that he made business not only for himself but for the whole horticultural trade. The writer was employed in Breck's Seed Store, in Boston, at that time, some fourteen or fifteen years ago, and well remembers customers bringing in Henderson's advertisements, cut out of the papers, and asking if they couldget these wonderful vines at Breck's. Many a dollar was earned in filling such wants in that store which would never have materialized if Peter Henderson hadn't struck a good name for a good old plant. I mention this because I believe what occured there happened in almost every other store all over the country.

Another of Henderson's happy thoughts was, "Ostrich Plume" for Mrs. Alpheus Hardy chrysanthemum. "White Plume" celery and "Snowball" cauliflower are other instances of appropriate names from the same source, and the list of this firm's first-class nomenclature might be greatly extended. One recent instance of where I think they are not so happy is in calling Caryopteris Mastacanthus, "Mustache Plant." Blanc's cognomen, "Blue spiræa" strikes me as much better and speaking of Blanc reminds me that this gentleman seems to have quite a genius for "taking" names. What could be better for instance than "Baby Primrose" for Primula Forbesi? Won't Mr. Blanc kindly give us one equally as good for Primula obconica? Obconica has improved under cultivation and is now larger and more florilerous than it was ten years ago. The objections to its use (its poisonous qualities to those who handled it) were greatly exaggerated and prevented the extended use of a fine plant either for cutting or pots.

I have communicated with some of the leading catalogue houses in the trade on this subject of nomenclature, and take pleasure in jotting down some of the interesting ideas put forward.

Peter Henderson & Co. think that an appropriate name will help to introduce an article and effect sales for it more rapidly for the first year or two than if it were offered under an inappropriate name, but that no name, however good, would avail after the article was once introduced. Then it would stand upon merit alone and it makes little difference what the name is.

W. Atlee Burpee & Co., while preferring descriptive names such as, "Silver Spray" and "Daybreak," think there are some cases where a name after a person is preferable, and quote as an instance, the "Lawson" carnation. They think, however, that the name has a great deal to do with the sale of a variety upon its first introduction. They give the "Burpee Bush Lima," "Cupid" sweet peas and "Stringless Green Pod" bean as instances of good descriptive names. The latter, although rather long, is certainly preferable to such a name as "Valentine." Among other names which they believe have been very appropriate for introductions of their own are, "Sunshine," "Fordhook Tricolor" and "Fordhook Fancy" balsams; "Modesty," "Oriental," "Brilliant," "Gorgeous," "Navy Blue" and "Earliest of All" sweet peas. "Fordhook First" and "Combination" tomatoes; "Surehead" and "All Head Early" cabbage.

Wm. Henry Maule is a firm believer that an appropriate name for a new variety which embodies its principal characteristics is of great benefit in its sale. He has known instances where two equally good varieties were put on the market, and the one with the best name distanced the other one completely in the matter of sales. Mr. Maule did not care to be quoted in the way of giving instances. Such achievements he claimed had been gained by experiments at the cost of a good deal of money, and should not be given away for nothing.

John Lewis Childs thinks that in order to be able to give an appropriate name to a plant, one should be familiar with it, and know its merits fully, and, of course, a good, appropriate and "taking" name adds much to the selling qualities of any novelty. Mr. Childs professes not to know what are the proper governing principles in the choosing of a name. I suppose he does it by instinct, or rule of thumb. Perhaps he has studied the subject deeper than he thinks. At all events, he has sent out some good novelties under appropriate names which have been undoubtedly helpful in selling them.

Johnson & Stokes are somewhat of the attitude of Mr. Childs. They state that they have no set rule for naming novelties, having generally given them a name just as it occurred. They think, however, that the name often adds very greatly to the sale of a novelty and, I presume, will be interested in hearing how much importance some of their confreres in the trade put on this question.

James M. Thorburn & Co. name most of their introductions on the descriptive principle, although they have never given the matter much analytical consideration. They heartily approve of short descriptive names, such as "Silver Spray" and "Daybreak," but cannot say that they have been equally successful in their own selections, judging by the way their brothers in the trade have often showed their disapproval by renaming Thorburn introductions in accordance with their own ideas. Messrs. Thorburn think it would be a capital idea to carry this inquiry into the subject of renaming the new introductions. I have do doubt some interesting things might be learned on that subject also; although they might not be quite so agreeable. In fact it is too large an order for me. I much prefer dallying by the "primrose path" to groping along the "ways that are dark" and searching for "the tricks that are vain." To be frank, I believe more good can be accomplished by looking for something to commend, and I can honestly say I have learned of but little renaming to my own knowledge but a great deal of hearsay.

Robert Scott & Son think that if at all possible, the name of a flower should describe it, and that it should be given a "taking" popular name They do not claim, however, to be so well posted on this subject, not having made many introductions of their own. The most "taking" novelty they ever had in catalogue work was "White Swan" geranium, and in that case, the French name, "Cygne" was simply translated from the French into English. They think "Liberty" is an appropriate name and also a "taking" name for the rose which Mr. Asmus and themselves will introduce next year. This is where Mr. Scott gets in his fine work. He could no more resist putting in that sentence about "Liberty" than he can resist giving everyone a smiling welcome when they come to see that remarkable rose.

D. M. Ferry & Co. do not consider it an easy matter to lay down in black and white what should be the basis for good nomenclature, but off hand they would say their preference lay in the direction of names euphonious, descriptive and short.

J. C. Vaughan, whom I buttonholed in Philadelphia near the spot where Franklin flew his kite, gave his ideas freely while the crashing of drags and clanging of car gongs made his words hard to hear, yet I hardly think I missed the sense. He has no doubt that an appropriate name has a good deal to do with the sale of a plant. "Happy Thought" and "New Life" geraniums, in his opinion, while being good things in themselves, owed much of their popularity to their pleasant, easily remembered names, even though these were not descriptive in their nature. Another instance which is somewhat descriptive and a very happy name is the "Bride" for the white rose of that name. "Meteor" and "Sunset" roses are also good descriptive names, short, easily remembered, and very appropriate. Mr. Vaughan thinks that the naming of plants after localities is not to be commended. "Bridgeport Drumhead" cabbage is simply a name and conveys no meaning to anyone until he once knows the variety. "Osage" and "Rocky Ford" muskmelons, and names of that nature are all liable to this objection. "Black Diamond" is a pretty good name for a watermelon with a dark skin. "Jumbo" is good, but indicates only size. "Green and Gold" is also a good name for a watermelon giving a suggestion of uniqueness, and no doubt influencing the sale of the variety very much. A title like "Red Indian" for a red canna is much better than a title like "Victory." Mr. Vaughan thinks also that such a word as "Mandarin" for a red canna is good. To my mind the title of "Mandarin" would suggest yellow.

Mr. Vaughan instanced W. P. Simmons, the introducer of "Daybreak" as one of the happiest of introducers in selecting names. This is what Mr. Simmons has to say about naming new varieties: "The name of a plant should first describe it, and second, it should always be short." Mr. Simmons considers that the name is very essential in selling a plant, and the shorter the better.

One of the best thoughts on the subject is that of E. G. Hill & Co. Their idea of the matter is so much to the point that I will give same verbatim: "E. G. H. is away from home;but you are right in judging that he is a firm believer in a catchy, descriptive name; first it must be short; second, descriptive, or at least appropriate; simple as to spelling and pronunciation. If a seedling is extraordinarily good, he is very willing to have the family name go on it, although he is not an admirer of family names by any means. With the general public, a catchy, descriptive name goes a long way, and in a retail catalogue—other things being at all equal—it influences sales. With the trade it does not cut a very large figure, for a novelty, demonstrated to be first-class, and exhibited at the various shows, would carry a five story French name easily, and soon cut it down to one syllable for everyday use! In our catalogue days the "Storm King" fuchsia met with an enormous sale, while "Frau Emma Topfer," afterwards decided to be identical, sold in very moderate quantities, though both were finely illustrated. However, Childs was handling it under the former name, which doubtless had very much to do with it. Even with the dictionary to select from, good names are hard to select."

The above reference to "Storm King" fuchsia reminds us of one of the things wherein Mr. Childs showed his quick intuition of what would be a "taking" popular name for a white fuchsia, instead of the hard to pronounce, "Frau Emma Topfer." It is hard to believe that Mr. Childs' claim that he has never given the matter any consideration can possibly be sincere. But perhaps he is like Mr. Maule, playing 'possum. While regretting that these two gentlemen cannot see their way clear to tell us all about it, it would be unfair to blame them for being reticent on a subject of so great importance to them in the successful running of their individual businesses.

My own ideas of what appropriate naming should consist of may be best given by a few instances which I have selected from introductions of the past season. They are as follows:

"Anemone" for a single white dahlia, resembling the well known Anemone Japonica alba.

"Iridescent" for a cactus dahlia, orange overlaid with red and suffused with pink, giving a soft yet brilliant red effect with a blue reflex.

"Apple Blossoms," a double dahlia opening deep red-pink and carmine early in the season, and growing gradually lighter until the season advances and finally becoming pure white.

"Navy Blue," a sweet pea with royal purple standards and violet purple wings —the general color effect being a rich navy blue.

"Oriental," a rich orange salmon sweet pea; the shade that would naturally be suggested to most minds by the title.

"Klondyke" for the new early flowering yellow cosmos. The two latter names are happy exceptions to the usual objections for naming varieties after localities.

"White Ostrich Feather" for a new white aster of the comet type, with wavy twisted petals. The only objection to this name is its length.

"Honor Bright" for a bright red tomato—although not descriptive in the proper sense, the name is attractive and would make a favorable first impression, as in the case of "Happy Thought" geranium.

"Emerald" for a cucumber of a rich dark green during the entire period of its growth, its strongest characteristic being its evergreen character.

To sum the matter up, from all the opinions given it would appear that names of persons and localities are usually undesirable and that the principles that should guide us in naming are euphony, descriptiveness and brevity, each of them of almost equal importance, but perhaps descriptiveness first, brevity second and euphony last.

Have Cut Flower Growers Over-Built?

Not long ago I was talking with a Chicago retailer who has a range of greenhouses and the conversation turned to the subject of over-production. Is it true that we have an over-production? Sometimes I think it is and at other times I, like the rest when stock is a little scarce, which seldom seems to be the case of late, think differently. One thing is certain, however; if you travel through the country, you find in every little hamlet one or two good ranges of glass and it is surprising where all the flowers go.

Years ago Chicago was the only western city where the buyer was safe in placing an order; to-day he can call up on the long distance telephone, a dozen towns near him and in most cases get what he wants. Still, with all, Chicago is a great market, but the question at hand is: Are there too many flowers grown for the best interests of the trade? I personally believe there are and the only way out of it is for the grower to stop building for a time, until demand catches up with the supply.

Stop and think; figure things out; are you making money? One must not think that, if he has a few hundred dollars in the bank, all he has to do is to throw up a few more houses and at the end of another season the hundreds will be thousands. If that was the case he would be making money. They say figures do not lie; in the florist business I don't know about that; let us figure it out. Start for example with a land value of $3,000; 30,000 feet of glass will not cost less than $8,000; then tools, and sundry items will reach $1,000, making the total invested at least $12,000. Coal, help, water, interest on the money invested, wear and tear, taxes and your own labor must be counted. I never ran a greenhouse so I cannot give figures, but you can figure it out for yourself. The important point is that you must not forget that each ten or twelve years the place is not worth 20 cents on the dollar. As I have said, if you have a few hundreds "to the good" it does not prove that you are making money.

If you are wise you will stop building and keep what glass you have in first-class shape, try to produce the very best grade of stock and let the trade catch up. It is growing daily but hardly as fast as the glass. Success in trade comes from knowing what you are about, not from what seems all right; you must really know. Therefore there is but one way; keep books and see for yourself just what it costs to produce the stock and above all don't forget to count in your own labor, for that, as a rule, is worth more than what you have to pay for the best man on the place. Don't bank on the old saying that the world owes every man a living, but put yourself in the figures as an expense and see where you come out. If you have some money left at the end of the year hold on to it and let the other fellow do the building if he must. Wait till the time is ripe, then cover up a few blocks square and be in it. But just at present it looks as if there was just a few more greenhouses than are needed to cover the demand. E. E. PIESER.

CARNATIONS.

CULTURAL NOTES.

November 11.—To name a certain day of the month, or even a certain month in which to begin feeding carnations would not always hit the mark. Every grower who watches his plants carefully can tell for himself when they need stimulation and when they will respond most quickly to it. Taking the cut flower product into consideration, there are few plants which will not be benefited by additional fertilizers applied about this time. I have always contended, however, that plants intended for propagation should not be too highly fertilized, but simply kept growing along, naturally and healthily. According to this idea the man who intends propagating his own stock should set aside a portion of his plants for that purpose and not stimulate them so highly as that portion intended for cut flowers only. There are, however, many good growers who contend that the best cuttings are taken from highly fed plants. This saves all the trouble of having two sets of plants.

In considering the best material for this extra stimulation, there are several things to be taken into consideration. The most important of these is the nitrifying organisms that convert the plant foods in the soil into available matter for the plants' use. Some of us are inclined to be a bit skeptical about the practicability of the work done by the experiment stations, but all of us who have given the matter any consideration must admit that they are correct in their statements relating to these nitrifying organisms in the soil and their work in the preparation of that soil for plant food. Nitrogen is a very important article of food for our carnation plants and these organisms are especially useful in converting the nitrogen contained in our soil into available food for our plants. It therefore behooves us to cultivate these nitrifying organisms and have a goodly number of them in our soil.

As a rule the richer the soil and the more fully cultivated it is, the greater the number of these organisms and the higher their degree of vitality. In decomposed stable manure they are particularly numerous and vigorous. It is owing to this fact that such manure will produce fertilizing results far in excess of what could be expected from the quantity of plant food that an analysis shows it to contain.

Mr. Johnson, a few weeks ago, told us how to use this material on indoor-grown carnations, and the same rule applies to those planted in from the field. The manure should be run through a coarse sieve so as to handle nicely. Care should be used not to have it too close around the stem of the plant as it would be liable to induce stem rot. It can be applied quite liberally between the rows and if the plants have plenty of room in the row it can also be put between the plants in the row.

If properly applied it will serve two purposes, that of a fertilizer and that of a mulch, and in the latter case will save you considerable in watering, but add to the necessity of careful watching to see that it is done properly. Too much or too little water will, in addition to the direct injury to the plants, cause the death of numbers of these nitrifying organisms and thus reduce the fertility of your soil.

Care should also be exercised with the first few waterings, or until the manure gets well settled into place, so that it is not washed all over the bed or bench and around the stems of your plants. The best plan is to turn your hydrant or spigot open just enough to allow a very moderate force on the water and in addition to this use a flat-topped rose for the first few waterings. In using this rose do not water all over the plants but carefully between the rows and do it early in the day so that what water does get on the plants will have a chance to dry off thoroughly before nightfall.

Individual Flower Vase.

This handy trifle has proved very useful to us in decorative work. We have it made in two sizes; the larger, shown in the illustration, is one-half inch in diameter and four inches in length, the smaller being three-eighths of an inch in width and three or four inches long. The rubber cap fits tightly and seals the vase effectively, no matter in what position it is placed when in use. In the center of the cap is a small hole that will scarcely admit an ordinary pin without expanding, yet by a slight pressure any flower with a woody or stiff stem can be introduced, the rubber holding it in place. The vases are filled and the rubber caps fitted under the surface of the water, where they slip on very easily. The flower is then very readily pushed in, after which they are as one piece.

There are a great many uses to which these vases can be put, the accompanying illustration of a floral tree showing one. This tree contained 500 short American Beauties, making a very effective and novel decoration, as it extends over the heads of the guests on all sides. By the use of this vase the flowers were kept fresh from six to eight hours in a warm room. The vases do not show to any extent, the foliage of the roses covering them.

For dinner table arrangements, where the blossoms are sprayed on the cloth, the narrow, clear glass vases are easily hidden by the foliage of the flowers or accompanying greens and the fresh beauty of the decorations lasts throughout the entertainment.

For garnishing a bank of green or for use over doorways or arches in lofty rooms, where the heat causes flowers to wilt rapidly, the vases will be found to be invaluable, also in curtain decorations of light greens, anywhere in fact where flowers are used separately they add hours to their life and beauty.

The device will be found useful, as well, in mantel and basket work, as they are readily placed in soft soil and the moss of baskets. We find that a vase without a cap, holding four or five sprays of lily of the valley or other flowers adds considerably to a plant basket when it is inconvenient to disturb it to crowd in something with roots. The spray of flowers on the handle also lasts much longer when the vases are used. A rubber cap with a larger opening readily admits and holds orchids, such as cattleyas, and other soft and thick-stemmed flowers. For a window display with curtains of asparagus or on tree stumps and branches, they hold and keep the flower better than it can be kept in any other way. K.

Two Fine Cannas.

We grew about thirty varieties of cannas this summer, of which Mrs. Robert McKeand and Franz Buchner made by far the best showing. The former is a variety raised by Robert McKeand, florist at Garfield Park, Indianapolis, and is without question one of the most showy bedding varieties I have seen. It is also well adapted for pot culture on account of its dwarf and free flowering habit. The color of the flower is hard to describe, being a dark, deep orange in the center, with a broad light yellow band, making it very attractive. The flowers are thrown well above the foliage. Franz Buchner is almost identical with Mrs. McKeand except in color, which is very much darker, somewhat on the dark orange order, or orange-red. There are several beautiful cannas but none which have attracted so much attention on my place as these two. Alemannia has also shown up in fine form this year and we still consider old Egandale the best dark leaved variety. E. G. Hill was one of the most showy solid red varieties we had. President Cleveland is also a fine tall grower W. W. C.

WITH THE GROWERS.

IN SPRINGFIELD, OHIO.

One must search afar to find a city of 40,000 people a larger proportion of whom are identified with floriculture than is the case at Springfield, Ohio. To this city the Florists' Directory credits twenty-seven horticultural firms and of this number several are among the largest in the country. This is an opportune moment for placing the eye of the trade upon them for the fact that the past season has seen a number of additions to the establishments and at the present all are enjoying an unprecedented prosperity.

The Good & Reese Company now has over four acres under glass, a range of eight splendid houses 20x120 having been put up during the summer. These houses are up-to-the-minute. They are built without partition walls and very little wood, except sash bars, was employed. The benches are practically indestructible. This firm makes its boast that it is the largest grower of roses in the world and it has a wonderful mail trade, the postage bill averaging $100 a day. There are thirty-five houses of roses now on the place, 2,000,000 in pots and 500,000 still in the cutting benches. There are also upwards of 100,000 two-year plants ready for shipment. The most approved cultural methods are employed and so carefully is the shipping done that last winter only three lots were lost by freezing. The Good & Reese Company is a large buyer from the leading horticultural firms of both this country and Europe. Last year they imported about $25,000 worth of stock from Holland and Belgium. The office force is sixty people. In the greenhouse department there are 125 growers employed.

It was a quarter of a century ago that McGregor Brothers embarked in the florist business, the firm then consisting, as at present, of Frank and David McGregor. At first they did a local business but some eighteen years ago they branched into wholesaling and the mail trade, and abandoned the local trade. The past season they did the greatest volume of business on their record, but they expect it to be eclipsed the coming year. Their plant consists of thirty-six houses, large and commodious packing houses, and a new office building. The entire business is carried on under the direct personal supervision of the proprietors, who are assisted by David McGregor's son, Roy McGregor, and Frank McGregor's three sons Messrs. Robert, Allan and Harold McGregor. This firm grows immense quantities of roses, bedding and stove plants, and make palms and ficus a specialty. They report a tendency in the trade toward ornamental foliage plants in preference to flowering plants for home adornment. This establishment is one of the principal sources of supply for the catalogue men and can be classed among the solid old houses of the country.

Schmidt & Botley are erecting four structures as an addition to their present range of eleven houses 20x100. The history of this concern embraces only five years but in that time they have made a no inconsiderable impression on the trade. They have built every year, this season putting up a modern, two-story packing house, as well as the four houses now under way, and adding another forty horse-power boiler. They do careful growing and still more careful packing and their mail trade is far reaching. They use 2100 square feet of space for the propagation of roses and grow more chrysanthemums than any concern in the vicinity, keeping their list right up-to-date. They also have a big stock of bedding plants and decorative stock. Last year they introduced a dwarf lemon named American Wonder which makes a handsome plant for a jardiniere, a distinct species, its most novel feature the production of edible fruit of immense size under ordinary cultivation. A line of vegetable and flower seeds in also carried by Schmidt & Botley, a building for this department having been added last year. They handle large quantities of bulbs, imported direct from Holland growers.

The George H. Mellen Company purchased the Innisfallen Greenhouses of C. A. Reeser in 1894 and have since doubled the business. A range of new houses is now going up and will give much needed room Roses are a specialty here, as many as 800,000 plants having been sold the past season. No cut flowers are produced. Geo. H. Mellen is the general manager and thirty men are employed. The company has one customer in China to whom shipments are made annually by mail, arriving in five weeks. This establishment has the unique distinction of supporting a brass band composed of its employes. Frank Goe is the leader.

The John A. Doyle Co., composed of three brothers, John A., Bartholomew and Daniel, has grown in eight years to occupy fourteen houses and do a large business. Two houses were erected during the past season. Nine houses are devoted to roses, of which 500,000 plants were sold this year, and the remainder of the place is given to carnations, geraniums, begonias, primroses, palms, ferns and miscellaneous stock. The place is heated by hot water from three boilers under which natural gas is used as fuel.

Other good growers in Springfield who have large ranges of glass are P. J. Agnew, A. R. Aldrich, Fairview Floral Co., F. A. McBeth, J. T. Maxwell, C. T. Reese, G. C. Roderick, T. F. Stelzig and and J. W. Yates.

FLORAL TREE OF SHORT AMERICAN BEAUTY ROSES MADE POSSIBLE BY USE OF INDIVIDUAL FLOWER VASE.

The Gruss an Teplitz Rose.

This rose was originated by J. Geschwind and bought and introduced by P. Lambert. It should have the attention of all rose growers for it is one of the healthiest and most profuse blooming roses, besides being of elegant habit. Its color is a conspicuous brilliant carmine red about like Victor Hugo. The foliage, which is a dark bronzy red and very luxuriant, is free from disease and attracts attention amongst all other roses. It commences rather late to bloom but continues until frost. It will become an indispensable rose for propagating and cutting. It is now being propagated in America and kept tremendously secret. The few florists who know it at present do not tell its name so that we have even received pieces of cloth of the color of the flowers in order to determine the name and we have also received buds and twigs for the same purpose.—Rosen-Zeitung.

Autumn Work Among Herbaceous Plants.

Hardy perennials have at last found their deserved recognition. Their popularity is largely due to the readiness with which they adapt themselves to every ordinary garden soil and the simplicity of their treatment; but little labor and care need be put upon them and a judicious selection insures a continuous show of gay and interesting flowers from earliest spring until the snow flies. The cut flower growers have also found that a great many of the species are exceedingly useful for their purposes and therefore cultivate some of them in large quantities with success and profit.

Where mixed borders of hardy varieties were planted some years ago, many of them may now need dividing and replanting. This operation may still be performed in many instances if done in a careful manner, though September or October are preferable. When taking up an overgrown clump, a portion of which is to be replanted in the same position, we should in all cases loosen the soil deeply and mix in an ample supply of thoroughly decayed fertilizer, for we must bear in mind that the plant will have to remain for some years and that all of the strong growing perennials are gross feeders. In other cases it may be desirable to remodel or rearrange a border, some mistakes in first planting may have to be remedied, or frequently it may happen that the color of flowers, shape of foliage or the general appearance and habit of plants near each other are not in harmony. Perhaps then it would be advisable to take up the whole plantation, with a ball of earth adhering to each clump if possible, and rearrange the plants according to our fancy, paying attention to their average height, habit of growth and other characteristics.

We should always fork the border very deeply, fertilize lavishly and break up all lumps. When we are ready for planting the holes to receive the balls should be dug large enough to easily admit all the small fiberous roots. Of course the plants in most instances would live without these precautions, but they will repay a little extra care by an abundance of more perfect bloom during the following season. Plant all entirely dormant species, such as the dodocatheons, euphorbias, asclepias, eremuruses, uvularias, arums and trilliums, with their crowns well below the surface; the evergreen section and all hardy things with a sub-shrubby habit may be planted about even with the ground.

All new plantations, the early ones, which are now perhaps semi-established, as well as the later ones, require some sort of a protection on the approach of hard winter, usually not before the middle of December. The smaller plants are more liable to injury by heaving out, as we call it, than are the larger clumps which were planted with more or less earth adhering to the roots. We should be careful to completely shade or mulch the surrounding ground close up to the stems or crowns. The dwarfer, evergreen species, such as arenarias, erysimums, arabises and the like, shade their own stems; often the leaves and dense branchlets protect the whole ball. If the plants are of fair size and planted rather closely only a very slight covering is necessary.

Where there is a reserve ground, a place where plants are grown to replenish other plantations, division into rather small pieces is often resorted to so as to have plenty of stock on hand to select from. In commercial establishments, also, it is a common practice to divide into single crowns. Here a protection is needed, surely, else one may run the risk of losing a large percentage of the young stock. Yet vigorous, healthy, well established plants in bed or border, for instance, irises, antheriums, aquilegias, inulas, eryngiums, heleniums, orobuses, hemerocallises, epimediums, gaillardias, coreopsis, doronicums, delphiniums, dictamnuses, spiræas, astilbes, bocconias, veronicas, saponarias, rudbeckias and a host of others too numerous to mention, seldom need protection of any description, while plants of moderate growth, especially that class which forms but few offsets and underground runners, are usually benefited by a covering.

ADJUSTABLE GLASS OR VASE HOLDER IN USE AND READY FOR USE.

Dense mats of dwarf evergreen plants, like the erysimums, the various species of dianthus, aubrietias, iberis, arenaria, sagina, helianthemum, Daphne cneorum, the moss pinks, Alyssum serpyllifolium and A. alpestre, arabis, armeria, erinus, draba, several of the dense growing campanulas, including such as C. turbinata, C. Carpathica or, C. garganica, etc., the cerastiums, sedums and others are better left fully exposed to sun, wind and weather, except on steep banks with a southern or western exposure. Here the winter's sun, not the cold, would burn their foliage, so cheerful to look at in midwinter, and a slight shading or screening is absolutely necessary in such a position.

There are quite a number of things which really do require some sort of protection from drying winds and bright sun, anything which does not entirely exclude air and light, unless they happen to be planted in a cozy corner or on a northern slope. Among these we may mention many of the primulas, some of the pentstemons, several salvias, Senecio pulcher, tricyrtis, ononis, a few of the lychnis and œnothera species, leontopodiums, eremuruses, hedysarum, arnebias, heuchera and others. Yet in sections where snow is abundant and likely to remain on the ground until March or April, nearly all covering may be dispensed with and never cover very thickly. A few half hardy specimens may require a generous covering, but these are rarely found in an ordinary garden and where they are grown, their special requirements are understood.

We may increase the stock of all the evergreen plants by cuttings taken from the plants at any time during the fall and winter months, even if we dig them out from under the snow. Others may be increased by root cuttings; that is, pieces of the roots about an inch long are dibbled in a box or pan, right end just even with the top of the soil, and dormant, invisible eyes will soon swell and sprout into healthy growth if the boxes are placed in an ordinary cool greenhouse. All plants which form underground runners can be propagated by cutting up these wiry runners into short lengths, which, after being planted in boxes, will send out roots and sprout into growth. Winter is also a good time to sow seed of many perennials, especially advisable for the slow-growing, dwarfer species which can be advanced and grown on under glass quicker than by spring sowing in frames or open ground. Often we can thus induce plants to flower freely the first year, while otherwise two years would be required to develop them into strong flowering specimens.

Ajustable Glass or Vase Holder.

This handy appliance should appeal to all decorators. The spring holder, into which the receptacle is placed, will support a glass two to two and a half inches in diameter and as long as required. We use a glass, which is the one in the cut, one and three-quarter inches at bottom, two and one-eighth at top and three and seven-eighths long; it is commonly carried in stock by nearly all dealers in such goods. Many similar devices have been used in which the holders consisted of a wire ring soldered onto the rod or support. This admitted only of a certain sized glass, had no spring to grasp the same, was stationary, on the rod and when it was necessary to bend the appliance about a mirror or use it in any other than a perpendicular position the glasses would tip over and spill the water. This device consists of a flat spring metal clasp which almost encircles the glass. In the middle at the back it is riveted to a metal clip; in each end of the clip is a hole, which when brought in line by pressure of the finger and thumb, fit on the rod and will slide to any place desired. When the pressure is removed the spring expands and, gripping the rod, holds fast. As they are adjustable as many as are desired can be used; they can be placed all in a line in front of the rod, or to the right and left alternately. When it is desired to curve the rod, the clip is given a twist on the rivet and remains straight with the rod at any angle.

The decorated mirrow in the illustration is arranged with the aid of one of these devices three feet long holding six glasses, with two ordinary rose bowls on small shelves on either side of the mirror at the bottom. The mirror, four feet high by thirty inches wide, is one of two in the center of one side of our store fixtures. We try to have these decorated more or less elaborately each day from stock on hand, as it is but a few minutes work to arrange them. They will look nicely for two days and sometimes have stood three with a little addition. For displaying orchids, lily of the valley, hyacinths, violets and other flowers in the window we have found the vase holder very useful. The rods we use are three and four feet long, on which we usually place the glasses six inches apart. All metal parts are nickel plated and present at all times a bright, fresh appearance. K.

STATE OF THE MARKET.—VIOLET SUPPLY SUFFERS SUDDEN INTERRUPTION.—THE SAME OLD STORY.—MATTERS IN GENERAL SATISFACTORY.—CYPRIPEDIUM GROWERS GET TOGETHER.—CLEARY'S SUCCESSFUL SALES.—NEW CONSERVATORIES AT CENTRAL PARK.—JOTTINGS OF VARIOUS INTEREST.—VISITORS.

The only ruffle in the flower trade discernible this week is the sudden interruption of the violet supply. This happens regularly each year a week or so in advance of the horse show, which is regarded as an opportune time for putting up the prices. Last year it did not work as anticipated but, on the contrary, got the buyers prejudiced against the violet so fiercely that the poor flower never recovered from it all winter. What the story this time will be is not apparent yet, but it is reasonable to assume that the long period of warm, sunny weather has been more conducive to growth than to blooming of violets and it is probable that the quantity of flowers in shape to come on during the next two weeks is greatly reduced in consequence. If this should be the case, prices will be maintained better than was possible last year with the tremendous avalanche piled upon the wholesalers all at once. The general tone of the flower market here is decidedly unsatisfactory. The demand seems very light, nobody but the Greeks showing a disposition to buy in quantity and they, as usual, are unwilling to pay anything for the stock. They have been very useful, however, in unloading the heavy receipts since the middle of October and conditions would be worse than they are, without them.

It is said that the cypripedium growers have got together on prices for the coming season and have fixed upon 12½ cents a bloom as the minimum price at wholesale. The maintenance of this figure is dependent upon the rigid adherence to the scale by every grower concerned and it is safe to say that a sharp watch will be posted to watch the comers during the time of heavy crop, especially if the retailers should decide to take a hand in the matter.

Cleary & Co.'s sale of Japanese plants was an unqualified success, the plants bringing much better figures than at any of the up-town sales and it is likely that more of these goods will hereafter be entrusted to the horticultural auctioneers than hitherto. One grand Chabo Hiba brought $700. Cleary will sell Holland roses next week.

The nine new conservatories at One Hundred and Sixth street, in Central Park, were opened to the public for the first time on November 2 and will be open daily hereafter from 10 a. m. to 4 p. m. They are all filled with plants and make a good impression.

Mr. Van der Straeten, who represented the Belgian horticultural interests at the Philadelphia Export Exposition, sailed for home on the American liner on Wednesday, November 8.

A portion of the plants at the Trauth Co.'s establishment in Flatbush were sold at auction on November 9 to satisfy a judgment. Cleary & Co. were the auctioneers.

The local Democratic leaders are said to have adopted the red carnation as the party emblem for campaign purposes.

STATE OF TRADE.—LITTLE OF INTEREST TO NOTE.—A QUESTION OF POLICY IN THE MATTER OF LILY OF THE VALLEY.—PENNOCK BROS. HAVE AN OPENING.

The volume of business is nothing to brag about just at present. There are plenty of flowers of all sorts, especially chrysanthemums, and it keeps the store boys busy keeping the growers' peddlers in line in the morning, dodging the commission peddlers the balance of the day and between times taking care of the stock and what few customers happen to come in. Prices are about as last week; $4 is about high for the best teas, although a few extras are bringing $5. Beauties range from $1 to $3 per dozen; carnations 75 cents to $1.50; violets 50 cents to 75 cents. Lily of the valley a couple of weeks ago could hardly be had at any price, yet it has been sold on the street the past week at 25 cents the bunch of twenty-five sprays and very fair stock. It seems to us that this is very poor judgment on somebody's part. Better ship it back to the consignor than break the market and cheapen this beautiful and high priced flower in this way.

Pennock Bros. had an opening the past week, inviting their customers and the public to view their greatly improved and almost new store. Messrs. Lidden Pennock and A. B. Cartledge, the new firm, since they have taken charge, have been adding one improvement after another until now it seems almost impossible to do anything further and the store stands one of the most complete in the country. For the opening it was especially decorated with choice specimen plants, palms and ferns, together with a lot of orchids cut and on the plants. The display was arranged with great taste: from the front window to the rear of the greenhouse there was a grand show, which reflected much credit to the ambitious proprietors. K.

ANNUAL OUTING AT WABAN.—STORY OF THE LEADING SOCIETY EVENT OF THE YEAR.—SOME VERY GOOD STOCK.—GARDEN COMMITTEE MAKES A PILGRIMAGE TO WELLESLEY.—FINE SIGHTS AT MRS. CHENEY'S.—GREAT QUANTITIES OF STOCK IN THE MARKET.—DEPLORABLE CONDITION DUE TO THE UNUSUAL WEATHER.—GARDENER'S CLUB ELECTS OFFICERS.—NOTES AND COMMENT.—VISITORS.

The annual visit to the Waban Rose Conservatories, which has now grown to be one of the chief social horticultural events of the year, took place on Thursday, November 2, about fifty gentlemen participating. The extensive range of greenhouses was inspected with pleasure and interest by the visitors, under the escort of Mr. Wood, Mr. Montgomery and Mr. Montgomery, Jr. One new house 300 feet in length has been added since our visit one year ago, and is filled with American Beauty, under the supervision of Mr. Montgomery, Jr. As with every other house on the place it is in perfect shape, each individual leaf as perfect as if it was the only care in the house and a microscope could not find a speck of black spot. The chrysanthemum houses were the principal objects of interest. Notwithstanding the rather novel arguments sometimes advanced to the effect that the weather has no influence in hastening or retarding the blooming of the chrysanthemum, evidence was not wanting that the entire collection here is considerably in advance of the usual blooming time and the recent spell of warm weather was accepted without question as the cause. Omitting the older and well known standard varieties, a list of the most impressive sorts seen would include Yellow Fellow, Golden Gate, Regina, James Bidencope, Mons. C. de Leete, Wm. Chadwick, Peter Kay (syn. Jeannie Falconer) Rustique, Autumn Glory, Master Tucker, Hooper Pearson, Mrs. Chas. Keyser, Kate Brownhead, Mrs. J. W. Lewis, Mrs. Trainor L. Park, Lord Kromer and H. T. Jones. The latter was greatly admired for its glowing crimson color; it is, however, too early a bloomer to show up well at the usual exhibition dates. Of the Yellow Mrs. Jones, Mr. Montgomery has all three and can detect no difference between them. Mrs. Trainor Park was propagated late and the terminal bud left, with the result that the flowers are much finer than those shown by the introducer, Mr. Asmus, last year. The inspection completed, each guest was invited to sign the register and then a group photograph was taken, after which the party was conveyed to Woodland Park Hotel, at Auburndale, where a fine banquet was served and a most enjoyable time spent. Mr. Wood impressed P. Welch into service as toastmaster and most of the gentlemen present were called upon to speak. Among the visitors from a distance were A. S. Burns, Julius Roehrs, W. H. Siebrecht, W. S. Allen and Paul Dailledouze, New York; J. N. May, Summit, N. J.; Wm. Appleton, Providence, R. I., and Joseph Fuller, Leominster. The New York gentlemen severally acknowledged that they had this day seen the finest roses in America and the theme of every speaker's remarks was joint congratulation of Mr. Wood and Mr. Montgomery and praise for the establishment which they had by their united efforts developed. Warren Ewell kept the company in high spirits by his frequent bursts of spontaneous oratory and Lawrence Cotter pronounced the benediction, calling for three cheers for the president-elect of the S. A. F.

The Garden Committee of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society visited the greenhouses of Mrs. B. P. Cheney, at Wellesley, on Friday, November 3, on special invitation to view the chrysanthemums about to be exhibited at Horticultural Hall. This vast estate, under the management of John Barr, is regarded as a model one. Nature has done much for it, with hill and valley, woods and river and grand old elm trees and Mr. Barr has accentuated its natural beauty with the skill of an expert. There are thirty acres of level lawn, reputed the best in this section, and the neatness and order prevailing everywhere prepare the visitor so that he feels no surprise at the evidences of rare cultural skill which greet his eye on entering the greenhouses. The thirty specimen chrysanthemums intended for the exhibition completely fill the showhouse, leaving only room for a platform from which an elevated view of the brilliant banks of color may be obtained. The best of the old and new varieties are embraced in the collection and three hundred flowers per plant is a moderate estimate for some of them. Another house is devoted to the single-stemmed plants grown for cut flower purposes. Five to eight feet tall, with enormous flowers proportioned to their height, these make a superb show. Among the other attractions are pot violets in frames, Gloire de Lorraine begonias and a bunch of enormous cyclamens, recently potted, in training for the spring exhibition. It is worth knowing that Mr. Barr at present keeps the buds picked off clean, allowing none to open before the last of January. A commodious potting shed has been added during the past season. After a pleasant tour of inspection the visitors were entertained in most generous style at the residence of Mr. Barr.

At present the chrysanthemum is on top, Horticultural Hall is overflowing with the showy blossoms and the flower market is almost impassable in the morning from the same cause. This is enough, in itself, to demoralize the flower business but when to it is added the effect of the steady bright weather on carnations and roses the result on the market is as bad as can be and much worse than can be described. Carnations are fairly outdoing themselves. They come in by cratesfull; they are aggressive and are giving the chrysanthemum a good run for its money. Violets respond to the bright weather quite differently and are not as abundant as they were a week ago. The price is advancing steadily. On roses the worst of the glut seems to have passed and a shortening up is noted that will be very perceptible should the weather turn wintry.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Club meeting was held on Tuesday evening, November 7. The principal business on hand was a proposition to amend the constitution so that, if the club so decides, it may suspend all meetings except the annual meeting. The amendment was carried and action under it will be in order at the December meeting. A long list of delinquent names was dropped from the roll. Officers were elected as follows: President, Robert Cameron; vice-president, J. K. M. L. Farquhar; secretary, W. K. Wood; treasurer, Edward Hatch; executive committee, Jas. A. Morton, J. Woodward Manning, Wm. Donald, David Montieth and Chas. Sander.

The Massachusetts Horticultural Society meeting on November 4 was rendered quite exciting by the discussion of a proposition to allow voting by proxy on society matters, the by-laws having prohibited such hitherto. The motion was defeated by a narrow margin.

Visitors: Messrs. Studer, of Washington; Orpet, South Lancaster; Macrae and Smith, Providence; Hurrell, Summit, N. J.; Killen, New York; Macrorie and Hayes, Orange; Playdon, Andover; McCullough, Cincinnati; Mott, Philadelphia; Brandt, Mahan, Peck and Laurie, of Newport.

TRADE UNUSUALLY LIVELY FOR SHOW WEEK.—COMPETITION MAKES A RUN ON FANCY STOCK.—CHRYSANTHEMUM SEASON AT ITS HEIGHT.—LOCAL GROWERS HAVE NO GROUNDS FOR COMPLAINT.—THE ANNUAL BANQUET.—WITTBOLD ADMITS HIS SONS TO THE BUSINESS.—MEETING OF THE CLUB.—JOTTINGS OF VARIOUS DEGREES OF INTEREST.

It is the consensus of opinion that trade has been better during the past six days than was ever known before in show week. The keen competition in the table decorations and in some of the non-competative displays at the Auditorium has made a run on good stock and the choicest blooms were spoken for days in advance. American Beauties have been in particular demand and the best flowers have sold at rates equal to the rewards for first place at the exhibition. Roses are improving right along and the proportions of good, had and indifferent stock are more nearly at the winter standing; not long ago all that were not bad were indifferent. Carnations are also gaining both in quality and quantity and some very fine stock is now obtainable if one wishes to pay 2 cents or 3 cents per bloom. Violets have been in only adequate supply. It is a peculiarity that this flower is almost invariably scarce on Monday and a glut on Tuesday. As one commission man expresses it, "the growers are either too good or to lazy to pick on Sunday." The chrysanthemum cut is now at its height and huge loads of bloom reach market every morning. The quality is high, as a rule, and a dozen growers are sending in flowers as good as those shown at the Auditorium this week. As yet there has been little change in the prices. The high figures of even last year are seldom reached, $3 buying all but a few of the extras, but at the same time there has been no break from the profitable rates established early in the season. Several of the visiting florists have remarked that Chicago growers have every occasion to feel satisfied this year.

At 9 p. m., Thursday, 115 happy florists assembled around the tables at the Sherman House to do justice to the good things provided for the annual feast of Chicago Florists' Club. Edgar Sanders acted as toastmaster in his usual happy vein and, after a few well chosen remarks, called on Prof. Cowell, of Buffalo, who told a joke on W. N. Rudd, relating that when they were traveling east last summer circumstances were such that they were compelled to dine at a private boarding house, where Mr. Rudd was called on to say grace. Those who best know Mr. Rudd can imagine his feelings at the moment. However, a little later Mr. Rudd was called upon and countered upon his Buffalo friend in good style. Mr. Herrington was asked as to how Europe compared with this country and said that after a delightful trip this summer he considered America good enough for him. Mr. Buettner was asked to respond for Chicago and said that he is proud he is a Chicagoan, deeming the city the center of the universe. The Chicago quartette was next brought into service and responded to several encores; their first song was "The Midway, or the Flowers in Bloom." G. L. Grant spoke of the struggles of the first flower shows held in Chicago. E. H. Giesy gave a recitation, which was well received, and later was called for the story of "Mr. Potts, of Pottstown, Pa." Other speakers were Messrs. Kissell, Balluff, Evans, Balsley, Weber, Then, Crabb, Rackham, Smith, Hartje, of Jubilee fame, and several others.

George Wittbold has determined to admit his five sons to a share in his splendid business and on December 1 the George Wittbold Company will be incorporated to that end. The boys have worked earnestly in their father's employ and the rapid strides which the concern has recently made are largely due to their energy and business sagacity. "Giving the boys a chance," as Mr. Wittbold expresses it, will surely not detract from the esteem in which the establishment is held by the trade.

At the meeting of the Florists' Club November 3, Mr. Sanders, the outgoing president, was presented with a beautiful gold-headed cane, whereupon he thanked the members and spoke for the future welfare of the club. A committee consisting of Messrs. Winterson, Benthey and Sanders was appointed to provide suitable entertainment for the club the coming season. Messrs. Oecklin and Grossman were elected to membership. Andreas Simon had on exhibition a box of fine bulbs which were grown in Whatcom county, Washington. Jacob Russler exhibited a promising pink seedling carnation.

Not least among the pleasant features of exhibition week in this city was the elaborate repast tendered his friends by O. P. Bassett, the amiable head of the firm of Bassett & Washburn. The event will be long remembered by the guests of the genial host, who, notwithstanding his "nineteen" years, feels "just as young as he used to be."

Kroeschell Bros. Co., in common with other Chicago manufacturers, have suffered since July 15 from a strike of their boiler makers, but are now organizing a force of non-union men and hope to soon be in a position to take orders for immediate delivery.

There have been no developments in the fern situation. One wholesaler paid $18 for an eleven-minutes long distance telephone conversation with a Hinsdale, Mass., man last week and now he is not at all alarmed at the prospect of a stiffer market.

Reinberg Bros. have sold several hundred thousand field grown carnation plants this fall and have now reduced their stock to a comparative handful of McGowans.

At Washington, Lincoln and Garfield Parks they have Aristolochia gigantea Sturtevantii, the goose plant, pendant in the show houses. It is an oddity which attracts much attention.

One box of Crabb & Hunter's exhibition stock, ten single stemmed pot plants of the first grade, was delivered upside-down by the express company. Of course it was a wreck.

Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich., are making their first attempt at growing orchids and the Cattleya labiata which they are sending to Benthey & Co., prove that the departure is a complete success.

The twelve new houses at Lincoln Park are now completed and stocked and the range is one of the finest in the country. The chrysanthemums in the show houses are attracting a good deal of attention.

Wietor Bros., are cutting large numbers of extra fine Beauties. They furnished a goodly portion of the blooms shown by the retailers at the exhibition this week.

Lynch is handling some nice red bouvardia and some good Admiral Dewey chrysanthemums, the latter from E. F. Lemke, of St. Paul.

J. B. Deamud is receiving carnations of excellent quality.

OUTING OF THE FLORISTS' CLUB —A SPECIAL CAR TO MOUNT CLEMENS.—TOUR OF THE KLEGGE, BREITMEYER, TAYLOR AND CAREY PLACES REVEALS MUCH OF INTEREST.—A STORY OF UNBOUNDED HOSPITALITY.

The outing enjoyed by thirty-three members of the Detroit Florists' Club took place November 16. A special car was engaged on the Rapid Railway, which left Breitmeyers' store at one o'clock for Mt. Clemens. On arriving there we first visited Robt. Klegge, whose fame as a violet grower is very wide. His constant success with violets for the past few years is really remarkable. This year he has 10,000 plants of Marie Louise and Farquhar. He says the latter is essentially a warm weather violet, attaining best results in the spring. It is not so subject to disease as is Marie Louise and is a much stronger grower. It is, however, slow to develop its flowers, so much so that the outer petals begin to fade out before the full development of the blooms. Mr. Klegge has already picked 90,000 flowers this fall. At present all his plants are perfectly healthy and the flowers large and as deep in color as one could expect in cooler weather.

Next we visited Breitmeyers' immense establishment of 100,000 feet of glass, where the greatest interest was centered upon the gorgeous display of chrysanthemums, to which several houses are devoted. The great number of varieties that were grown here a few years ago, embracing all known types and shades of color, has been cut down to a carefully selected list of standard and well tried sorts of the most distinct colors that find approval with the public at present. Conspicuous among them are Mrs. Perrin, Thornden, Mrs. Baer, Autumn Glory, Western King, Ivory, Pink Ivory, Mrs. Higinbotham and Mrs. Jerome Jones.

Breitmeyers' is the home of Cerise Queen carnation, the merits of which are now well known. Several other new seedlings are under test which will be disseminated as soon as their distinctive value is fully proven. In roses a large house of young Beauties is very fine and indicates a full crop for Christmas. A house of Perle and Sunset is especially fine and a house of Meteor, while at present off crop, is strong, clean and healthy and many houses of Bridesmaids and Brides show the good results of the skilful hand of the grower. A great many Mme. Cusins are grown here and Golden Gate is being tried and is at present in full crop. Mr. Breitmeyer says it finds favor with all who see it.

After the inspection of the houses we tasted the well known hospitality of this place. Father Breitmeyer treated us with white wine, red wine and all kinds of wine, the product of his own vineyard, of which he is justly proud. Then after a stroll of a mile or more and climbing over many kinds of fences, which taxed the athletic abilities of most of the boys, we reached Jas. Taylor's, where five houses are planted with violets and carnations, all looking well.

Mr. Taylor had fine violets last year and many times promised the same for this season but his plants are slow to bloom. Mrs. Taylor prepared an elegant supper, which was served to the great delight of her visitors, but the approaching darkness hastened our departure for Jno. Carey's place, which is a mile nearer to Mount Clemens. Arriving there it was too dark to see his stock in the houses but his ice box was filled with carnations and roses the quality of which plainly showed the good condition of the plants from which they were cut. From here the Monroe House was visited, where the evening was spent in bowling and pool playing. A band of music on the car returning home added greatly to the enjoyment of the trip.

Trade is good and getting better as the season advances. Flowers of all kinds are quite plentiful and of good quality.

H. G. Flammer has opened a store on Woodward avenue. J. F. S.

RUSSELLIA LEMOINEI has given great satisfaction to those who have tried it. It makes a superb hanging basket plant. Care should be exercised in fumigating houses in which it is growing as the young growths are very easily burnt by the smoke.

Address THE AMERICAN FLORIST CO., Chicago.

BOUGAINVILLEA SANDERIANA should be kept well on the dry side at this season to induce it to set buds.

WHOLESALE florists are obliged to stand an advance of about twenty per cent in the cost of packing cases.

IN view of the continued advances in the cost of all florists' requisites the trade will be justified in a horizontal rise in prices.

GREAT care should be taken now not to overwater poinsettias as, if this caution is not observed, they are very liable to lose their leaves.

AN international chrysanthemum congress will be the last but not least of the horticultural gatherings at the Paris Exposition next year.

THE National Chrysanthemum Society of France has an exhibition in progress at Lyons at which some excellent novelties were expected to be shown.

ACALYPHA MACROPHYLLA and Abutilon Savitzii have been associated with splendid effect in bedding at several parks and cemeteries during the past summer.

A GOOD opening for a florist or grower of vegetables under glass may be found in Rhinelander, Wis., it is said, no one in these lines being located there at present.

LOUIS BRUSCH, secretary of the American Radiator Co., sees no prospect for lower prices of boilers or piping before next fall, with a probability of further advances.

MR. WHITTOCK, for twenty-two years with the Earl of Fitz William at Coolattin, near Dublin, has been appointed to the position of the late Malcolm Dunn at Dalkeith.

CROTONS were a failure as bedding plants at Lincoln Park, Chicago, the past season, but the gardeners attribute this solely to the soil and the proximity to Lake Michigan.

SUPERINTENDENT SMITH, of Mt. Hope Cemetery, San Diego, Cal., finds Phœnix Canariensis excellent for cemetery decoration, the plant producing a mass of foliage without deep roots.

WHILE not equal to some other varieties as to shape of bloom or truss, Canna Souv. d' Antoine Crozy is exceedingly fine for massing and the best colored of the entire Crozy type. Pres. Cleveland is likely to supercede Chicago, being better in all respects. Leonard Vaughan appears to be the best bronze up to date and has the additional advantage of a good truss of fine flowers.

WE send the AMERICAN FLORIST every week to the address of any person in the trade of the United States, Canada and and Mexico for only $1 per year; to all other countries in the postal union $2 per year. Please send your subscription now.

MAYOR MAYBURY, who made such a favorable impression on the florists who attended the S. A. F. convention at Detroit last August, was re-elected November 7. During his administration as chief of the city and that of Harry Balsley, as president of the park commission, there has been done a large amount of effective work in the best interests of horticulture and floriculture.

BOSTON fern owes much of its popularity to the ease with which it adapts itself to house culture. Frequently we see in sitting-room windows specimens equal to the finest conservatory-grown plants and of better color than the average greenhouse product. This would indicate that this plant prefers the deficient light of the dwelling house to the glare of the greenhouse and that shade is an essential for its best development.

The Chrysanthemum.

He is lordly, he is stately;
He is frilled and feathered greatly:
Down the pike no finer specimen was ever seen to come.
Well may lovers of things floral
Sing a laudatory choral
To the honor and the glory of the proud chrysanthemum.

He is elegant and courtly,
He is tall and he is portly;
His deportment is majestic and his manners are refined.
Multitudes bow down before him
And exalt him and adore him,
And unanimously hail him as the monarch of his kind.

This they do with solid reason
For in this autumnal season
All the other floral beauties have been turning up their toes.
The geranium and the lily
Have succumbed to weather chilly
And grim death has claimed the hollyhock, the daisy and the rose.

So alone and independent
Is this autumn flow'r resplendent,
And to look at him you'd fancy that he surely feels his oats.
For his aspect breathes defiance
And distinguished self-reliance
And his general demeanor royal loftiness denotes.

In his raiment rich and splendid
All the rainbow's hues are blended,
With the possible exception of the tints of green and blue.
But such wealth of red and yellow
And of mauve and purple mellow
And of white and cream and piebald nowhere else could greet the view.

So to crown this flow'r's ambition
He is placed on exhibition,
And the populace assembles and is promptly stricken dumb
By the richness and the rareness
And the frilled and feathered fairness
Of that foremost floral exquisite, the proud chrysanthemum.—Pittsburg Leader.

The Palm Swindler Again.

The old bunco game was played upon a florist in the vicinity of Fall River, Mass., on the afternoon of November 3, so a local paper states. On the same day an Englishman, giving the name of Edwin White, aged 25 years, was taken into custody at Providence, R. I., on a charge of having attempted a similar swindle upon a Providence florist. The description of this prisoner is said to correspond closely with that of the party who victimized several florists last year, and it is possible he is the individual for whom the Fall River police are looking. The arrest and conviction of this troublesome swindler will be gratifying news to the florists trade throughout the country.

Canadian Horticultural Association.

The annual convention of the Canadian Horticultural Association for the year 1900 will be held in Montreal in either the first or second week in August; the exact dates will not be decided upon until the meeting of the executive committee next January. It is expected to be the largest gathering of horticulturists which has ever taken place in Canada, and no effort will be spared on the part of the local committee to make the affair a complete success. Efforts will be made to secure the very lowest traveling rates from railway and steamboat companies and to suitably provide for the comfort and entertainment of the members and their ladies while here. It is proposed to make the trade exhibit a feature of the convention. Already inquiries have been received from several firms, both Canadian and American dealers, regarding this feature. The secretary of the C. H. A., A. H. Ewing, Berlin, Ont., will gladly answer all correspondence relating to the association or the coming convention. JAMES MCKENNA.

OBITUARY.

OSCAR SHULZ.

Oscar Shulz, of the firm of Shulz & Smith, of Ivywild, Colorado Springs, Colo., died of heart failure on November 2. Interment was at Evergreen cemetery on the Sabbath.

MRS. ANDREW BRIDGEMAN.

Catharine Wentzel Bridgeman, widow of Andrew Bridgeman, died at Astoria, L. I., on Friday, November 3, aged 80 years. The funeral services were held on Monday at her late residence on Longwood street.

MRS. J. H. TAYLOR.

Mrs. John H. Taylor died at her home in Bayside, N. Y., on Thursday, November 2, after a long and painful illness. The town will miss her greatly, especially the poor and needy, who found in her a benefactor and a friend. She was universally beloved and is sincerely mourned. Mr. Taylor and family have the deep sympathy of their many friends.

FRANK BEAN.

Frank Bean, of Oldensburg, N. Y., died October 29 of lockjaw. Three days previously, while at work in the greenhouses, Mr. Bean stepped on a rusty nail, which ran through his shoe and into his foot. Blood poisoning set in and lockjaw ensued. He was fifty years of age and well known in the trade. His father, Frank Bean, Sr., died two weeks ago, at the age of ninety-six.

MRS. ROBERT JOHNSON.

The demise of Mrs. Johnson, widow of Robert Johnson, is chronicled in the daily press of Providence, R. I. During his life time Mr. Johnson was one of the best known florists in his region and the seven sons surviving are now an important factor in the trade. E. J. Johnson continues the business of his father on Swan Point road, T. J. Johnson is in business at 171 Weybosset street and the Johnson Bros., 228 Westminster street, have a fine establishment.

PETER M. GIDEON.

Peter Gideon, the originator of the Wealthy apple, is dead at Excelsior, Minn. He was born in Ohio in 1820 and, after a brief residence at Clinton Ill., removed to Minnesota in 1853, when there were only a handful of white people at Excelsior. Ever since that time he has been engaged in horticultural research and experiment, the best fruit of which was the Wealthy, named after his wife, Wealthy Hall, whom he married in 1849. This apple has been of inestimable value to the northwest but honor, not riches, are the heritage of his family. Recently it was proposed that orchardists contribute 5 cents for each bearing tree of Wealthy as a testimonial to Mr. Gideon and a substantial sum would doubtless have been realized had he lived.

THOMAS MILLER.

The death of Thomas Miller, almost a centenarian, is reported from St. Johns, N. B., where he was for many years the owner of the greenhouses now conducted by H S. Cruikshank. Mr. Miller was born at Bandon, County Cork, Ireland, in 1806, and moved to New Brunswick at the age of nineteen. In 1857 he built his first greenhouses on the site of the present Cruikshank establishment, the first in St. Johns, which he continued until 1876. The old gentleman had been in failing health for some time but was in complete possession of his faculties and predicted his demise almost to the hour. His only surviving relative is a grandson, Alex. Cruikshank.

WM. H. BROWER.

William Hulse Brower died at his home in Plainfield, N. J., on Friday evening, November 3, aged 73 years. He was born in New York city. When he was quite young his father was accidentally killed and upon him devolved the support of his mother. He went first into the business of carpenter and builder but in 1853 took up the flower business in New York. He was located for some time in the St. Nicholas Hotel but in 1863 moved to the store still occupied by his sons, at the junction of Broadway and Fifth avenue, between twenty-second and twenty-third streets. Some years ago he went into politics and was a candidate on the Republican ticket for county clerk in Union County, N. J., but was declared defeated, although it was afterwards admitted by both parties that he was "counted out." He was married in Poughkeepsie, by the Rev. J. Hyatt Smith who has since that time become widely known. His widow and three sons, John L., Wm. I. and Lorenzo D. survive him. He ceased active work in his flower business some fifteen years ago and his sons have continued it. His death was caused by Bright's disease, his illness having lasted but five days, although for the past four years his health has been precarious. Mr. Brower was a very affable gentleman, quiet in demeanor but withal a shrewd business man. He made friends easily and kept them and no one was ever known to say a disparaging word regarding him. One of the pioneers in the New York flower trade, he was in every respect a credit to his business.

S. J. REUTER, Westerly, R. I.

Peoria, Ill.

C. Loveridge, who for the past ten years has had charge of J. C. Murray's greenhouses, has recently embarked in business for himself. His four houses, each 25x125, are models of their kind. As an all-around grower he is pre-eminently successful and one need but take a glance at his Beauties, Brides, Bridesmaids and Perles, his Portias, Scotts and McGowans, to arrive at the conclusion that success is in store for the enterprise. In addition to the greenhouses Mr. Loveridge has a well appointed store at 321 Main street in charge of T. Lockyear.

Geo. A. Kuhl has moved from his old stand into a larger and more commodious store. It was my pleasure to go through his greenhouses at Pekin and what I beheld there might be compared with the best I have seen during my recent travels. Although roses and carnations are his specialties, a general stock for both his Peoria and Pekin stores is also grown.

ORCHIDS. VALLEY... FERNS.....

TWO TENDENCIES have recently made their appearance in modern commercial life.

Specialization.

Direct dealing.

By specializing and confinining his energies to one or two lines of products, the producer finds that he can put forth a better article than his competitor.

By direct dealing with the producer, the consumer finds he can get a better article at the price of an inferior one.

THE special products of the Rosebank Nurseries are Orchids, Valley and Ferns.

The Orchids are the best in the market, both in point of variety freshness and beauty of bloom. Cattleyas, 50c.; others, 15c. per bloom.

The Valley, of an especially high grade, is offered on yearly contract at $3 per 100; on single orders, at $3.50.

The Ferns (Adiantum), unequalled in freshness, size and strength of fronds, are sold at the regular price of $1 per 100. ☙ ☙ These special products are sold direct to the retail florist.

THE SEED TRADE.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

ALEXANDER RODGERS, Pres; ALBERT MCCULLOUGH, Vice-Pres; S. F. WILLARD, Wethersfield Conn., Sec'y and Treas.

WEATHER continues generally favorable for curing the sweet corn crop.

VISITING NEW YORK: Mr. and Mrs. S. Y. Haines, Minneapolis, Minn.

INSURANCE matters in connection with S. F. Leonard's loss are reported progressing favorably.

THE onion set market is expected to advance following the heavy loss in Leonard's warehouse.

ONION seed prices are very unsettled and still keep most of the trade guessing. Eastern growers have had a phenomenal sale on it during the past three weeks.

Scene at Leonard's Warehouse.

The accompanying illustration shows the ruins of the S. F. Leonard warehouse, Chicago, three days after the great disaster of November 1. Four bodies were taken from the wreck, at the right of the picture, where the arc light hangs, and fire raged for nearly a week in the tangled mass of timbers. Mr. Leonard's financial loss was in no wise overestimated in the first reports but he has now secured new quarters and hopes to soon be in a position to fill all orders.

The Melon Disease in Iowa.

Some years ago Dr. Erwin F. Smith, of the United States Department of Agriculture, described a common disease of cucurbits which was due to a species of bacterium. This disease is characterized by a sudden wilting of the leaves. Plants which had appeared normal suddenly wilt and droop. A plant so wilted never recovers. So far as my observation goes on Muscatine Island all the plants of a hill usually succumb to this trouble, although in some cases occasionally only one stalk may be affected. The bacteria responsible for this disease occur in the large vessels (cells) and owing to the large number of these bacteria in the vessels it received the special name of Bacillus tracheiphilus. This particular organism destroys the plant because of the large number of bacteria which are found in its vessels.

This particular melon trouble seems to be quite widely distributed in the United States. Dr. Sturgis of the Connecticut Agricultural Experiment Station says that this is actually the disease which, for the past five years at least, has destroyed a large percentage of the melon vines in Connecticut, without a doubt. "Continuous observation in the field, in three separate localities, during the past season, convinces me that the chief source of trouble was the bacterial organism above mentioned. A plant wilts suddenly without apparent cause." In this state I have only had occasion to examine the fields on Muscatine Island but I have information to the effect that this disease occurs between Columbus Junction and West Liberty where considerable areas are devoted to the cultivation of melons. I have likewise heard complaints of the disease in central Iowa. It is very evident from the studies which have been made on Muscatine Island that the disease increases from year to year. For instance, Mrs. Alice Walton Beatty pointed out to me fields in which there had been very little the year previous but this year nearly one-half of the crop was ruined. The disease appears, further, to be on the increase on the island both on the upland and lower portions. It is very evident that something must be done to prevent its further and continuous spread.

The Muscatine Island planters frequently resort to rotation of crops but it is a short rotation; for instance, the melons are rotated with corn. One year rotation is evidently not sufficient, at least from the experience of the Muscatine growers. I think probably, however, that not sufficient care is used to destroy the old dead vines and weeds which remain on the fields. These should be gathered together in the fall and burned. The usual practice, of course, is to turn these under without giving particular attention to hygienic methods. A second point, and this is very important, the persons cultivating should use care and judgment in the method of tillage. They should not, for instance, pass from a diseased field to one that is not diseased with the same cultivator. It would seem to the writer that the people of Muscatine Island should begin to carry on a more systematic method of rotation of crops. I would strongly urge the growing of such crops as winter rye and asparagus, other garden vegetables, like cabbage, and finally melons. Of course the asparagus will not lend itself to short crop rotation but cabbage, radishes and that class of vegetables can easily enter into a crop rotation. Then it would seem very advisable to grow more extensively leguminous plants like the soy bean and cow pea. Both of these would make admirable forage plants. The farmers must resort to a change if they desire to attain success in the growing of melons. I think there need be no particular alarm if these facts are borne in mind.

Ames, Iowa. L. H. PAMMEL.

THE NURSERY TRADE.

AM. ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.
W. J. PETERS, Pres.; D. S. LAKE, Vice-Pres.; GEORGE C. SEAGER, Rochester, N. Y., Sec'y.

PRICES of nursery stock have stiffened all along the line.

THE demand for ornamentals has been large this fall.

MANY florists will handle nursery stock for next spring's planting.

THERE are immense possibilities for development in our native plums.

THERE seems to be very little surplus either of fruit or ornamental stock.

LAST winter's experience discouraged many people as regards fall planting.

ALL first-class fruit tree stock will doubtless be cleaned up next spring.

THE Charlton is making for itself a place in the favor of those most competent to judge of grapes.

STEPHEN HOYT'S SONS, New Canaan, Conn., report an increased business over the past two seasons.

THE call upon Florida nurseries seems to indicate returning confidence in the future of orange culture.

L. J. FARMER, Pulaski, N. Y., has a promising new strawberry which he has named the Rough Rider.

NURSERYMEN should give attention to the matter of codling moth; orchardists should be educated to spray their trees.

ONE hundred thousand barrels of apples and pears were lost in the Chicago market during the recent week of hot weather.

THE sale of apple trees has been the heaviest in years and prices are firm. Cherry stock is also higher because of scarcity.

H. C. IRISH says that the American Nurserymen's Association has done more for the everlasting benefit of fruit growers than has any other agency.

THE annual meeting of the Fruit Growers' Association of Ontario will be held at Whitby, December 5 and 6. L. Wolverton, Grimsby, is secretary.

ROLAND MORRILL, of Benton Harbor, Mich., who is well known to all horticulturists, this year sold $35,000 worth of peaches from a fifty-acre tract.

MANY dealers advise the planting of one year old trees, deeming them equally as good as older stocks, even when the latter are not so scarce as at present.

Indianapolis.

A DULL MARKET.—CHRYSANTHEMUMS IN WHITE AND YELLOW SUFFER MOST.—THE TRADE IS OPTIMISTIC.—JOTTINGS HERE AND THERE.

For the last two weeks an abundance of flowers of all kinds, with very little demand has been the prevailing condition in this city. Abnormally warm weather brought out chrysanthemums in a hurry and the result is low prices all along the line and a surplus here and there. White and yellow chrysanthemums and the medium grade of roses suffered most. Violets also were very plentiful for awhile, but the supply of pink and bronze chrysanthemums, first grade roses and carnations was at no time in excess of the demand. Notwithstanding the fact that the market at present is just as dull as at the corresponding time last year, florists generally are taking an optimistic view of the coming season.

About 2,000 feet of glass have been added to the greenhouse area in Indianapolis this year. This is almost exclusively used for cut flowers, which shows that our growers still attach vastly more importance to cut flowers than to pot plants. Carnations are still growing in favor with many florists; not only is the largest part of the new glass area devoted to them but they, in many instances, replace roses.

The Bertermann Floral Co. will have its opening next week, upon which occasion all customers will be presented with a pretty little souvenir.

Bert Stanley, whose skillful landscape gardening has been admired by many, has severed his connection with Fairbanks.

The violet gall fly has again appeared in this vicinity; this time John Hartje is the victim.

A party of Indianapolis florists intend visiting the Chicago chrysanthemum show.

E. H. Giesy, of the Lockland Lumber Co., has been in the city this week.

For the first time Acalypha Sanderi is seen in quantity here. The public has christened it the "Monkey tail plant."

H. JUNGE.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo.—Extensive improvements, including new heating apparatus, are in progress at the greenhouses at Krug Park. Superintendent Rau will shortly have a fine chrysanthemum show.

JOHN DEAMUD says the Chicago florists should have a gun club and he is now in training for the first shoot.

THE Montreal Gardeners' and Florists' Club has inaugurated a series of contests at the exhilarating game of euchre.

At New York.

The regular club night on Monday, November 6, brought out a fair-sized and very jolly crowd at the Fifty-seventh street alleys. Alex. Burns brought with him the new ball recently won and was generous enough to allow everyone who pleased, to use it, expressing some misgivings, however, that some of the lower grade artists might teach the ball bad habits. He is giving it nightly lessons in cross-alley practice and expects eventually to make, in combination with it, after it gets trained down fine, an invincible record:

New York Defeats Flatbush.

The deciding game of the series between these two aggregations came off in Brooklyn on Saturday night, Novemher 4, on "neutral alleys." The first game was played with five men on each side, owing to late arrival of two players. It was a nice win for Flatbush and the New Yorkers were correspondingly dejected. Then something happened that was not down on the programme and which, had it happened elsewhere, say in Philadelphia, would have been deemed sufficient grounds for a claim of foul, for a big black cat coursed across the alleys and immediately the New York score took on a very different aspect and Flatbush went to pieces. The score below tells the tale of woe:

NEW YORK	1st	2d	3d	FLATBUSH	1st	2d	3d
Burns	128	139	115	Riley	156	117	146

Chicago Defeats Milwaukee.

There was much animation on Anson's alleys last Wednesday evening, when the Milwaukee bowlers succumbed to the Chicago team. The contest was to be decided in favor of the winner of two in three games, but Chicago won all three by a margin of 338. For the home bowlers Geo. Asmus made high score with 190 and best average with 170, while Wm. Edlefsen rolled the best game for Milwaukee, scoring 178, with an average of 150. The scores in detail follow:

MILWAUKEE.

Autumn at Miami, Fla.

With autumn rains comes added beauty of foliage and abundance of buds and bloom. Cannas seem to shoot up in a night and their great bouquets of flowers almost bend the stalk. America is now six feet high, with great branches of its odd-colored flowers and rich foliage almost black. Florence Vaughan, Surprise, Duke of Marlborough and several others are almost as tall, while we begin to wonder where Austria is going to stop. Little Florida is very dwarf but produces an abundance of bloom equal to its taller companions.

Canna flaccida, our native species and one of the parents of Italy and Austria, planted near the latter varieties, holds its own for beauty of flower, fine foliage and abundance of bloom. Nothing could be prettier than its orchid-like flowers of an exquisite shade of yellow.

Clerodendron fragrans fills the air with its rich perfume, the plants being loaded with its great trusses of pretty white flowers. It is well named. The royal poincianas are done blooming; only their beautiful foliage is to be seen now. This is one of the most beautiful of trees, but, as it always blooms in June and July, is never seen in its greatest beauty by the winter tourists. But the dwarf variety does not have this fault. There are two varieties of the dwarf Poinciana pulcherrima. One has orange and red flowers, the other clear yellow flowers, and they grow and bloom the whole year and seem as much at home here as in their native place.

Truck gardening is the topic and business of the day here now. Tomatoes are being set in lots of from one acre to 100 acres. Egg plants are in bloom; as this is below the frost line, this fruit will be shipped from here all winter. Cucumbers are being planted, also sweet peppers in acre lots. If Jack Frost don't get out of his usual latitude this winter there will be thousands of car loads of vegetables shipped from this country.

This is a great winter tourists' city, the season beginning about January 10, at the opening of the Royal Palm Hotel, and closing about April 10. Dickerson & Belden, the florists, are preparing for the cut flower trade, having built slat houses (we don't need glass houses here) and have planted out carnations, roses, smilax, asparagus and other stock.

There is a United States experiment station here and several hundred Bermuda lily bulbs have been sent down for experiment. It is thought these bulbs can be successfully propagated in our rich hummock land. All varieties of crinums and amaryllises grow and increase here with little or no care.

Dickerson & Belden have just received several thousand Pancratium Caribæum bulbs from one of the Keys. They are a clean, well shaped lot of bulbs, and as they are winter bloomers should be very popular as a pot plant. The foliage is handsome, making the plant an ornament even when not crowned with its great bouquets of snowy, fragrant flowers. POINCIANA.

MONTCLAIR, N. J.—A. D. Rose made a fine showing of chrysanthemums November 8 to 11 and attracted many visitors.

ELMORE, O.—H. W. Rymers has just completed an addition 8x60 for propagating purposes. It is heated by a coil eight feet long placed beside the tubular boiler.

Kift's Adjustable Hanging Flower Vase and Plant Holder.

Ornamental, practical and useful; just the thing for short-stemmed flowers such as violets, orchids, valley, etc. Indispensable for show window and house decorations. The clasps are adjustable and can be placed in any position or angle. The fixture is made of solid brass, heavily nickel-plated and is practically indestructible. A larger size for five to six-inch potted plants, such as Adiantum Farleyense, Cyclamens, etc., shows these plants to the best possible advantage.

Kift's Individual Cut Flower Vase...

A pointed glass tube fitted with a perforated rubber cap, through which the stem of the flower is placed. The cap holds the vase and the flower firmly together and prevents the escape of water in the tube, no matter at what angle it is placed. Useful for keeping flowers when sprayed on dinner tables, for basket handles, for orchid sprays which can be inserted in pots of Farleyense, etc., and is useful for hosts of decorative effects.

TRADE IS DULL. — SURPLUSES IN MANY LINES.—SCARCITY OF BEAUTIES.—PLANS FOR THE SHOW.—THE SHAW BANQUET. —BOWLING.

The condition of trade is not as satisfactory as last week and there is not enough business to exhaust the supply of flowers that is being brought into this market. Chrysanthemums, of course, are the favorite flowers now but the very choice varieties are the only ones that sell well; $3 per dozen is the price. Other grades are sold at $1.50 to $2. Some of the best blooms that are seen could be classed as show stock. The roses that are coming in are of an improved quality and the best sell at $5 per 100, the glut being in Brides and Bridesmaids; these are selling in job lots at $10 per 1000. Only a few good Beauties are to be had without sending out of town. This is a good market for fine Beauties, as they are always in good demand. Violets have been in favor the past week and Californias were scarce; small single are more plentiful but not so much called for. Carnations sell well and the bulk of them are unsurpassed in quality. Dayhreak and Scott are very fine. Whites have had poor sale while good reds are scarce; the bulk of them sell at $1 per 100, some extra fancies going as high as $2. The cause of so many white carnations being on hand is that the dealers use small white chrysanthemums because they are cheaper, but they do not make the work look so good. Lily of the valley is very fine now and has a pretty fair sale at $4 to $5. Romans have not made their appearance yet, though some are expected by next week and will command a good stiff price.

The committees in charge of the approaching exhibition at the coliseum is doing very effective work. Everything will be in readiness by the hour of opening on November 14, and judging from the system which prevails in all the preparations, the show will be a grand success. Emil Schray will again have charge of the books and the management of the show will, as usual, be in the hands of J. J. Beneke. A better pair of workers could not be found. All the members of the club should lend a helping hand and relieve the managers of some of the burden that rests on their shoulders.

The annual Shaw banquet to florists, nurserymen and gardeners takes place Saturday night, November 18, at the Mercantile Club. This is the closing night of the show and is an inconvenient date for some of the guests.

The bowlers are having a good time these cool evenings. The older club bowls on Monday night at the new alleys and the juniors roll on Tuesday night at the old alleys at Sixth and Pine streets. I was in hopes to see a match game by this time between the two clubs but nothing has come of it as yet.

S. S. Skidelsky, representing several eastern firms, was in town recently.

LOUISIANA.

AVONDALE, Pa.— W. R. Shelmire, formerly in business here, has taken a position with Robert Simpson, Clifton, N. J.

DALLAS, TEX.—Business is picking up and American Beauties are in great demand, being shipped in from Chicago, St. Louis and Pleasant Hill, Mo. Recently Ernst Nitsche supplied 4,000 Beauties on an order occasioned by the opening of Linz Bros.' jewelry store.

Olympia...

THE FINEST OF ALL NEW CARNATIONS FOR 1900. Admiral Dewey's Flag-Ship, THE OLYMPIA, is the most popular boat afloat, and this grand flower, its namesake, will certainly be the most popular variety ever introduced. Its distinctive merits are:

SIZE: The largest variety ever introduced.

FORM: The ideal, the lower petals averaging 1¾ inches in width; smooth edges, with the center well built up.

COLOR: A beautiful glossy white, with delicate pencilings of clear scarlet running through the petals, but much less red in it than in Mrs. G. M. Bradt, and without the objectionable features of that variety, making it the most beautiful variegated variety ever introduced.

FRAGRANCE: Is delicately sweet.

STEM: Under ordinary circumstances is 2 to 2½ feet, strong enough to carry its heavy flower.

KEEPING QUALITIES: Are unsurpassed.

FREEDOM OF FLOWERING: Tested alongside of Mrs. Bradt for two seasons, it has produced 28% more flowers in the seasons.

ITS HABIT: Is strong and vigorous and a continuous producer, lasting in good condition long after the hot weather in spring has practically ruined the quality of Mrs. Bradt.

CONSTITUTION: It is free from disease of any kind.

It has received seven certificates and the highest commendations wherever exhibited. Extra strong well rooted cuttings ready from February 15th, 1900, and onward at, $2.00 per doz., $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1,000. 25 at 100 Rates; 250 at 1,000 rates.

Orders now being booked which will be filled in strict rotation.

I can also furnish early stock of THE MARQUIS and MRS. THOMAS W. LAWSON, at advertised rates.

Helpful Reminders.

Planting bulbs outside for your customers and inside for cutting must be put off no longer. A bulb bed should be deeply dug, in rich soil of such texture as not to become hard, so that water will quickly pass through to the subsoil. Saturated soil next to bulbs is detrimental. The conditions are always most suitable as soon as the forest trees shed their foliage, as they do after a good October rain. This we have had; get your bulbs in immediately and cover the beds with dried leaves fastened by laying on some long straw with a few cords drawn across. Do not press the covering down. It will protect the bulbs from early frosts, insuring time for rooting well, after which they freeze more or less, the covering preventing the sun from thawing them out before you wish, holding them in cold storage, as it were. In preparing bulbs for inside growth, keep the same conditions in mind, whether putting in flats or pots. Have them spread out on grouud that will keep them moist and with a covering that will husband up the warmth and moisture of the soil below.

Do not forget that Spanish iris is very beautiful and the bulbs are inexpensive. For April, May and June blooming, no orchid will surpass them. Plant one inch apart in flats set on the ground outside; cover with three inches of soil and two feet of straw. Do not bring the first batch into the house before February and do not give them more than 45° of heat, for they must come slowly. Those which you bring in during March and April may have 50° to 55°; the last batch leave outside to bloom.

Cypripedium insigne is now ready to make flower buds. A few put into 60° of heat will come in nicely for Christmas; for later blooming hold them in a cooler house.

Be sure you have plenty of good potting soil on hand to go through the winter. C. B. W.

EFFICIENCY

There are fakirs in the Smilax business too.

DEAR SIR:—When the plea of light expense which is so often used in cautioning Smilax buyers against the man who has built packing houses and telephone lines to further his business, the Peddler or Fakir is found to be the ideal, while the man with all improvements in his line of business, is the man to be avoided.

IT'S USELESS TO DENY IT.

I am under heavy expenses, but when my esteemed competitors advertise the fact I believe they really help me.

From my point of view expense is another name for efficiency. For instance, I have the only packing house built especially for this line of trade; I have double the number of employes of any of my competitors, but I submit these facts as a guarantee of better service.

I would like to have you visit my offices and see what my expense would do for you in the case of a rush order.

I may never have the pleasure of seeing you, but you can test my efficiency by sending your orders for honest packed, clean, crisp cases of Smilax at $2 per case to Yours truly,

CALDWELL, The Woodsman, EVERGREEN, ALA.

P. S.—Five cases and less go out same day order is received. Larger orders twenty-four hours grace expected. Our beautiful art catalogue now ready.

ANNOUNCEMENT

Owing to the phenomenal sale of Liberty, I am compelled to announce that all orders coming in after this date can only be filled in April or later, my stock for March delivery being all sold. The Grand New Rose LIBERTY!

Most nearly approached by Meteor in color, but far surpassing that standard variety in brilliancy and purity of color, as well as in size, never showing any deformed, black or bull heads, either in winter or summer, and far surpassing Meteor in freedom of bloom. A remarkable keeper when cut, keeping its brilliancy of color without turning blue or dropping its petals, as is the case with Gen. Jacqueminot, which it somewhat resembles in size and fragrance.

I hereby extend a cordial invitation to all lovers of the Queen of Flowers to come and see Liberty growing

AUTUMN LITTLE IN EVIDENCE AT THE COLORADO METROPOLIS.—STATE OF THE MARKET.—PROSPEROUS SEASON USHERED IN BY FALL CARNIVAL.

Jack Frost was never so slow with his nips, walking by with his hands in his pockets, as it were, and only showing a tight breath from his nostrils, touching tender things and skipping halt hardy verdure. Chrysanthemums are, of course, the proper things for decorations for the next six weeks and are abundant and good. Carnations are scarce, not sufficient to supply the demand, while roses go a-begging, as they always do during the chrysanthemum season.

Our fall carnival opens the gay season here, the leading feature being the ball of the Silver Serpents which was given in the Broadway Theatre. The Gallup Floral Co. outdid themselves in the decorations this year, using American Beauty and a profusion of southern smilax and palms. The winter bids fair to be a gay one and the stock of the florists will not go begging. Autumn leaves and fall colors have been much in favor but these will soon give place to the usual winter stock. DESMOINES, IA.—The J. M. Clark Co. incorporated with $10,000 capital to manufacture wire frames.

MALDEN, MASS.—E. D. Kaulback is adding the recently purchased Taylor greenhouses, at Melrose, to his establishment here.

BROCKVILLE, ONT.—J. Hay & Sons gave a chrysanthemum "at home" on November 9, 10 and 11 at their greenhouses at King and Bethune streets. There were many guests.

Are You Ready for the Christmas Rush?

THIS YEAR'S BUSINESS WILL BREAK THE RECORD. Look your stock over; don't wait until the week before. Now is the time. We have a full line of everything, the best in Florists' Supplies, which only awaits your order and selection to suit the special demands of your trade. You will need Immortelles—our special "Holly Red" is the correct color. Get a case at once and work them up. Don't forget the Moss Wreaths; they are great sellers when dotted thickly with Red Immortelles.

Increase your line of Pot Covers. They are sure to go with the plants at Christmas.

Have you tried Plant Baskets? Fill a pot for your holiday trade, tie a cluster of flowers on the handle with ribbon, and you will be surprised how they will sell. They were the special feature last Christmas in the large cities.

Try a few of our Violet Hampers; they will go quickly.

Keep up your stock of Wheat Sheaves. Our sheaves are the standard the country over. Also White Immortelles, Cape Flowers, Doves, Prepared Palm Leaves; all these you need every day.

No matter what you need in our line we can supply you as our catalogue will show; to be had for the asking.

Warren, O.

George W. Gaskill, who has been ill since early in June is now able to be around but his clothes are not as tight as he would like to have them and he is not as strong as before he was compelled to live on milk. The tenth annual chrysanthemum show at Gaskill's greenhouses will take place next week. Neither plants nor cut blooms were ever in better shape than now. Trade is not very brisk and everybody has a surplus in nearly all lines.

A. T. Hoyt has completed his new houses and is now finishing the heating and ventilating apparatus, both of which are excellent. They are, of course, his own inventions.

John Adgate is cutting some very fine carnations; this flower is his specialty.

FRANKFORT, KY.—Munich & Craik have just completed a carnation house, a violet house and a palm house and are nicely equipped for good business.

LENOX, MASS.,—The annual chrysanthemum show of the Lenox Horticultural Society was held at Sedgwick Hall on Saturday evening, November 3. The display was unusually large and for general excellence it was pronounced the best exhibition the society has yet held.

HOLLY...
Vaughan's XXX Brand.

DOUBLE INSPECTION
By our own employees, once at the woods, and again when shipped from our stores.

THE Holly situation changes nearly every year. For the last four years they've begun to bring it into the country towns like potatoes. Every man has taken to cutting his own—or some other man's Holly, and packs it well, badly or indifferently, or any old way. The result is very bad for the retail florist. When we first started the Holly business, in 1880, our buyer contracted for a man's grove and cut the best and sorted it himself, and established Vaughan's XXX Stock as a brand worth having. Some years it has been the best in the Market; all years it has been as good as any, its average is high, but we wondered why so many culls would show up when we inspected our car lots (to sell to peddlers at half rates) and last fall our Mr. Vaughan located this town market Holly system, and cut it off from our man. We are buying and packing our Holly in the woods ourselves, and it costs more money, but it is worth to the retailer a lot more than it costs. A good case of Holly is easily worth Ten Dollars while cull stock can't be given away.

We can suggest delivery dates which will keep you in good supply on the best days for selling Holly. Our prices are not advanced. How much can you use?

OCTOBER TRADE WAS GREAT.—STATE OF THE MARKET.—POPULAR CARNATIONS.—A WEDDING.—MOVES OF THE GROWERS. AND VARIOUS JOTTINGS.

Trade has been remarkably good during October and we hear of no complaints. Roses are in good supply and worth from $3 to $4 per hundred at wholesale, retailing at $1 per dozen. Beauties are in brisk demand, the best retailing at $5. Carnations are still in short crop. A great many seconds and culls are to be seen. Flora Hill seems to be the leading white, Jubilee for red, Triumph and Victor for pink, with Mrs. Bradt for fancy. Daybreak still retains its popularity and is by many considered the most profitable carnation grown. Violets of fair quality are now in and meet with ready sale at 35 cents per bunch of twenty-five. Chrysanthemums are abundant, of good quality and in fair favor, though top-notch prices have not yet been obtained. In pink Rose Owen has been the leader. Merry Monarch and Yellow Monarch have done fairly well but Golden Harvest has been a great disappointment, as the petals drop so easily. Bouquet green has made its appearance and plays a very prominent part in a large store decoration executed by E. F. Lemke.

Cupid has invaded the florists ranks in this city and claimed as a victim Olaf Olsen, of Holm & Olsen, who was quietly married some two or three weeks since.

A. H. Bunde has rented his houses on the Hudson road to Mr. Miller and moved into the city, where he is erecting two new houses. Mr. Miller will grow vegetables for early market. FELIX.

We are now booking orders for the four following sensational New Carnations, in which the whole trade is already interested. All orders are to be filled in strict rotation. Get your orders in early; note date of dissemination. Each of the four has already met a very large sale. Fuller particulars given in regard to any point on which a customer wishes fuller information.

MRS. THOS. LAWSON { Ready after Feb. 1. $14 per 100; $120 per 1000

Largest pink variety to date; too well advertised to need description here.

OLYMPIA { Ready Feb. 15th. $12 per 100; $100 per 1000.

The queen of Flakes: snow white, lightly penciled scarlet; less red in it than in Mrs. Bradt, and produces 28% more flowers, as demonstrated by Mr. May last season. The largest variety ever introduced. We have 1600 plants growing; come and see it.

ETHEL CROCKER { Ready in January. $10 per 100; $75 per 1000.

Color: A deeper, brighter Mrs. Joost; pure pink.
Calyx: Strong.
Stem: 24 to 30 inches; strong and stiff but not ungraceful.
Freedom: Will produce more long stemmed, full sized blooms than any variety grown to-day.
Size: 3 to 3½ inches.
Habit: No useless grass; every shoot a flower producer.
Fragrance: Clove-like.
Constitution: Strong and healthy.

A BUSINESS CARNATION FOR BUSINESS GROWERS. Notwithstanding the fact that there were other pink carnations in sight, we were so impressed with the value of Ethel Crocker, as seen growing, that we did not hesitate paying a good round price for the control of the stock. We have a very large stock of it; come and see it. It can also be seen growing in large quantity with A. M. Herr and Robt. Craig.

THE MARQUIS { Ready in March and April. $10 per 100; $75 per 1000.

True pink, soft and rich; form exceptionally perfect, of the very largest size; stems strong, 2 to 3 feet; fragrant; keeps well; very free; a continuous bloomer.

THE EARLIEST YELLOW CHRYSANTHEMUM

Ready to Cut September 25th to October 10th.

YELLOW FITZWYGRAM { $7 per 100; $60 per 1000 (200 at 1000 rate.)

Every grower has long wanted a Yellow and a Pink to sell with his Early White; here is your yellow (we live in hopes of the early pink.)
It is dwarf, and stiff stemmed—2½ ft.; requires no staking.
Precedes all other yellows by 2 to 3 weeks.
The color is rich, and this variety has developed a stronger habit and freer foliage than its parent, the white Lady Fitzwygram.
It bears close planting, but must be started early so that the bud can be taken about July 25—not later.
We have this fall marketed the product a 190-foot bench of it, at $2.00 per dozen for the main crop, and $1.50 per dozen for the shorter stems.
We have an enormous stock of it and are prepared to furnish young plants by February 1, or sooner, at a price within the reach of every one of our customers.

Cyclamen Giganteum.

Finest strain grown.
Very fine stock, 4-inch pots, Separate colors, white, pink, red. } $12 per 100.

....A NEW....

Carnation

...Ethel Crocker...

In spite of the fact that this carnation has some worthy competitors in the field, it is offered as "The Best Pink Carnation in Sight."

In color and stem it is the storemen's ideal and just right. These two points you will have a chance to see for yourself at the shows this winter.

It produces good first class flowers from the day it is planted in the fall, until thrown out the next summer, with practically no seconds during the whole season.

It produces more flowers than any other known variety, and produces them every day, from the day it is planted until thrown out, and not in crops.

A neat clean grower with an iron-clad constitution, and the fact that there are eighteen-thousand plants to take cuttings from is an assurance that it will not be ruined by over propagation.

Perhaps its best recommendation is the fact that Craig, Hill and myself were willing to jointly purchase the variety at a good round figure on the strength of its behavior with me last winter.

It can be seen growing at any of our places and does equally well at all three. This fact shows that it is not a grand thing in one soil and a very doubtful one in another, as our soils differ widely.

Parties desiring early cuttings can have them early in January and orders will be filled for any date named thereafter, so that you will not have to wait until planting out time for your stock.

I solicit your orders and shall personally attend to the taking of the cuttings and filling of all orders, a point worth your consideration and especially so in a novelty.

Send for Circular.

SPECIALTIES FOR THE SOUTH.—CALADIUMS DO WELL.—A FINE LOT OF SEEDLINGS.—WARM WEATHER AND CHRYSANTHEMUMS.—TALK OF A SPRING SHOW.

In one of my recent letters I said something about the particular adaptability of our climate for palm growing. I might also have included some bulbs and, above all, caladiums. George Thomas, head gardener for Charles Whitney, has a large lot of variegated caladium seedlings on the benches of his greenhouse and they are an evidence of his ability. They are only three months from the seeds but are already in 4-inch pots. The leaves are quite transparent and have beautiful colorings. They have been hybridized and pollinated with the greatest care and will, no doubt, prove valuable.

The weather is very favorable to our chrysanthemums and had last winter not been so severe, killing most of the plants outside, we should certainly have had a very large yield in good shape for November business. At present it is so warm that we cannot yet tell just what we may expect.

Nothing has as yet been decided in regard to a flower show next spring but at the approaching meeting of our floricultural society there will be some discussion if no action on the subject.

The Latania is largely used for purposes of decoration. Although its place has, in a measure, been taken by the Kentia, it still is in lively demand. Our stock is in a fine, clean condition. We have now growing for next year's trade not less than 100,000 of these desirable palms.

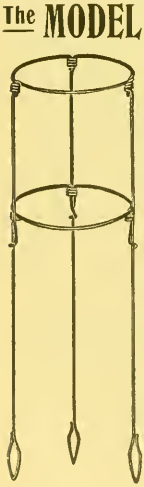
Lynn, Mass.

After the recent severe cold snap we have enjoyed a decidedly warm spell. It seems a pity that one night sandwiched in should have cut down everything at a time when plants are even more beautiful than usual.

Gibb's Bros. report trade very good at their down town store. They are cutting a fine crop of chrysanthemums and are disposing of them at fair prices.

William Miller & Sons have their usual good display of chrysanthemums and are cutting some really fine ones grown to single stems. Their carnations this fall are better than ever and promise a fine crop for the holidays. Frances Joost and Mrs. Bradt are being grown quite heavily this season.



W. B. Thompson is enjoying a good trade on palms, ferns and other house plants. TAP.

ANDERSON, IND.—J. S. Stuart, of Stuart & Haugh, is reported dangerously ill.

LOUISVILLE, KY.—The leading florists did not propose that this city should be outdone this week in the matter of a flower show. Both Nanz & Neuner and Jacob Schulz have made very good displays and have welcomed many visitors.

MILWAUKEE, WIS. — The municipal chrysanthemum show is on at Mitchell Park Conservatories where foreman F. A. Gerlach has some forty varieties in bloom, all grown as bush plants and standards; there are no single stems in the collection.

The MODEL Extension Carnation Support.

LANCASTER, PA., June 17, '99.
MR. THERON PARKER, Brooklyn, N. Y.
Dear Sir:—Your Model Carnation Support is all right in every way and will no doubt be considered as necessary as good plants with growers when better known. I consider it the best on the market, and if your other specialties are equally as good, they should make another addition to the money makers of 1900. Respectfully,
ALBERT M. HERR.

W. HOBOKEN, N. J., Feb. 18, '97.
MR. THERON PARKER,
Dear Sir;—It gives me much pleasure to congratulate you upon your success in getting up carnation supports. I think that those I have had from you are about as perfect as anybody will be able to make them. They certainly fill my bill for an ideal carnation support, a thing I have been looking for a long time. Wishing ery success in the sale of them, I am

"Indispensable"

THIS is the only word which describes the American Florist Company's Trade Directory. This book, 359 pages of facts tersely told, is issued annually and is an aid to business and money making which no wholesaler or traveling salesman can afford to be without. It contains the name of every Florist, Nurseryman and Seedsman, arranged both by states and towns and alphabetically. It will save many times its cost by enabling you to cover America with your catalogue and at the same time waste no printed matter or postage on dead names.

The warm weather has had a bad effect on trade and stock is coming in faster than the market demands. Chrysanthemums are in good supply and are selling fairly well. Robinson, Mrs. O. P. Bassett, Adele, Ivory, Viviand-Morel, Bonnaffon, Yellow Queen and Modesto are the better varieties now available. Carnations are in sufficient quantity to meet the demand and, saving rather short stems, are all right. Roses are a little overplentiful and are not benefited by the present warm spell. Violets are the greatest sufferers and many growers are experiencing bad doses of spot.

Patrick Gormley has the sympathy of all in the recent death of his wife.

A. H. L.

Williamsport, Pa.

Evenden Bros. have recently completed the erection of two short-span-to-the-south greenhouses, each 16x155 feet. One is planted with Scott carnations and the other with Princess of Wales violets in solid beds. These latter are doing remarkably well, the clumps are from fifteen to eighteen inches across and are covered with flowers, many of which are extra large. Their two large carnation houses are a splendid sight; the plants are of a large size and just commencing to bloom. They are full of buds and the quality of the flowers promises to be above the average. Chrysanthemums in pots are extensively grown and are in good shape. The plants are short and stocky. Their roses and palms also look well.

HIGH GRADE

Lily of the Valley Pips

My first shipment of Valley Pips, for early forcing will arrive about November the 20th. Having inspected my stock personally this summer, I am confident it will be of the highest grade and give the best satisfaction. They are strong pips and well rooted, and to introduce them more, I will sell them at the low figure of $9.00 to $11.00 per 1000.

Fancy Valley in Bloom

I have always been regarded as headquarters for Valley, particularly the finest. I am more than ever in the same position and invite everybody to view my stock as I have constantly the finest and largest lot in bloom.

E. & C. Woodman have everything going smoothly and trade is very fair. A fine crop of chrysanthemums is now on. These are grown several blooms to a plant instead of single stem. A line about this concern would be incomplete without a word of praise for its magnificent office and show house. They are complete in every detail. Violets are in fine shape, Lady Hume Campbell being the only one grown. Carnations are doing well and at present scarcely any rust is to be seen throughout this section.

Cyclamen!

are among the very best of flowering plants for home adornment. No flowering plant is more satisfactory than is this for window gardening. I have known flowers to remain perfect on Cyclamen for six whole weeks. This statement is not a mere guess, but is the result of an actual experiment.

We have a few more plants left, ready for repotting into either 4 or 5-inch pots.

Nothing can give more satisfaction as a Christmas gift than a Cyclamen. Now is the proper time to be getting them into good shape for that gay and festive occasion.

BUSINESS REASONABLY SATISFACTORY.—FINE CHRYSANTHEMUMS IN MARKET.—GOOD DISPLAYS IN THE WINDOWS.—MAID OF HONOR GIVES SATISFACTION.

Business has been tolerably good the past week and the Sixth Street Flower Market assumed quite a different aspect from that of a few weeks ago. Chrysanthemums, both pot plants and cut flowers, moved quickly owing to All Saints' day. Every one in the market seemed to be well pleased with Saturday's business. Roses and carnations were much in evidence but met with light demand. Among the stands the following vases of chrysanthemums were the most noticeable: Bruner's Sons with Golden Wedding, F. Walz with Mrs. Robinson and H. L. Sunderbruch, and Gus. Adrian with Queen. J. Schuman had a superb lot of pot plants. Any of these vases could have been staged at any of our exhibitions and would have been hard to beat. The blooms sold at $2 to $3 per dozen.

Our new flower store on East Fourth street, W. A. McFadden, proprietor, has been making a grand display in the show windows since their opening and no doubt will meet with success. J. Peterson's show windows were also well done this week. One was resplendent with chrysanthemums while the other was artistically decorated with cattleyas banked up with adiantums and Asparagus Sprengerii. Sunderbruch's Sons, as usual, had a fine collection of chrysanthemums and roses.

The Hoffmeister Floral Co. reports a good trade in wedding decorations, with good supply to fill orders. Their new rose, Maid of Honor, is giving universal satisfaction. H. SCHWARZ.

Butted Glass.

This is no longer an experiment, it has come to stay. There are various ways of making Butted Roofs, but the best way is with the Clipper Bar.

With this bar you can make a roof that is absolutely free from drip, and glass cannot be torn out by the wind. Butted glass makes a tight roof, a warm house and saves fuel. It lasts longer, looks better and costs less than the old-fashioned roof. But do not think that this is the only bar we sell, for it is not; we furnish what people want and there is nothing in greenhouse material that you cannot get from us, and all of open-air-dried Cypress clear of bright sap, stained sap, knots and all other defects.

DETROIT FLOWER POT M'F'Y,
HARRY BALSLEY, Rep. DETROIT, MICH., 490 HOWARD ST.

Paterson and Thereabouts.

Seedling carnations at Jos. Towell's place at Paterson, N. J., are showing up well and Gov. Griggs is certainly at home There are twenty-three greenhouses in this establishment, including two asparagus houses and others devoted specially to smilax, ferns, mignonette, cypripediums, chrysanthemums and violets. Princess de Galles violet is doing grandly. A specialty here is the amaryllis, of which a large number are grown in pots for cut flower purposes. Mr. Towell, although for some time past physically incapacitated, spends much of his time about the greenhouses in a wheel chair.

At A. V. D. Snyder's establishment at Ridgewood there will be forced, this season, 150,000 Roman hyacinths, 145,000 tulips, 60,000 daffodils and 20,000 Paper White narcissi. The latter have been blooming since early in October but the bulbs are hardly satisfactory this season, many of them having gone blind. Two houses have been added this year, one of them 18x155. A Rider engine supplies water for this establishment from a 100-foot artesian well. Mr. Snyder has recently built a new seed store on the opposite side of the street from his greenhouses. He is a genuine hustler.

Ed. Sceery, of Paterson, has one of the prettiest stores in the county. He carries high-grade stock and, as he knows everybody worth knowing in the town, does a good business. The store formerly occupied by Van Voorhies & Smith is now occupied by Robert Smith & Co., the firm having dissolved, and Jas. A. Van Voorhies has opened a fine place on the opposite side of the street.

John Bingham, of Ridgewood, is indisposed at present but a recent visit to his place found the balance of the working force busily engaged in making bulb forcing boxes. There are ten houses, all well filled, and Asparagus plumosus is good.

HOW TO BUILD AND HOW TO HEAT GREENHOUSES

Full details for all kinds of houses will be found in "GREENHOUSE CONSTRUCTION," by L. R. TAFT.

How to Grow ROSES, VIOLETS and other Flowers, Vegetables and Fruits under Glass, is fully explained in "GREENHOUSE MANAGEMENT," 400 pages, illustrated, with latest information regarding treatment of insects and diseases, use of fertilizers, etc.

GARLAND'S

VALLEY GUTTER and DRIP CONDUCTOR

PATENTED DEC. 27, 1898.

Some Advantages of a Cast-Iron Gutter:

As the gutter of a greenhouse is the foundation of same, the house reaches a dilapidated condition as soon as the gutter becomes defective, which is in about one-half the time the house would otherwise last. Thus the life of the house is doubled when cast-iron gutters are used.

The cast-iron gutter will last a lifetime.

In case of a heavy snow-fall, the house is relieved of the snow in much less time, which is an important factor when sunlight is at a premium.

There is less obstruction to light.

No ice in gutter; iron absorbs sufficient heat to keep it continually thawed.

No breakage of glass from frost and ice.

No drip from condensation, drip being conducted by inner drip conductor, consequently allowing an increase of bench surface of house, as plants can be grown under gutter.

Although the first cost of iron gutter is more than a wooden gutter, you can construct a range of houses containing 15,000 feet or more of bench space for about 5 per cent less money than where wooden gutter is used, as the latter necessitates the building of houses 2 feet wider than where iron is used.

THE EXHIBITIONS.

Chicago.

The ninth annual chrysanthemum show of the Horticultural Society of Chicago closed Saturday evening, November 11, after a most successful five days run, not far from 15,000 paid admissions having been received. Everyone connected with the administration of the exhibition is highly pleased with the result, which was in part, no doubt, due to the fine weather, but in no small degree to the selection of the Auditorium as the place of staging the wealth of floral beauty. A marked feature of the increased attendance was the high social standing of those present.

Upon the closing day the interest of the growers was centered upon the seedling carnations but the feature of the day was the conclusion of the contest for the liberal premiums for table decorations for twelve covers. It chanced that the ladies judging these exhibits bestowed first place on each of the four days upon a different competitor, fortune and skill on Saturday favoring John Mangel, with W. L. Rock second, A. Lange third, C. A. Samuelson fourth, A. Klokner fifth and the Anderson Floral Co. sixth. This made the standing for the week as follows:

First prize, $125, A. Lange; second, $90, C. A. Samuelson; third, $60, Anderson Floral Co.; fourth, $40, John Mangel.

On Wednesday A. Lange's first prize table was decorated with a low mound of Pink Ivory chrysanthemums, both fully developed and half opened flowers, and Asparagus plumosus nanus. C. A. Samuelson was second and also had a mound of Pink Ivory with Asparagus Sprengerii and mignonette. Mangel was third with fine Major Bonnaffons and Asparagus Sprengerii in mound. Fourth place fell to the Anderson Floral Co. with a tall vase of Mayflower chrysanthemums and Asparagus Sprengerii and a flat mound of the same material at the base. W. L. Rock, of Kansas City, took fifth place with a tall vase of Major Bonnaffon and adiantums with a raised mound of the same at the base. A. Klokner, Milwaukee, used a vase of Bonnaffons and Asparagus Sprengerii with a center base of the same.

Thursday's material was roses and C. A. Samuelson led with a mound of Brides with long branches. The Anderson Floral Co. was second with a tall vase of Beauties and single blooms on the cloth between dishes of Asparagus Sprengerii. W. L. Rock, with a vase of Bridesmaids and adiantum with mound and scroll of the same at the base, was placed third. A. Lange was fourth with a vase of Beauties with three plaques of bloom and foliage on the cloth. Mangel had a vase of Beauties with the same flower and Asparagus Sprengerii strewn upon the cloth at the base of the vase and was placed fifth. A. Klokner showed a tall vase of Bridesmaid roses with adiantum and a mound of the same at the base.

On Friday the decorators were limited to white flowers, the Anderson Floral Co. winning with a mound of Kaiserin roses in a circle of Asparagus plumosus nanus. Mangel was second with a mound of lily of the valley. Lange used white carnations, mounded, and was third. W. L. Rock employed Dendrobium formosum giganteum and adiantum, being placed fourth. C. A. Samuelson was fifth with a low vase of Dendrobium formosum giganteum, odontoglossums and asparagus. Klokner had a tall vase of Bride roses and Asparagus Sprengerii with a mound at the base of the same material.

On Saturday the choice of flowers was optional and Mangel built a low mound of Cattleya labiata, Dendrobium Phalænopsis and Asparagus Sprengerii, securing first place. W. L. Rock was second with a mound of cypripediums and adiantum. Lange was third with a mound of Golden Gate roses, buds, full blooms and foliage. C. A. Samuelson employed a mound of Dendrobium Phalænopsis, adiantum and Cocos Weddeliana with blocks and sprays of same. A. Klokner was fifth with a raised triangle of ornamental foliage, fruit and flowers. The Anderson Floral Co. was sixth with a mound of Cattleya labiata and Adiantum Farleyense with plaques of the same. Throughout the competition the decorations were arranged with consummate skill and the judging would have been difficult had it not been for the fact that the ladies each day set some work in the rear because of their preference for the low decorations rather than those in which tall vases were employed.

Seedling chrysanthemums were poorly represented, none being entered in the six classes in which silver medals were offered. There were, however, several good seedlings shown for exhibition only. Fred. Dorner & Sons Co., Lafayette, Ind., brought a yellow of fine, dark color, showing good form and stem. Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich., showed Orizaba, a seedling from Mrs. E. G. Hill × Mrs. W. C. Egan. It is a pearl pink with a good stem well clothed with foliage. E. G. Hill & Co., Richmond, Ind., exhibited Onyx and Mme. Seulberger; both are white, the former with good size, clear color, fine stem and plenty of foliage. Mme. Seulberger has every appearance of being a good commercial sort.

John N. May's vases of cut blooms of pompon chrysanthemums not for competition were given a certificate of merit.

In the classes for tested seedling carnations, in which silver medals were offered, H. Weber & Son secured one for No. 110-96, a fine white of good form and stem. Bassett & Washburn also exhibited a good white but the blooms had, through error, been cut four days before the time of judging and were past their best. Genevieve Lord, Webers' light pink, a part of the stock of which is controlled by the Chicago Carnation Co., was also given a medal. Weber & Sons also showed a dark pink seedling, No. 115-97, and a very large light one, No. 11-97, which many thought to be the best one on exhibition. Crabb & Hunter, Grand Rapids, won the medal for dark pink with Irene, a most promising variety, somewhat after the type of Mme. Albertini. Stuart & Haugh staged a vase of a pink sport of Amazindy which was past its best at time of judging. J. C. Vaughan had a fine dark pink flower in his No. 2 but its stem is a little weak. F. B. Tinker, Peru, Ind., also staged a good white, of excellent form and stem. Weber & Sons won the prize for the best display of one-year seedlings with a collection containing several good sorts and Crabb & Hunter were second with a group which contained promising varieties.

In the competition for the silver cup offered for the best twelve chrysanthemum blooms, one variety, limited to varieties in commerce named after Chicago ladies, the exhibit of James Hartshorne was excluded by the examining committee for the reason that it contained thirteen flowers. Mr. Hartshorne protested on the ground that he was prevented from giving this exhibit proper attention by duties he was called on to perform for the society, and at the last moment had to entrust the work of staging the blooms to one of the society's employes appointed for that purpose. The latter made the error in count, and the protest was therefore sustained.

St. Louis.

The tan-bark arena of the Coliseum presented a very gay appearance when the annual chrysanthemum show opened last Tuesday. The Coliseum is perhaps one of the best buildings in the country for a flower show, but this fact would have counted for little in the absence of the industry and good taste displayed by the officers and members of the St. Louis Florists' Club. Manager Beneke and Secretary Schray certainly had a large contract on hand, but with the assistance of a small army of associates, exhibitors and judges they went about their work in a manner inspiring for its efficiency.

The exhibits generally were of high character, especially in the cut flower classes. Foliage plants were well grown and exhibited in large variety, but there seemed to be room for improvement in the specimen plants of chrysanthemums, and this might be applied to flowering plants throughout. Progress, however, was apparent on all sides, and no doubt the growers of this city and vicinity will very shortly take rank with the best. It should be remarked here that the tan-bark of the Coliseum flooring affords an admirable setting for all kinds of floral exhibits, blooms as well as plants. The brown shade of the bark has a peculiarly softening effect on the most glaring colors of flowers and its elasticity and noiselessness afford visitors much pleasure as they wander to and fro.

Perhaps the most interesting contest was that for the Shaw gold medal, awarded "for a plant of decided merit for cultivation, not previously an article of North American commerce, and introduced to such commerce by the exhibitor during the year in which said award was made." There were three entries in this competition, viz., a palm (Linospadix Petreckiana) from Sander & Co., of Belgium, a variegated form of Impatiens Sultani (source not given) and Cypripedium James K. Polk, a cross of C. nitens magnificum and C. Chamberlainianum, from H. T. Clinkaberry, gardener to C. G. Roebling, of Trenton, N. J., the last being awarded the prize. An illustration of this new cypripedium appears herewith.

Among other novelties exhibited we noted a chrysanthemum named Pride of Belleville, from the West End Floral Park, of Belleville, Ill. The bloom was of a creamy white shape, incurved, and looked somewhat like what might be expected of a cross between Pennsylvania and The Queen, scoring, we believe, seventy-five points. Seedling carnation No. 11, '97, from H. Weber & Sons, Oakland, Md., was a pleasing variety with large flowers of good quality and the Melba shade of pink. A large block of the new ageratum, Stella Gurney, was on exhibition from Tower Grove Park.

The designs in cut flowers of railroad trade marks made an interesting and apparently popular feature. Various railroad companies offer valuable prizes in these competitions. The designs were largely composed of red and white carnations, with green of sundry sorts for the backgrounds.

On the opening day the weather and attendance were far from favorable, but Wednesday and Thursday were more encouraging in both respects. The price of admission was advanced this year from twenty-five cents to fifty cents, and the receipts on Thursday evening showed a material gain over the same period last year.

Details of the awards up to and including Thursday follow, and here it should be remembered that prizes in several classes were offered for similar (but not identical) exhibits. It is also worthy of note that in some of the cut flower competitions the judges were compelled to consider "quality" and "arrangement" of equal importance.

The out-of-town visitors included Geo. M. Kellogg, of Pleasant Hill, Mo., Elmer D. Smith, of Adrian, Mich., Mrs. Vesey, of Fort Wayne, Ind., J. S. Wilson, of Western Springs, Ill., Mr. Gullett, of Lincoln, and E. W. Guy, of Belleville, Ill.

Baltimore.

On Monday, November 13, the Baltimore Gardeners' Club opened an exhibition in many respects the most remarkable ever held here. It was remarkable for the display of cut flowers, for the exhibit of carpet bedding, which was never equalled here, and then the display of carnations was, for the first day, the wonder and admiration of all beholders. From some cause most of the carnation blooms had gone to sleep before the expiration of the second day. The pot plants of chrysanthemums were, as a rule, not up to the general high character of the cut blooms, but certainly the standards that took first were very fine, and the collection of bush plants would be hard to beat.

Returning to the cut flowers, the exhibit by which Halliday Bros. took the Meadowvale Farm prize for four vases, twelve blooms each, distinct colors, was superior in every respect. Mrs. T. L. Park for clear yellow, Philadelphia, lemon yellow; Mayflower, white, and Jno. K. Shaw, light pink, were all of enormous size and extra finish. Mrs. Robt. Garrett's prize for best vase of twenty-four whites was taken by Howard Adams with a superb vase of Violescent.

The vase that took first for twelve mixed blooms contained Frank Hardy, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, Good Gracious, Autumn Glory, Harry May, Pink Ivory, Wm. H. Chadwick, John K. Shaw, Mrs. C. H. Pierce, Mrs. Jerome Jones and Modesto, and although most of the varieties were very familiar to Baltimore growers, yet in size and finish they were a revelation and the finest ever shown here. They were grown and exhibited by Henry Eichholz, Waynesboro, Pa.

The first prize for twelve blooms of yellow was won by Montgomery Bros., with Golden Wedding. A vase of Eugene Dailledouze which took second was scarcely inferior to the first and were of beautiful finish; they were grown by M. J. Hanigan, gardener to Hon. Jas. A. Garey. The same grower took first on twelve pink with Maud Dean, and received a certificate of merit for a vase of a pure white sport from Ermenilda. He also took the second prize for twelve mixed blooms with flowers that would ordinarily have captured first, but the Eichholz monsters were in the way. His varieties were Philadelphia, Mayflower, Niveus, Eugene Dailledouze, Inter Ocean, Major Bonnaffon, Maud Dean, Queen, Mrs. J. Geo. Ils, W. H. Lincoln, Golden Wedding and Harry Balsley.

In roses H. Weber & Sons, Oakland, Md., took well-deserved firsts on Kaiserin and Meteor. Henry Eichholz had first for Perle, with the best seen here in a long time, and I. H. Moss took first with Bridesmaid.

Genevieve Lord took the special gold medal for the best pink seedling carnation. The flowers were fully three inches in diameter and of a very beautiful shade of pink, somewhat lighter than Scott. They were grown by Weber & Sons, Oakland. Robt. Craig & Son had Ethel Crocker on exhibition. This, too, is a remarkably fine, large, stiff-stemmed flower of a shade darker than Daybreak. It is claimed by the originators to be free blooming, and to keep its size very evenly.

Halliday Bros. took first in six varieties, twenty-five of each, with Flora Hill, Gen. Gomez, Victor, Daybreak, Mrs. Bradt and America. The same firm took a special prize for six 8-inch pots of Matt. Richmond, their red sport from Tidal Wave. They were fine plants covered with blooms of large size and thick set, with clean healthy foliage.

Thos. C. Stevenson, of Govanstown, took first prize on violets, with a fine vase of Marie Louise.

A mantel by Seidewitz was very tastefully decorated. Fred Burger took first for a wedding design with an ox yoke, the bows of which were of white roses and the yoke Mrs. Perrin chrysanthemums. The same exhibitor captured the first prize for basket, funeral design and bridal bouquet and richly deserved the premiums, for more tastefully arranged pieces or better flowers would be hard to find.

Henry F. Michell, of Philadelphia, had a seed and implement display, as did Griffith & Turner, a local firm. Robert Kift sent samples of his vase and pot holder.

The stage was set and beautifully decorated with palms by Halliday Bros. Fisher & Ekas had a fine lot of zonal geraniums occupying a stage at the entrance and R. Vincent, Jr., & Son showed three flowers of a bright yellow oddity, two blooms on one stem so very closely set as to form but one flower, except to the closest examination.

The most striking feature of the whole show was a twenty-foot circular bed in the center of the hall which was filled by Chas. Seybold with an intricate Gothic pattern of cacti, echeveria, coleus, alternanthera, etc., bordered by adiantum. The whole was most elaborate and proved that the designer can do something besides sending the whirling ball down among the crashing pins. There were 5,600 plants required to complete the bed and it was the chief plant attraction of the exhibition.

The judges were John Burton, Wm. P. Craig, Geo. C. Watson, Jno. Westcott, C. W. Cox and R. Kift, of Philadelphia. Mr. and Mrs. William Scott, of Buffalo, as well as Mr. Dryer, of New York, and Mr. Ashland, of Philadelphia, were in to see the show. MACK.

CHRYSANTHEMUM WINONA.

Montreal.

The Montreal Gardeners' and Florists' Club not having a chrysanthemum show this year, the competition for the two trophies presented to the club by Lord Strathcona, one for twelve blooms and the other for six plants, which have to be won three times by any competitor before becoming his property, took place in the club room on November 13. There were only two competitors with cut blooms, W. J. Wilshire, gardener to R. B. Angus, coming in first with the following varieties: Iora, Minerva, Col. Smith, Leonidas, Mrs. Morgan, La Moucherette, Mrs. Henry Weeks, Inter Ocean, Golden Wedding, E. M. Bigelow, Madame Carnot and Silver Cloud, the largest bloom, Mme. Carnot, measuring ten inches in diameter. Chas. F. Smith, gardener to T. A. Dawes, was a close second with Mrs. Perrin, Golden Wedding, Australian Gold, Mme. Carnot, Latest Fad, Col. Smith, Inter Ocean, Mrs. Geo. West, Viviand—Morel, W. C. Egan, Modesto and Mlle. Faure. Mr. Smith also staged seven blooms of the following varieties which were very much admired: Mrs. Trainor L. Park, N. C. S. Jubilee, E. M. Rodgers, Mme. G. S. Bruant, Admiral Dewey, J. G. Warren, and Mlle. Faure.

Mr. Smith was the only competitor for the trophy for six plants. His varieties were Mrs. Henry Weeks, Georgiana Pitcher, Ivory, Harry Hurrell, Mrs. Shrimpton and Mrs. Perrin, all fine plants with from sixty to seventy-five blooms each.

Joseph Bennett staged two magnificent vases of blooms of the commercial size, which were very much admired. After the exhibits had been thoroughly discussed, the club meeting was called to order. One new member was elected and a committee was named to co-operate with a similar committee from the Canadian Horticultural Association to arrange the details for the reception of the association next August. A lively discussion also took place as to the advisability of holding a chrysanthemum show next year, and it was decided to open a subscription list for a guarantee fund to cover the cost; if sufficient funds have been guaranteed by January, arrangements will be made for a show. BEAVER.

Worcester, Mass.

Notwithstanding many predictions to the contrary the chrysanthemum exhibition of the Worcester County Horticultural Society, held on November 8 and 9, was one of the most successful ever given by the society. The arrangement of the hall was but slightly different from that of last year, which was very effective. In the center of the hall the single specimen blooms were arranged on an immense round table, the center of which was banked with palms. Directly in line were square tables containing the various exhibits of roses, carnations and violets, with palms and ferns dotted here and there to bring out the color effects. On long tables running lengthwise of the hall, and somewhat lower than the center tables, were placed the vases containing the collections of ten of one variety and directly in front of the stage were the large collections of twenty of one variety. Against the side walls of the hall were the groups of chrysanthemum plants, making a gorgeous massing of color. The display of plants and flowers was larger than ever before and the quality of both showed much improvement over former exhibitions. The attendance was large and the weather was perfect.

The twelve best blooms were of the following varieties: Viviand-Morel, Maud Dean, Mrs. Jerome Jones, Mrs. H. Weeks, Philadelphia, Belle of Castlewood, H. W. Reiman, Mrs. Trainor L. Park, Adele, Mrs. Barr, Bonnaffon, Mrs. O. P. Bassett and Niveus.

Four premiums were awarded in all classes and the following are some of the first premium winners: H. F. A. Lange, F. A. Blake, W. A. Sargent, Mrs. G. W. Knowlton and Mrs. J. C. Knowlton. Lange was first for collection of chrysanthemum plants, for best plant of yellow, white and pink, for twenty blooms pink, for ten blooms white and yellow, for twelve blooms of a distinct variety, for single bloom white and pink, for collection of sprays, for best design of chrysanthemums, for display of roses, carnations, foliage plants and specimen palm. F. A. Blake was first for plant of white, for twenty blooms yellow and for specimen fern. W. A. Sargent was first for twenty blooms white and display of violets. Mrs. Knowlton had the best ten blooms yellow, the best six specimen blooms and the best single bloom of yellow. Mrs. Whitin showed the best ten blooms of mixed varieties. A. H. L.

CHRYSANTHEMUM BONITA.

Providence, R. I.

The Rhode Island Horticultural Society held its annual chrysanthemum show on November 9 and 10. From the standpoint of merit it was fully up to former exhibitions, but from the fact that no premiums were offered for pot grown specimens, the show was much smaller than heretofore. There was little competition on chrysanthemums, and no new varieties were displayed, the old prize winners holding their sway. There was a very creditable display of carnations.

In chrysanthemums F. Macrae took first for thirty blooms, fifty bottles, twelve blooms, six blooms incurved, six blooms reflexed, one bloom white, one pink, one yellow, one of any variety and six vases of ten blooms (also diploma and second and third premiums). Wm. Goddard, Alfred Powell, gardener, was second for one bloom white, one pink, one yellow and one of any variety.

On group of palms Mrs. Shepard, Wm. Hill, gardener, was first and Wm. Goddard second.

In the carnation classes the Homogansett Greenhouses took four firsts and two seconds, John Macrae two firsts and four seconds, and N. D. Pierce one first, a second and a third.

Gratuities were given to H. G. York, Westerly, R. I., for a seedling chrysanthemum, to Florence A. Willard for a floral design, to N. D. Pierce for thirty-six cyclamens and nine pots ferns, to John Macrae for a sport from Eldorado carnation, to F. Macrae for Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, for Mrs. Bradt carnation and for seedling carnations, and to Wm. Goddard for Gold Nugget carnation.

Honorable mention was given to John McFarland, North Easton, Mass., for Farquhar violets, and to T. G. Thrasher, Avon, Mass., for Imperial violets.

Certificates of merit were given to N. D. Pierce for his light pink carnation, Beau Ideal, and to Chas. S. Cooper, Brockton, Mass., for Crawford carnation and a sport from the same.

LITTLE RHODY.

Hartford, Conn.

The annual chrysanthemum show of the Connecticut Horticultural Society at Putnam Phalanx Armory, November 13 to 16 was a great success. Thomas Dryden, Hartford, carried off the honors for display of chrysanthemum plants with Georgiana Pitcher, G. W. Childs, Frank Hardy, Autumn Glory, Golden Trophy, Eda Prass, Solar Queen, Black Hawk, Mrs. C. H. Pierce, Mrs. Robinson, H. W. Rieman and C. B. Whitnall. His standards of Etoile de Lyon were also fine.

Dryden and T. J. McRonald divided honors on bush plants, their varieties being Mrs. L. Canning, Mayflower, Ivory, Major Bonnaffon, Golden Trophy and Cullingfordii.

On cut blooms the prize winners were E. H. Waite, Litchfield, Conn; T. J. McRonald, Hartford; W. Angus, Championville; Wm. Young, John Coombs and Elizabeth Park, Hartford. The varieties shown were Mrs. Morgan, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, Modesto, Golden Wedding, Mrs. O. P. Bassett, Symphonia, Helen Bloodgood, Mrs. Perrin, Autumn Glory, Ivory, Mrs. Weeks, Evangeline, Mayflower, Mutual Friend, Queen, Cullingfordii, Black Hawk and John Shrimpton.

The amateurs' display was good and for childrens' chrysanthemums the gold medal was awarded to Philip S. Wainwright and the silver medal to Ethel Wakeman. The schools also exhibited herbariums.

In carnations John F. Galvin showed Mrs. Lawson and there was a fine collection from J. F. Fillow, Westport, Conn., for which he was given a diploma.

There were good displays of greenhouse plants from Dryden, Coombs and Angus and Paul Thompson showed good violets.

Elizabeth Park nurseries made a large display of chrysanthemums and geraniums and James Ballantyre, gardener to ex-Governor M. P. Bulkeley showed a good seedling carnation. Diplomas were awarded Thos. Dryden for his chrysanthemum plants and to John Coombs for cut blooms. C. H. B.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

The fifth annual exhibition of the Dutchess County Horticultural Society was opened on November 8 and continued for three days. Although competition in many of the classes was not as strong as formerly, this being particularly noticeable in the classes for cut blooms of chrysanthemums, the general exhibition was just as attractive as in previous years and the quality of the exhibits was up to the standard. In the classes for chrysanthemums, specimen plants and cut blooms, the coveted prizes were again captured by W. C. Russell, Millbrook, and it may safely be said that the quality of the exhibits in these classes has never been excelled.

One of the attractions was a group of chrysanthemums in pots, containing over 300 blooms, exhibited by F. W. Vanderbilt. Although there was no competition in this class the exhibit certainly merited the award. The prize for American Beauty roses was hotly contested and was carried off by Jas. Blair, gardener to Ogden Mills, with F. R. Pierson Co., of Tarrytown, a close second. Outside of the violets exhibited by J. W. Feeter, Highland, N. Y., the display was only fair for a violet growing center, but in the classes for carnations the quality of the blooms was excellent.

Some handsome plants were exhibited in the collections of decorative and foliage plants and were tastily arranged. The table of orchids from the Dinsmore estate was a show in itself and attracted a great deal of attention. The attendance was good and we believe the exhibition was a success financially as well as otherwise. The awards are as follows:

Thirty-six blooms cut chrysanthemums, six varieties, first prize, the Dinsmore silver cup, C. F. Deiterich, W. C. Russell, gardener; second, Ogden Mills, James Blair, gardener. The winner's varieties were Mayflower, Peter Kay, Frank Hardy, Golden Wedding, Viviand-Morel and Major Bonnaffon.

For best twelve yellow, W. C. Russell was first with Peter Kay. Twelve pink, Jas. Blair, first with Viviand-Morel. Twelve crimson, F. W. Vanderbilt, first. Six white, first, Winthrop Sargent, W. G. Gomersall, gardener. Six yellow, first, W. C. Russell, with Major Bonnaffon. Six pink, first, W. C. Russell. Six crimson, first, Jas. Blair. Six any other color, first, F. W. Vanderbilt with Chas. Davis.

Open class, twenty-five blooms in vase arranged for effect, first, R. Grigg, gardener to C De Rham; second, W. G. Gomersall. Private gardeners' class, twenty-five blooms, first, R. Grigg; second, W. G. Gomersall.

Best seedling chrysanthemum, first, R. Grigg, with sport from Silver Cloud.

CHRYSANTHEMUM MRS. GEO. C. JENKINS.

Twenty-four blooms, twenty-four varieties, on boards, W. C. Russell captured first prize with Peter Kay, Mayflower, Mrs. H. Weeks, Miss Nellie Elverson, Modesto, Eureka, J. Peabody, W. P. Raynor, Fisher's Torch, Defender, Niveus, Pennsylvania, Mrs. C. H. Pierce, John Shrimpton, Mutual Friend, Marie Louise, Lenawee, Minerva, Maj. Bonnaffon, Autumn Glory, Viviand-Morel, Golden Wedding, Harry May and Mme. Ferlat; second, W. G. Gomersall.

Twelve blooms, twelve varieties, on boards, first, Jas. Blair with Frank Hardy, Modesto, Mrs. H. McK. Twombly, Mrs. T. L. Park, Autumn Glory, Mrs. G. M. Pullman, Mrs. J. G. Warren, Mrs. M. A. Ryerson, Viviand-Morel, Lady Playfair, Florence Pullman and Golden Wedding; second, Samuel Thorne, I. L. Powell, gardener.

Group, one hundred square feet of chrysanthemums, first, F. W. Vanderbilt. Six plants, single stems, first, W. C. Russell. Specimen white, first, W. C. Russell with Ivory; second, I. L. Powell. Specimen yellow, first, W. C. Russell with Lincoln; second I. L. Powell.

Group of foliage plants, one hundred square feet, first, F. W. Vanderbilt; second, F. R. Newbold. Specimen foliage plant, first, F. R. Newbold; second, Arch. Rogers. Six decorative foliage plants, first, F. W. Vanderbilt; second, Arch. Rogers. Six ferns, first, W. B. Dinsmore; second, F. W. Vanderbilt.

Table of orchids, first, W. B. Dinsmore, Thos. Emerson, gardener; second, F. R. Newbold. Table of foliage plants, first, W. B. Dinsmore; second, F. W. Vanderbilt. Specimen plant, Asparagus Sprengerii, first, W. G. Gomersall. Specimen fern, first, W. G. Gomersall with Davallia Fijiensis. Six plants double violets, first, C. F. Bahret.

Twelve American Beauties, first, Jas. Blair; second, F. R. Pierson Co. Twelve Bridesmaids, first, I. L. Powell; second, W. C. Russell. Twelve Brides, first, I. L. Powell; second, W. C. Russell. Twelve Perles, first, Arch. Rogers. Twelve any other variety, first, Jas. Blair with Mrs. J. P. Morgan; second, W. C. Russell with same. A special prize was awarded to F. R. Pierson Co. for the new rose Liberty.

Collection of carnations, the Dinsmore silver cup, was awarded to F. R. Pierson Co.; second, W. G. Saltford. Thirty-six carnations, three varieties, for private gardeners, first, F. W. Vanderbilt. Thirty-six carnations, three varieties, variegated, open class, first, F. R. Pierson Co. Seedling carnation, first, F. R. Pierson Co. with Mrs. Thos. W. Lawson.

Corsage bouquet, double blue violets, no first awarded; second, B. Willig. Double violets, first, J. W. Feeter; second, B. Willig. Single violets, no first awarded; second, W. C. Russell.

Sargent prize, $20, for best twenty-four blooms yellow chrysanthemums, four varieties, first, W. C. Russell, with Minerva, Peter Kay, Golden Wedding and Maj. Bonnaffon.

A certificate of merit was awarded to John Marshall for yellow seedling chrysanthemum Col. D. Appelton.

The special prize for best chrysanthemum on exhibition was awarded to W. C. Russell for Mayflower.

There were excellent exhibits of fruits and vegetables for which R. Grigg, Arch. Rogers and Dean Ferris were the principal winners.

Madison, N. J.

The fourth annual show of the Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Society was held in the Assembly rooms at Madison, N. J., November 7 and 8 and was an unqualified success in every way. The exhibits were of exceptional quality, numerous, and the attendance was very large. The judges were J. W. Withers, N. Butterbach and George Smith.

In the classes for cut blooms M. Tilden, M. McNulty, gardener, won three firsts; G. E. Kissell, G. L. Hand, gardener, one first, and Henry Hentz, J. Milton, gardener, one first. The seconds fell to George Bird, John N. May and Mrs. J. Catlin, A. Coren, gardener.

In the class for the Young & Nugent prize of $50, cut blooms of roses, twenty-five of each of four varieties, Elwood Brant was the only exhibitor. Walter Reid, M. Noonan, gardener, had the best eighteen American Beauties and Henry Hentz, Jr., the best twelve; he also had the best eighteen Bridesmaids. Frank Burnett showed the best eighteen Brides, the best six Bridesmaids and the best six Brides.

In the competition for three varieties of carnations, eighteen blooms each, two competitors were disqualified by having too many blooms and the prize fell to the Morris Plains asylum.

J. W. Feeter had a splendid showing of violets and won first prize. Three other exhibitors staged their blooms too late for judging.

The premium for the best group of chrysanthemums fell to Mrs. A. R. Whitney, J. Davies, gardener, with Mrs. J. Catlin second and John Jones third. Emerson McFadden had the best group of foliage plants, Wm. Charlton the best specimen plants in flower, and Mrs. J. Catlin the best dozen ferns.

Mrs. A. R. Whitney had the finest collection of vegetables and this department was a prominent feature of the show.

Certificates of merit were given to D. Willis James, Wm. Duckham, gardener, for a splendid group of foliage plants, for specimen Dracæna Sanderiana, for a specimen Phœnix Roeblingii and for a collection of fruit and vegetables, while ten vases of chrysanthemums by the same exhibitor were given a silver medal. H. McK. Twombly, A. Herrington, gardener, was given certificates of merit for a group of palms and ferns, for a table decoration of orchids, for eight vases of chrysanthemums and a display of Gros Coleman grapes. Lager & Hurrell were given a certificate for a table decoration of orchids, John L. Foley for a group of foliage plants and for a basket of flowers, Ernst Asmus for a vase of Liberty rose, Anderson & Christensen for a group of ferns. Dean Ferris was given a certificate for a showing of 103 varieties of vegetables and special mention for his celery and apples. John N. May received a certificate for his display of pompon varieties of chrysanthemums and the Morris Plains asylum, O. Keser, gardener, for four vases of chrysanthemums. C. H. A.

Millbrook, N. Y.

The seventh annual chrysanthemum exhibition of the Millbrook Horticultural Society was held in Memorial Hall on November 8, 9 and 10. In most of the classes it was, as heretofore, a close contest for supremacy between those two gladiators in Duchess county horticulture, W. C. Russell, gardener to C. F. Dieterich, and I. L. Powell, gardener to Sam'l Thorne. Mr. Russell won out on three trained specimens with grand plants of Puritan, Ivory and W. H. Lincoln, and on group of flowering and foliage plants arranged for effect, with a superb collection in the arrangement of which great taste was displayed. Mr. Powell won on specimen standard, three hardy varieties, and twenty-five single stemmed pink, while three of his assistants were equally successful. Mr. Sealey with three specimens in 8-inch pots, Mr. Reynolds with twenty-five each white and pink single-stemmed plants and Mr. Burke with a specimen W. H. Lincoln in 14-inch pot which measured seven feet six inches across and was pronounced one of the finest ever staged. The first prize for geraniums went to G. Thomen, gardener to J. D. Wing, who showed six standards of rare excellence.

CARNATION IRENE.
(Awarded Silver Medal at the Chicago Exhibition.)

In the cut flower section competition was exceedingly close, Mr. Russell taking three first premiums and Mr. Powell five, and in one of the most important classes, that calling for eighteen blooms in three varieties, the judges were unable to decide as to superiority, so recommended even premiums. Among the varieties shown in best form were Golden Wedding, Mrs. Weeks and Peter Kay, a bloom of the latter from Mr. Russell taking the prize as the largest flower in the show. Mrs. Powell showed a vase of Mrs. Perrin beautifully arranged with fronds of Davallia Mooreana. There were a goodly number of roses shown by the above mentioned exhibitors, also by Andrew Nichols, gardener to Col. Dan Lamont; Chas. Rapp, gardener to Oakley Thorne, and F. R. Pierson Co. G. Thomen won out in most of the carnation classes with some very fine blooms. The judges were Richard Gardner, Newport, R. I.; A. D. Rose, Montclair, N. J., and W. J. Stewart, Boston.

Previous to the opening of the exhibition, the visiting gardeners and florists were given a ride and visited the two fine estates under the care of Mr. Powell and Mr. Russell. A noticeable feature of the greenhouses at Mr. Thorne's, where Mr. Powell presides, was the great variety of subjects under cultivation, grapes, beans, tomatoes, peaches, figs, cucumbers, carnations, roses, chrysanthemums, aquatics, ferns, orchids and stove plants, and all excellent. The extensive grounds are well wooded, with numerous plantations of rhododendrons kalmias and coniters in the glades and valleys. Mr. Dieterich's place, where Mr. Russell has charge, is remarkable for the extensive constructions in rock-work of bridges, gate ways, walls, arbors and cottages in Swiss style, wholly or partially completed. The conservatories are very fine, notably the central palm house which is a splendid, domed structure nearly forty feet in height and filled with towering alsophilas, kentias and latanias and an additional greenhouse of large extent is now being built. This estate comprises about 3,000 acres. Other large places here are those of Oakley Thorne, Capt. Hayes and J. D. Wing.

Millbrook is a very picturesque town, hilly and well wooded, the ideal place for a country residence. Other than this, its most noticeable features are apples, turkeys and sheep, and, last but not least, the very hospitable character of mine host Gammell.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

SOME NEW VARIETIES.

Winona was exhibited by John N. May, Summit, N. J., as No. 145. The bloom is large and full and the plant is of vigorous habit. The petals are white at the base with veins of deep pink running through the outer ends, making a striking combination and lending great attractiveness to the flower. Mr. May reports that he has found the variety an excellent commercial sort, a good shipper and keeper.

Bonita, exhibited at New York and Philadelphia by Mr. May, was recorded as No. 2 in the reports of the committees. At the former city it scored 82 points on the commercial scale and at the latter place 88 points and 86 points on the commercial scale. It is a deep golden bronze Japanese incurved, and very handsome. It is a bold flower with an excellent stem well clothed with foliage.

Mrs. George C. Jenkins is a Japanese incurved pink variety originating with Wm. Paul Binder, Rider, Md.; it has received the certificate of merit of the Gardeners' Club of Baltimore. The blooms are large, frequently eight or ten inches in diameter, but never show the center. It is a mid-season or later variety with excellent stem and foliage. It is a good commercial sort of excellent keeping quality. Before the C. S. A. committee Mrs. Jenkins scored 86 points on the commercial scale and 87 on the exhibition scale.

WORK OF THE COMMITTEES.

New York.—A white sport from Ermenilda was exhibited by M. Hansen, New Durham, N. J., which scored commercial scale 66 points.

Cincinnati, O.—Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich., exhibited the following three varieties: No. 28, a light yellow Japanese, scoring commercial scale 61 points; No. 72, a bronze Japanese, scoring commercial scale 62 points; No. 25, a pink Japanese incurved, scoring commercial scale 74 points.

Chicago.—No. 25, a Japanese incurved pink, exhibited by Nathan Smith & Son, scored commercial scale 83 points.

John N. May has named his varieties as follows: No. 2, Bonita; No. 145, Winona. These were reported upon under number last week.

ELMER D. SMITH, Sec'y.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY COMMITTEES.

The committees judging seedling chrysanthemums will be in session each Saturday up to and including November 25. Exhibitors should make their entries, for which a fee of $2 is charged for each variety entered, to the secretary not later than Tuesday of the week they are to be shown. All exhibits forwarded to the following addresses, express charges prepaid, will receive careful consideration:

Boston, Mass., A. H. Fewkes, Horticultural Hall, Tremont street.

New York, N. Y., E. Dailledouze, care New York Cut Flower Co., 119 West Twenty-third street.

Philadelphia, Pa., A. B. Cartledge, 1514 Chestnut street.

Cincinnati, O., A. Witterstaetter, care Cincinnati Cut Flower Co., Fourth and Walnut streets.

Chicago, Ill., C. W. Johnson, care Illinois Cut Flower Co., 51 Wabash avenue. ELMER D. SMITH, Sec'y.

CARNATIONS.

ABSENCE OF A SATISFACTORY WHITE VARIETY.

A thoughtful visit to our growers reveals some peculiar facts that raisers of seedlings should especially heed. Perhaps the most unthought of is the fact that we really have not a thoroughly satisfactory white carnation.

White Cloud has the preference with many growers but the most enthusiastic will admit that it does not quite fill the bill. It has size, form and stem to perfection but only first-class growers get the best results with it and, as nearly as I can learn, the blooms must bring a good figure to pay. This fact is a strong recommendation for it, as there is more use for a high-priced than a low-priced carnation.

Flora Hill will, I suppose, have to take second place this winter as it seems to be losing a little in constitution and does not show up quite so well for November as it has during previous seasons. Even with its defects it will probably be a standard white for a few years to come and until something better appears it is certainly worth the careful selection of cuttings necessary to keep it in good health.

Lizzie McGowan is still grown to some extent and where it has been carefully selected is perhaps the best all-round white, but it has been carefully selected by but very few growers and has consequently met the fate of all our carnations, good or otherwise, and is practically outside of consideration.

I may be entirely wrong in my conception of facts, but it seems to me that what constitution McGowan has is due to the fact that there never was such a demand for the cuttings as to necessitate over-propagation. McGowan at its best had not what might be called a strong constitution and yet it seems to have gained rather than lost in that quality.

THE NEW CARNATION ETHEL CROCKER.

What a pity that such a grand variety as Flora Hill did not improve instead of retrograde!

What we most need to-day is a white flower of good size with the requisite form and calyx, producing from twenty to thirty long-stemmed blooms to a plant. I may be presuming again and getting beyond my business, but to the grower who is lucky enough to get such a variety I would like to suggest that, instead of trying to see how many cuttings can be taken from a plant and how fast the stock can be increased, a trial be made to maintain the vigor of the stock by careful selection.

If I were fortunate enough to have a white that I thought would fill the bill and had but one plant, I would not try to have a hundred from that one plant for next season but would see that every cutting taken from the plant was so good that it would simply be impossible for it to have less vigor than its parent. This selection would be kept up right along and as soon as the stock was worked up a bit if a plant showed any signs of weakness it would be weeded out.

This process might mean a few years' delay in the introduction of the variety, but those few years would add to its laurels and make its introduction all the more brilliant. They would also mean an increase of your stock to a sufficient number that when you came to introduce it you could keep up the process of selection, instead of being compelled to take everything that could be made to root, as is too often the case.

Possibly some good whites are in existence to-day, and possibly some have been offered to the trade, but they have not as yet reached the majority of growers. In these days of full page advertisements and the exhibition of flowers at all the shows and all the florists' clubs throughout the country, a carnation, to reach the growers, must be exploited by what our friend Ward calls the boom method.

The owners of seedling carnations which have not met with the recognition they deserve can do nothing better than bring them to the meeting of the American Carnation Society at Buffalo next February. There will be a host of growers at that meeting looking for a good white and it is only by bringing it yourself that you can determine for your own satisfaction whether or not it is really as good as you think it is. If it stands the test of comparison with the other varieties of the show and favorably impresses the members of the society, you can, with some assurance go home and work up a stock of it for dissemination. Even if it falls short of the requirements in a seedling carnation of to-day you will have learned what is necessary and this in itself will make your trip a profitable one. ALBERT M. HERR.

MITCHELL, So. DAK.—E. C. Newbury reports his October business far ahead of a year ago and prospects never so bright as at present.

VINCENNES, IND.—W. A. Reiman is planning to build two houses for carnations next spring. One will be 16x66 and the other 16x80.

THE green market is easier; for ten or fifteen days the supply has increased, but latest reports indicate that pickers are about through for the season.

HOLLY, fancy, is likely to bring fairly good prices, nor is there any indications of over stock of average grade. The constant depletion of the groves by vigorous cutting reduces the supply.

IN last week's advertisement of the Fred. Dorner & Sons Co., LaFayette, Ind., the varieties Ethel Crocker, The Marquis and Olympia were omitted by error from the list of varieties for 1900.

MEMORABLE MEETING OF THE FLORISTS' CLUB.—CONFERENCE WITH REGARD TO THE AUGUST HORTICULTURAL EXHIBITION.—MANY PLEDGES OF SUPPORT.—J. P. CLEARY CHOSEN AS MANAGER OF TRADE EXHIBIT FOR THE CONVENTION.—NOMINATION OF OFFICERS.—SOME GOOD EXHIBITS.—CRAIG TALKS.—MEDALS FOR ROSE SOCIETY PREMIUM LIST.—STATE OF THE MARKET.—A SLIGHT CHANGE FOR THE BETTER.

The November meeting of the New York Florists' Club was an occasion of unusual interest from the fact that representatives of the various horticultural and gardeners' societies in this section had been invited to be present to confer regarding the arrangements for the S. A. F. convention of 1900, and also on account of the nomination of officers to serve through the coming year, which will be the most important in the club's history. There were about fifty gentlemen present, including delegates from the New York Gardeners' Society, New Jersey Floricultural Society, Monmouth County Horticultural Society, Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Club, New York Market Florists' Association, Florists' Board of Trade and Tarrytown Horticultural Society. The matter of the proposed horticultural exhibition in connection with the trade exhibit next August was a fruitful theme and the animated discussion which took place developed a gratifying enthusiasm in its favor. Promises of hearty support and co-operation were given by the representatives of the various fraternal bodies present and a number of individual pledges of financial assistance came from members of the club.

The trustees reported the name of J. P. Cleary for the position of manager of the trade exhibition, and this very wise selection was endorsed by a unanimous vote. They also reported that the main floor of the Grand Central Palace had been secured for exhibition purposes, and the Palm Garden for the audience hall for the convention. Messrs. O'Mara, Siebrecht and Weathered were appointed a committee to prepare appropriate resolutions on the deaths of Mrs. J. H. Taylor, Mrs. John Morris and Wm. H. Brower. H. A. Siebrecht was appointed to represent the club before the Dewey Arch Association.

In the nomination of officers the following names received a large majority of the votes: For president, P. O'Mara; vice-president, A. Herrington; secretary, John Young; treasurer, C. B. Weathered; trustees, two years, Messrs. Plumb, O'Mara and Burns. Election will take place at the December meeting.

On the exhibition table were vases of carnations Ethel Crocker from Robt. Craig & Son, No. 666 from Dailledouze Bros., Eunice and an unnamed seedling from C. Besold. The two former were recommended for certificates and the two latter received honorable mention. No. 666 is undoubtedly the largest carnation up to date, being full four inches in diameter, and created a sensation. Its color is white, suffused and clouded with soft pink. It is now in its fourth year and is said to be a fourth generation descendant of Mme. Albertini.

Robert Craig, who was present, being called upon for a few words, made one of his witty little speeches expressing his apprehension in facing such an audience in the metropolis of the country and quoted liberally from his favorite author, Mr. Dooley. He heartily approved of the scheme to hold a big horticultural exhibition next August, and advised that effort be made to secure exhibits of new and rare things from European houses. Mr. Burns told of his recent visit to Waban Rose Conservatories and his impressions of that splendid establishment and Mr. Manda, who has just returned from the Philadelphia chrysanthemum show, said some very complimentary things regarding the same.

A vote was passed appropriating funds for a gold and a silver medal for the exhibition of the American Rose Society next March, and Mr. May was authorized to see to their proper disposition on the prize list. Much pleasure was expressed at the reappearance in the chair of President Plumb, and everybody was supremely happy with the exception of the non-smokers who were choked and half blind for a couple of days following this memorable meeting owing to the smoke, which at times was "thick enough to cut."

If there is any change in trade conditions it is a change for the better, but it is so slight in the aggregate that it is scarcely worth mentioning. Violets maintain prices quoted last week, not because of horse show or any other special demand, but on account of their scarcity, the receipts being very light. Chrysanthemums are "on the wane." There are plenty of good blooms still in evidence, but the big surplus has disappeared. Cheap quality still goes for cheap price, and first-class goods hold their own. Roses and carnations show the most encouraging improvement. This does not apply so much to American Beauty as to Bride and Bridesmaid, but with the latter there is a very satisfactory advance and the best evidence is that it has been heard out in Madison and there is much commotion resultant.

News of the death of J. J. Blauvelt, of Pearl River, has been received. Mr. Blauvelt died on Sunday, November 12. He was an old-time grower and some years ago his Luizets and other hybrid roses were in great demand.

Greenhouse builders report unprecedented activity and building prospects very gratifying.

DAVENPORT, IA.—Charles Daunacher has sold his business and leased the land to his foreman, Otto Klingbiel. The establishment comprises 40,000 feet of glass and is well stocked.

STATE OF THE MARKET.—BRISK BUSINESS WITH TOO FEW GOOD ROSES.—PRICES STIFFER.—REGRET THAT CHRYSANTHEMUMS WERE NOT STARTED HIGHER.—GREENS ARE GOOD PROPERTY.—FLOWER SHOWS AS AN AID TO MERCHANDISING.—VARIOUS ITEMS OF LOCAL INTEREST.

Trade is moving briskly this week and while quotations have not been advanced, except here and there, prices are stiffer than for some time. There are not too many roses but the quality is not yet quite what it should be and the brisk demand for stock for high social events makes really first-class blooms scarce, so that Meteors are bringing as high as 6 cents and the best Brides and Bridesmaids bring 5 cents. Beauties are also in high favor with the supply less than the demand. Prices in this line are very firm. Carnations are not yet in full crop but the cut is increasing every day and many of the growers are now sending in fine stock. Violets are again scarce, probably due to the warm weather of the past few weeks, and lily of the valley is by no means plentiful. The chrysanthemum cut is probably at its heaviest but the market is able to take about everything which is coming in without a reduction in price. Many wholesalers now express regret at the judgment which prompted the sale of the first of the season's cut at rates considerably less than those of last year, which came from a fear of an overloaded market. It is not contended that the growers are not making money at present quotations but many are now satisfied that the entire production could have been marketed at rates equal to those obtained in previous seasons had the sellers declined to cheapen this commodity at the outset.

Greens are still good property but the supply equals the demand in smilax and asparagus. Of the latter Kennicotts are receiving some particularly good stock. There is a scarcity of adiantum, due, the growers say, to the recent hot weather, which played havoc with the plants, some growers even being compelled to cut off all the fronds and start the plants afresh.

Browning, King & Co. and Chas. A. Stevens & Bro. have had flower shows in their stores this week, which have been visited by many people. Wittbold supplied the Stevens plants, Vaughan and Wittbold jointly contributing to Browning, King & Co.'s display. Many of the plants in each instance bore the blue and pink ribbons of the Horticultural Society of Chicago.

Chas. Handel, who for a number of years has been employed at various establishments about Chicago, has leased the greenhouses of P. G. Pearson at Batavia, Ill., for a term of three years. Mr. Handel will ship to the Chicago market. He also intends to stock up his houses with a general line of bedding plants for the spring trade.

E. H. Hitchcock, of Glenwood, Mich., has been in town this week booking orders for ferns but he found several dealers pretty well stocked up. Another lot of a million is reported to have arrived from the east last week. Nevertheless the retail price is expected to soon go to $2 per thousand.

At Washington Park they have planted an unusual quantity of bulbs and, with a more favorable winter than last, a great show is to be expected in the spring. The azaleas here, of which there are many, carried over plants, are in fine shape.

The South Park Floral Co. is shipping in little else than roses from New Castle, Ind. Their stock is very good and they expect to build several houses during the spring so that they will have more of it next year.

Calvert & Son, of Lake Forest, have lost a house of Brides and Bridesmaids which were just coming into crop. An employe was fumigating with sulphur when the material took fire and did the mischief.

Frank E. Parcell, of Lake Forest, is receiving congratulations upon his marriage on Wednesday, November 15.

Poehlmann Bros., salesroom is a veritable chrysanthemum show these days. They are well satisfied with sales thus far.

Germantown, Pa.

The chrysanthemum show of the Germantown Horticultural Society was not gotten up on the usual large scale, the society deciding to continue the exhibition for but one evening, Monday, November 13. The following are the awards of the committee:

Vase cut chrysanthemums, twelve blooms, first, John F. Sibson; second, Albert Woltemate; third, Frank Smith. The varieties in the collection of Mr. Sibson consisted of Dolores, Mme. Chemonde Leche, Rustique, Mayflower, Modesto, Silver Cloud, W. H. Chadwick, Autumn Glory, Queen, Golden Wedding, E. M. Bigelow and W. C. Egan.

Vase cut chrysanthemums, six blooms, first, Henry Diehl; second John Holmes; third, John McGowan. The principal varieties in this lot were George W. Childs, Cullingfordii and M. N. Nixon.

Vase of cut roses, first, William Wilkie, for American Beauty; second J. W. Young, for Bridesmaid.

Bunch of 100 blooms single violets, first, Henry Diehl.

Three chrysanthemums in 8-inch pots, first, John McGowan. The varieties were Eda Prass, Millbrook and McKinley.

Six chrysanthemums in 6-inch pots, first, John McGowan; second, Henry Diehl.

Michell premium for display of vegetables, first, Patrick McGowan; second Michael Punch.

A special premium was awarded to Frank Smith for a vase of cut chrysanthemums and commendatory mention was made of a group of decorative plants from the greenhouses of Albert Woltemate as well as of some fine Lawrence and Clairgeau pears from John McGowan. JOSEPH MEEHAN.

ORCHIDS. VALLEY... FERNS.....

TWO TENDENCIES have recently made their appearance in modern commercial life.

Specialization.

Direct dealing.

By specializing and confinining his energies to one or two lines of products, the producer finds that he can put forth a better article than his competitor.

By direct dealing with the producer, the consumer finds he can get a better article at the price of an inferior one.

THE special products of the Rosebank Nurseries are Orchids, Valley and Ferns.

The Orchids are the best in the market, both in point of variety freshness and beauty of bloom. Cattleyas, 50c.; others, 15c. per bloom.

The Valley, of an especially high grade, is offered on yearly contract at $3 per 100; on single orders, at $3.50.

The Ferns (Adiantum), unequalled in freshness, size and strength of fronds, are sold at the regular price of $1 per 100. ☙ ☙ These special products are sold direct to the retail florist.

THE SEED TRADE.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

ALEXANDER RODGERS, Pres; ALBERT MCCULLOUGH Vice-Pres; S. F. WILLARD, Wethersfield, Conn., Sec'y and Treas.

LESTER L. MORSE is due in Chicago November 18.

EUGENE SCHAETTEL passed through Chicago November 15 on his way to the Pacific coast.

THE steamship Patria, wrecked in the English Channel, had on board for Hamburg 150 cases of Lilium longiflorum bulbs.

IT is reported that W. J. Forsgate, of San Jose, Cal., will embark in the seed growing industry and that he has planted 10,000 sacks of onions.

THE petition in bankruptcy filed by A. H. Goodwin, we are advised, relates to the old failure of the Northrup, Braslan & Goodwin Co., and has no connection with the present corporation of Goodwin-Harries Co.

The Leonard Loss.

A coroner's jury has made the cause of the death of four persons in the New England Mills, near S. F. Leonard's seed warehouse, Chicago, the subject of an investigation, and in the Chicago Journal of November 15 is reported as follows:

"From the evidence which has been taken, Franklin S. Hanson, Joseph Docter, Henry Hilton and Charles Hilton came to their deaths by shocks, injuries and burns received, caused by fire and explosion in the New England Mills, in the building known as 145 West Lake street, on November 1, 1899. And from the evidence presented the jury is unable to determine the cause of said fire and explosion."

In this connection Mr. Leonard wishes to call attention to evidence which showed that it was the northwest corner of his warehouse, that portion nearest the mill, which fell first. He states that the insurance matters are now in good shape. In regard to his loss Mr. Leonard has this to say: "A large proportion of the crop of onion sets, peas, beans and other seeds was already in the warehouse and wrecking operations indicate that they will be a total loss. Just what part of the crop had been received it is impossible to say, no records having been recovered, until the shippers and transportation companies are heard from. We hope, with some delay, to be able to make shipments on orders, although there is no hope of filling all orders in full; in fact, had there been no fire it would have been impossible to make deliveries in full on account of shortage of crop, and we, in common with other houses, some time since notified our customers to that effect."

Boston.

STORY OF A QUIET WEEK AT THE HUB.—COLD WEATHER PRODUCES LITTLE EFFECT.—COMLEY WINS WITH FINE BLOOMS.—GOOD SEEDLING CARNATIONS.—PRODIGALS RETURN.—NOW IT'S TIME FOR DINNER.—VARIOUS JOTTINGS OF INTEREST.

A sharp cold wave with flurries of snow struck us on Sunday and unsettled weather has prevailed since, but there is still an abundance of flowers in sight, notwithstanding. The only noticeable trade improvement is in the line of white chrysanthemums, which seem to be in better demand and reduced supply. Of carnations there is still an unweildy overstock. Otherwise local conditions remain practically as reported last week.

Norris F. Comley won out on the fourth day of the chrysanthemum show with the best average in the competition for large vases of long-stemmed flowers and thus secured the first prize in that class. Among the exhibits overlooked in last week's report was a vase of Klondyke cosmos for which E. F. Wilson received honorable mention. It is a gem. Lager & Hurrell showed two handsome seedling cattleyas, the first to bloom of a promising brood of their own raising.

P. Welch and F. R. Mathison returned on Saturday night in good order from their Washington—Philadelphia—New York pilgrimage. How they managed to escape from New York with so potent an attraction as the horse show about to open is a mystery to their friends. They report having had a good time, seen many interesting things and met hospitable brethren by the score.

Now that the chrysanthemum show is over we may confidently look for a prompt settlement of several dinner wagers for which the recent Columbia-Shamrock contest is responsible and for which the appetites of the bettors' friends have now had sufficient training.

N. F. McCarthy got good prices for palms and similar stock at the Studer fall sale.

Mrs. Thos. W. Lawson shows up in grand style now in the big window of Thos. F. Galvin's establishment.

It is a pleasure to be able to report that Mrs. Jackson Dawson is recovering rapidly from her severe illness.

Chas. Anderson's place at Sharon was visited by fire last week for the second time and much valuable stock destroyed.

Warren Ewell retains his faith in the bulb forcing business and is making preparations for a big demand.

Indianapolis.

VARIOUS NOTES FROM THE HOOSIER METROPOLIS.—VISITORS TO CHICAGO ARE ENTHUSIASTIC.—BERTERMANN'S FINE WORK.—MEETING OF THE CLUB AND EXHIBITION.—PRIZES AWARDED.

W. H. Rieman, John Hartje and A. Wiegand are back from Chicago, full of praise of the hospitable Chicago florists and full of admiration for their great accomplishments. They arrived some time on Thursday from the city of gigantic dimensions and spent the rest of the week trying to adjust their eyes sufficiently to small objects to find their own places.

A reception given this week by H. H. Hanna gave the Bertermann Floral Co. an opportunity to make one of the finest and probably the costliest decoration ever seen in this city.

At the last meeting of the Society of Indiana Florists it was decided to arrange for a chrysanthemum show for next year. The details will be completed at the January meeting of the association. After the meeting adjourned the florists accepted an invitation of the Bertermann Floral Co. to visit their store, at which an opening had been held the same day. The decorations in the store were something in which neither work nor expense had been spared. As one stood among the flowers, from the midst of which a music box poured forth its pretty melodies, one felt as if he were in fairyland.

In connection with the society meeting was a chrysanthemum exhibition. The quality of the flowers was so uniformly good that it proved hard work for the judges to award the prizes. E. G. Hill & Co., Stuart & Haugh, Bertermann Floral Co. and H. W. Rieman deserve the thanks of the association for fine displays not entered for competition. First prizes were awarded as follows: Six market plants, John Heidenreich; six single stemmed plants, Henry Rieman; six white blooms, John Hartje, for Mrs. Robinson; six yellow, Philip Conway & Co., for Bonnaffon; six pink, H. Rieman, for Helen Bloodgood; six red, H. Rieman six in variety, Bertermann Floral Co.

E. G. Hill & Co. received a certificate of merit for their new carnation, Ethel Crocker, and honorable mention for America and Indiana. Stuart & Haugh received honorable mention for their general display, and H. W. Rieman and Bertermann Floral Co. for chrysanthemum display.

In my last letter I should have written that 20,000 feet of glass had been built in Indianapolis last year. H. JUNGE.

STARK BROS., Louisiana, Mo., are the parties who have leased 350 acres of land near Huntsville, Ala., for nursery purposes.

J. T. THOMPSON, originator of the Columbia raspberry, says that in the five years since that variety was introduced he has sold 458,000 plants.

THE Johnson Orchard and Nursery Co., Dallas, Tex., has been incorporated with a capital of $10,000 by J. B. Adams, J. D. Estes, E. B. Bedford and others.

New Departures in Nursery Catalogues.

I think it is fair to say that the matter and make up of the nursery and seed catalogues of a period is a fairly correct criterion of the progress and character of the horticulture of the day. A few years ago catalogues ran largely to colors and chromos; a realistic rendering of the subject illustrated was a matter of minor importance. The main object was to catch the eye and excite the imagination by gorgeous pictures and glowing (mis)representations. A sensible reform has been working quietly of late. We owe much of this reform to the influence of the camera fiend and the engraver's art. The widely extended use of the camera by experiment stations and the excellent illustrations now obtained by the use of "half tones" has exercised a beneficial influence upon the nursery and seed catalogues.

I must, however, hasten to remark that the camera in the hands of an expert manipulator may be made to falsify as obligingly and more plausibly than the most ingenious and gorgeous lithograph. The latter carries in a measure its own condemnation while the illustrations furnished by the camera, on the other hand, usually travel under the mantle of honesty and truth. As a rule, I believe that photographic illustrations are fairly accurate and are great improvements over the old-time lithograph.

But there are other signs which mark the movement of horticultural progress. It is only a few years since Luther Burbank, of Santa Rosa, California, issued his first catalogue entitled "New Creations." This publication marked an important era in the work of plant breeding in America. It received a great impulse under the inspiring showing made by the persevering efforts of one man, covering a comparatively brief period. Each year Mr. Burbank has added to his laurels by giving a list of new creations with the pedigree given in each case. Hundreds have been impelled to take up the work owing to the encouragement given in the results achieved by this master hand.

With this year comes another departure, another innovation, this time from the east. It is in the form of a neat pamphlet-catalogue entitled "Orchard Improvement," issued by the Rogers Nurseries, managed by Isaac C. Rogers, Dansville, N. Y. This company claims to have "bred" a large part of their stock of each variety from selected and improved strains. The writer of the catalogue truly says: "No systematic attempt has before been made in the improvement of of varieties by bud selection." This, then, is the means they have taken to improve the variety. Wherever a specially good tree of a Jonathan, Spy or Fameuse, for instance, was discovered, scions of this particular tree were secured and used for propagating purposes, grafting or budding. While this undoubtedly is an important type of plant breeding by selection, it seems like stretching the point somewhat to call the selected type a "pedigreed" plant. A pedigree purports to give the lineage or genealogy of the plant or animal; it assumes, in other words, a known parentage through sexual intervention. In the case of selected buds, while there may be improvement there is obviously no pedigree, because the bud is just the same as the tree from which it came.

These remarks are not intended to decry the value of such work, but are thrown out with the object of pointing out an inaccuracy in the use of terms. I sincerely hope that this work of the Rogers Nursery is but the beginning of systematic endeavor in this line. Let nurserymen search faithfully for the best types of each variety and exercise as much care in selecting scions as the breeder of animals does in selecting individuals when building up strains of milk or beef producing animals. THE GRAND NEW ROSE LIBERTY.

Announcement:

Owing to the phenomenal sale of Liberty Rose, I can take no more orders for March delivery. My stock for March delivery being all sold, I can only take orders for delivery in April or later. All orders will be filled strictly in rotation. First come first served.

Most nearly approached by Meteor in color, but far surpassing that standard variety in brilliancy and purity of color, as well as in size and freedom of bloom, never showing any deformed, black or bull heads, either in winter or summer. A remarkable keeper when cut, keeping its brilliancy of color without turning blue or dropping its petals, as is the case with Gen. Jacqueminot, which it somewhat resembles in size and fragrance.

To be sure of getting the best crimson forcing rose of the century and A1 stock, send your orders at once to the undersigned or his agents mentioned below.

OUR PASTIMES

Announcements of coming contests or other events of interest to our bowling, shooting and cycling readers are solicited and will be given place in this column.

Address all correspondence for this department to Wm. J. Stewart, 67 Bromfield St., Boston, Mass.; Robt. Kift, 1725 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.; or to the American Florist Co., 324 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

At Chicago.

There was no bowling on Chicago alleys last Friday night but for Friday evening, November 17, a team of florists, Asmus, Hersen, Degnan, Winterson and A. Coulson, formerly of Buffalo, had a game on with the West Madisons, champions of the West Side League, whom the florists have once defeated

At New York.

A New Record on Philadelphia Alleys.

A new record for the best two games on the Philadelphia alleys was made by Hamilton November 14, when 238 and 210 were scored to his credit in two consecutive games. His next game was 176, which made the record for the best three, and his next, 173, was the top notch for four games, so that altogether three records were made that afternoon.

Hamilton is not only our record breaker but also holds the highest average in the club, and all handicaps in the monthly tournament are figured from his score. What Seybold is to Baltimore, Hamilton is to Philadelphia. I hope these two gladiators will meet the next time we sing "Maryland, my Maryland" in Philadelphia. It must be somewhat lonesome to be so good!

There are thirty-five entries in the November handicap contest at this writing, but a few of them have not started, and it is to be feared several more will not finish, but notwithstanding all that, it can be said that our first handicap tournament is a success. It's the liveliest month in our history and one can scarcely go near the rooms without hearing the rattle and roll and crash of the pins. Many of our old war horses of days gone by, Wm. Graham, Jno. Burton, Wm. K. Harris, Edwin Lousdale, Robert Craig, August Lutz, George Campbell and others are in it and as eager and enthusiastic as any of the youngsters, such as John Westcott and "Bill" Baker. There is some talk of a smoker Saturday evening, December 2, to give the boys a chance to congratulate the winners, as the contest will end on Thursday, November 30. If this is finally decided on due notice will be given.

At Philadelphia.

The past week has been a busy one on the club alleys. There were a number from out of town who indulged in a game or two, which, together with the regular games for the handicap tournament, kept the pin boys busy. Wm. Scott, of Buffalo, rolled a game with Robt. Craig, allowing Mr. Craig fifteen pins and winning the game handily. Several of the Pittsburg boys also tried their hands and several of the New York delegation. Hamilton, who is scratch man in the tournament, put up 203, and then went this effort thirty better, making 233, which proved high for the week. Many of the boys who are banking on their large handicap to win out will have to get a move on if they hope to carry off a prize. The committee has decided that if necessary a man can roll three games in the afternoon, as well as three in the evening; one game only can be bowled if the member so desires, but not more than three at any one time. Much interest is being taken, as a dark horse may yet be trotted out.

K.

Pastimes at Baltimore.

Upon the evening of the first day of the Baltimore chrysanthemum show the Marylanders provided entertainment for the several visitors, the opening event being a match on the alleys with five Philadelphia gentlemen who succumbed gracefully for two successive games.

After bowling the party adjourned to supper and at the conclusion of the repast President Flitton started the ball of speechmaking by welcoming the guests and installing Wm. B. Sands as toastmaster. Mr. Sands in a few well chosen remarks introduced "Buffalo Bill." Great Scott! Mr. Scott alluded to the members and the show in very flattering terms and invited everybody to visit the carnation show at Buffalo next February. The next speaker was Wm. Craig, president of the American Carnation Society, and he imparted no small degree of his enthusiastic admiration for the carnation. John Westcott, after humorous allusion to the bowling match, invited the winning team to compete at New York in 1900. Jno. Burton claimed to be no speechmaker but eulogized the game of bowling and sports of all kinds. Mr. Kift said a number of very nice things about us and G. C. Watson advised us that fruits and vegetables should be a feature of our shows. Mr. Cox, Mr. Ashland and Mr. Dryer each spoke briefly and a number of our members had something to say for the good or jollity of the order.

Following is the score of the bowling contest:

PHILADELPHIA. Player	1st	2d	BALTIMORE. Player	1st	2d
Westcott	154	137	Richmond	151	148

Baltimore Hospitality.

In response to an invitation from the Baltimore Gardeners' Club, six Philadelphians journeyed to the Monumental City last Monday morning to see their chrysanthemum show and decide to whom the various premiums should be given. The exhibition contained much that was of interest. The large circle of carpet bedding in the center of the hall was admirably executed and reflected great credit on Mr. Seybold, who planned and planted it. There were also many fine blooms of chrysanthemums and the judges were much puzzled at times to pick out the winners. Before they commenced work they were placed before a good dinner and after the judging was finished two games of ten pins were rolled to pass away the early hours of the evening, before the annual dinner of the club.

In the ten pin games the Philadelphia boys were out-played. They had apparently been so upset by the difficult problems they had had to solve in the exhibition hall that they could not bring their minds down to ten pins all at once and were beaten before they could quiet their nerves. Baltimore has good bowling material and should enter a team in the national tournament in New York next summer.

The banquet was a very enjoyable affair. The genial president, Mr. Flitton, made the boys feel quite at home and Toastmaster Sands is a past-master at the art. At the close of the feast, the boys all went out to look for meteors. Next morning as the party came down from breakfast they were given a greeting by a committee and taken for a tally-ho ride through the principal residence districts and out to Druid Hill Park. After a view of the conservatory the journey was continued to the Halliday nurseries. Here everything was found in "apple pie" order, and Foreman Richmond is to be congratulated on the general excellence of the stock under his charge. Carnations are the specialty here; they were all doing remarkably well, and as Brother Scott, of Buffalo, who was one of the party, remarked, the Daybreaks were the finest he had seen this season and he questioned if they were grown any better any where. A fine light red sport from Tidal Wave looked very well; it is called Matt. Richmond. The "hairpin" stake, a crossed wire arch, is used here and, while very simple, seemed very effective. An adjournment was taken to the mansion and here the party was welcomed by Mrs. Thomas, whose kindly face it was a pleasure to see. An elegant lunch was partaken of, the Halliday brothers being untiring in their efforts to see that nothing was left undone that could in any way add to the comfort of their guests. As the good-byes were being said, the group was arranged in front of the house and Miss Thomas took the picture.

The coach soon brought us to the show hall and, after another look at the exhibits, we were homeward bound. There was not a moment during our stay that we were lost sight of by the Baltimore brethren, who simply outdid themselves in their hospitable treatment of their guests. Long live the Baltimore Gardeners' and Florists' Club. K.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS RULE THE MARKET.—BEAUTIES BY THE FOOT.—LIBERTY SELLS WELL AS CUT FLOWER.—TRADE RATHER QUIET.—HEACOCK PLANNING BETTER THINGS.—OBSERVATIONS ANENT THE RECENT SHOW.

Chrysanthemums have been fine the past week, a good assortment of all the standard sorts being in the market and they seem to have sold fairly well. W. K. Harris is sending in some fine blooms of his Our Dear Friend, called so on account of its golden color. Robert Craig also has a good variety in his sport from Liberty, a fine white; it might be called a white Golden Wedding, which latter variety it resembles closely, except in color. Prices range from $8 to $20 per hundred for select stock, while small flowers sell at from $3 to $4. Roses are still improving. Beauties can now be furnished with stems of any length. Prices are about $1 per foot per dozen. Teas are in medium demand at from $3 to $4 per hundred. S. S. Pennock is handling Scott's Liberty at from $15 to $20 per hundred. That we are a Liberty loving people is evidenced by the great rush to Sharon Hill station, the home of this great rose. Every train leaves or takes up visitors who all seem much pleased with the appearance of the plants and their blooming qualities.

Trade has been rather quiet the past week but still quite good for the season. The debutants are a little slow about appearing, but there will be a number of important coming-out teas the next two weeks, which will without doubt make a demand for choice stock. House plants are moving with the store men. Medium sized arecas are scarce, the retail $5-size being almost out of the market.

Jos. Heacock is building a large house 24x140 to "finish" palms in. He grows them well now but is not satisfied and expects when the new house is completed to put a polish on the larger sizes that will make them simply irresistible.

It is to be regretted that the store men did not take more interest in the chrysanthemum show. The growers of roses did make a slight attempt at exhibiting their stock although it was a meager showing. The classes intended for the store men, however, were a miserable failure. None of the premiums for table or mantel decorations were entered for and scarcely anything else on the schedule except a basket of flowers. Why this state of affairs, this apathy, it is difficult to ascertain, as there are more retailers than ever and the volume of business is certainly increasing year by year. The private gardeners did nobly, in fact without them there would have been no show at all. The attendance was about the same as last season and the society should net quite a snug sum for its treasury. K.

STATE OF THE MARKET.—FIRST OF THE MONTHLY SHOWS.—SOME FINE STOCK SHOWN.—GOOD SEEDLINGS EXHIBITED BEFORE THE COMMITTEE.—MEETING OF THE FLORISTS' SOCIETY.—ACCIDENT TO MRS. HILL.

Business has been only moderate and there have been such quantities of stock on the market that no decided betterment of prices has been possible. Chrysanthemums may be seen everywhere and at present rule the market. Carnations and violets are plentiful and of good quality. Roses are fast improving, with quite a demand for Meteor and Beauties.

The first monthly show of the season was held November 11 at the club rooms of the Florists' Society and was a grand success. Never before was there staged at one time, such collections of cut flowers as was the case at this show. Fifty dollars were offered in premiums and the following captured the well earned prizes: W. Rodgers $5 for twelve blooms of Mrs. Perrin; E. G. Hill & Co. $5 with Golden Wedding; Sunderbruch's Sons $5 with Wm. H. Chadwick; R. Witterstaetter $10 with twenty-five blooms of Major Bonnaffon; E. G. Hill & Co. $5 with a vase of twelve varieties. Sunderbruch's Sons were first with Brides, Bridesmaids, and Perles; George & Allen with Meteor. Mrs. E. F. Graves, of Richmond, Ind., won with twenty-five Evelina carnations. Wm. Murphy with twenty-five America and Sunderbruch's Sons with Mrs. Bradt. Chas. Schweizar was first on potted chrysanthemums. R. Witterstaetter showed a fine collection of seedling carnations.

Before the C. S. A. committee last Saturday Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich., showed three vases of seedling chrysanthemums which were exceptionally fine and highly praised. J. Fries, of Newport, Ky., showed a vase of Mrs. R. H. Bird a cross between Evangeline and Queen. In the evening of November 11 the regular monthly meeting of the Florists' Society was held and well attended. Three new members were elected. The show flowers were sold at auction and the money turned into the treasury of the society.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred. Lemon, nee Flora Hill, of Richmond, were at the show. E. G. Hill is improving and will soon be out again. Mr. Hill's mother, who is 82 years years of age, fell on a frosty sidewalk a few days since, breaking her right arm. Her many friends wish her a speedy recovery. H. SCHWARZ.

HIGH GRADE

Lily of the Valley Pips

My first shipment of Valley Pips, for early forcing will arrive about November the 20th. Having inspected my stock personally this summer, I am confident it will be of the highest grade and give the best satisfaction. They are strong pips and well rooted, and to introduce them more, I will sell them at the low figure of $9.00 to $11.00 per 1000.

Fancy Valley in Bloom

I have always been regarded as headquarters for Valley, particularly the finest. I am more than ever in the same position and invite everybody to view my stock as I have constantly the finest and largest lot in bloom.

TRADE IMPROVING.—GOOD STOCK IN MARKET.—THE MATTER OF VIOLETS.—ABOUT DONATIONS.—KASTING MEETS DEFEAT.—NOTES.

Trade is fair and the weather not so bad as it has been for some time. There is much good stock in the market, particularly chrysanthemums, roses and carnations. Violets are very scarce. During the time of the horse show and other events the growers all ship to New York, but during periods of inactivity in the metropolis they are glad to have us handle their stock, even if we do not get horse show prices. Why do not some of our good growers, who are competing in the usual lines, produce violets for this market? They could do well at it.

The bazaar of the 74th regiment gave us all a chance to donate our stock and services. This is a point in which florists are weak. We don't wish to contribute to all these things, the advertisement is not worth it, but we submit to the extortion. One of the most successful dry goods houses has put a stop to all this sort of thing and it hasn't hurt them a penny. So should florists and other business men firmly but politely refuse these requests. Customers come to us for the merits of what we have for sale, not because of what we give away.

W. F. Kasting was defeated in his race for the council by the republican sweep but he ran ahead of the democratic ticket, which is doing pretty well.

Jerry Brookins, of Orchard Park, is sending in some extra fine Golden Wedding, Niveus and the best Major Bonnaffons ever seen here.

George McClure has charge of the greenhouses at the Pan-American Exposition and is filling them up with spring stock.

Visitors: George Schmid, of Pittsburg; Henry Wise, East Aurora; R. E. Boettger, Eggertsville. W. A.

Salem, Mass.

H. T. Conant & Co. are cutting a fine lot of single-stemmed chrysanthemums and a good crop of the old favorite rose, Bon Silene. I am informed by the firm that they have customers who have demanded this rose for a number of years. Considering the number cut to the plant the firm finds it a very desirable variety to grow, being a very free bloomer and more easy to grow than most of the new ones. TAP.

CHARLESTON, S. C.—This city will have a chrysanthemum show in connection with the approaching Fall Festival.

Kift's Adjustable Hanging Flower Vase and Plant Holder.

Ornamental, practical and useful; just the thing for short-stemmed flowers such as violets, orchids, valley, etc. Indispensable for show window and house decorations. The clasps are adjustable and can be placed in any position or angle. The fixture is made of solid brass, heavily nickel-plated and is practically indestructible. A larger size for five to six-inch potted plants, such as Adiantum Farleyense, Cyclamens, etc., shows these plants to the best possible advantage.

Kift's Individual Cut Flower Vase...

A pointed glass tube fitted with a perforated rubber cap, through which the stem of the flower is placed. The cap holds the vase and the flower firmly together and prevents the escape of water in the tube, no matter at what angle it is placed. Useful for keeping flowers when sprayed on dinner tables, for basket handles, for orchid sprays which can be inserted in pots of Farleyense, etc., and is useful for hosts of decorative effects.

MILFORD NURSERIES.

Northampton, Mass.

A fairer November day never dawned than that which ushered in the fourth chrysanthemum show of the Northampton Horticultural Society, and a fairer scene of floral beauty never graced a city hall. As one entered the hall a fine table of cut blooms from A. Parks first won admiration, a vase of twelve Mayflower being especially fine. To the right was a similar table of blooms from H. W. Field, which contained some nice Bonnaffon,,and some very good cyclamens in 5-inch pots.

The entire right side of the hall was occupied by Donald McGregor with a collection of palms, ferns and other foliage plants, among which were dotted some nice single stemmed chrysanthemums. Two large specimens of Boston fern were in this group. Mr. McGregor also showed a vase of a seedling carnation of unique color. E. J. Canning, of Smith College, showed a group of good chrysanthemum plants which were of a varied assortment of color and excited much admiration.

A square mound of decorative plants and ferns from A. Parks consisted of good, clean stock and showed fine taste in arrangement. A small group at chrysanthemums from the Insane Hospital contained quite a variety of color, that old variety Robt. M. Grey exciting considerable admiration because of its oddity. E. D. Shaw, of Holyoke, showed a vase of good commercial blooms, as did the Massachusetts Agricultural College.

While the weather was fine both days the attendance was not what it should have been and had it not been for the generosity of the city fathers in giving the hall rent free the society would have suffered a financial loss. However, President Copeland says we will keep at it until we win. G. W. THORNILEY.

TRADE IS GOOD.—STOCK IN SIGHT.—BEAUTIES IN THE LEAD.—SHOW AT SCHENLEY PARK.—JOTTINGS.

Trade is still holding up well, particularly so in the East End. Owing to the abundance of chrysanthemums the prices are somewhat reduced, but the supply of roses is shortening up, while carnations are improving but are not over plentiful. Paper White narcissi have made their appearance but there is no pressing demand for them. American Beauties have the call in roses, are very satisfactory and reasonable in price.

The annual chrysanthemum show at the Phipps Conservatory, Schenley Park, is at its height and is visited daily by great numbers of people. It will continue for about two weeks longer. Two large cases of orchids and tropical plants were received last week. The collection is the gift of the West Indian government and embraces a number of new and interesting varieties.

Wm. R. Smith, superintendent of the Botanical Gardens at Washington, has been the guest of Wm. Falconer. He is making a tour of the leading flower shows in this part of the country.

Cyclamen!

are among the very best of flowering plants for home adornment. No flowering plant is more satisfactory than is this for window gardening. I have known flowers to remain perfect on Cyclamen for six whole weeks. This statement is not a mere guess, but is the result of an actual experiment.

We have a few more plants left, ready for repotting into either 4 or 5-inch pots.

Nothing can give more satisfaction as a Christmas gift than a Cyclamen. Now is the proper time to be getting them into good shape for that gay and festive occasion.

We pack light and guarantee safe delivery if sent by express.

"Indispensable"

THIS is the only word which describes the American Florist Company's Trade Directory. This book, 359 pages of facts tersely told, is issued annually and is an aid to business and money making which no wholesaler or traveling salesman can afford to be without. It contains the name of every Florist, Nurseryman and Seedsman, arranged both by states and towns and alphabetically. It will save many times its cost by enabling you to cover America with your catalogue and at the same time waste no printed matter or postage on dead names.

W. F. Newhall is cutting some fine Lady Campbell and Princess of Wales violets. These two seem to be gaining in popularity in this section. Wyman & Son are cutting some fine chrysanthemums and are finding a ready market. Prices seem to be fairly good, although carnations have dropped slightly. Prices, as a rule, are low, for business is overdone here more than in any city in the Union. There are within the city limits upwards of eighty places where plants and flowers are grown for sale. This in a city of only 65,000 population gives an idea of what the competition is.

E. G. Blaney, Jr., Swampscott, is cutting some extra fine roses and has his carnations in excellent condition, especially Flora Hill, Mrs. Bradt and C. A. Dana. The latter is proving a fine sort and is worth more attention than has been given it hereabouts. Mr. Blaney has a seedling adiantum which should be watched. He is showing it at a number of the exhibitions. TAP.

MARION, IND.—Gunnar Teilmann, who took a number of first prizes at the Chicago show, recently had an exhibition of his own at which he displayed some thirty varieties of chrysanthemums, all well grown.

GALION, O.—Chas. J. Tracht has greatly improved his facilities during the past summer and now has large, airy houses, well heated and filled with choice stock. He gave an "opening" recently which attracted many guests.

WAYNESBORO, PA.—The chrysanthemum show at Henry Eichholz's greenhouses was a great success. Over 600 people visited the show and the many purchases made proved that a good show will pay each florist in a small town. Wm. B. Reed, Philip Fisher and C. Lawrence, all florists from Chambersburg, were visitors.

STATE OF THE MARKET.—CHRYSANTHEMUMS PLENTIFUL, INFERIOR AND CHEAP.—ROSES OFF CROP.—CARNATIONS DOING WELL.

Business for the past two weeks has been without noteworthy features. The earlier part of the period was rather dull, but little doing anywhere, compared to the supply of flowers. Lately trade has picked up somewhat, and at this writing is fairly good. Chrysanthemums seem hardly up to the quality of other years, for some reason, the flowers generally running rather small. Prices on them are as variable as the quality, but to get more than 10 cents, even for the best, seems a hard task. Roses that are offered are of fair quality generally, but the cut at present is rather limited, although, in the midst of chrysanthemum time this is an affliction not hard to bear. Carnations in general look well at this time, although they are hardly in crop yet with most growers. A.

ALBION, IND.—Chrysanthemums will be a feature of the ladies' annual bazaar Thanksgiving week.

BLUFFTON, IND.—Mrs. A. L. Meyers supplied about 600 plants for a chrysanthemum show at the Baptist church November 15 and 16.

BALTIMORE, MD.—Henry Voelker has bought at auction of the trustees the greenhouse property at the corner of Gay and Choptank streets, consideration $2,300. The property consists of two lots, for which the rental is $380, improved by ten greenhouses, office, dwelling and stables.

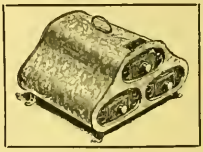
The Right Cypress for Greenhouse Material.



Have you heard of Cypress Greenhouse Material that has not been satisfactory? If you have it does not follow that Cypress is not the best lumber to use. There is White Cypress, Yellow Cypress and Red Cypress; there is Cypress that grows on the high lands and Cypress that grows in the swamps.

All of these different kinds are not suitable for greenhouse purposes. Do you know which kind is best and do you know that kind when you see it? If not you would better buy from those that do know and will deliver exactly what they sell. We introduced Cypress for greenhouse construction and pushed it to the front. We know all about it. For fifteen years we have made a specialty of furnishing it, and during this time we have built up a reputation that we can not afford to jeopardize. We send out the best only.

THE EXHIBITIONS.

Toronto.

The tenth annual chrysanthemum show of the Toronto Gardeners' and Florists' Association, held on November 15, 16, 17 and 18, was the best on record, not because of the quantity of flowers, but as regards the quality, which was so good as to leave little to be desired. The arrangement was a great improvement on that of former years. The center of the building was occupied by a mass of fine palms, surrounded at some little distance by five groups of foliage plants arranged for effect. Radiating from the center between these groups were the long tables of cut flowers. In the center of the stage was a collection of orchids from Exhibition Park such as has never been seen in Canada before, the sides and corners of the building being filled with ferns and chrysanthemums in pots.

The annex was reserved for specimen plants and the flowers and plants exhibited by amateurs, which were more numerous and better than in any previous year. The weather was all that could be desired, and the attendance such as to insure success.

It is impossible to give a description of even a small portion of the flowers shown, but the seedling white chrysanthemum, Timothy Eaton, exhibited by F. C. Miller & Sons, and for which a special prize was given, was easily the finest flower among the thousands exhibited. The perfect blooms were said to be nearly eight inches in diameter. J. H. Dunlop also showed two very fine new varieties, Toronto and Ladysmith. Following are the prize winners:

CHRYSANTHEMUM PLANTS.

Exhibition Park was first for standard with stem not more than three feet, for three specimen white, for three yellow and for three any other color; second for specimen of any kind and for twelve varieties in 6-inch pots.

St. Louis.

There is very little fault to be found with this year's exhibition of the St. Louis Florists' Club. The closing days were as successful as were those in the middle of the week and the financial results were better than ever before. The competition was close in most of the classes. Following are the awards of the days not reported last week:

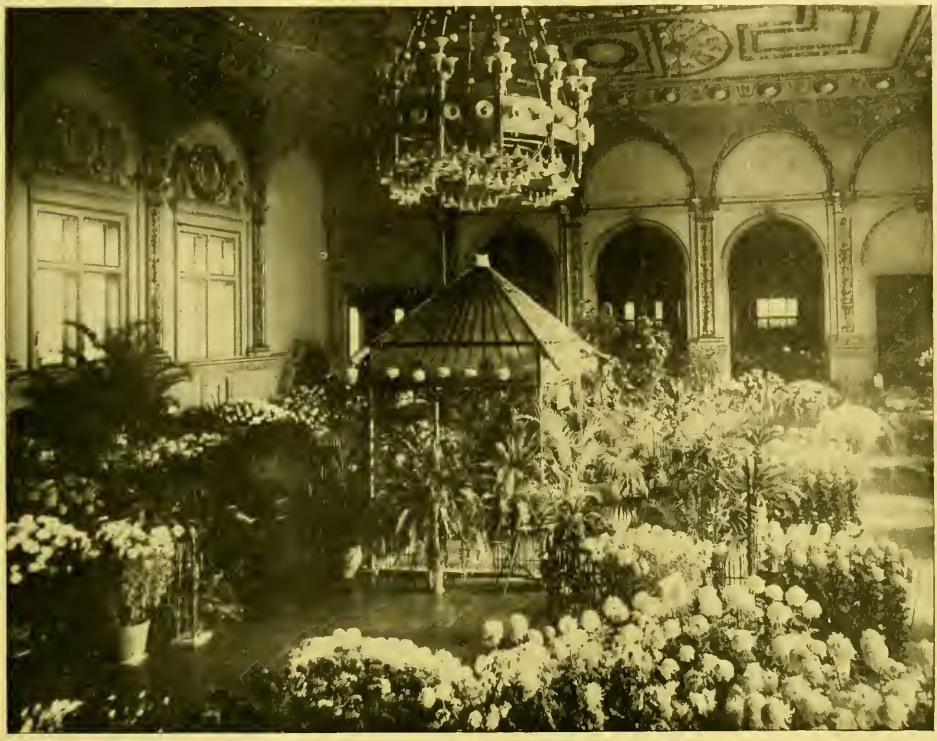
Elmira, N. Y.

Despite the snow and slush an excellent array of flowers was brought to the annual exhibition of the Elmira Horticultural Society, opening on Wednesday, November 15. The number of blooms shown was much larger than last year and the quality was also much improved. Notwithstanding the disagreeable weather the people came in goodly numbers and went away delighted with the flowers and the music. The society is well pleased with the exhibition and without drawing invidious comparisons upon Mr. Scott's little city and our saline neighbor, we will state that we are informed that our show was far ahead of those held in Buffalo and Syracuse in the last two years.

C. E. Hunn, of the horticultural department of Cornell University, brought over a fine display of new varieties and George Fancourt, of Wilkesbarre, Pa., sent some fine vases of pink and white sorts which showed up well. J. E. Anthony, of Watkins, brought along a good exhibit of well-grown blooms and G. P. Rawson had a large display of splendid flowers, the finest of which were Eclipse and W. H. Chadwick. The latter was in grand shape and one of the judges said that he considers it the finest variety in cultivation to-day. Mr. Rawson occupied the platform at the front of the room with palms, ferns and chrysanthemums beautifully arranged around a mirror and illuminated by the footlights.

E. M. & H. N. Hoffman had a dozen vases of well-grown blooms in good commercial sorts and a long table filled with low, bushy chrysanthemum plants and some fine cyclamens in full bloom. Their decorative arrangement was an alcove fitted up as a dining room, with decorated buffet, china closet and table set for six. The table and chandelier over it were trimmed with yellow and cream chrysanthemums and asparagus, with violets for favors. They also exhibited some excellent vases of carnations and roses.



John B. Rudy, gardener for Hon. J. S. Fassett, took the majority of the premiums with a splendid collection of large, heavy blooms on remarkably strong stems four to six feet long. His collection was the wonder of all visitors. Six seedlings were entered for the Board of Trade silver cup, the best of them being a pure white, quilled variety with excellent stem, foliage and petalage, and another that might be called a white Helen Bloodgood with stiff stem and foliage well up to the bloom.

The judges, Geo. E. Fancourt and N. L. Moon, of Carbondale, made the following awards:

Best seedling, the silver cup, to G. P. Rawson. Twelve varieties, first, J. B. Rudy with Major Bonnaffon, Belle of Castlewood, Modesto, Spotswood, Mrs. Murdock, Lorna Doone, Chempwee, Autumn Glory, Western King, Mrs. H. Weeks, Pennsylvania and Gladys Vanderbilt; second, G. P. Rawson with Chadwick, Eclipse, W. J. Bryan, Major Bonnaffon, Mayflower, Philadelphia, Geo. West, Adelaide White, Red Warrior, H. L. Sunderbruch, Brooklyn and Pres. W. R. Smith. Six varieties, first, J. B. Rudy with Chempwee, Mrs. H. Weeks, Pennsylvania, Lorna Doone, Belle of Castlewood and Western King; second, G. P. Rawson with Chadwick, Eclipse, Pennsylvania, W. J. Bryan, Rustique and Brooklyn. Six white, first, G. P. Rawson with Chadwick; second, J. B. Rudy with Western King. Six yellow, first, G. P. Rawson with Eclipse; second, J. B.

PORTION OF THE PROVIDENCE, R. I., SHOW.

GENERAL VIEW OF THE PHILADELPHIA EXHIBITION.

Rudy with Pennsylvania. Six pink, first, J. B. Rudy with Autumn Glory; second, G. P. Rawson with Maud Dean. Six bronze, first, G. P. Rawson with mixed vase. Six red, first, J. B. Rudy with T. H. Spaulding. Best variety certificated in 1898, first, J. B. Rudy with Rough Rider. Best decorative arrangement, E. M. & H. N. Hoffmann.

W. F. Kasting, of Buffalo, was a welcome visitor as was Mr. Michaels, of Dansville, N. Y. H. H.

Newport, R. I.

The eighth annual exhibition of the Newport Horticultural Society was held November 14 to 16 and Masonic Hall, the largest in the city, proved too small for the many exhibits, but skillful hands did splendid arrangement and the general effect of the show was excellent. No better specimen plants in 12-inch pots were ever seen and the cut blooms were the largest ever shown in Newport. Altogether it is thought that the exhibition was one-half larger than that of last year. Following are the awards:

Group of palms and foliage plants, first, W. Storrs Wells, Andrew Meikle, gardener; second, Mrs. J. M. Fiske, Chas. Stark, gardener; third, J. J. Wysong, J. G. Kyle, gardener.

Table basket of chrysanthemums, first, W. S. Wells; second, John Allan; third, I. T. Burden.

Fancy basket, other flowers than chrysanthemums, first, W. S. Wells; second, J. J. Wysong; third, Mrs. Edw. King.

Twelve blooms, American Beauty, first, Elbridge T. Gerry, Arthur Griffin, gardener; second, Mrs. Robert Goelet, Collin Robertson, gardener.

Twenty-five pink roses, first, Elbridge T. Gerry.

Fifty violets, first, Mrs. Goelet; second, E. T. Gerry.

There was also a good display of fruits and vegetables.

Certificates of merit were awarded to E. T. Gerry for a new form of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, to J. W. Ellis for Gen. Joubert chrysanthemum and for a nepenthes, to F. W. Adams for two plants of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine and to the Geo. A. Weaver Co. for a display of garden requisites.

Gratuities went to Wm. Donald for a new red chrysanthemum, to Jos. Garthley for two specimen chrysanthemums and to Peter Byrnes, of the Homogansett Greenhouses, for a collection of carnations.

A silver medal was given T. M. Davis, Frank Brunton, for collection of fifty varieties of ferns and a bronze medal went to Jas. Garthley for a collection of twenty-three varieties of geraniums.

Orange, N. J.

It was a very pretty little show that the New Jersey Floricultural Society put up last Wednesday, creditable to the exhibitors and pleasing to the visitors. The specimen plants from Peter Duff, gardener to John Crosby Brown, were as good as they make them, and included such varieties as Pink Ivory, Lincoln, Puritan, Radiance and the lovely anemone, Garza, which attracted more admiration than any other feature of the exhibition. Decorative groups of special excellence were shown by Popken & Collins, George Smith, gardener to Sydney Colgate, and D. Kindsgrab, gardener to Wm. Runkle, and Malcom MacRorie, gardener to Dr. Mandeville, contributed some fine specimen palms. Other noticeable exhibits were crotons from J. Hayes, gardener to O. D. Munn, single stem and bloom chrysanthemums from Peter Duff, Cattleya labiata from Geo. Von Qualen, gardener to Mrs. T. C. Barr, begonias, etc., from J. B. Davis, and a group of cypripediums from W. A. Manda.

In the cut flower classes there were some splendid blooms shown by M. MacRorie and George Smith, out-door varieties by J. N. May, violets by Robert McInnis, gardener to B. O. Chisholm, and Liberty rose by Ernst Asmus.

A brief meeting of the society was held in the exhibition hall in the evening and addresses were made by Wm. Duckham, Dr. Kitchen, J. I. Donlan and Wm. J. Stewart. It was announced by Mr. Donlan that at the next meeting he would give a demonstration of the art of arranging flowers, with examples of ancient and modern floral work. Then the boys adjourned to the bowling alley, where the demonstration of Orange hospitality with ancient and modern trimmings, proved so irresistible that the flight of time was the thing least noticed, and the departure of last trains the thing least cared about.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.—It is proposed to merge the Hampden Horticultural Society and the Amateur Horticultural Society under the name of Springfield Horticultural Society and to hold a few very good exhibitions rather than the many of only ordinary worth.

CHRYSANTHEMUM ARETHUSA, GROWN BY WILLIAM DONALD.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

A NEW VARIETY.

Chrysanthemum Walter Molatsch is an early yellow originating with Henry A. Molatsch, of Brooklyn, N. Y. Its period of blooming is in October and the variety is most easily described as an early Wm. H. Lincoln. It is of good size, full center, an excellent keeper and will stand an unusual amount of rough treatment, the petals not scalding easily, having a firm hold and being so tough that they are not easily bruised. In habit the plant is dwarf, growing about three feet high, the stem is thick and stiff and the foliage all that can be desired.

THE SUCCESS OF WILLIAM DONALD.

We present herewith reproductions of photographs of three chrysanthemum plants grown by William Donald, gardener to J. H. Bailey, and staged at the exhibition of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society at Horticultural Hall, Boston, November 7 to 11. These plants, Arethusa, The Bard and Golden Trophy, were shown in a group of twelve varieties, the remaining sorts, Ivory, John Shrimpton, Mutual Friend, Golden Gate, Major Bonnaffon, Garza, Miss A. L. Dalskov, Black Hawk and Iora, being no less meritorius. All were in 12-inch pots, were trained to about as near perfection as it is possible to attain and bore an unusual number of blooms, the specimen of The Bard carrying no less than 340 flowers.

WORK OF THE COMMITTEES.

Philadelphia, November 11.—John N. May, Summit, N. J., exhibited E. No. 5, a white Japanese, incurved variety, scoring commercial scale 84, exhibition scale 81 points. The following three varieties were exhibited by Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich.: Orizaba, a pink Japanese, incurved, scoring commercial scale 86, exhibition scale 84 points. Nesota, a yellow Japanese, reflexed variety scoring commercial scale 83, exhibition scale 88 points. No. 72, a bronze Japanese, reflexed variety scoring 83 points on each scale.

New York, November 18.—John N. May exhibited Eulalie, a Japanese anemone, white with lemon center, which scored exhibition scale 85 points.

Philadelphia, November 18.— Eulalie, exhibited by Mr. May, scored commercial scale 87, exhibition scale 89 points. Col. D. Appleton, a Japanese incurved, yellow, exhibited by John Marshall, Purchase, N. Y., scored 91 points on each scale. Robert G. Carey, Chestnut Hill, Pa., exhibited Chestnut Hill, a yellow Japanese incurved, which scored commercial scale 90, exhibition scale 88 points.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY COMMITTEES.

The committees judging seedling chrysanthemums will be in session each Saturday up to and including November 25. Exhibitors should make their entries, for which a fee of $2 is charged for each variety entered, to the secretary not later than Tuesday of the week they are to be shown. All exhibits forwarded to the following addresses, express charges prepaid, will receive careful consideration:

Boston, Mass., A. H. Fewkes, Horticultural Hall, Tremont street.

New York, N. Y., E. Dailledouze, care New York Cut Flower Co., 119 West Twenty-third street.

CHRYSANTHEMUM GOLDEN TROPHY, GROWN BY WILLIAM DONALD.

Philadelphia, Pa., A. B. Cartledge, 1514 Chestnut street.

Cincinnati, O., A. Witterstaetter, care Cincinnati Cut Flower Co., Fourth and Walnut streets.

Chicago, Ill., C. W. Johnson, care Illinois Cut Flower Co., 51 Wabash avenue. ELMER D. SMITH, Sec'y.

UNDEVELOPED BUDS.

EDITOR AM. FLORIST:—I enclose samples of some of my chrysanthemum buds to see if you can tell me what the trouble is. All of my Frank Hardy are affected like this and a part of the Major Bonnaffon. The first buds were picked off to see if later ones would not develop but there was no improvement. A good many of my chrysanthemums this year have a large disk that spoils the flower, particularly Mrs. E. G. Hill and Wm. Falconer. Is it a disease of the plant or the result of the treatment? Would you propagate from these plants? H. H. C.

The specimens arrived in such a withered state that it is almost unsafe to pass an opinion on them, but as near as I can tell the trouble lies in the ingredients in the soil or in the injudicious application of liquid manure about the time the buds were forming. Could we depend on cool and not too bright weather at this critical period, insuring that the plants absorb the stimulant gradually, our troubles would be considerably less, but our experiences with hot weather just at this time have taught us to be careful. The variety Frank Hardy needs careful watching in this respect, but as to Major Bonnaffon acting that way, there must be something radically wrong with the soil or treatment, as this variety is generally easily handled. Referring to the varieties Mrs. E. G. Hill and Wm. Falconer showing the disk, the former was always a very full flower here, but the latter is a little thin in the center and will open up if not well done; then again, some of the most solid blooms, when the bud has been taken too early, will form a hard center which it is impossible to develop properly. As to the advisability of propagating from these plants, I should say that if other stock can be obtained it will be better to use it but if not I would advise giving the stools a different soil with not sufficient fertilizer to cause a soft growth. C. W. JOHNSON.

CARNATIONS.

COMPARATIVE MERITS OF RED VARIETIES.

Next in importance to the absence of a satisfactory white carnation comes the need of a thoroughly good scarlet, long and strong of stem, of good size, a free bloomer and of good constitution. Jubilee promised to fulfill these requirements but falls a trifle short on the point of freedom of bloom, and aside from this is neither an early nor a late carnation. Its period is from December 1 to April 15. It will produce blooms in October and November, but they do not have the finish of the later product, and as soon as we get our warm weather in the spring they begin to deteriorate. On the other hand, I have seen Jubilee that were far ahead of the newer claimants, and the plants produced enough first-class blooms to have paid at $3 per hundred. I doubt very much if the variety has any competitors that can be grown at a lower price.

The money question is the making or unmaking of a variety. If as much money can be obtained for ten or fifteen flowers of high quality as twenty or thirty of a lower grade the grower will stick to the finest, but if his high quality flowers do not bring as much as the greater quantity he will grow the cheaper grade. If a commission house had offered $4 per hundred for Jubilee from December 1 to April 15, I would have jumped at the proposition and planted one-half of my place to the variety and grown it up to their standard. As it is I have not one plant of Jubilee on the place and am looking for a scarlet which will produce a good flower in sufficient abundance to sell for from $1.50 to $2 per hundred. But Jubilee is a good one to grow where quality counts and the grower wants to hold on to it until he is sure that he has something to surpass it.

G. H. Crane and America were given to us last season as being a nearer approach to the ideal red or scarlet. How near they will reach the ideal is yet an open question. One grower favors one and the next the other, with Crane a trifle ahead at this date, owing to the fact that it produces better early flowers than does America. Whether or not this will continue throughout the season has yet to be determined. America is going to give me its best flowers during about the same period that Jubilee does but it promises to yield fully twice as many. Crane also looks as if it would produce about twice the number of blooms per plant that can be obtained from Jubilee but this will also have to be determined by later developments.

CHRYSANTHEMUM THE BARD, GROWN BY WILLIAM DONALD.

There are five or more sports from Tidal Wave which are claimants in this class and possibly they vary from each other in the matter of shade or some other slight characteristic as well as in name. I have tried but one and have never seen the others growing. My trial was not a success on account of a severe attack of red spider following a dry summer, but the variety gave good promise and does so again this season.

It looks as if we might have a case of duplication of names in these sports and the only way it can be determined would be to have all of them shown side by side at the exhibition of the American Carnation Society. Grow them to perfection and let us see them in all their glory next February.

It is a great pity there cannot be more real business instilled among us florists, both as growers and sellers. If the commission men and the retail store keepers would attend the exhibition of the society and see the flowers and meet the growers there would be one step taken toward a better mutual understanding and each would be financially bettered.

TRADE IS BRIGHTER.—GOOD BUSINESS IN PROSPECT.—STATE OF THE MARKET.—HOWARD GROWS GOOD ROSES.—WILL GIVE HIS WHOLE TIME TO HIS NEW INDUSTRY.—COMLEY ENTERTAINS AT DINNER.—A MODEL ESTABLISHMENT.—GOOD PINK SPORT FROM MRS. MORGAN.—VISITORS.

A slight improvement in business and corresponding advance in prices of flowers is noted but these are days of hope and the firmer market is gratifying more as an indication of what is coming than as a present factor. Chrysanthemums are well depleted and their power for mischief, in case of cold weather, is about gone. Violets might be much better than they are without being extra good even then. They remind one of the old type of violets so closely associated with this neighborhood until within a very few years. Bulbous stock is as yet confined to Paper White narcissi and Roman hyacinths, the former having become sufficiently plentiful to drop from four to two dollars a hundred and the latter holding fairly firm at two dollars. Carnations are having no trouble, if good, and roses show a decided improvement in values of the higher grades.

Roses of the genuine Waban type are being grown at J. W. Howard's new place in Woburn. The houses were built one year ago and the roses are grafted stock now in their second year. The grower in charge is Christian Johnson, who was formerly with Mr. Montgomery at Waban Conservatories, and in combination with a grand rose soil, he is making a rare record. Carnations are also doing finely. This range, consisting of about 15,000 square feet, is located on a recently acquired farm in Woburn and together with the older establishment at Winter Hill gives Mr. Howard an extensive business to which he will, after December 1, give undivided attention, as on that date he leaves W. W. Rawson's seed store, in Boston, where he has had charge of one of the departments for seven years. Mr. Howard has a host of friends who will be glad to see him make this move, which cannot fail to bring him excellent results.

James Comley entertained a few of his old associates at his home in Oakmont, Lexington, on Tuesday afternoon, this being probably the last time they will visit him there as the house on his new place is about ready for occupancy and he will soon move into it. A very happy time was spent by the visitors although the occasion was rather sadly reminiscent of many happy events that all had participated in on the old Hayes estate. After dinner the party inspected Mr. Comley's greenhouses and were favorably impressed with his violets, carnations and other stock now in evidence and the facilities for doing a nice business there. Many sincere wishes for future prosperity were expressed.

Robert Montgomery's light pink sport from Mrs. Pierpont Morgan rose is greatly admired and his friends think he has struck a winner. The color is much superior to that of Mme. Cusin.

PRICES STEP UPON THE CHRISTMAS LADDER.—STOCK SHORT IN MANY LINES.—CHRYSANTHEMUMS ON THE WANE.—BOSTON FERN WANTED IN SMALL SIZES.—BEGONIA GLOIRE DE LORRAINE MAKES A HIT.—CRAIG'S OBSERVATIONS ON ADVERTISING PLANTS IN STREET CARS.

Prices have taken a brace, gone a step higher; the first rung of the Christmas ladder has been mounted, so that by easy stages, step by step, the top notch of the holiday prices will be reached. Teas are now $5 to $6 for the best, with a few extra Meteors at $8. Beauties have jumped 25 cents per foot of stem per dozen, the prices for twelve-inch stems being $1.25, twenty-four-inch $2.50, and three to three and one-half-foot stems $3 50 to $4.00 per dozen. Liberty is much in demand, as its brilliant color, even after being kept three to four days, finds it many admirers. Carnations are now coming in nicely; $1.50 is the price for good stock and a few extras are bringing $2. Violets are very scarce and it takes a hustle every morning to get even a few bunches. Doubles are now $1 per hundred and good Californias 50 cents. Mignonette is plentiful at $2 to $3. Romans are quite common at $3. Lily of the valley is in good supply at from $3 to $5. Cypripediums are $15 per hundred; cattleyas $5 per dozen, and scarcely any in this market. Chrysanthemums are on the wane but there are still a good many about at from $1 to $2 per dozen. James Cole has still a fine lot of plants in pots which will no doubt all go at Thanksgiving. There does not seem to have been so much demand for pot plants this fall. There is a good inquiry for Boston ferns that can be retailed at $5, but they seem to be in poor supply; $8 to $10 plants are very beautiful, but so also are the bills, and it takes something a trifle better to induce the exchange. Besides there are many more houses that will accommodate the medium-sized plants. Adiantum rhodophyllum is coming into general use for fern dishes, and will become a standard sort for this work, as it seems to last as well as the hardy pterises, and is as pretty as Farleyense, in fact it is supposed to be young plants of this famous variety.

Begonia Gloire de Lorraine is capturing the flower-loving public; they step right up and pay $4 for a plant in a 6-inch pot without a murmur. We think this breaks the record for blooming plants; a 6-inch cyclamen is well sold at $2, and this is probably the nearest competitor.

Robert Craig notices that rubber plants are being advertised in the street cars alongside of carpets, wall paper, etc. He thinks this opens up a new era for the plant business, as it is an indication that they are considered just as essential to the furnishings of the house as are carpets for the floor and paper on the wall. There are more rubbers grown now than ever and yet there are not enough and so Mr. Craig thinks the demand will grow until every person of moderate means will indulge in the luxury of a few plants.

A QUIET WEEK IN GOTHAM.—CONVENTION PLANS MEET WITH APPROVAL.—CONSIGNOR AND CONSIGNEE ARE WARY.—VIOLETS FAIL TO LEAP IN PRICE.—VARIOUS JOTTINGS.

On the surface not much of interest appears excepting the talk about the forthcoming convention and comment on the club's action at its last meeting. General approval of the plans, and especially of the selections made for officers to serve during the coming year, is heard, and no one can doubt that there will be a harmonious and enthusiastic prosecution of the preliminary work from now on.

Up-town not much is said, but there is plenty of scheming going on between "foxy" consignors and equally "foxy" wholesalers, for this is the time of year when it is "dangerous to feel safe," and no one knows what the morrow may develop. Now is the season when the Madison rose grower stands with railroad time table in hand and eye on the ticker, watching for the advent of a new man in the commission business or for symptoms of weakening grit on the part of an old one. And there'll be no peace now till after the new year.

The horse show is over and with it goes the hope of raising the price of violets to the old-fashioned figure. It is better in the long run for the violet that it has not overstepped the bounds of moderation on this occasion. As to quality there should be an improvement soon.

Carnations sell well when up to the mark in quality, colored varieties having the best of it for the present, and with prospects of maintaining the lead till after Thanksgiving.

It is announced that the Eastern New York Horticultural Society will hold its annual meeting next February at the American Institute rooms. That means fruits and vegetables.

BUSINESS BRISKS IN FINE FASHION.—SHORTAGE OF ROSES.—PRICES UP TO HOLIDAY LEVEL.—ROSE MEN WANT THE SUN.—FAIR SUPPLIES OF CARNATIONS AND CHRYSANTHEMUMS.—A GROWER QUITS.—WITTBOLD'S PROSPERITY.—FRIENDS AT M'KELLAR'S AND OTHER JOTTINGS.

Trade is good. One may journey up and down this market without hearing a complaint unless it be upon the scarcity of roses. There has been no oversupply of flowers at any time since the unseasonably hot weather took its departure and business has been brisk ever since show week. On Friday, November 11, trade received a fresh impetus and has not lost its momentum, with no signs of a let-up until after Thanksgiving if one comes before the new year. The week has seen some good stock in all lines. There is a shortage of roses of every kind, the plants being off-crop and the weather cold and cloudy. Carnations are sufficient to meet present demands. Chrysanthemums are past their heaviest and are in excellent local demand, although the prices are generally low; $5 a dozen has been touched once or twice this season, but from 10 cents to 25 cents per bloom is the prevailing rate. Violets are scarce, at least good ones are, and $1.50 to $2 is the usual charge. Greens are active and $2 per thousand is now asked for ferns. Prices this week have been on the level of the Thanksgiving list of last year and those who wish flowers for the day of feasting and football will find the wholesale rates fully one-third higher than a year ago. There seems every indication of heavy buying for Thanksgiving and the prospect of a general shortage of stock is causing many wholesalers to write their regular customers to place orders as early as possible, advising them that they believe that it will be impossible to fill late orders in full. There is little chance for pickled stock this time as prices for the past week have been so good that the growers could gain nothing by holding back their cut.

As an indication of what the rose growers expect of the supply next week it may be cited that one of them on Thursday refused an order for eight dozen American Beauties at $6 a dozen for Monday delivery, and Monday is not Wednesday or Thursday by any means.

Several shippers have received complaints as to the quality of carnations. The out of town buyers do not seem to realize that it is only within the last two or three weeks that really first-class carnations have been obtainable in quantity.

Louis Lindenberg, a grower at Niles Center, has abandoned his six houses and their contents to his creditors. He has been making no money for some time and his stock was in poor shape. F. Stielow and others have taken attachments to secure their claims.

Geo. Wittbold is doing a big business in which the manufacture of perpetuated palms has grown to be no small item. They are bought largely for use in stores and other places where natural stock would not long survive.

A number of the friends of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. McKellar dropped in upon them the other evening and a merry session followed. In the party were Messrs. and Mesdames Balluff, Kissell, Kohlburger, Winterson and Taylor and Messrs. Hamilton and Larson.

Ernest Marland, recently with the Chicago Carnation Co. at Joliet, has accepted a position as assistant gardener at the summer residence of Mrs. S. W. Allerton at Lake Geneva, Wis.

Reinberg Bros. are getting a pretty fair cut of roses and their carnation cut is gaining right along. The new sorts on trial continue to please them.

Paul Kreismann has incorporated his business as the Morton Grove Greenhouses with capital stock of $10,000.

Amling is getting some very good violets and his carnations from Richmond are all right.

Wietor Bros. are selling a number of pot grown carnations as flowering plants.

McKellar & Winterson are making up greens in considerable quantities.

Mrs. P. J. Hauswirth has fully recovered from her recent severe illness.

Budlong is moving his big line of chrysanthemums without difficulty.

Randall is getting some good Beauties from Bowmanville.

There will be a few Harrisii lilies for Thanksgiving.

Kennicotts report trade unprecedentedly good.

POOR ATTENDANCE AT THE SHOW.—SOME EXCELLENT WORK WITH CHRYSANTHEMUMS.—A NEW RETAIL STORE.—BURGER VISITS NEW YORK.

The most enthusiastic must feel that our annual show is an expensive luxury for, whatever the cause, the fact that the attendance was small is undeniable. Robt. Graham decorated one table with a mound of fine Dailledouze chrysanthemums on Wednesday and Perry & Welch decorated another in much the same style. The mantel decorated by the last named gentlemen was also a very pretty and tasteful piece of work. Fred Burger had, for the original design, a huge "Fleur de lis" four feet long by three wide. The whole of the center and two leaves were bordered with Ivory and the broad spaces filled in with Bonnaffon. The hand was of Mrs. Perrin. It was altogether a very attractive and well gotten up piece, the coloring producing a very pleasing effect.

Geo. Siddons has opened a very showy store at 516 Pennsylvania avenue, in addition to his Myrtle avenue store.

F. G. Burger made a visit to New York during the week. MACK.

Doings at Philadelphia.

Myers & Co. are putting in a new heater for Jacob Becker, at Fifty-fourth and Market streets.

Philadelphia is to have a spring show, a recurrence to the practice of years gone by which will be welcome to those having good things to show the public at that season.

Paul Huebner, landscape gardener for the Reading Railway Company, will be the essayist at the December meeting of the Florists' Club. Economical planting for railroad companies and the benefits of same will be the subject. Mr. Huebner is original. His remarks will be worth listening to.

Those who have anything new in the carnation line will do well to exhibit at the Florists' Club meeting Tuesday, January 2, on which date Albert M. Herr will review the carnations of the season.

Albert Woltemate has built a new show room back of his main store for the display of foliage and flowering plants.

Robert Kilt reports many orders for his new patent flower holders. Have you seen them? Very simple, ingenious and useful. Pennock, Battles, Craig, Habermehl and other prominent retailers here are using them and wonder how they ever got along without them. Orders from New York, Boston and Baltimore are appearing and this handy device bids fair to soon become a staple. G. C. W.

DELAVAN, WIS.—F. T. Manahan, has added a third fifty-foot house to his place.

THE holly situation is no better than stated in our last issue; fine stock is none too plentiful and some groves show worm eaten leaves.

IT sometimes occurs that the larger one's place becomes the more lax are the cultural methods. Do not permit this to be true in your case.

A SILVER medal was awarded to Edwin Lonsdale by the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society for a variety of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine with very delicate pink flowers.

GEORGE C. WATSON has accepted an invitation to prepare a paper to be read before the Southampton Farmers' Club in January next upon: "Mushrooms; an easy and profitable crop to grow."

CONDITIONS recently prevailing in the principal markets have furnished additional evidence that the production of strictly first grade stock can at all times be counted on to pay the highest profit.

WE beg to acknowledge with thanks the receipt of a copy of "The Florists' Manual," by Wm. Scott. The book contains a large variety of information useful to florists, set forth in Mr. Scott's well known style.

THE green market continues easy; while picking has generally slackened off, many odd lots in back counties are being heard from and just how much more than enough material there will be to go around we shall know later.

LOOK out for a change in the temperature. The past month of mild weather has been very convenient for the shipment of all perishable stocks of plants and bulbs with no sign of zero dangers, but such a condition is overdue and shippers are taking big risks who use freight routes after this date.

GROWERS of chrysanthemums should remember that the Chrysanthemum Society of America offers a silver cup valued at $20 for the seedling which averages the highest number of points. To be eligible the seedling must be shown before at least three committees, and from their scoring an average will be made.

GEORGE GIBBS writes from Orcas, Wash., that he has recently located several thousand acres of what he considers the richest bulb land in the state. It is moisture holding but does not flood in winter and he believes it in every way capable of producing bulbs equal to the 400 tulips and hyacinths which he has sent to C. J. Strombach, Lincoln Park, Chicago, to be tested.

WITH the hope that every one has as abundant reason for observing Thanksgiving, Thursday, November 30, as has the AMERICAN FLORIST, we wish to request advertisers and correspondents to mail matter intended for next week's issue one day earlier than usual, that it may reach this office on Wednesday.

Diseased Callas.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—Under a separate cover we are sending you a calla which you will notice has decayed considerably at the top of the tuber. About September 15 we potted 750 such roots in 5-inch and 6-inch pots, using a good soil. The plants were kept in a night temperature of not less than 52° and they have not been given too much water. When the plants had filled the pots with roots cow manure in liquid form was applied. About 150 of the tubers have decayed like the sample. Can you suggest a remedy? L. G. F. C.

Your calla appears to be affected with a bacterial disease closely related to one which attacks hyacinths and often causes serious trouble. The disease attacks the upper part of the tuber, which begins to decay, as well as the rootlets leading from it and also the bases of the leaves. The only remedial measure that we can suggest is to exercise care in watering so that the ground may be kept dry as possible consistent with good growth. The diseased plants should be destroyed, but in case the diseased area is limited it might be cut out. It is possible that the application of liquid manure to the callas in question may have aided in the spread of the disease. B. T. GALLOWAY.

What's in a Name?

Last night I was reading an interesting article, by G. C. Watson, in the AMERICAN FLORIST on the importance of plant names, and noticed a reference to Peter Henderson & Co. having called the Caryopteris Mastacanthus the "Mustache plant." Until this mention I did not know the name was in the catalogue, but I find that it is, in the seed portion, but the Japanese, I believe, use that cognomen and so it is not original.

I was quite interested in E. G. Hill & Co.'s response and particularly their mention of Fuchsia Storm King. It always appeared to me that the name was not the strength that developed the wonderful sale for that plant. Perhaps it will be remembered the "taffy" that went with the advertisement, leaving out the impossible picture. The text went on to say that the flowers were as large as teacups, and while there may be teacups in the neighborhood of Central Park East that would be about the size of a well grown fuchsia flower, yet the average country woman does not associate a teacup with a little thimble affair; and then again, if my recollection serves me well, the text went on still further to say that three plants, or at all events some very small number of plants, cost the advertiser $1,000. There were many other points covered in the advertisement that would be liable to lead on a buyer and so, to my mind, the name was always the smallest part of the affair. As a matter of fact, I think the name "Storm King" would be more appropriate for a ship, either air or water, and does not, after all, really convey the idea of whiteness. It seems to me it would be more appropriate when applied to a hardy rose, for instance, than to any tender plant. Old Storm King, up the Hudson, was appropriately named because it is situated to feel the first brunt of the northern blasts and acts as a shelter for the lower highlands.

I noticed also that Robert Scott & Son speak of the name "White Swan" for Geranium La Cygne and this reminds me that the first great attack of the nomenclature committee was made because the late Peter Henderson offered Boule de Neige rose as "Ball of Snow," simply a literal translation like this.

One of the best efforts Mr. Childs ever made, in my opinion, was when he called Rubus Phœnicolasius the "Wineberry;" that always seemed to me to be a sort of stroke of genius. Of course, there was some "taffy" in the advertisment of that also, about two or three plants having cost $1,000, and being the sole possessor of the great wonder, when, as a matter of fact, the old thing had been refused admittance to many a garden before he ever saw it. You can imagine what success there would be in offering it for sale as a fruit under that frightful name! I always thought that Elæagnus longipes missed a brilliant place largely because no one gave it a popular name. Once when at Mr. Falconer's, he asked me to sample some jelly made from it, which I thought was very fine, and I said to him then, "Just imagine anybody at the table asking his neighbor to please pass the Elæagnus longipes jelly!" Why, lots of people would think it was some kind of medicine!

I always thought the name "Golden Wedding" for the chrysanthemum was a happy thought. I remember distinctly the fine vase of it that was on exhibition at Madison Square Garden, bearing a fancy card with gold letters giving the name, "Golden Wedding," and nearly every woman who came along was attracted by the name immediately, and, by the way, let me say right here that women should not be forgotten in plant nomenclature, because they constitute probably seventy-five per cent of the buyers of plants.

Another very happy and appropriate name is the "Memorial Rose" applied to Rosa Wichuraiana, credit for which is due to Chas. Henderson. The application of that name to the rose in question resulted in selling thousands where hundreds had been sold; besides it directed attention to the species and as a result hybridizers have developed it wonderfully. PATRICK O'MARA.

Trade Nomenclature.

It would appear that in naming flowers and vegetables less attention has been paid to the vital point of brevity and the somewhat less important item of euphony, than with any other horticultural product. Florists often forget that names are to be considered in the light of conveniences and should be used primarily to distinguish one plant from another. Names are not meant to describe or characterize a plant; but if this is possible within reasonable limits, of course it is desirable, but any attempt to bring out the characteristic features of a plant in the name is usually a failure from the standpoint of brevity. I suppose more mistakes occur in billing plants by having names of unwieldy length than can be ascribed to any other cause. Think of the wonderful orthographic contortions which the foreign names of roses and pears, for instance, undergo at at the hand of the uninitiated American.

Another feature in connection with the christening of new plants which I think may be justly condemned in this country is the practice of trying to raise into favor a new plant or vegetable by giving it the name of a person prominent in public life. This fault cannot be corrected because it is wide spread and uncontrollable. It will, no doubt, always be repeated to a certain extent, but most people will concede that good taste should dictate a different course. "Deweys" and "Hobsons" are altogether too common in vegetables, fruits and flowers. On the other hand American florists are to be congratulated on leading the reform by the use of short names. French florists still cling to the habit of endeavoring to retain the entire family genealogy when naming a single small plant.

Perhaps I am not sufficiently informed on this point, but I would like to suggest that authoritative bodies, in passing on the merits of new plants, should also pass upon the fitness of the proposed name. This would tend to keep out of the trade some of the lengthy and objectionable appellations which are so commonly found. JOHN CRAIG.

Violet Spot.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—Enclosed you will find some spotted violet leaves. You will oblige by giving name of trouble, its cause and remedy. SUBSCRIBER.

Your violet leaves are affected with the well-known spot, which has been shown to be due to a fungus. The only satisfactory treatment for this disease is to keep the plants in as healthy a growing condition as possible. Give them plenty of air at all times, remove all badly diseased leaves and all refuse and burn them at once, cut out the spots from foliage only partially affected, keep the leaves as dry as possible and water overhead sufficiently early to allow the leaves to be perfectly dry before night.

OBITUARY.

W. L. FISCHER.

William L. Fischer, who was assistant landscape architect of the Boston park system under F. L. Olmsted from 1884 to 1896, died at Forest-Hills, November 20, aged 80 years.

J. M. MADISON.

James M. Madison, formerly in the florist business at Pottsville, Pa., where he has had a range of some 30,000 feet of glass, died at Harrisburg, Pa., on the morning of November 14, after a long illness.

C. A. TIERNAN.

C. A. Tiernan, who has been for thirty-seven years engaged in the florist business in Chelsea, Mass., died on Tuesday, November 21, aged 68 years. He leaves a widow, daughter and son. The latter will carry on the business.

L. H. STAFFORD.

The pioneer florist of the northern peninsular of Michigan, L. H. Stafford, of Marquette, died November 15, after a long illness. He was 49 years of age, an ex-alderman and a member of many fraternal societies. The funeral was in charge of the Masonic order, interment being at Park Cemetery. Mr. Stafford had built up a nice business which will be continued by his widow.

COLDWATER, MICH.—While there are many florists who have other business interests, there are few who, like Van Aken Bros., conduct a big and successful livery stable in connection with the profitable raising of smilax, violets and vegetables.

New Haven, Conn.

Local conditions have not changed to any great extent except that violets are not as good, the recent warm weather having set them back with most growers; it is keeping most of them guessing as to how many violets they will have November 25, the day of the big Yale-Princeton football game. Chrysanthemums are pretty nearly all gone, although a few good ones are still to be had. Carnations are very plentiful.

ORCHIDS. VALLEY... FERNS.....

TWO TENDENCIES have recently made their appearance in modern commercial life.
Specialization.
Direct dealing.
By specializing and confinining his energies to one or two lines of products, the producer finds that he can put forth a better article than his competitor.
By direct dealing with the producer, the consumer finds he can get a better article at the price of an inferior one.

THE special products of the Rosebank Nurseries are Orchids, Valley and Ferns.
The Orchids are the best in the market, both in point of variety freshness and beauty of bloom. Cattleyas, 50c.; others, 15c. per bloom.
The Valley, of an especially high grade, is offered on yearly contract at $3 per 100; on single orders, at $3.50.
The Ferns (Adiantum), unequalled in freshness, size and strength of fronds, are sold at the regular price of $1 per 100. These special products are sold direct to the retail florist.

THE NURSERY TRADE.

AM. ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.
W. J. PETERS, Pres.; D. S. LAKE, Vice-Pres.; GEORGE C. SEAGER, Rochester, N. Y., Sec'y.

CODLING MOTH is the greatest obstacle to success in apple growing.

NATURAL peach seed is reported scarce but several dealers are offering limited stocks.

DANIEL CARROLL, one of the best known nurserymen in the west, died November 12 at Normal, Ill., aged 57 years.

PETER YOUNGER, Geneva, Neb., sprayed his orchard five times during the past season and results warrant the effort.

THE raspberry named for its originator, F. W. Loudon, who died at Janesville, Wis., October 2, survived 35° of cold last winter.

THE Expansive Tree Protector Co., of Rochester, has been incorporated with capital of $20,000 by W. H. Coon, J. S. Lee and R. T. Chapin.

CLARENCE WEDGE and M. E. Hinckley will infuse some of their enthusiasm for Iowa horticulture into The Fruitman, now issued in enlarged form from Mt. Vernon, Ia.

M. BUTTERFIELD, of the Star Nurseries, Lee's Summit, Mo., has made arrangements to start an experimental orchard near Farmington. Mr. Butterfield has planted 80,000 trees on the contract plan within the past few years.

"Tree Night" in Philadelphia.

Next Tuesday evening, November 28, is the date set by the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society for the discussion of the subject of tree planting in cities. This was decided at the regular monthly meeting held in Horticultural Hall, November 21, it being felt that the importance and timeliness of the subject deserved a special meeting to itself. This action was advocated by President James M. Rhodes and a committee was appointed to arrange for speakers for the occasion.

The Horticultural Society has for years been an earnest advocate for beautifying our city with suitable trees and heartily endorses the present attitude of the Mayor, Director English, City Forester Lewis and other city officials. A full and free discussion by experts on the project of making a grand boulevard on Broad street will be of great benefit in securing the planting of the most suitable species and may show the wisdom of modifying in some respects the present plans. City Forester Lewis has consentcd to address the meeting and will be the opening speaker for the symposium. Professor Macfarlane, Dr. Rothrock, Professor Meehan and others will follow.

A cordial invitation is extended to the general public to attend this meeting, which is of great importance from a civic standpoint and ought to interest all. A special invitation has been sent to the Mayor and other city officials and they have signified their intention of being present, as have also the members of the Civic Club and the Philadelphia Florists' Club, both of which organizations have been earnest workers in advocating tree planting as a salutary sanitary influence as well as for its picturesque value in beautifying our public highways.

The great trouble heretofore has been that every lot-owner has been a law unto himself and the wrong sorts of trees have been planted and they have generally been planted poorly, have often been left a prey to insects and disease, or, if attended, have been attended by the tree butcher. The consequences of this have been seen on every hand all over the city and to say it is an eyesore is putting it mildly. True, a great improvement has been effected by judicious spraying and pruning of the trees in the city squares since these came under the charge of Mr. Lewis, but that is only a small part of the matter. The city ought to look after the trees on all the streets and give them intelligent, up-to-date treatment. Philadelphia must get a big move on her if she is to keep abreast of other cities in this respect and it is gratifying to find the present city administration is alive to this. It is therefore in order to endorse and back them up. The friendly criticism of experts as to sorts and methods is meant as a help to this and there can be no two opinions as to the wisdom of the general idea.

G. C. WATSON.

Pittsburg.

TRADE IS GOOD BUT PRICES ARE STATIONARY.—VISITORS TO PHILADELPHIA.—HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY TO COME.

In spite of inclement weather this week trade has been very satisfactory but there is no change in prices. Harrisii lilies have made their first appearance.

Wm. Falconer, H. Blind, John Bader and Fred. Burki visited the Philadelphia flower show and express themselves well pleased.

At the November meeting of the Florists' Club, which was well attended, M. C. Dunlevy spoke on the annual meeting of the State Horticultural Society, which takes place here about the middle of January. He urged the Florists' Club to take an interest in the matter and it was decided that a committee of two be appointed to confer with the Fruit Growers' Association.

GEO. OESTERLE.

Malden, Mass.

Peter Ball is cutting a large crop of roses, having many houses stocked with Bride and Bridesmaid. The recent unseasonable warmth has rushed in the blooms in a most exasperating manner and forced prices down but as Mr. Ball is classed among the best growers he has not suffered as severely as have others. Most of his plants are breaking nicely and afford every prospect for a good cut for the holidays. A new house 18x100 planted with Adiantum cuneatum is showing fine growth.

E. D. Kaulbach has a range of modern houses and a well appointed city store at which he finds trade good. Mr. Kaulbach was recently in receipt of an order from that well known itinerant, the palm swindler. Mr. Kaulbach's son took the $75-worth of plants to the address given but verified the order and discovered the deception. On the way back with the load he met the swindler and gave battle despite the desparity in size. The fellow was lucky to get off with a beating.

TAP.

Peoria, Ill.

Business has been good for some time and there appears to be an abundance of flowers. The only kicking is on the coal bills, which are decidedly high.

The prospect for Thanksgiving looks bright. J. C. Murray will have a fine cut of carnations. He is greatly pleased with G. H. Crane and will plant it largely next year. Evanston also does well with him.

Cole Bros. have a fine bench of Mrs. Bradt and their Beauties are heavily in crop. They have substituted steam for hot water in part of their range and are well pleased with the change.

C. Loveridge's grafted roses show up better than do the own-root plants. His violets are in good shape after the hot autumn.

G. A. Kuhl certainly has the prettiest store in town and the display there is always arranged in exquisite taste.

OUR PASTIMES

Announcements of coming contests or other events of interest to our bowling, shooting and cycling readers are solicited and will be given place in this column.

Address all correspondence for this department to Wm. J. Stewart, 67 Bromfield St., Boston, Mass.; Robt. Kift, 1725 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.; or to the American Florist Co., 324 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

OUR readers will remember that the high score in the bowling tournament at Detroit last August was made by George Stollery, of Chicago, who was awarded the high game medal called the Detroit Hotel Trophy. The trophy was not delivered until recently, and we are now pleased to be able to present an illustration of the handsome gold prize, which is valued at $60.

At New York.

Following are the scores made on the Fifty-seventh street alleys November 20:

Player.	1st	2d	3d	4th	Av.
Lang	151	180	144	171	162
Schenck	144	128	134	186	148
Burns, Jr.	149	151	146	126	143
Marshall	102	138	173	148	140
Burns	158	124	127	130	135
Woerner	109	128	134	115	122
Von Asch	106	131	124	121	121
Traendly	99	94	125	144	116
Donlan	112				112
Siebrecht	103	91	99	123	104

At Flatbush.

Thursday evening, November 16, found the usual jolly party at the bowling alleys. Riley went home after the game with two pots in his pocket, but that is getting to be such a common occurrence that he was not agitated in the least. The figures read thus:

Player	1st	2d	Player	1st	2d
Riley	156	205	Papa Zeller	89	103
E. Dailledouze	151	146	Donlan	99	121
H. Dailledouze	125	130	Kunz	108	91
Woerner	127	127	A. Zeller		112
Schmutz	146	104	Prosser		126
Mellis	135	130	Stewart		126
P. Dailledouze	116	110	J. Lang		86

At Chicago.

The quintette of florists who tackled the West Madisons, champions of the West Side Bowling League, on the evening of November 17, have very little to say in regard to the contest; they are strangely forgetful of the details of the match, and have even forgotten just how the score stood at the finish. In order to refresh their memories and for the entertainment of their friends, the following figures are presented; they explain the matter fully:

FLORISTS.				WEST MADISONS.
Player	1st	2d	3rd	Player	1st	2d	3rd
Asmus	157	117	168	Kenna	194	174	167
Hurson	254	158	158	Helkes	173	159	169
Coulson	185	204	167	Ruther	149	170	177
Degnan	135	135	145	Bowen	169	155	143
Winterson	145	154	158	Ulrich	163	178	148
Total	776	768	796	Total	848	836	804

A few weeks ago the Florists defeated the West Madisons three straight games and now they know how the shoe feels on the other foot. Both these contests were on Kenna's alleys, the regular stamping ground of the West Side team, and the concluding match will shortly be pulled off at Anson's, where the florists feel quite at home. Following last week's defeat, and to show what they might have done had they really tried, the florists bowled a game among themselves, Coulson making 203, Winterson 190, Asmus 180, Degnan 159, and Kreitling 102.

The florists are contributing to the success of several of the teams in the local bowling leagues, the Central Parks, for instance, playing three florists on their team of five. On Tuesday evening this club defeated the Edelweiss team, Coulson scoring 166, 150 and 211, Hurson 175, 176 and 165, Asmus 160, 129 and 154. Coulson is a great accession to the local bowling fraternity.

TROPHY WON AT DETROIT BY GEO STOLLERY.

A Pleasant Reunion.

The employes of the Joseph Breck & Sons Corporation held their fifth annual reunion at Berkeley Hall, Boston, on the evening of Friday, November 17. About 250 were present and the event was an unqualified success, long to be remembered by those who participated. Messrs. C. H. Breck, Jr., E. O. Hatch, Archi. Smith and J. F. Breck, with their ladies, were present and a letter from Hon. C. H. B. Breck expressed his regrets at enforced absence. He made the suggestion in his letter that a historian be appointed to record events annually as they transpire at these pleasant gatherings and also that an effort be made to organize a beneficial society among the employes, pledging a good subscription on behalf of the corporation as a starter. Floor directors, reception committee and others active in arranging the affair deserved great credit for the perfection of all arrangements. Previous to the dancing the following programme was enjoyed, all the performers being connected with the Breck establishment:

Quartet, "In Absence" Employes' Male Quartet.
Piano solo, "Rag-Time Specialties,"
Mr. Peter Lee.
Song, "Because," Miss E. Maud Abramson.
Zylophone selections. Mr. Frank Dodge.
Reading, "Zingarella" Miss Maud Martindale.
Remarks by Hon. C. H. B. Breck.
Song, "Love's Sorrow," Mr. L. M. Myers.
March, "Under the Double Eagle,"
Royal Mandolin and Guitar Club.
Song, "Past and Future," Miss Helen G. Kairns
Comedietta, "A Happy Pair,"
Miss Ollie and Mr. Mark Abrams.
Accompanists—Mrs. Pierce, Mrs. Wilson and Mr. Delano.
Master of Ceremonies—Edwin A. Towne.

At Denver.

Twenty members were present at the Denver Florists' Bowling Club on November 14, renewed interest being stimulated by the gold medal offered by the Park Floral Company for the best score in a series of fifty-four games to be played this winter. Wm. Lingenbrink is accused of trying for the booby prize, one black cat. The following are the scores for the evening:

In 1890 Geo. W. Glines erected a small house for cucumbers; so profitable did the venture prove that constant additions have been made and two steam-heated houses are now under way, one 36x270, the other 38x335, which will bring the total glass up to 100,000 feet. Last year Mr. Glines marketed 100 bushels of tomatoes, 4,000 bushels of beet greens, 200,000 heads of lettuce and 4,000 bushels of cucumbers, 900 bushels being taken at one cut from a house 50x300, establishing a new record in this line. White Spine is the only cucumber grown. At present Mr. Glines has 100,000 lettuce under way and has been marketing radishes and cucumbers for some time. Large quantities of his vegetables are shipped to Buffalo and to other cities as far west as St. Paul.

Close to the Glines establishment is that of C. E. Caldwell, where four houses 40x200 are devoted to cucumbers for the Boston market and where a mushroom cellar 30x90 is yielding splendid returns.

The MODEL Extension Carnation Support.

LANCASTER, PA., June 17, '99.
MR. THERON PARKER,
Brooklyn, N. Y.
Dear Sir:—Your Model Carnation Support is all right in every way and will no doubt be considered as necessary as good plants with growers when better known. I consider it the best on the market, and if your other specialties are equally as good, they should make another addition to the money makers of 1900. Respectfully,
ALBERT M. HERR.

MR. THERON PARKER,
Dear Sir:—It gives me much pleasure to congratulate you upon your success in getting up carnation supports. I think that those I have had from you are about as perfect as anybody will be able to make them. They certainly fill my bill for an ideal carnation support, a thing I have been looking for a long time. Wishing ery success in the sale of them, I am

Kift's Adjustable Hanging Flower Vase and Plant Holder.

Ornamental, practical and useful; just the thing for short-stemmed flowers such as violets, orchids, valley, etc. Indispensable for show window and house decorations. The clasps are adjustable and can be placed in any position or angle. The fixture is made of solid brass, heavily nickel-plated and is practically indestructible. A larger size for five to six-inch potted plants, such as Adiantum Farleyense, Cyclamens, etc., shows these plants to the best possible advantage.

Kift's Individual Cut Flower Vase...

A pointed glass tube fitted with a perforated rubber cap, through which the stem of the flower is placed. The cap holds the vase and the flower firmly together and prevents the escape of water in the tube, no matter at what angle it is placed. Useful for keeping flowers when sprayed on dinner tables, for basket handles, for orchid sprays which can be inserted in pots of Farleyense, etc., and is useful for hosts of decorative effects.

BUSINESS QUIET.—A GLUT OF CHRYSANTHEMUMS.—SEEN AT THE MARKET.—LEADING VARIETIES.—PERSONAL MENTION.

Business the past week has been rather quiet, but the wholesale houses report a fair shipping trade. Chrysanthemums at the Sixth Street Market were simply a glut last Saturday, only a small proportion of the cut being disposed of, and that at low prices. Bonnaffon stands as were seen at Pfeifer Sons' and Popp's stand were magnificent, and should have sold readily at $3 per dozen. Karl Schweizer's, Mrs. Chas. Pfeifer's and J. Ernsterhoff's stands had fine displays of pot-grown Ivory, which seems to be the best pot plant. Princess Beatrice, Pink Ivory, Bonnaffon, Mrs. Jones, Mrs. Robinson, Geo. W. Childs and H. L. Sunderbruch are the principal varieties that are grown for market plants here. There is still room for a good pink of dwarf habit, as Pink Ivory comes too light colored with most growers.

R. Witterstaetter returned from his recent hunting trip loaded down with game. Charles McCullough is spending a week in Michigan after ducks.

Geo. Walker, the genial superintendent at the Sixth Street Flower Market, was a conspicuous figure last Saturday with an 8-inch Golden Wedding in his buttonhole.

B. P. Critchell's Sons have remodeled their Fourth street store in keeping with the other stores along that popular street. H. SCHWARZ.

WYNNEWOOD, PA.—Edward Le Boutillier, of Germantown, has purchased the residence and grounds of Charles Dissel, the transfer including the fine collection of plants in the greenhouses, specimens of which John Thatcher, the gardener, has so often brought to the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society's meetings and exhibitions. Mr. Le Boutillier's plans concerning the plants is not known, but it is to be hoped they may be kept together and under Mr. Thatcher's care.

THE GRAND NEW ROSE LIBERTY!

Won Highest Honors Wherever Shown.

The Finest Crimson Forcing Rose of the Century.

MOST nearly approached by Meteor in color, but far surpassing that standard variety in brilliancy and purity of color, as well as in size and freedom of bloom, never showing any deformed, black or bull heads, either in winter or summer. A remarkable keeper when cut keeping its brilliancy of color without turning blue or dropping its petals, as is the case with Gen. Jacqueminot, which it somewhat resembles in size and fragrance.

I HEREBY EXTEND A CORDIAL INVITATION TO ALL LOVERS OF THE QUEEN OF FLOWERS TO COME AND SEE LIBERTY GROWING.

ETHEL CROCKER

Absolutely the BEST PINK CARNATION ever offered the trade.

Grown equally successfully by Hill, Craig, and myself; you are not buying it on a venture, but knowing that it is not a success in one soil and a failure in another.

In color, size, fragrance and stem it is just what the "storemen" want. In habit, constitution and freedom of bloom it is just what the grower wants, never out of crop from September to July, more flowers to the square foot than any other known variety and practically no seconds.

With 18,000 stock plants to work from there is no danger of over propagation, and you are not asked to wait until planting out time for your cuttings but can have them whenever wanted. Orders entrusted to me will have my personal attention, both in the selection of the cuttings and the filling of the order.

St. Joseph, Mo.

The weather has been quite warm so far this fall, very dry and dusty for eight weeks or more until November 20, when we had a gentle shower, not enough to fill the many empty cisterns that are to be found throughout the city. The supply of flowers has been about equal to the demand although at times some roses would accumulate. Trade has been very fair, especially in funeral work. Nothing very large has developed in society affairs thus far but we are looking for surprises. Demand for carnations has been unusually good and there have also been numerous calls for Beauties. Chrysanthemums have been going freely, only the odd colors are not wanted. Mr. Rau, Superintendent of Krug Park, opened his chrysanthemum show in the new conservatory November 20. The display is very fine, comprising about 1500 pot plant, of which the majority are new and rare varieties. J. N. K.

New Orleans.

BUSINESS BEGINS IN EARNEST WITH MEMORIAL DAY.—A SPRING SHOW ASSURED.—A SOCIETY EXHIBITION.

The first of November brings our Memorial Day and trade was good with everyone and promises to continue so. Abele Bros. announce sales fifty per cent ahead of last year, E. Valdejo sold his entire stock and C. Holst disposed of a large quantity of chrysanthemums. Others did equally well. Stock was not sufficiently plentiful to cause a break in prices but was still ample to meet demands. Some very poor carnations were shipped in from the north but otherwise qualities were satisfactory.

The New Orleans Horticultural Society has decided to give an exhibition some time in April. At the last meeting a splendid display of chrysanthemum blooms graced the society quarters at 10 Royal street. Abele Bros. had fine flowers of Mrs. Pierce, Niveus and Mrs. Robinson. E. Valdejo brought The Queen in good form and Dan Newsham had Black Hawk, Mrs. Weeks, Autumn Glory and others. A few others also showed good blooms.

Shindler & Van Geffen have their new store at 1814–1818 Dryads street heavily stocked. They carry a full line and report splendid business. M. M. L.

New Castle, Ind.

The South Park Floral Company is prosecuting the construction of an addition the completion of which will make their establishment one of the largest if not the very largest in Indiana. Three houses 25x135 and five houses 25x265 are underway and will raise the area of glass to 100,000 square feet. The work is being done after the most approved methods. The South Park Floral Company has made a pronounced success of rose growing and the whole establishment will hereafter be devoted to that flower. It is expected that 20,000 American Beauty plants will be grown next season. All the South Park product is sold through E. C. Amling, Chicago.

GUTHRIE, OKA.—Announcement is made of the marraige of John Wiant Furrow, of Furrow Bros., and Miss Oma Mai Bowden on November 16.

Clear Cypress Greenhouse Material.

This with us means the best growth of Cypress Lumber and the best grade of that growth; and from this grade all the sap—bright sap, which only experts can detect—as well as stained sap, knots and other defects cut out. Others do not equal our quality if they do beat our prices. It is not hard to see the reason: You can not buy gold dollars at fifty cents each. Experienced growers know that the best is not too good and cheapest in the long run.

THE EXHIBITIONS.

Tarrytown, N. Y.

A half a year is not a great while to work up a flower show and its only that long since the Tarrytown Horticultural Society was organized, but in those six months the society has prospered greatly and its first exhibition was not only an unqualified success but eclipsed the best efforts of some of the older and stronger eastern organizations. The exhibits were numerous, in fact so extensive that sufficient space was not easily afforded; the quality was excellent throughout, the staging effective in almost every instance and the attendance all that could be desired, much more than was expected. Not only did society turn out in force but many men well known in horticultural circles were present and warm in their commendation. This initial success will serve as an incentive to even better work in the years to come, for it is expected that the show will be an annual event.

Wm. Stevenson, gardener to Chas. Graef, was first on group of chrysanthemums in pots, with Robt. Angus, gardener to Major Hopkins, second. Both groups were excellent, consisting of well-grown plants and including not only the best of the old sorts but many of the latest French and American novelties. In the seven other classes for chrysanthemum plants Wm. Turner, gardener to Wm. Rockefeller, was easily the leader, taking all but one first, that for twelve single-stemmed plants, which was won by Wm. Anderson, gardener to J. M. Constable. Mr. Turner's winning varieties were Harry Hurrell, Mrs. Robinson, Geo. W. Childs, Viviand-Morel and Mrs. O. P. Bassett.

In his group of palms and foliage plants Mr. Turner had finely colored crotons, dracænas, Pandanus Veitchii, anthuriums, dieffenbachias, etc., edged with Asparagus Sprengerii and ferns, taking first prize over the F. R. Pierson Co. John Roshard, gardener to Mr. Dickerson, also had a good collection.

The best specimen palm was Mr. Stevenson's Rhapis flabelliformis and the second F. R. Pierson Co.'s Areca lutescens. The best foliage plant was Cyanophyllum magnificum, grown by Howard Nicol, gardener to Mrs. J. B. Trevor, Yonkers, who also had the best table of decorative plants in the class limited to private gardeners. The best six decorative plants were grown by Mr. Anderson; they were Dracæna Sanderiana, D. Godseffiana, Croton Lady Zetland, Panax Victoria, Evodia elegans and Aralia Veitchii. James Nichol, gardener to Mrs. George Lewis, brought the best three ferns, Nephrolepis Bostoniensis, N. davallioides furcans and Adiantum Farleyense. The best single fern was Howard Nichol's Davallia Fijiensis, who also had the best adiantums. The winning selaginellas were grown by Wm. Scott and the finest cyclamens by Wm. Stevenson.

In cut chrysanthemums the winning thirty-six blooms, six varieties, were grown by Wm. Turner; they were Peter Kay, Mrs. Bassett, Mrs. Weeks, Viviand-Morel, Mrs. Robinson and Major Bonnaffon. Wm. Scott was first for his thirty-six distinct varieties and for twelve varieties, his list covering all the up-to-date sorts. The prize for six white blooms fell to Wm. Smith, of the Mallory estate, as did that for best arranged vase. Wm. Anderson grew the best yellow, Mrs. Trainor L. Park, and the best crimson, John Shrimpton. The best pink were Mr. Turner's Viviand-Morel. The Dr. Tewey prize for twelve blooms of a variety introduced in 1897 went to Mrs. Weeks, grown by Mr. Scott.

In cut roses the F. R. Pierson Co. showed the best American Beauties and received a certificate of merit for Liberty. A. A. Taaffe, gardener for F. O. Mathison, had the winning Perles, Wm. Turner the finest Mrs. Morgans, and James Nichol the best Brides and Bridesmaids.

Wm. Hay, gardener to J. M. Williams, sent the best six varieties of carnations, Pingree, Bradt, Lily Dean, Jubilee, Triumph and White Cloud, and the best twelve blooms white, White Cloud. Wm. Anderson grew the best three varieties, the Briar Cliffs Farm the best Crane, Gold Nugget and Bradt and Mr. Taaffe the winning Triumph. The Pierson Co. received a certificate for Mrs. Lawson.

H. A. Spavin, of Mt. Kisco, won for double violets with Marie Louise and received a certificate for Lady Campbell. R. Jenkins was first for fifty singles and Jas. Nichol for the Morgan prize for 100 Campbell.

John Fursey, the Yonkers florist, was the star in the class for floral arrangements. There were considerable displays of fruits and vegetables from the estates of Mallory, Brinkerhoff, Wilson, Eastman, Mathison, Mrs. Palmer, Graef, Rockefeller, Mrs. S. E. Sackett and Major Hopkins and the competition was close.

Special prizes, certificates and honorable mention were bestowed upon Howard Nicol, for Cycas revoluta; Wm. Scott, for a table of decorative plants; F. Mangold, superintendent of the Helen Gould estate, for decorative plants and orchids; Kretchmar Bros., Nyack, John Egan & Son, Tarrytown, and R. Henderson, Hastings, for carnations, and Claude Wilson, of Dobbs Ferry, for apples.

A meeting of the society was held on November 21, four new members being elected and four names proposed. The treasurer presented a statement showing that when all liabilities arising from the show are paid there will be a balance of $200; the debts were ordered discharged at once. Thanks were extended to Wm. Turner for the able manner in which he managed the show and to P. O'Mara, Wm. Harvey, Peter Duff, George Smith, Wm. Duckham, Wm. Anderson and W.E. Marshall for their service as judges. Officers for the ensuing year were nominated, to be voted upon at the meeting December 28, following which there will be a collation to which the committee in charge was instructed to invite the gentlemen who assisted in the success of the exhibition.

Galveston, Tex.

The chrysanthemum fair at Galveston, November 14 and 15, was none the less successful because it was a first attempt. While interest centered in the chrysanthemum there were also excellent displays of palms and ferns, which attain unusual excellence in this semi-tropical climate. These blended splendidly in effect with the great mass of multi-colored chrysanthemums. In point of new and excellent varieties shown the exhibit was up-to-date in every respect, the later introductions gaining first attention from the splendid crowds. Among these sorts were Julia Scaramanza, Silver Wedding, Mrs. Trainor L. Park, Admiral Dewey, Nyanza and some Texas-grown seedlings not yet disseminated. Most prominent among the prize winning varieties may be mentioned The Queen, Niveus, Mrs. H. Robinson, Frank Hardy, Modesto, Major Bonnaffon, Golden Wedding, Col. W. R. Smith, Minerva, Viviand-Morel, Mrs. S. T. Murdock, Maud Dean and Black Hawk.

It was noticed that the pink varieties were very much faded in color this year, possibly owing to the long warm season unusual at this time. All were more or less defective in color except Mrs. S. T. Murdock. Golden Wedding was shown in unusual excellence, being almost invariably first as a yellow. Modesto in some instances showed an undeveloped center which a little more time would have no doubt completed perfectly. Pot plants were shown in great profusion and, except for the fact that some of them were a little tall, were of very superior quality.

Galveston has never been considered a very successful locality for the culture of the chrysanthemum because of its light, sandy soil and immediate proximity to the gulf coast and about all the display in this line was brought from Alvin, twenty-five miles from the coast, and from other adjoining towns. Exhibits from Nathan Smith & Son, of Adrian, Mich., and James Morton, of Clarksville, Tenn., while superb in every way, were not more than able to hold their own against cut blooms grown under canvas at Alvin. Among the successful growers at Alvin are Mesdames J. Wilburn, Z. T. Sedwick, J. E. Cannon, B. Snyder, P. M. Hartley, Ed Carter, S. O. Smith, A. W. Wilkirson, E. L. Rugg and W. J. Hamlett, all of whom grow flowers for the special purpose of winning prizes at the south Texas flower shows. Among the Galveston growers who make more of a specialty of growing decorative foliage plants are Otto Fehrlin, J. D. Preusner, Mrs. J. B. Harris, Mrs. J. Maurer, Mrs. Hughes and Thos. Keats. Wm. Kutschbach, of Houston, was also represented by a very large display of chrysanthemums and won several nice premiums.

The judging was performed by S. J. Mitchell, of Houston. The management promises a show for next year on a much larger scale.

Waco, Tex.

The fourth annual chrysanthemum show of the Texas State Floral Society, held at Waco, November 15 to 17, was a distinct advance over its predecessors; it excelled in extent, in quality of exhibits and in arrangement. Among the principal features of the show were the mantel decorations and the hanging baskets. There was sharp competition all along the line and James Morton, of Clarksville, Tenn., had no light task in awarding the premiums. Class A was open to all and here florists and amateurs met in keen combat, Walter Reese distancing such successful commercial exhibitors as Miss Anna West, James Wolfe and the Texas Seed and Floral Co. in many of the classes, both for cut chrysanthemum blooms and bush plants. In the mantel decoration Miss West won. Class B was limited to amateurs and in the entries for cut flowers Mr. Reese won all but one of the firsts on the first day; the second day, however, he was obliged to divide honors with George Roberts and others. On chrysanthemums and other plants the leading amateurs were Mrs. J. W. Henshaw, Miss Bella Beer, Walter Reese, Mrs. Richardson, Mrs. Kendricks, Mrs. J. D. Shaw, Mrs. W. S. Plunkett, Mrs. J. P. Carpenter, Mrs. G. M. Shepard and Mrs. A. Branson. There were other classes for children of various ages and on the whole the exhibition left little to be desired, certainly nothing as to attendance or social success.

Omaha, Neb.

One of the important social events of this and last week has been the chrysanthemum show at the greenhouses of Geo. A. Joslyn, the entire receipts from which were given to one of the local churches. The seven greenhouses, constructed entirely of stone, iron and glass, surround a large central dome devoted to palms and, although only three years old, both in construction and in the large collection of rare plants, they rank high among the best in the country. In the portion devoted to orchids are found varieties of which there are only a few in cultivation in the United States. In the arrangement of plants, the large and beautiful collection of chrysanthemums were given the advantage, while hidden among the plants and in rustic caves and fountains abounding in gold fish, were colored incandescent electric lights. The florist in charge of the greenhouses is Louis Lecluse.

CHAS. GRAEF'S PRIZE GROUP OF CHRYSANTHEMUMS AT TARRYTOWN, N. Y.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

WORK OF THE COMMITTEES.

As had been announced, November 25 was the last date for regular meetings of the C. S. A. committees. To judge late seedlings it has been the custom for the committees to meet on following Saturdays when requested. Those having late blooms to show can arrange for a special meeting of any committee by addressing the chairmen as follows:

A. H. Fewkes, Newton Highlands, Mass.; Eugene Dailledouze, Flatbush, L. I., N. Y.; A. B. Cartledge, 1514 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, Pa.; R. Witterstaetter, Sedamsville, Ohio, and Jas. Hartshorne, Joliet, Ill. Notice should be given the chairmen at least two days before seedlings are shown.

New York, November 25.—Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich., exhibited the following three varieties: Stellata, a rich yellow Japanese variety, scored both scales 95 points; White Bonnaffon, a white incurved, scored commercial scale 89 points; Pluma, a light pink hairy, incurved Japanese, scored commercial scale 80 points.

Boston, November 25.—The following three varieties were exhibited by Nathan Smith & Son: Pluma, scored exhibition scale 86 points; Lavender Queen, a deep lavender pink variety of the Japanese reflexed type scored commercial scale 92, exhibition scale 95 points; Intensity, a crimson Japanese variety scored commercial scale 94, exhibition scale 90 points.

Philadelphia, November 25.—Edward Salyer, Wilkesbarre, Pa., exhibited Mrs. Edward Salyer, a white Japanese incurved, which scored commercial scale 89, exhibition scale 87 points. The following were shown by Nathan Smith & Son: White Bonnaffon, scored commercial scale 89 points; Stellata, scored both scales 88 points; Lavender Queen, scored commercial scale 83, exhibition scale 82 points; Intensity scored commercial scale 87, exhibition scale 82 points; Pluma scored commercial scale 86, exhibition scale 85 points.

Cincinnati, November 25.—Mrs. J. G. Robinson, Santa Clara, Cal., exhibited Margaret Enright, Japanese, white shaded lemon, scored commercial scale 89 points.

Chicago, November 25.—Nathan Smith & Son exhibited the following: Intensity, scored exhibition scale 82 points; Pluma, scored exhibition scale 83 points; White Bonnaffon, scored commercial scale 85 points; Stellata, scored commercial scale 92 points. ELMER D. SMITH, Sec'y.

SOME NEW VARIETIES.

Nesota is a light yellow Japanese variety producing a large, spreading bloom with long, broad strap petals. It is a seedling of Sunstone × W. H. Lincoln, originating with Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich., and has a perfect stem and foliage. The height is three feet.

The accompanying illustration shows six pompon varieties originating with John N. May, Summit, N. J., which were at perfection October 15. No. 15 is an attractive flower, white with blush pink center; No. 17 is a very showy flower of deep violet shade; No. 19 is deep orange maroon of very compact form; No. 21 is a beautiful clear white of large size and extra good form; No. 22 is clear yellow, a bold, symmetrical bloom; No. 24 is bronze, shaded lemon, large, very deep and showy. All are distinct.

Mrs. Edward Salyer is the favorite variety of the originator, Edward Salyer, foreman for Ira C. Marvin, Wilkesbarre, Pa., who has produced a number of sorts which are now prominent in commerce. This acquisition is a late bloomer, not being near its perfection as certificated at Philadelphia November 25. It is usually at its best about December 15 and last year was perfect at Christmas. Mr. Salyer has grown the variety for four years and is very sanguine as to its value to the florists' trade.

A GROUP OF POMPON CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SPORTS.

M. Ghys suggests a new cause of sporting in this flower, says the Gardeners' Chronicle. Alluding to the frequency of color-sporting in chrysanthemums and to the method of propagating them, as follows: "All the shoots are cut off excepting the one carrying the sport; then as this shoot develops buds, it can be propagated by them, as each will reproduce the sport in question;" he observes that no flower, excepting the azalea, presents such frequent cases of dimorphism as the chrysanthemum; that while one variety will give a white flower if it blossoms in September, and a rose-colored one in October, another will have shown glabrous flowers from the first crown buds and downy ones at the terminal buds. Hence, M. Ghys considers the seasons as well as the positions of the buds as influencing the form and color.

As to the predominating colors of sports, he noticed that if the normal flower be of a composite color, one shade may become accentuated, thus overpowering the others. Thus, in Mrs. H. Payne, Madame E. Teston, red predominates; while in Madame L. Remy it is white. Sports of a pronounced red are rarer. Pure white varieties only give yellow sports. But he mentions Annie Cibran, a sport from Mlle. Lacroix as an exception, in being of a rosy tint on expanding in complete sunshine.

A feature worthy of remark is, that varieties which, as Louis Boehmer, contain several dimorphic representatives, pass gradually to white, finally terminating in yellow. This, the author observes—as we have also done—is probably due to atavism, or reversion to the primitive color, from which the name chrysanthemum is derived, "chrysos" being the Greek for "gold;" and he adds that a pure yellow chrysanthemum, obtained either by seed or sport, will no longer give a red-tinted, or white.

M. Ghys then asks: "What are the causes of dimorphism?" A change of climate and soil are usually suggested; but he thinks there is another very important factor, and that is the taking cuttings from a plant in full vigor. "I have always been surprised," he remarks, "at the rarity of sports observed by amateurs and at their complete absence among those who renew their collections every year by the division of the old plants (presumably by dividing the root). M. Delanoy has upwards of 450 varieties and has never had a sport since 1832." The author's procedure is as follows: The plants, as soon as they have done flowering and are still full of sap, are cut down to furnish the first shoots. An endeavor is then made to keep the plants vegetating, which should normally have been in repose. As soon as the young shoots appear, the points are removed; the new lateral shoots undergo the same treatment.

The vegetative growth out of its proper season, and the sudden arrest of the sap produced by the repeated amputations, are two factors of which account must be taken. Following the cuttings through their course of development, they soon become well-rooted in appropriate soil and make a good start. As soon as they enlarge and grow stronger day by day, and cover themselves with foliage, if all of a sudden the flow of sap be stopped by cutting a strong part of the plant, a profound disturbance in all parts of the plant is inevitably induced; and the equilibrium between absorption and the evaporation of water is disturbed. Now it is in these conditions that sports are not infrequently produced.

New varieties are more prone to dimorphism than those which have been established for many years. Thus it is, that Mme A. Cordonnier and Mme. Deis have given M. Montigny, of Orleans, a sport in the first year they were sent out.

"Does it not explain why all the most approved varieties, as Viviand-Morel, Mrs. C. H. Payne, Madame Carnot, and L. Boehmer, have given rise to a number of sports, by reason of the great demand for these varieties, and in consequence, their greater multiplication?"

Without excluding other causes, the author gives the following conclusions:

1. That the cutting taken from any important part of a chrysanthemum, when in full vigor, is a cause which induces dimorphism.

2. That a new variety has a greater aptitude than one of long standing for giving rise to sports.

CARNATIONS.

THE RELATIVE MERITS OF PINKS.

When speaking of pink carnations most growers naturally think first of Wm. Scott, for with at least nine growers out of twelve it is the standard of this color. It is however, like McGowan in the whites, fast losing its popularity, and with the majority of growers it has dwindled to what might be termed a third rate carnation. In addition to its loss of quality it has, through carelessness in propagation, to a great extent lost its freedom of bloom, so that altogether Scott is in a fair way to be dropped by many who are growing it this season.

Triumph, in every way a superior flower to Scott, but always lacking in constitution, was for a few years my favorite pink. Its weakness in constitution seems to be aggravated this year. Mrs. Frances Joost is more pleasing in color than either of the other two varieties but is not quite up to their standard in size. It is, however, quite large enough for ordinary purposes and its perfect form and color will sell it to many buyers in preference to the others. It is a free and constant bloomer of good constitution and it seems that it will fill the bill until some of this season's gems become cheap enough to become standard sorts.

Daybreak and Victor, alike in everything except for the slight difference in color, are both good carnations where they are well done, but are being dropped by the majority of growers. In the Daybreak class there has been no recent introduction of any value. There are several good ones in what might be called the next shade to Daybreak and, from what I learn, the one most likely to be grown for the next few years is Gov. Griggs. Philadelphia also has a promising one, called Mrs. Bertram Lippincott, in this class. The flowers are of fair size and a very pleasing shade of pink and the plants seem productive enough to make it a paying variety. But what we most need is a new Daybreak a trifle larger in size and with a stronger constitution.

In the regular pink class we seem pretty well supplied with good novelties and seedling growers might with profit to themselves drop this color for a few years, or until those now being introduced meet the fate of extinction which seems to be the fate of all carnations within a cycle of ten years or so. There are three pink novelties to select from and there is difference enough in color to make them almost distinct. Every grower knows all about Mrs. Thos. W. Lawson and The Marquis and Ethel Crocker being my own discovery it is incumbent on me to adopt our Lancaster county maxim and "sike still and sauk nix." Just which of these will suit the growers best we will probably know by next season at this time.

There have been hosts of pinks offered the past few years, perhaps some of them as good as either of the above three, but somehow they have not been taken up by the growers in general. Why not bring them to the carnation meeting and compare them with the varieties there shown? If they are worth while the growers who attend the meeting will recognize the fact and the variety will be given a good trial by some of them.

CHRYSANTHEMUM NESOTA.

WITH THE GROWERS.

A VISIT TO THE WEST.

A ramble among the western fraternity is always full of interest to an eastern grower and at few places are there more noteworthy things than at Richmond, Ind., where E. G. Hill & Co. have, among much good stock, a big lot of pedigreed seedling roses which are just beginning to show their characteristic qualities in various ways. In all seedlings there is sure to be a large amount of chaff to be winnowed down for the grain which it contains and the roses at this establishment are no exception to the rule, but Mr. Hill succeeded in extracting some very promising things. The one which most impressed me was a variety of exceptional promise as a pot plant which can be had in good shape at any season of the year. It is a hybrid tea with the remontant blood rather the more pronounced. The color is a beautiful canary yellow at the base of the broad, leathery petals of clear ivory white. The bud is not very full as I saw it but of that quality I am not able to judge as, although the plants were full of bloom, the flowers were all on short-stemmed side shoots. It has handsome, glossy foliage and I think this variety will make its mark in the rose world at no far distant date. Among the seedling carnations here there are also some sorts which will eventually be heard from. The new house, 25x400 feet, will be a sight worth seeing from Christmas onward.

From Richmond we went to Cincinnati with its smoke, inclined planes, hills and valleys. Among the latter and some distance out by trolley, we found R. Witterstaetter hard at work, as usual, among good stock, with some fine seedlings near at hand, which will, we hope, be disseminated in the near future, bringing the shekels to bulge amiable Richard's pockets as a just reward for the skill and energy put into his work.

A retracing of our steps found us at New Castle, Ind., the home of the South Park Floral Co., where we found Meyer Heller, modest and unassuming, speaking of his grand roses merely as a matter of course. But there can be no mistaking the quality of the stock grown here. Their choicer American Beauties have been bringing $6 a dozen on the Chicago market and other lines have commanded proportionately fine prices. Quality is the prime requisite, first, last and all the time, at this place. The range of glass is now being doubled and it will be one of the most interesting establishments in the country when the improvements are completed.

At Indianapolis we found the Bertermann Floral Company very busy and well satisfied. At H. W. Rieman's something worth while can always be found and a chat with him is ever pleasing. Unfortunately time between trains was not sufficient for a call upon Anthony Wiegand and others whose stock and personality are always interesting.

Among the novelties at Fred. Dorner & Sons', at La Fayette, we found several seedling carnations which will be heard from in due time, one which we understand is to be offered next season being particularly noteworthy. The color is a beautiful soft canary yellow at the base of the petals, toning up to clear white at the outer edges. This may strike many as a not very desirable combination of colors but a bunch of these blooms is among the most charming things I have seen in some time. The variety has good stem, size, freedom of bloom and fragrance all to its credit. The entire stock at this place is in the pink of condition, which is not surprising, as every member of this enterprising family devotes his fullest energy to furthering the business.

Another jump found us at the greenhouses of the Mount Greenwood Cemetery Association, at Mt. Greenwood, Ill., where they have just completed a very fine new house for carnations. The stock looks very promising and there are several very interesting seedlings on trial but Mr. Rudd, with his extreme modesty, would venture nothing in their favor. The chrysanthemums were virtually all cut but there is a very fine batch of cyclamens coming in for the holidays. Other stock grown here is largely for cemetery use.

At the Chicago Carnation Co.'s range at Joliet we found a splendid lot of stock. Everything was in grand shape but Mrs. Bradt, G. H. Crane and Chicago, or Red Bradt, speak with especial eloquence of the ability of Mr. Hartshorne as a grower. After our hurried visit Mr. Thompson, the general manager, drove us back to town behind a span of fine horses.

Bassett & Washburn, at Hinsdale, Ill., devote a large share of their big establishment to American Beauties. Bride and Bridesmaid are grown in about equal proportions and Meteor is much in evidence. All are well grown. Carnations are also in splendid form. Mr. Bassett gives the whole credit for their success with the carnation to the tile bottoms which they are now using for their benches; with these the plants cannot be overwatered.

At Vaughan's establishment at Western Springs, Ill., they have an entirely different class of stock from that which we had been viewing. The houses are filled to their utmost capacity with a general catalogue assortment, all in excellent health. Acalypha Sanderi is a leading feature and James S. Wilson, the able manager, has great faith in its future as a decorative plant.

CHRYSANTHEMUM MRS. EDWARD SALYER.

Hurrying back to Chicago we made close connections for Rogers Park, where lettuce is grown by the million in houses which can be measured by the mile, but as only a part of our crowd were at all hungry we did not sample them, but those of our party who had voracious appetites had to try and appease them by making faces at each other gumming gum. Here, too, are the establishments of several good growers, notably Wietor Bros. and Adam Zender. The latter had a narrow escape from fire only a few days before our visit. Roses are his principal stock. At Wietor Bros. they have about 230,000 feet of glass and a splendid lot of roses and carnations. Beauties lead, numbering about 24,000 plants. Brides, Bridesmaids, Perles and Meteors constitute the balance of the stock. They have a big lot of carnations, all looking well and blooming profusely.

I feel deeply indebted to the proprietors of the several places I have mentioned for their courtesy and hospitality and hope that the near future will see them each at Summit, New Jersey, that I may reciprocate in kind. JOHN N. MAY.

Helpful Reminders.

This is none too soon to provide the vines needed for next season's box and vase filling. A good length is wanted to sell for a good price and this is particularly true of ivy geraniums and maurandias. The latter may be grown from seed started now if you have not already provided stock. The variegated periwinkles and honeysuckles, lifted from open ground and potted, may be put in a cool house where they remain semi-dormant until February.

If your begonias have been kept up to proper temperature, particularly B. incarnata, which is the most desirable next to Gloire de Lorraine for Christmas, they will be ready for their final shift and as soon as they are nicely started give some stimulant once a week.

Where smilax is cut a second growth should be strung at once and, if care is taken, the second crop will be better than the first. Use the green thread called silkaline, which does not require pulling out before using.

Bouvardia is coming into bloom now and care should be taken to maintain a temperature of 60°. Keep the soil sweet by stirring the surface and be sure to have the benches thoroughly saturated when watering. Unless grown on subirrigated benches this stock is apt to suffer from being too dry at the bottom, where the new delicate roots are formed. If you grow asparagus for cutting don't allow old sprays to remain on the plants. A. Sprengerii does best in troughs about ten inches deep put on brackets on the walls, so that it can hang over. If you wish to increase your stock you can divide the cork like disk into pieces having three to five good roots each.

All plants intended for Christmas sales should be given proper space and light, cleaned and in some cases shifted.

If you grow verbenas from seed, get them started. This plant only sells well in bloom and they must start early to be ready. C. B. W.

FAIR SUPPLY FOR THANKSGIVING.—GENERAL STIFFENING OF PRICES.—VIOLETS ARE IN TROUBLE.—A SALE OF PALMS.—MANY CARNATIONS.—HOLLY.—A HIGH ENDORSEMENT.—NORTONS SECURE A BRANCH.—NOTES.

Thanksgiving week is on and a general stiffening of prices on cut flowers is in order. Were it not for the remarkably sunny and salubrious days we have been enjoying throughout November the advance in values would undoubtedly be much more pronounced than it is, as conditions favor a scarcity so soon as bleak, unproductive weather sets in. There is a fair variety to choose from for the decoration of the Thanksgiving day table. Roses are in moderate supply, carnations giving an average crop; some good chrysanthemums are still with us. Paper White narcissi, lily of the valley and Roman hyacinths are plentiful and there are a few callas and lilies for large effects, while anyone with a fancy for that kind of trimming so early in the season can get all the holly he wants. Violets, only, are in trouble and violet growers are ill at ease over the unsatisfactory conditions at present prevailing as to both quantity and quality of their product.

N. F. McCarthy & Co. announce a big auction sale of commercial palms on Tuesday next that ought to draw a good crowd. Mr. McCarthy says the demand for florists' vases has been remarkably large this fall.

Welch Bros. have been receiving carnations in heavy shipments during the entire month and, notwithstanding the general shortening up of crops, they are well supplied for Thanksgiving week.

Geo. A. Sutherland has received samples of Christmas holly which are up to the top notch in quality, but it is generally accepted that the supply will be light.

The Imperial plant food has received a good send-off in the form of high commendation from Kenneth Finlayson and John Barr, two of our most observant and successful growers. Mr. Barr's great set of specimen chrysanthemums that won first premium at this season's exhibition were fed with this stimulant.

Norton Bros. have secured as a branch store the excellently located place on Massachusetts avenue occupied by them as a branch two years ago.

W. A. Bock reports that there is no diminution in the phenomenal demand for Boston fern which he has been favored with this season.

D. Zirngiebel's mail is by far the heaviest received at the postoffice in Needham.

Wm. Donald was the guest of honor at the last meeting of the Horticultural Club.

Robert Montgomery has named his light pink sport from rose Mrs. Pierpont Morgan, the Mrs. Oliver Ames.

New York.

A BUSY WEEK.—PRICES TAKE A SHARP ADVANCE.—REASONABLY LARGE SUPPLY QUICKLY ABSORBED.—MANY PROMISES HARD OF FULFILLMENT.—A NEW FLOWER STORE.—NOTES AND COMMENT.

This has been a good week in the flower trade in many respects. Prices took a spurt at the beginning and were firm as a rock on Monday and Tuesday on all lines. At the market the boxes were scarcely opened before their contents were sold, often even without the formality of an examination, and at the various wholesale establishments crowds of buyers stood waiting for the arrival of every wagon load of stock. Wednesday saw the unavoidable reaction as usual on the day immediately preceding a holiday, there being considerably more material in sight, some of it, too, showing marks of retention in the ice box or cellar, and prices moderated considerably on medium grades of stock. The advance in quotations early in the week was so decided as to cause a doubt of its ultimate benefit, in the minds of unprejudiced observers. With the remarkably clear and salubrious weather, the available crop for a season of such moderate demand as that of Thanksgiving would appear to be ample and the raising of prices unaccompanied by an actual shortage is always quite risky. No stronger reason for the sudden advance is apparent beyond the rivalry of local wholesalers and the eagerness of growers to take full advantage of it, but events would seem to indicate that many promises hastily made will prove difficult of fulfillment and certain mutterings on the part of retailers suggest that this very important section of the trade is not disinclined to put an unpalatable protest into operation about the time Santa Claus' visit is due. Let us hope not, however. The variety on hand is fully up to the record for the season and quality ditto. Poinsettias, callas and an unusual proportion of bulbous flowers gives the florists' windows quite a Christmasy look which is further heightened by the frequent appearance of holly in window adornment.

J. N. Catlin and T. W. Satterthwaite are to open a new flower store a la Rosary, on Fifth avenue near Forty-second street, next week. These are young men belonging to the upper society set and their establishment will be christened "The Gallatin."

An effort is being made to awaken public interest in the preservation of what is left of the historic "Hamilton trees," which were planted by Alexander Hamilton in commemoration of the union of the thirteen original states. They are liquidambers and not elms or oaks as often mentioned.

Cleary & Co. are to have another sale of Japanese dwarf trees next Wednesday and Thursday, the last of the season. These curious objects always bring big money.

Mrs. A. S. Burns has been seriously ill with pneumonia this week.

J. N. May has returned from a western trip.

WHITE MARSH, MD.—R. Vincent, Jr., & Son have added two houses 25x100 during the past season and are now building a house 24x165 for early vegetable plants.

NYACK, N. Y.—Depew Bros. are among those who have found good money in ferns and their faith in the future of this line is shown by the fact that they have just completed two houses, 5800 square feet, for this stock.

BUSINESS TAXES THE MARKET.—EVERYBODY BUSY AND PRICES TAKE A LEAP.—CHRYSANTHEMUMS MOVE SWIFTLY.—POT PLANTS SAVED FROM THE BURNING.—AZALEAS ARE IN.—PALM MEN PROSPEROUS.—A DISCUSSION ON TREES.

There has been a marked change in the cut flower business the past week; it is not now, "things might be better," but it is a hustle all the time to get enough flowers together to fill the orders that continue to pour in like rain through a leaky roof. Everyone is in good humor and looking forward to a record breaking season. Thanksgiving seems to be challenging New Year's day for third place in the events of the season; it certainly was the best Thanksgiving trade up to date. The demand for the debutantes, which is very large this season, kept the market bare of any surplus and it was hard to get stock enough to satisfy the general calls for the holiday. Prices have taken another leap. Beauties are about $1.50 per foot of stem per dozen; that is, four foot stems bring $6 per dozen, and so on down. Teas are also climbing, $8 to $10 being asked for the extras. Carnations are, for the fancies, advancing rapidly; $6 is asked for select stock, Ethel Crocker and a few other kinds bringing this figure; $1.50 to $2 for good common stock is the price for the bulk of quick moving sizes. Lily of the valley and Romans bring $3 to $5; Paper Whites $3 to $4. Chrysanthemums are in great demand. Anything worth looking at moves quickly at $1.50 per dozen, a few of the larger sorts bringing $2, but they are nearly all cut out. A. Woltemate had a fine late pink which sold quickly at 30 cents each. R. Craig & Son offered a few of a large white, Wenonah, which moved fast at $2.50 per dozen. Charles Meehan cut a lot of Mrs. Jerome Jones which helped out nicely. It seems as if very many more of this fine variety should be grown for our market as it is a great seller. Violets were in great demand; $1.25 to $1.50 per hundred was asked for the best doubles, with $1 for good Californias.

J. Coles has had a great run on his potted chrysanthemums lately and has to hire extra wagons to help deliver. A large lot set aside for a department store man, some $140 worth, to be delivered Tuesday, was held until Wednesday morning. They were being loaded up when word was received that the store was in ashes, the delay proving a good thing in this instance, as the lot was closed out immediately to waiting customers.

H. H. Battles has a new wagon on the street, which is the cause of considerable comment as it passes by. It is very striking.

Jacob Becker and W. K. Harris are in with azaleas, having very nice plants of Deutsche Perle and Simon Mardner. Plants of all kinds are moving rapidly and many sizes are running short. In spite of the advanced price of building material we should not be surprised to see an increase in the glass among the palm growers the coming season.

A meeting of the horticultural and allied societies to further the planting of trees on our city streets was held in Horticultural Hall last Thesday evening. There was considerable discussion but no definite action was taken. K.

FULTON, N. Y.—D. A. Waterman has an unusually fine stock this season and sees bright prospects ahead of the trade.

PRONOUNCED SCARCITY OF STOCK FOR THANKSGIVING.—GOOD ROSES FAR TOO FEW AND CARNATIONS NOT UP TO DEMANDS. — OUTSIDE QUOTATIONS HOLD GOOD THROUGHOUT.—A BUSY WEEK SOCIALLY.—FIRE AT ZENDER'S.—HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY OFFICERS SATISFIED. —JOHNSON ENROUTE TO EUROPE.—VARIOUS JOTTINGS.

This has been a busy week for the wholesalers and not one of them has been able to supply the calls which were made upon his resources. The houses which protected their out of town orders to the greatest possible extent did so at the expense of their city trade and those who gave the local retailers anything like what they wanted were forced to decline many orders for shipment and to cut most of those from regular buyers. Stock was considerably shorter than a year ago and prices from one-third to one-half higher. The greatest scarcity was of good roses but there were too few carnations. The out-of-town people who received stock which they did not consider strictly good should utter no more than mild protests for there was not a flower which would not have been thankfully taken by the city trade, sometimes even at higher rates than those at which the stock was billed out. Few roses went out under 8 cents and really first-class blooms were good for 10 cents over the counter. For carnations 2½ cents and 3 cents was the prevailing rate for good ordinary and fancies went well up the scale. Everything held well up to outside quotations. The volume of the week's business was probably somewhat less than that of last year in quantity of stock, despite considerable increases in glass, but in money value a conservative estimate of the increase is twenty per cent.

As usual some growers declined to send in their stock on the second day before the holiday, which is always the big shipping day, and on Wednesday the market was somewhat easier, there being even too many carnations in some houses. If there is anything which makes a commission man boil it is to telephone to a grower for carnations on an afternoon like last Tuesday, to be told that not a flower is to be had on the place, and then have the grower send in from 400 to 700 the next morning.

Thanksgiving week has been an active one socially, in Chicago, and the leading retailers have had their hands full, being badly handicapped by the difficulty of securing stock. In keeping with the season and the state of the market, chrysanthemums have been largely used and in most instances effectively. Friedman had probably the largest order of the week, that for the Greenbaum-Mandel wedding at the Standard Club.

Messrs. John N. May and E. G. Hill visited a number of establishments in and around this city last week, but, unfortunately, could not call upon all the friends they wished to see during the brief period at their disposal.

The boiler shed at Adam Zender's caught fire early last week and the result might have been serious had not the fire engines arrived promptly. A considerable portion of the woodwork was destroyed, but otherwise the damage was slight.

The Horticultural Society of Chicago, at its directors' meeting at the Sherman House November 25, found a balance on the right side of the treasurer's report of the fall show and everyone is satisfied.

C. W. Johnson and family went to Detroit yesterday, proceeding thence to New York, from which point they sail December 13 on the St. Louis for a Christmas visit at their old home in England.

Kennicott Bros. Co. reports the past ten days' business to have been far in excess of last year, in fact the best they have ever known for the corresponding period.

Wietor Bros. were able to cut thirty dozen of the longest stemmed Beauties last Wednesday and they all went at $6 a dozen with a demand for more.

Captain H. Schuenemann has the schooner Mary Collins and his annual cargo of Christmas greens safely berthed at the Clark street bridge.

Some of the plantsmen already have rose and carnation cuttings ready for delivery.

Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Prince welcomed a son at their home at Downer's Grove, November 26.

The rose men are already felicitating upon the assurance of a good cut for Christmas.

Mrs. Flint Kennicott has been quite ill this week.

Visitors: Mrs. A. H. Bunde, St. Paul; Nelson and James Cole, also James Cole III., Peoria, Ill.

TRADE ON THE EARLY AUTUMN LEVEL.—A FEW GOOD ORDERS.—STOCK SCARCE.—PALMER GOING EAST.—A NOVEL ADVERTISEMENT.—SEEN AT KASTING'S.—OTHER JOTTINGS.

With weather almost like September, trade is on about the same level. On Thursday of last week three of our most prominent families introduced their daughters, thereby giving us one good day. Indications point to a good Thanksgiving trade and, with fair weather the day before, I think all will be satisfied. Chrysanthemums will bid us adieu after this week, with the exception of those from the growers who are late with everything. Roses are not over plentiful and carnations very scarce. American Beauties are retailing at from $7 to $12 per dozen with only a limited sale. Violets it is almost impossible to get at any price. Lily of the valley, Romans and narcissi are plentiful. It hardly seems possible that Christmas is so near but it is nevertheless so, for every mail brings us the usual catalogues of the finest holly, pine and other greens.

W. J. Palmer, Sr., was in the city last week. He is going east for a visit among the growers to see whether his Daybreak can be beaten, but I think he will return feeling as good as when he went away, for they are fine.

D. B. Long has a very pretty poinsettia novelty for Christmas in card and calendar form.

A Loeffler, Jr., and wife, of Washington, who are on that most joyful of journeys, their wedding trip, called on us this week. They were doing Buffalo and Niagara Falls. Mr. Loeffler is with A. Gude & Brother.

One of our florists had for a Thanksgiving advertisement a large turkey of galax and had it on his wagon for show. From the color of course the bird was supposed to be roasted.

It seems heartless of the men to crowd around a box of carnations at Kasting's and take no notice of the timid lady buyers, but when you have got to get your share of a few hundred flowers a dress does not seem to count. Mr. Kasting is out of politics and can now be found at 481 Washington street at any time. W. A.

Miami, Fla.

The weather is perfectly delightful, warm, sunny days that remind us of the lovely June days at the north. The nights are cool and pleasant, with heavy dews and but little rain. Roses are loaded with bud and bloom; there are no aphis, red spider or mildew on the flowers here. Dickerson & Belden are building slat houses over their roses, carnations and palms.

This part of the state is the home of the palm, every variety making wonderful growth either in pots or tubs or planted in the open ground. Cycas revoluta is perfectly at home here. There is a native, Zamia integrifolia, that makes a handsome pot plant and is offered for sale by some of the leading florists. Pot grown plants are often mistaken for small Cycas revolutas.

On the grounds of the Royal Palm Hotel is the largest cocoanut grove in the United States. The trees are planted in rows and as one walks through this beautiful park he seems to be passing gray stone columns, capped with long, waving, golden-green leaves which curve gracefully out from the top like overgrown ostrich plumes. Great masses of yellowish white flowers hang down, so fragrant and full of honey as to be fairly covered by the bees. After the bloom comes the fruit, great green nuts, like a bunch of giant grapes.

Agaves of all varieties make splendid growth on the sandy land, requiring no care at all. At Fort Dallas are several fine plants of Agave recurva, throwing up mammoth flower-stalks. Agave rigida is a very handsome native variety often seen in bloom here; it is a beauty from the time it is four inches in diameter until full grown and is fine for a pot or bedding plant.

Tecoma stans is fairly loaded with its great, golden bouquets of gloxinia-like flowers and bids fair to produce a good crop of seeds. POINCIANA.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.—F. G. Lee is building a large greenhouse on Hurd street and proposes supplying a part of the public demand.

ANDOVER, MASS.—The Florists' and Gardeners' Club held a banquet on November 10, seventeen members being present.

TURNER, ME.—Mrs. S. T. Goodspeed has enlarged her capacity for raising carnations for the Lewiston and Auburn markets.

UTICA, N. Y.—Robert Boyce has secured possession of the greenhouse property at the corner of Genesee street and the cemetery road.

DANVILLE, ILL.—Frank R. Smith has finished the removal of his greenhouses and is now well situated. He will carry a stock of goldfish.

KNOXVILLE, TENN.—C. W. Crouch and C. L. Baum have each had shows at their stores, attracting many admirers of the queen of autumn.

HARTFORD, CONN.—M. C. Eddy has purchased the "tunnel greenhouses" 14 Windsor avenue, and renovated and re-stocked the establishment.

CLINTON, IA.—Andrew Bather's method of gaining prominence for his display of chrysanthemums was to give the show for the benefit of Agatha Hospital.

WIETOR BROS., of Chicago, are having much success with Evanston carnation as a pot plant.

THE catalogue houses in the mail plant trade are agitating the question of readjusting prices on a more profitable basis.

THE holly situation continues to interest jobbers and good weather will be necessary if all orders are to be completed on time.

THIS is the time to prepare for a general rise in prices for spring stock, not by increased production, but by ensuring the highest quality in your plants.

WE beg to acknowledge the receipt of a copy of the proceedings of the Society of American Florists at the annual meeting, Detroit, Mich., August 15-18, 1899.

BOUQUET green was referred to in our last issue as over supply; another week only emphasizes the fact; some of the stray lots are very inferior and poorly packed.

CALDWELL, the evergreen man of Alabama, with his new catalogues sends us some samples of a very good southern cigar. Brother Caldwell will oblige by giving the name of the brand.

NOW that heavy firing has become necessary, care should be taken that boiler sheds constructed of wood and such inflammable materials as they contain are not ignited by careless workmanship or defective apparatus.

Diseased Callas.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—For the past two weeks my callas have been rotting just as were those described in the query of L. G. F. C. answered in your last issue. I have about 100 bulbs which were purchased this year and 400 which I carried over; the fresh stock is suffering more than the old. The new bulbs were planted September 9. They did not look right when I received them, being shriveled, and some of them rotted without sending up more than two or three inches of growth. The carried over stock was started afresh on July 25, in clean pots and good soil that had not been used before. A little bone meal was added but no other stimulant has been given except two applications of nitrate of soda. I have regularly grown a good many callas and this is the first time I have had trouble. I am now applying nothing but pure water in reasonable quantities. We never use manure water until the first part of February, as callas do not seem to require extra stimulant until the days are longer. I have thought of putting on a top dressing of sulphur mixed with fresh soil for I do not know of anything else which will help the rotting bulbs. B. F. E.

Keep Tooting.

If you toot your little tooter and then lay aside your horn,
There's not a soul in ten short days will know that you were born.
The man who gathers pumpkins is the man who plows all day.
And the man who keeps a humping is the gent who makes it pay.
The man who advertises with a short and sudden jerk
Is the man who blames the printer because it didn't work.
The gent who gets the business has a long and steady pull,
And keeps the paying paper for years and years quite full.
He plans his advertisements in a thoughtful, honest way,
And keeps forever at it until he makes it pay.
He has faith in all the future, can withstand a sudden shock,
And like the man of Scripture, has his business on a rock.

A Detroiter's Expedient.

In large cities a well organized street car system is one of the greatest conveniences to nearly all kinds of business, especially so to the florist in sending messengers with small deliveries on quick time, and in some cases the cars can be made a still more important convenience. Last week I had a very large church wedding, the distance by street about four miles, distance by street cars about six miles. I chartered two special cars to be at my place as soon after midnight as the ordinary traffic was off the line. We had the cars loaded at 1 a. m. and at the church entrance by 1:30; the cars were unloaded and the men home before 2:30. During the day the plants were arranged and the church decorated in short order, while the horses and drivers were working elsewhere. The next night the cars were at the church at the same hour, the plants loaded and all safe at home soon after 2 a. m. Not a leaf was broken or any other damage done, although the plants were loaded very quickly and packed very closely. Cars are fine things to pack large palms in, as so many can be packed in regardless of size and weight. S. TAPLIN.

Flower Shows.

A lively discussion on the advisability of holding a spring flower show took place at the November meeting of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society. The main objection to a spring show seemed to be that it would not pay. That is to say the gate receipts would not equal the prize money and other expenses and the society would be "in a hole."

This is the same old argument that has been dinned into us for many a year, and not only in Philadelphia. Even in New York this seems to be the main bug-a-boo. Of course if a horticultural society or other organization has a steady income for the promotion of shows, like Boston, for instance, all is plain sailing.

But because the society has not the funds and cannot make enough at the gate to pay expenses is that a reason for sitting still and doing nothing? John Westcott, Robert Craig, John Burton and other speakers at the Philadelphia meeting struck the true key note when they pointed out that there are other ways of making ends meet without calling on the hard-working commercial florist to put his hand in his pocket to make up a deficit. First there is the assumed feasibility of having a show without money premiums and after discussion there seemed to be a general opinion that something could be done in this way, although it was admitted that money prizes are the great attraction for many, especially the private gardeners.

Secondly it was urged that a strong effort should be made to get the wealthy citizens to put some of their surplus cash into this channel as a powerful means for the advancement of horticulture. That they would contribute liberally if properly approached is generally believed; the great difficulty is to find the proper party to approach them. Those who can have not the time and those who have the time have not the aptitude. It is along this line, however, that work should be done and it should be no spasmodic effort but a systematic campaign, year in and year out. The claims of a horticultural society to the support of the wealthy should be constantly preached in order to impress the proper sentiment among the public generally. Thousands and thousands are being spent all over the country for far less worthy purposes. Unless it be in Boston or Pittsburg how often do we hear of any money being left for the advancement of horticulture?

To hark back to the Philadelphia discussion on the spring show revival, Robert Craig pointed out that a large number of commercial growers would be glad of the opportunity to exhibit their new things at that time for the society's certificate and that the public would be much enlightened and pleased with a great many plants which it is impossible or impracticable to show in the fall. I think it was Jno. Westcott who first urged dividing off the show into good sized spaces and allotting them to the commercial growers to make the best effect with their best products as their donation for the advancement of horticulture. As a matter of fact the growers have many of them for years donated their money premiums for the good of the society and the absence of money inducement is therefore more in seeming than reality.

In getting up a spring show on the lines roughly indicated above, one thing ought not to be forgotten, and that is to use every means of getting a good crowd. The present administration of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society seems to be mortally afraid of free tickets, either for press services or anything else. They have been curtailing for several years in this direction and yet their receipts at the gate dwindle. A change of heart is necessary in that direction. Complimentaries judiciously distributed for press or advertising services will not hurt receipts. They will help them, and they only cost the printing. And when people exhibit without money reward they are surely entitled to have more than a baker's dozen come to see. They don't care whether the visitor paid at the gate or not. The vexed question of whether a 25 or 50-cent rate pays best is answered differently, depending on whether it be the exhibitor or the management that answers. The 25 cents will bring more people but it has not been found that it brings twice as many. So the management sticks to 50 cents. Sometimes a compromise is made of 50 cents all day and 25 in the evening, the argument being that only the wealthy have leisure to attend during the day and 50 cents is as easy as 25 cents to them. I doubt the soundness of this argument. I think it worth experiment to make it 25 cents all day and 50 cents in the evening in order to equalize the crowd. Evenings are always uncomfortably crowded, both 50 and 25 cent rates, but I think they would not be if a 25 cent rate was made during the day and 50 in the evening.

GOSSIP OF A VISIT TO LEWIS ULRICH.—GOLDEN GATE IN FINE FORM.—COMPARATIVE MERITS OF CARNATIONS.—ASPARAGUS A GOOD CROP.—BUSINESS GOOD.—AN UNUSUAL DECORATION.

The more I look at the Golden Gate rose, as grown by Lewis Ulrich, the more I wonder why it has not become more popular with our growers. Size, color and stem, coupled with the fact of its other excellent qualities should place it side by side with such standards as Brides and Bridesmaids. Another thing in favor of this rose is the ease with which it can be grown. Given the usual soil for teas and a temperature of 58° to 60° it will thrive and produce splendid blooms. However, the Golden Gate is not the only rose that is doing well with Mr. Ulrich. His Meteors, Perles, Brides and Bridesmaids are in prime condition, with not a speck of mildew or a deformed bud. His carnations, likewise, are doing splendidly. Among the pinks Painted Lady is Mr. Ulrich's favorite, for it has surpassed its rivals in both length of stem and size of flowers. Among his whites it would be hard to choose between Flora Hill and Storm King, while White Cloud and Evelina, the latter somewhat low in growth, look well. In fancies Mrs. Bradt takes the lead, Sandusky and Armazindy being close seconds. Meteor and Empress are grown side by side and, as usual, the former is lacking in quality, the latter in quantity. Asparagus plumosus nanus is grown in quantity, both for strings and in pots and is in increased demand. It is Mr Ulrich's intention to extend his facilities and to make a special feature of this line. A house thirty-five feet high, expressly adapted for the purpose of growing asparagus, will be added in the spring.

Business is all that could be desired. The most notable society event of the season was that of the Huhn-Stricker wedding. Given a carte blanche order, Turner Hall, the largest in the city, was transformed into dreamland. Seven loads of magnificent palms and decorative plants supplied the basis of the work and suspended from the ceiling was a mammoth canopy, made of Asparagus plumosus nanus, adiantum and studded with Brides and Bridesmaids, the whole brilliantly illuminated. The effect, to put it in the words of the average society reporter, was "simply charming."

TRADE IS EXCELLENT AND STOCK SCARCE.—HEAVY RECEIPTS EASILY CONSUMED.—A GOOD THANKSGIVING.—MEETING OF THE CLUB.

Stock of all kinds is very scarce in this city. There seems to be a plenty coming in but it is all bought up and from the way things look around the wholesale houses one would think that trade is rushing; and it is in some respects, especially in funeral work. Out in the West End they are busy with receptions and weddings. Thanksgiving day prices took effect on Wednesday and the figures are high. Select roses are quoted at $6 and $8 while the lower grades bring $4 and $5. Beauties are very scarce and bring top prices, as high as $6 per dozen. Violets are away up at $1 per 100 for the best. Carnations are plentiful and sell well. It is the opinion of all that Thanksgiving trade was as good if not better than in former years.

We hope for a large attendance at the next meeting of the Florists' Club, which will be held on Thursday, December 14. Two essays will be read by prominent members and some argument is likely to arise regarding our last show.

WARM WEATHER HAS NO BAD EFFECT ON TRADE.—STEWART RE-EMBARKS IN BUSINESS.—THE PARK CHRYSANTHEMUMS.—ANOTHER CHANGE IN SIGHT.

The weather continues to be more like April than November and although the price of coal is quite high, the sunshine and warmth has enabled greenhouse men to keep their coal bills below last year thus far. Sales are in no way diminished by the favorable weather and delivery is easier and with less damage to stock.

Edwin H. Stewart, formerly of Volk & Stewart, has opened a store in the Second Ward Bank Building, 675 Third street, where he will conduct a general business under the name of Edwin H. Stewart Floral Co.

The daily press has been giving extended notices of the free chrysanthemum show at Mitchell Park conservatories and it is reported that as many as 3500 people visited it in one day. The chrysanthemums were a second-class lot and it is generally considered by those who take an interest in flowers as being poor judgment in the management to make so much ado about such poor results after such a large expenditure of money.

Negotiations are in progress by which the personnel of the wholesale market here will undergo another change. C. B. W.

Springfield, O.

Greenhouse men and florists of the city met recently in the office of the Good & Reese Co. for a conference in regard to forming an organization of the various firm members. The proposed organization will consider all matters of interest to local firms, both of a scientific and business nature. As Springfield is one of the leading horticultural cities of the country the organization may become general in the future. McGregor Brothers, the George H. Mellen Company, Schmidt & Botley, the John A. Doyle Company, the Good & Reese Company and the C. A. Reeser Company, of Urbana, were represented at the meeting. A committee was formed to draft a constitution and by-laws and report at an early date.

ORCHIDS. VALLEY... FERNS.....

TWO TENDENCIES have recently made their appearance in modern commercial life.

Specialization.

Direct dealing.

By specializing and confininiog his energies to one or two lines of products, the producer finds that he can put forth a better article than his competitor.

By direct dealing with the producer, the consumer finds he can get a better article at the price of an inferior one.

THE special products of the Rosebank Nurseries are Orchids, Valley and Ferns.

The Orchids are the best in the market, both in point of variety freshness and beauty of bloom. Cattleyas, 50c.; others, 15c. per bloom.

The Valley, of an especially high grade, is offered on yearly contract at $3 per 100; on single orders, at $3.50.

The Ferns (Adiantum), unequalled in freshness, size and strength of fronds, are sold at the regular price of $1 per 100. These special products are sold direct to the retail florist.

THE SEED TRADE.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

ALEXANDER RODGERS, Pres; ALBERT MCCULLOUGH, Vice-Pres; S. F. WILLARD, Wethersfield, Conn., Sec'y and Treas.

THE anxiety to cover prospective wants in beans keeps the prices on the scarce items of the list on the upward grade all the time.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—A. M. Rennie, with W. A. Potter & Co., was married on Wednesday, November 29, and is in New York on his wedding trip.

W. ATLEE BURPEE & Co. have issued a circular announcing the award of $238 in prizes to seventy-six winners in the competitions announced in Burpee's Farm Annual for 1899.

WE are in receipt of a copy of the annual report of the Secretary of Agriculture from which we are pleased to note that the department is making an effort to conform to the original spirit of the law in seed distribution by the importation and distribution of what is rare and valuable.

The Flax Seed Market.

DULUTH, Nov. 24.—Firework in flax was witnessed on the board of trade and shorts bid prices up 6 cents a bushel to $1.37½ for November seed and as high as $1.36½ for spot flax. They got about 80,000 bushels. Two commission houses are said to be sweating blood in their efforts to get flax to fill their contracts. Shippers that have been buying flax for the trust are the longs. Receipts were 52 cars to-day. They are anxious to get all contracts for November seed closed so as to put it afloat before lake insurance advances.—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

Hardy Shrubs for Indoor Blooming.

The lover of hardy flowers who feels he cannot wait for the return of spring to enjoy their beauty of bloom, can have the satisfaction of having them in flower in the snowy season if he will but pot some small plants before winter sets in. There are several shrubs so impatient for spring to come that they may unfold their flowers and others that bloom after a few weeks of spring weather, and these may easily be brought into flower in the house without any particular care or trouble. Some or all of the following list would give good satisfaction:

Japanese maple, blood leaved; flowering almond, Japanese Judas, Magnolia stellata, Pyrus arbutifolia, Amelanchier alnifolia, Azalea amœna, Chimonanthus fragrans, Corchorus Japonica, Daphne Mezereum, Deutzia gracilis, Exochorda grandiflora, Forsythia viridissima, Lonicera fragrantissima, Spiræa Van Houttei, S. Thunbergii and S. Reevesii; Viburnum plicatum, dwarf lilacs, weigelias and bush honeysuckles. Then there is the half shrub, half vine, the hardy yellow jasmine.

Besides these, many evergreens are attractive in the house, notably the evergreen euonymus and the evergreen Japanese privet, not to mention small plants of the Japanese cedars, the various spruces, arbor vitæs and pines.

Almost all shrubs which flower in the early spring months are available for winter blooming, but those named above have been found particularly good for the purpose.

The way to proceed with them is to get young plants which can be placed in pots of reasonable size, looking to it to get those which have made nice young shoots the past season. Plants which have not done this are of no use, as flowers come from the shoots of the preceding season. Pot firmly and then put them in some cool place where they will not freeze and yet will be but a little above freezing.

The date of their introduction to heat will depend somewhat on the kind of shrub selected as well as on the time it is desired to have the flowers. The yellow jasmine, Jasminum nudiflorum, Chimonanthus fragrans, Daphne Mezereum and Lonicera fragrantissima flower almost as soon as they are brought into heat. If two or three each of these are used they can be brought forward in succession to have them till spring comes. The most of the others require from four to six weeks, much the same time as they would were they out of doors in spring.

Dwarf lilacs are those budded on the privet, a stock which dwarfs them, causing them to flower when quite small, which they would not do were they on their own roots. There are some dwarfs which are produced by constant shifting about, which checks growth and causes the setting of flower buds.

It is sometimes practicable to have the same plants for service another winter. In this case, when spring comes it is advisable to plant them out and prune them closely. The pruning is to induce new growth, without which, as explained above, no flowers can be had. Where young plants can be had it is generally better to rely on them. The old ones under the best of care rarely have as nice a growth of young shoots, besides that the roots occupy more space annually, requiring more pot room than is desirable.

MR. THERON PARKER,
Brooklyn, N. Y.,
Dear Sir:—Your Model Carnation Support is all right in every way and will no doubt be considered as necessary as good plants with growers when better known. I consider it the best on the market, and if your other specialties are equally as good, they should make another addition to the money makers of 1900. Respectfully,

OUR PASTIMES

Announcements of coming contests or other events of interest to our bowling, shooting and cycling readers are solicited and will be given place in this column.

Address all correspondence for this department to Wm. J. Stewart, 67 Bromfield St., Boston, Mass.; Robt. Kift, 1725 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.; or to the American Florist Co., 324 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

At Omaha.

The Omaha bowlers are once more awakening and will soon be rolling regularly on new and thoroughly up-to-date alleys. L. Karpp, who umpired the great contest in Detroit, was a visitor this week and made arrangements to bring his champion New York team to Omaha, on their annual tour of the country in February, for a match with the Omaha Florists' Bowling Club. GRIPP.

At Flatbush.

On Thursday, November 23, the following named talent appeared at the alleys of the bowling club and scores as appended were recorded:

Player	1st	2d	Player	1st	2d
E. Dailledouze	163	163	Schmutz	141	162
P. Dailledouze	138	132	Welsiog	101	77
Wocker	139	118	Butterfield	117	87
Woerner	122	103	Donlan	145	98
Riley	168	226	Rennie	86	102
H. Dailledouze	92	91

At Cleveland.

The bowling contingent is happy in the possession of two excellent alleys now. The floors have been relaid and refinished and a new track for the return of the balls has been provided at the side, the old one in the center having been torn out. The floors are now level and true, the balls have been refinished and the appearance of the whole improved at least 100 per cent. A.

At St. Louis.

Some very fair scores were made by the bowling contingent last Monday evening. Here they are:

Player.	1st	2d	3d	4th	Av.
Kuehn	175	153	184	169	170
Beneke	136	152	121	197	152
Sanders	135	116	164	109	131
Kunz	140	113	132		128
Weber	116	149	111		125
Fillmore	78	94	121	92	96

I hear there will be a hot time at the alleys next Monday night. The Juniors have challenged the older club to roll three best games out of five. This will no doubt draw a large crowd to see the first match between these two clubs. LOUISIANA.

At Denver.

The following is the score made by the members of the Denver Florists' Club at the alleys Tuesday evening November 21:

Player	1st	2d	3d	Av.
Robt. Kurth	225	192	165	194
John Berry	139	147	218	177

E. C. F.

At New York.

The regular session of the bowling club at the Fifty-seventh street alleys on Monday evening brought together a goodly number of aspirants for high averages but the scores made in several instances were sufficient to make some of the bowlers feel very weary. Sure enough, bowling is a funny game. Frank Traendly proposes to offer a silk umbrella as a premium for the best score in the coming month. Scores made during the evening were as follows:

Player	1st	2d	3d	4th	5th	Av.
Donlan	177	103	133			138
Marshall	128	180	111	113	147	136

CHARLES L. SEYBOLD.

Baltimore's Pride.

Charles Louis Seybold is Maryland's champion bowler. He is a member of the All Star team of Baltimore and the captain of the florists' team. Last winter when Chicago sent her best bowlers east Baltimore won the silver cup offered by the Brunswick-Balke-Collender Co. to the team which should make the best showing against the tourists. Baltimore only won five out of twelve games and Seybold played in only half the series, but four of his games brought victories. In thirty-seven important match games Mr. Seybold made an average of 189 and a fraction. At "cocked hat" he holds the Maryland medal, which he wears as a watch charm. At this game he recently rolled 69, 65 and 54. At nine pins, nine balls, he has a recorded score of 144, 144 and 60. It would take a volume to tell of all Mr. Seybold's successes and to describe his fifty or more medals and trophies. He is the mainstay of the Florists' Bowling Club and in one of their contests last winter made 200, 248, 234 and 218, an average of 225, which is said to be the American record for four games at ten pins. He holds the ball with the thumb and third finger and delivers it with great velocity at the extreme right edge of the alley; when it has traversed three-fourths of the distance the curve to the left begins, with the result that the ball strikes the head pin upon the most effective point. Mr. Seybold believes that "practice makes perfect" and bowls regularly twice a week in winter and once a week in summer. But Mr. Seybold has other claims to distinction than the facility with which he wields the lignum-vitæ. Born at Stuttgart, Germany, in 1862, he sprang from a family of nurserymen. At twenty-one years of age he came to Baltimore and secured a position at Patterson Park, under Superintendent Anderson, where he did such good work that in 1893 he was given charge of Carroll Park, a wild tract upon which he has put much work and a great deal of skill, making of it in the short space of eight years an example of tasteful planting and thorough care. MACK.

LENOX, MASS.—A. Dimmock and J. P. Cleary spent last Saturday and Sunday very pleasantly here, visiting a number of their gardener friends.

CROMWELL, CONN.—A. N. Pierson reports the largest season's business in chrysanthemums which he has ever enjoyed. They will be grown in even larger quantities next year.

ERIE, PA.—S. A. Baur, successor to Henry Niemeyer, rented a down-town store, installed a display of chrysanthemums and general stock, invited the public and profited largely by the effort.

OWOSSO, MICH.—John S. Schleider celebrated the opening of his down-town office and salesroom with a display of chrysanthemums which quite astonished the natives. The store is a beauty and connected with it is a model show house.

MANCHESTER, MASS.—The Manchester Horticultural Society was organized on November 10. It comprises mainly the gardeners of Manchester, but membership is open to all interested in horticulture.

WESTERLY, R. I.—Miss Barbara C. Reuter, daughter of S. J. Reuter, was married on Wednesday, November 15, to Mr. Edward Lueck. The church where the ceremony took place was lavishly decorated with plants and flowers.

FREMONT, NEB.—Green & Nichol held their fourth chrysanthemum show in the W. C. T. U. Temple November 9 to 11 and it was a success in every way. Their trade is excellent and they have all they can do to supply it, especially the wholesale demand for Marie Louise violets.

ST. JOSEPH, MO.—On a recent evening a rough looking fellow inquired for the proprietor at Stuppy's down-town store and drew a revolver on A. A. Sharp. It is thought the man intended robbery and was disconcerted to find Mr. Sharp in the place as Mrs. Sharp is usually alone there.

GALESBURG, ILL.—I. L. Pillsbury had a very good public exhibition at his greenhouses November 13 to 18. He displayed 1000 single-stemmed chrysanthemum plants, about 600 bush plants and a number of well-grown standards. Among the new varieties were Latest Fad, Jas. Comley and Pennsylvania. There was also a good showing of roses, carnations, violets and greenhouse plants. Many visitors made the exhibition profitable.

The Latania is largely used for purposes of decoration. Although its place has, in a measure, been taken by the Kentia, it still is in lively demand. Our stock is in a fine, clean condition. We have now growing for next year's trade not less than 100,000 of these desirable palms.

SHORT SUPPLY OF STOCK.—PRICES ADVANCING.—BEAUTIES HAVE THE CALL.—CUT FLOWER COMPANY TO MOVE.—A RECEPTION.

The supply of flowers has fallen off so much during the last few days that there is a visible advance in prices. Chrysanthemums are nearing the end of their season and but few are coming in compared with the qualities received even a week ago. Violets are scarce, as are choice roses. Special American Beauties have the call even at advanced prices. They have been pushed to $5 per dozen and the indications are they will reach a still higher figure.

The Pittsburg Cut Flower Company expects to move into larger quarters at 504 Liberty street, by December 1, where, having more room, they will be better able to handle their rapidly increasing business.

At the reception held by the Florists' Club at Cyclorama Hall, Allegheny, on Thursday evening last, about seventy-five participated, enjoying a very pleasant evening, with dancing, euchre and refreshments.

Loew & Rochig are open for business in greens, at the same room occupied by them last year. G. O.

SURPLUS IS AT AN END.—THANKSGIVING BRINGS GOOD BUSINESS.—CHRYSANTHEMUMS NEAR THEIR FINISH.—REVIEW OF THE SEASON.

Although business has been fairly good of late, up to the last few days there has been some surplus of flowers, particularly in roses. The advent of Thanksgiving week and the waning of the chrysanthemum season have, however, materially improved the situation, which now seems to promise a fair market for good stock until after the holidays. Concerning the chrysanthemum, the general opinion seems to be that fair lady has hardly behaved as satisfactorily as in past seasons. It is doubtful if the trouble can be entirely attributed to the unseasonably warm fall, as with many growers the plants showed a tendency towards poor development from early in the season, even with varieties that are ordinarily regarded thoroughly reliable. The result has been that quite a large proportion of the stock has been somewhat small. The outlook seems to indicate that there will be practically no chrysanthemums worth taking into account after this week.

Roman hyacinths and Paper White narcissi have made their appearance in small quantities. There seems to be no established price but they average about $3 per hundred. Carnations have stiffened notably in price and when of good quality have sold at $2 per hundred. A.

THE GRAND NEW ROSE LIBERTY!

Won Highest Honors Wherever Shown.

MOST nearly approached by Meteor in color, but far surpassing that standard variety in brilliancy and purity of color, as well as in size and freedom of bloom, never showing any deformed, black or bull heads either in winter or summer. A remarkable keeper when cut keeping its brilliancy of color without turning blue or dropping its petals, as is the case with Gen. Jacqueminot, which it somewhat resembles in size and fragrance.

I HEREBY EXTEND A CORDIAL INVITATION TO ALL LOVERS OF THE QUEEN OF FLOWERS TO COME AND SEE LIBERTY GROWING.

The Finest Crimson Forcing Rose of the Century.

ETHEL CROCKER

Absolutely the BEST PINK CARNATION ever offered the trade.

Grown equally successfully by Hill, Craig, and myself; you are not buying it on a venture, but knowing that it is not a success in one soil and a failure in another.

In color, size, fragrance and stem it is just what the "storemen" want. In habit, constitution and freedom of bloom it is just what the grower wants, never out of crop from September to July, more flowers to the square foot than any other known variety and practically no seconds.

With 18,000 stock plants to work from there is no danger of over propagation, and you are not asked to wait until planting out time for your cuttings but can have them whenever wanted. Orders entrusted to me will have my personal attention, both in the selection of the cuttings and the filling of the order.

Price per 100, $10; per 25, $2.50; per 1000, $75; per 250, $18.75. HERR'S PANSIES at $4.00 now, and a regular assortment of CARNATIONS in a list ready Jan. 1st.

ALBERT M. HERR, Lancaster, Pa.

Rose Crimson Rambler.

As a pot plant for retail sales this rose is incomparable. Its hundreds of blossoms all open together and seem to improve for at least two and even three weeks. The bright crimson color holds without fading and contrasts finely with the glossy foliage. It Forces Easily. We have fine dormant stock.

2-year-old, 2 to 3 feet, well branched, own roots, per dozen, $2.00; per 100, $15.00.
3-year-old, 4 to 5 ft., well branched, budded or own roots, doz. $3.00; per 100, $20.00.

Sharon, Pa.

A prominent grower said recently that the man who introduces the ideal white carnation, something that will yield quality as well as quantity, has a fortune in store. John Murchie has four exceptional seedlings and one in particular that seems destined to forge to the very front. Unfortunately Mr. Murchie's stock is limited to a very few plants and it will take two years at least to work it up to the point of dissemination. Mr. Murchie's general stock of carnations is well worth seeing. General Gomez, in his opinion, is the best dark one to-day.

Ed. McConnell's Brilliant bids fair to attract a deal of attention during the coming carnation meeting in Buffalo. A rich, brilliant pink, of splendid size and constitution, it towers above its rivals and puts them all in the shade. Mr. McConnell has numerous other seedlings, some of which are decidedly meritorious.

At M. I. O'Brien's, I found everything in splendid condition, all but the genial Mr. O'Brien himself, who was confined to his couch. HOMO.

HERR'S PANSIES

The best is what you want: common Pansies are dear at any price. The "best florists" in the country are my customers; they will tell you there are no other Pansies quite so good as mine. Try them and you will say the same when they come into bloom.

Kift's Adjustable Hanging Flower Vase and Plant Holder.

Ornamental, practical and useful; just the thing for short-stemmed flowers such as violets, orchids, valley, etc. Indispensable for show window and house decorations. The clasps are adjustable and can be placed in any position or angle. The fixture is made of solid brass, heavily nickel-plated and is practically indestructible. A larger size for five to six-inch potted plants, such as Adiantum Farleyense, Cyclamens, etc., shows these plants to the best possible advantage.

Kift's Individual Cut Flower Vase...

A pointed glass tube fitted with a perforated rubber cap, through which the stem of the flower is placed. The cap holds the vase and the flower firmly together and prevents the escape of water in the tube, no matter at what angle it is placed. Useful for keeping flowers when sprayed on dinner tables, for basket handles, for orchid sprays which can be inserted in pots of Farleyense, etc., and is useful for hosts of decorative effects.

TRADE EXCELLENT AND MARKET IN HEALTHY STATE.—PRICES HIGHER.—MURPHYS AND THEIR CARNATIONS.—NOTES.

Our storemen have shown much more activity the past week and business has been better all around. The cut flower market is getting suited more to the demand and there seems to be a better feeling on every hand. Roses and carnations have advanced in price and with Thanksgiving they went a notch or two higher. Violets are not over-plentiful and some retailers have difficulty in securing their supplies. Bulbous stock has been equal to the demand. Smilax, adiantum and asparagus have changed but little. The Oakley Rose Houses are sending in some choice Beauties.

Wm. Murphy and C. C. Murphy have been strictly "in it" with carnations and their houses never looked better. Robt. Murphy & Sons are coming in with their specialty, Daybreak.

Wm. Mann, of the Cincinnati Cut Flower Co., is suffering with a sprained ankle. Frank Ball, of the same firm, reports a good shipping trade.

H. SCHWARZ.

ST. PAUL.—A. H. Bunde, who moved out some distance and went into the growing business a few years since, will open a new place in the nearer residence district. Mr. Bunde is well known in the city and should rapidly pick up his old trade with a good share of the new business.

GREENHOUSE WOODWORK.

Open-air-dried Cypress Lumber is more durable, and better suited to Greenhouse conditions, than kiln-dried stock. But you cannot get it from those that are engaged in the business in a small way—even though their entire business is confined to greenhouse material—for it takes a long time for the lumber to thoroughly dry and this means an investment in lumber that only those of large capital can make. The only way to have air-dried lumber is to buy green lumber and hold it until it dries. Those that order dry lumber from the producers of Cypress get kiln-dried stock. It is cheaper for them to kiln-dry than to hold the stock long enough to season it in the open air. We carry a large stock and fill all orders with open-air-dried Cypress clear of knots, sap and all other defects.

Economical Landscaping for Railroad Corporations.

[Read by Paul Huebner, landscape gardener for the Reading Railway, before the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, December 4, 1899.]

The desirability of having the grounds around railroad stations embellished with grass plots, trees and shrubbery and livened up with foliage and flowering plants during the summer, is generally acknowledged to be of prime importance as an advertisement for the railroad, as well as an educative influence to the public at large.

Most railroad officials look at the question from the economic standpoint. They do not question the value of attractive stations along their lines provided it does not cost too much. The matter of cost at first sight frightens a great many from entering into this improvement; but when more closely looked into it is found that there are ways of accomplishing the desired result without large outlay. The corporation which I have had the honor to serve for a great many years in the capacity of landscape gardener, has, I think, solved the problem of how to manage this work economically. In order to show this to those interested I will give a brief account of the landscape work which is now a permanent feature of the Reading Railway.

In the first place it was decided that the most economical plan would be for the corporation to have its own outfit, consisting of a nursery for hardy trees, shrubs and plants, and propagating houses for soft-wooded, flowering and foliage subjects for summer decorations, with the necessary tools, etc., in connection with same and also help to run it. After the first year the cost of maintenance is comparatively small, the main item being for wages; but that is a small item in comparison to the expense if plants had to be bought in the open market.

For instance, I plant every season about 100,000 flowering and foliage plants, about as follows: 16,000 geraniums, 5,000 cannas, 18,000 alternantheras, 2,000 scarlet sages, 2,000 Begonia Vernon and varieties, 2,000 ageratums, 15,000 echeverias, 40,000 coleus, 3,000 abutilons, 2,000 acalyphas, 1,000 Centaurea candidissimas and 4,000 miscellaneous plants, such as celosias, amaranthuses, petunias, zinnias, vincas, etc.

These would cost at least $5,000 to buy and the whole cost of producing same is less than half that sum. In addition to the $5,000 there would be the cost of planting and maintaining, so that the economy of having an outfit is apparent. This view is still further enhanced when we consider the hardy stock in the nursery, which is all included in the first cost.

A special feature of my work which I think important, and one which I think any corporation might imitate to advantage, is the planting of privet hedges as a live snow-fence for the protection of lines from snowdrifts. These hedges are neat, effective and permanent and, last but not least, they are inexpensive. The privet I consider one of the finest hedge plants for this latitude. It is almost evergreen, has no insect or fungoid enemies, is a quick grower, and does not winter-kill. I have heard of some instances of its having suffered during the past very severe winter, but with me I can say positively that I have not lost a plant.

In regard to shrubbery, I use a dozen or more different varieties, such as deutzias, forsythias, spiræas, althæas weigelas, dogwoods, etc. One of the very best is Hydrangea paniculata grandiflora. I use this quite largely and find it very ornamental and lasting. Its flowers are so showy and persistent that its season continued much longer than others and I value it most highly. Evergreens I consider very effective indeed; the reason I have not used them more largely, is on account of their being of slower growth, but as my stock increases I will be able to make effective use of them. They are especially useful for the winter landscape.

In soft-wooded plants for summer effect I have already given a short list of the species I find most useful for my purpose. As to the varieties, among geraniums I recommend La Pilot for scarlet; it is one of the most telling crimson-scarlets to-day under favorable conditions. Although a French variety, it does very well with me if planted early in the season. If planted late it does not do so well. For pink I use Mme. Thiabaud, the best bloomer under all circumstances; it is a dark pink shade but very effective. For a light pink I use Glorieuse, a dwarf grower and very fine bloomer. For salmon, Mrs. E. G. Hill, also a constant bloomer. For white, Mme. Bazain; I think it is the best white yet. For edging of course I use the Mme. Salleroi.

Among cannas, when you come down to the fine point, Mme. Crozy has not been beaten yet in its color. For scarlet Beaute de Poitevine is one of the finest. If Columbia were only a better keeper over winter it would be preferred. I like Philadelphia but it is a little weak.

For yellow, Florence Vaughan and Golden Border, the latter a dwarf-growing variety excellent for borders. For dark foliage, Egandale, crimson, and Adm. Avellan, dark orange.

Of coleus I use Verschaffeltii, Golden Bedder, Queen Victoria, Nero, Golden Beauty and Mrs. Baird.

One of the most valuable bedding plants is Begonia Vernon, and I must say a good word for Erfordi. These varieties can stand the bright sun and are very showy.

As to crotons, here I hesitate. They are certainly among the most beautiful plants for summer outdoor decoration, but to keep the plants over winter they require a good deal more heat than my other bedding plants and consequently I am unable to use them, much as I would like to.

With the other items mentioned, I need not go into details, as there is nothing special to say as to varieties, but if any one has any questions to ask I will be glad to answer to the best of my ability.

In conclusion, I am free to say that the horticultural trade in general are under a debt of gratitude to the railway corporations which have done good work in beautifying the stations along their lines. This work is a grand public educator and brings custom to everyone in the business. I get letters from all over the country from people who are desirous of planting and whose first impulse in this direction was received from the picturesque and pleasing appearance of the stations along the line of the Reading Railway. And when economically managed there is no cheaper nor more effective means than this of advertising a line, and I hope the practice will be extended until every line in the country shall be of artistic as well as practical utility to the public at large.

Are Flower Shows Beneficial to Florists?

[Read by Edgar Sanders before the Chicago Florists' Club, December 1, 1899.]

I propose to take the broad ground that flower shows are beneficial to every florist in the city. I know there are some who will dispute the proposition; if he is present let him be heard. Nay, I go farther and assert that every display of flowers in the parks, in the gardens, in the florists' stores, aye, even in the streets, tends to encourage the use of flowers and create a demand therefor.

If this is so, why are not these displays beneficial to everyhody in the trade? What we want is more buyers. The grower as first hand, the wholesaler as second and the retailer as third distributor, needs no extra push nowadays to start or enter into the florist business, nor ever did in my experience. He may, as to the best way after starting to make a success of it.

After fully half a century of connections with flower shows myself in one form or another, it is an enigma to me to find so few florists of this city lending them a helping hand. Not a few seem actually indifferent whether they visit them at all, except they can get in for nothing. Why, out of easily 500 in the trade in this city, not 100 belong to either the Horticultural Society or the Florists' Club, which to my mind tells a strange story.

If my assertion is correct, that shows are an educator of the masses to love flowers, they should be encouraged in every way by those making a living from the sale of all horticultural products, which you see takes in all kinds, from state and county fairs, exhibits at horticultural and florists' societies' monthly meetings, up to the grand yearly fall show of flowers. Suppose for a moment, in your estimation, a good many of the exhibits are rather tame affairs. Do your share to improve them.

Surely none will dispute, if a flower show, in whatever form, encourages a taste for flowers, and causes more to be used, the grower can have no kick coming. Has it not been a fact at every one of our fall shows, prices for all good stock rise during that week, however dull the trade has been before. This being so we opine the wholesale man is equally benefited, as he gets bigger commissions by the booming of his trade.

The retail man, taking him in all his varied phases, may possibly kick at anything that tends to increase the price of the flowers he wants to buy. But low prices and gluts are the bane of the business, bad for everybody but the fakir. We will leave him to fight his own battles. He after all flourishes mainly through over production. If the growers cannot or will not adjust supplies to demand, which after all controls prices, there is bound to be trouble, as there is at times in everything obtained from the field and garden.

High or fancy prices long continued, is not a favorable condition of the market in the long run, any more than gluts and ruinous prices. If periodical gluts must come, you will have either to destroy enough flowers to bring an equilibrium, either at your greenhouses or in the commission house, or put up with these gentry one hears of so much, who in the time of low prices get rid of as many flowers as those we are accustomed to call legitimate retail florists.

I claim that if a florist in any of the divisions feels like aspiring to the top of his calling, he had better weigh well any thought he may have that he can afford to give societies and flower shows the cold shoulder. The grower needs the stimulus that a competitive exhibit of his stock against that of his neighbors may give him. It may take down a little of the conceit that he alone has the best that is going.

Will you, for example, you retail men, for a moment cast your thoughts back during the shows in this city in the past ten years, and note the names, for example, of the prize winners, say of decorative material, tables, mantels, etc.? Would not the story tell who commanded the cream of the trade of the time? Yes, there is surely danger in your standing aloof. The public, your customers, will be apt to be impressed by what they see. Consider the old adage—"To him that hath shall be given."

I have not touched on the advantages of flower shows in encouraging new productions in the way of plants and flowers. Something new and fashionable to strike the public fancy, is what all progressive florists should aim at. Strike out for something novel and taking, and once obtained push it for all it is worth. Most successful men find great help from new things. Set your wits to work that you may also for a time enjoy the monopoly of something or other.

In conclusion, a florist who sees nothing helpful in flower shows reminds me of a Niagara Falls story I heard the other day. A Canadian police officer tells it something like this: "A Pennsylvania Dutchman hove in the other day and asked the officials at the falls if there was anything about the place worth seeing. 'You see,' he said, 'it's shust like dis. My frients and frau told me I should take id in, and I vant to take in everyting der iss to zee. Dey say der vas someting great here und I forgot it alreatty, and haf walked all ofer und zee noddings.' The visitor was at once taken to the finest view of the falls, where he stood a few minutes looking. 'Well,' said his conductor at last. 'Vell,' returned the man. 'Dont you see the Falls?' 'Vat, dot vater falling? Iss dot vat I coom all dis vays to zee, a liddle vater dripping? Jiminy, I go me home.'"

Let me suggest we want a higher tone in this florist business all around this city. We want a reading, thinking body of men, not mere machines that are content to plod on in a humdrum way. Let us have progressive men, and they will patronize our societies and take a deep interest in everything connected with their calling.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

WORK OF THE COMMITTEES.

Boston, December 2, Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich., exhibited Stelleta, which scored both scales ninety-seven points. White Bonnaflon, by same exhibitor, scored commercial scale eighty-seven points. For descriptions see last week's report. No reports from other committees. ELMER D. SMITH, Sec'y.

SOME NEW VARIETIES.

Orizaba is one of Nathan Smith & Son's newly certificated seedlings. It is a Japanese incurved of the type of Mrs. Henry Robinson, with fine stem and ample foliage. It is what is described as an "easy doer." It is a cross of Mrs. E. G. Hill and Mrs. W. C. Egan, from the same seed-head as Idavan. The color is light pink and the height three feet.

Goldmine is a rich golden yellow, outer petals reflexed and those of the center incurved in a whorl. It is a seedling of H. L. Sunderbruch × Modesto, originated by Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich., and the foliage and habit resembles Sunderbruch. It is unsurpassed in size, having been grown eleven inches in diameter. Planted in June it attained a height of three feet. This variety has heretofore been known as Stelleta.

The accompanying illustration shows a vase of five new European varieties. No. 1 is Mrs. C. Harmon Payne, a bold, handsome incurved flower of an exceedingly pleasing shade of deep pink, the reverse of silvery pink. No. 2 is H. J. Jones, which John N. May describes as the finest of the crimsons, a strikingly attractive flower, which does not burn, very early and very large. No. 3 is Pride of Stokill, an unusual combination of gold and crimson, very distinct in form and color. No. 4 is Lady Anglesy, a delightful blending of the varied shades of autumn colors, a useful flower for any purpose. No. 5 is President Bevin, orange at the base with a fine shade of carmine running through the edges of the petals, making it exceedingly attractive. All five are early blooming varieties.

CHRYSANTHEMUM GOLDMINE.

CARNATIONS.

FANCIES AND OTHER NOVELTIES.

The list of fancy or variegated carnations is not quite so long as is the roll of the pinks, but one who wishes an assortment will find a considerable range for selection. Mrs. Geo. M. Bradt is most prominent in this class and apparently fills a place among the fancies similar to that held by Buttercup as a yellow for such a long period. My own plants, and all that I have seen this season, seem to have increased rather than diminished in vigor and also in productiveness. This variety can not be grown as a cheap carnation, either for cuttings or flowers, but as it can always be sold for the highest market price that does not prevent it being the standard in its class.

Sandusky has a place in this assortment and is quite distinct but it has not been taken up as it really deserves to be. It seems to be a good one to grow for a cheaper flower than Mrs. Bradt and promises to give enough blooms to make it pay as such. There are some other rivals of Mrs. Bradt coming into view and possibly one of them may supplant that variety, but not for a year or two.

Of yellows there are but two worthy of mention. Mayor Pingree, with its grand flower and stem, is claimed by some to be too unproductive to pay, but I have found that it produces as many flowers as some varieties classed among the free bloomers, and they certainly are magnificent.

Gold Nugget does not give quite so fine a flower but is more productive and therefore more popular with most growers. With me all yellows are money losers, as my customers are not willing to pay the necessary money for them, in fact they claim that Pingree and Nugget, as fine as ever exhibited, are unsalable in any quantity. This seems strange to me as a good yellow is not a bad sort of a carnation, but it is a fact that my customers can not sell 100 yellows to 1,000 of the other colors.

In choosing crimsons we are practically limited to C. W. Ward's two introductions of last season, Gen. Maceo and Gen. Gomez, both of which are worth a place in any establishment where a complete assortment is required. Each of these sorts seems considerably smaller than the blooms shown last season, but they are improving in size right along and will no doubt fill the bill in this color very nicely.

Having a new one of my own similar in color to Maud Adams I have not tried that variety and have not seen it growing but suppose it will be heard from later in the season. My own, or rather Sievers', named Leslie Paul, is a little late this season, but will give a fair cut for the holidays and is such a fine flower that even if its lateness proves to be characteristic, it will still be worth waiting for.

Sievers has given us some very novel shades in carnations and some retailers predicted that they would prove not worth growing, but later some of these very retailers were glad to get them. One of these novelties and perhaps the best, is a burnt orange called Elsie Ferguson, an early and free bloomer and quite a good one to have for variety. Perhaps a house or two would be a surplus with most growers, but from 100 to 500 plants could certainly be made to pay. Next in value to this is a light salmon, larger in size but with not quite so stiff a stem. The plant produces a surplus of grass, which can be used to advantage with the flowers, but it reduces the number of blooms per square foot of bench surface, as they require planting at least twelve inches apart each way. Not being a retailer I do not claim to know, but it seems to me that there should be room for a few of these novel shades and hybridizers might give us a few more to try.

ALBERT M. HERR.

Tree Life in Cities.

Tree life on Philadelphia's streets was diagnosed by City Forester John C. Lewis at a meeting of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, held at Horticultural Hall November 28, 1899. The difficulties in the way of tree growth on the streets and the means to overcome them were explained by Mr. Lewis in a very interesting paper. He told of the efforts of various organizations, including the Florists' Club, Civic Club and City Parks Association, looking toward extensive tree planting and declared that Mayor Ashbridge, in championing the project to plant trees on Broad street, should be supported by all citizens.

The City Forester stated that in diagnosing the city tree life he would confine himself to personal knowledge gained by close study and experiment and consultation and correspondence with other experts at home and abroad, "my statements," he said, "being supported by the silent but convincing evidence of great numbers of trees that luxuriate on our streets and on the streets of other cities in the United States and Europe, that have been planted under my personal direction."

Taking up his subject by sections, Mr. Lewis first described the difficulties surrounding tree life in the streets of every city. He told of the many enemies to growth, including the manner of street grading and paving, flying dust, variation of light, high buildings, floating exhaust steam impregnated with cyclinder oil, heat from dwellings, factories and hotels, caterpillars, small boys with pocket knives and the man who "inexcusably converts the tree into an impromptu hitching post." In summing up these enemies the speaker said: "These difficulties individually might be considered as minor matters, but in the aggregate they loom up in monstrous proportions and form a grand conspiracy against the future growth and development of the tree."

In considering what the Bureau of City Property has done in the endeavor to surmount these difficulties, and the success thus far attained, Mr. Lewis told how the hole for each tree is now made large enough to receive a cartload of rich earth brought from the suburbs and of the mixture of broken oyster shells, the lime in which absorbs and neutralizes the subterranean gases. Packing the earth properly prevents vibration.

"The most successful remedy we have applied to prevent the accumulation of dust on the leaves, and the oily particles that descend with the condensed exhaust steam, together with the residue of acids and gases formulated by the multitudinous ranges, heaters and furnaces throughout the city, in the absence of rain, is to spray the trees occasionally with a solution of whale oil soap, alternated later on with water alone. This forms a filmy shield over the surface of the leaf on which these deleterious atoms rest, and which the after applications of water easily remove, thus promoting a healthy growth and also preventing to a very great extent the ravages of the caterpillar and other numerous insects that delight to prey upon the trees."

The iron tree box was declared against as an enemy and the wooden stake was also condemned. Wire cloth was asserted to be the proper thing to use for tree guards.

"As to the caterpillar," said Mr. Lewis, "we can safely say the back of this pest is broken, and if a greater number of our citizens had only made an effort last year to cleanse their trees, the caterpillar would now be a thing of the past, as far as Philadelphia is concerned. For four successive years the Bureau of City Property, at a great expense and using all the available force at its command, with the aid of a steam spraying machine, has preserved the luxuriant foliage in our parks, whereas great numbers of trees on our streets, over which we have exercised no control, have been neglected, and the caterpillar has roamed at will. The result is, next season the caterpillar will again be in evidence, the expense to the city will be continued, and other important improvement operations again retarded.

are best adapted to the street conditions of Philadelpbia, the City Forester said: "All trees are beautiful beyond doubt or contradiction, but it does not follow that all are suitable for specific locations, hence a choice becomes necessary. The Bureau has arrived at conclusions which enables it to say further experiment is unnecessary. Platanus orientalis is one of, if not the best tree for our purpose. The Norway, sugar and silver maples are most beautiful trees, especially the two former, but the silver maple is very desirable when planted under cement pavements and can be used in places less suitable for the Norway or sugar."

"Other trees favored are the American and European lindens, Populus balsamifera and Liriodendron tulipifera, the former growing where no other tree will exist; the sweet gum, the pin oak and the willow-leaved oak, which are the most symmetrical growers of the oak family, but are not so picturesque in the first few years of their life as some other varieties of trees."

Speaking of the elm, Mr. Lewis said: "Of all trees that should be planted in Philadelphia none is more representative than the noble elm, the tree under which this city and our great commonwealth were born and which we should cherish as the Pennsylvania tree. I have been informed that numbers of people throughout the country have given up planting the elm on account of the ravages of the borer, but this is a very wrong idea. If all tree planters were to make the same resolution, in course of time that noble tree would become extinct. If we cannot annihilate the destroyer in every case, we must do the next best thing, we must remedy the effect as much as possible, and this is what the Bureau of City Property has been and is endeavoring to do.

"The Bureau is resolved to spare no effort in the prosecution of its plans to beautify our small parks and the sidewalks of our city. By way of review I ask comparison of our city parks and squares, which extend from Tacony to Darby and from Roxborough to League Island, and in the aggregate cover an area of 600 acres, with the same four years ago, and see if a vast improvement has not been made."

In conclusion Mr. Lewis said: "Tree planting on our city streets must not be considered altogether in the light of a beneficence but as a plain matter of duty, a duty we owe to posterity. That duty demands that we hand down this grand city, made grander, to our children and to unborn millions that will follow us, as far as in us lies, in accordance with the wishes of our best people to-day, which are parallel with the ideas of our ancestors and founders of this great city, that to its other noble features it shall be a city of noble trees."

A Milwaukee Commission House.

Although the Milwaukee market is not so close to the very largest growers as is Chicago, there has developed a remarkable growth in trade during the past few years, which affords a careful observer some incentive for study. One not thoroughly alive to the situation would say that the limited amount of glass devoted to specialties and the situation of the city would not support more than a limited amount of trade, but those who reasoned thus failed to consider the powerful influence in the personality of those who are managing affairs in this particular. The youngest firm wholesaling flowers, Holton & Hunkel Co., whose store we illustrate, is a noteworthy example. Their personal care of the stock consigned to them has won the confidence of shippers so as to create a steady stream from all directions, even from localities not considered tributary to Milwaukee. They at first dealt in flowers exclusively, but for the accommodation of patrons have added florists' supplies. The amount of flowers handled daily by these young men and their assistants astonishes the older florists. A few years ago a majority of the city florists ordered stock from Chicago, Cincinnati and the east, but now, although the amount consumed has largely increased, local retailers rarely order from out of town. BUSINESS BRISK.—EVERYBODY SATISFIED BUT THE FAKIRS.—MARKET FIRM.—NO OVER-SUPPLY.—WHITE FLOWERS IN DEMAND.—HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY POSTPONES BUILDING OPERATIONS—EXHIBITION OF CHILDREN'S HERBARIUMS.—VARIOUS NOTES OF INTEREST.

Business is good. Everybody says so this time and so the statement will not be questioned by either grower, middleman or retailer, whether he sells roses, carnations, holly, baskets or toothpicks. The perversity that led to the picking of every solitary flower for Thanksgiving day was rewarded by a shortage for the days immediately following and prices were naturally much firmer than they had been for the holiday. Street fakirs cannot understand how it all happens and have been in a state of agitation for a week, but their accustomed prey, the commission men and the box men in the market, have no time to fool with them just now and their chattering is wasted. Carnations are doing as well, proportionately, as any other flower and as well as they ever did, as to value in the market, and there is nothing in sight to indicate any different condition until after the holidays. White varieties, both of carnations and roses, hold their own well this week for there seems to be an unusual amount of funeral work coming in. Lilies, callas and other white flowers are all in demand but the quantity of Paper White narcissi and Roman hyacinths being cut prevents any pressing stringency. Roses are excellent in quality, all varieties responding nicely to the clear, cold weather now prevailing and the cut is reduced to somewhere near the actual demand, so that values are very steady for salable stock.

At the monthly meeting of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society on December 2, the committee on new hall made a report to the effect that on account of the great advance in price of all materials required for building, they had decided to defer further action until next spring. Plans are practically completed but to carry them out under prevailing conditions would require an amount considerably larger than the sum appropriated by the society which, however, would have been amply sufficient at prices in effect last spring at the time the appropriation was made.

The two days' exhibition of herbariums by the children, at Horticultural Hall last week, attracted many visitors and the work of the twenty-five young exhibitors was exceptionally fine throughout. This was the ninth annual display of the kind here and the specimens spread out on long tables completely filled the two halls. The exhibit of one little Miss comprised 125 specimens, all correctly named botanically, and many others were equally a revelation as to the remarkable development of a love for botany which is resulting from this well directed effort of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society.

GREATER GOTHAM SHARES IN THE GENERAL PROSPERITY.—BRISK DEMAND AND ON SHORT SUPPLY.—DIFFERENCE IN CONDITIONS.—PLANT GROWERS IN GOOD SHAPE FOR THE HOLIDAYS.

Smiling faces have illumined the recesses of Twenty-eighth street, Twenty-ninth street, Thirtieth street and other localities where the wholesale flower trade makes its home, ever since December 1. A full week of general felicitation of this nature is a rare novelty and is well worthy of record. As compared with conditions prevailing one year ago the situation is very gratifying. The first of December last year saw a huge overstock of flowers and a most unweildly surplus encumbered the market, with little encouragement in the immediate future. This year shows a healthy demand for carnations, American Beauties and special stock generally with the supply limited and the cut of stock in the lower grades also sufficiently limited to keep the Greeks on the anxious seat and insure their paying a reasonable price for what they carry away.

Plant growers are making good progress towards a fine stock for the holidays and they could not have better weather to insure the presentation of a grade of flowering plants that will do them credit. The plant trade for Christmas has shown a marvelous advancement in volume and in quality of the product each year. Cyclamens, ericas, poinsettias, primroses and ardesias never looked better than they do this season and it looks as though the demand for orange trees would far exceed the supply.

After the election of officers of the Florists' Club next Monday evening refreshments will be served and an entertainment given by members.

TRADE NOW ON THE PROPER BASIS.—STOCK NOT TOO PLENTIFUL.—PRICES GOOD.—SPECIALTIES IN DEMAND.—REVIEW OF THE CHRYSANTHEMUM SEASON.—MANY OFFERINGS OF GREENS.—MEETING OF THE CLUB.

The trade winds have at last got around to the right quarter and are moving things along lively and, best of all, steadily. Instead of wondering how to get rid of the left-over stock at the close of the day the dealers now look over their advance orders and lay plans to secure enough stock to fill them. There is a good demand for all first-class stock, in fact many of the second grades are worked off as firsts, there not being enough of the latter to go around. Beauties of all grades are much in demand and range in price from $2 per dozen for twelve-inch stems to $5 and $6 for three to four-foot lengths. They are very good now, both in color and form. Bridesmaids and Meteors are the next favorites and sell at from $6 to $10 per hundred. A few Golden Gate are coming in and sell fairly well. Liberty is much in demand, its brilliant color being away ahead of anything else. Carnations are now forging to the front; $6 per hundred is paid quite freely for select Crocker and America. Robert Craig & Son and Albert M. Herr are sending in fine Crocker; S. S. Pennock is handling Mr. Herr's stock. Fair blooms of the standard kinds now bring $2, while $3 is readily obtained for select flowers. Good mignonette is $3 to $4; double violets are in fair demand at $1 to $1.50 per hundred and 75 cents to $1 is asked for the best Californias. Chrysanthemums are at an end for 1899 and it can be said that there was scarcely any time this fall when the market was over stocked and for the most part the demand was good. There are no longiflorums or Harrisii in this market as yet.

That Christmas is almost here is evidenced by the boxes of holly and other Christmas greens that are to be seen on the streets. Cards and letters from "unknown" correspondents are being received in every mail, asking for orders for holly, mistletoe and green and also querying, "how much are you paying for it?" Heaps of trouble are ahead for the man who gets tangled up with this class of dealers. As one of the advertisers puts it "one case of holly in the store is worth five on the way" and that is generally where the Christmas greens are that are ordered from inexperienced packers.

The meeting of the Florists' Club last Tuesday evening was fairly well attended. Paul Huebner's paper on landscaping about railroad stations was an interesting document. Mr. Huebner's work on the grounds about the stations of the Reading Railway near this city show him to be a master hand at the business. Several new members were elected; the club is rapidly increasing in membership and bids fair to soon have the largest list of active members in the country.

TRADE BRISK AND STOCK SCARCE.—PRICES GO AHEAD OF THANKSGIVING LIST.—PROSPECTS FOR CHRISTMAS.—PROBABILITY OF GOOD STOCK.—WEBER BROS. LAY OFF FOR THE WINTER.—A GOOD WHITE SEEDLING CARNATION.—BUDLONG TO BUILD.—STORE WINDOWS GAY.—CLUB MEETING AND OTHER JOTTINGS.

This has been another busy week in this market. Local trade has been good and shipping orders plentiful. Stock has been short and prices have frequently exceeded the Thanksgiving list, choice roses bringing 10 cents. Toward the latter part of the week the bright weather afforded a prospect for larger supplies but at this season the sum is not to be counted upon and prevailing rates are apt to be current up to the holidays. The present indications are that Christmas supplies will be adequate to meet the demand and that all orders will be filled but that rates will be reasonably high. In compensation for the fair prices now in force the growers promise a grade of stock which has seldom been equaled at this season. The rose plants are in splendid shape and carnations are improving every day, with excellent prospects for the holidays. The shortage of stock is such that such flowers as Paper White narcissi are now largely relied upon for funeral work and growers of such lines are assured of a market.

Weber Bros. sent in the last of their 40,000 chrysanthemums on Thursday and are practically out of business, in fact some of their houses are now being demolished. The establishment may be rebuilt for them in the spring, at least they expect to make some arrangement whereby they will continue to grow for this market. They are well pleased with the returns from their chrysanthemum crop. Budlong sold most of the cut and the average price was easily 10 cents per bloom.

Bassett & Washburn are enjoying a trade which is taxing the productiveness of their establishment to the limit. They are cutting some fine blooms of a white seedling carnation which they have grown for two years and which will eventually be heard of as either Hinsdale or Burlington, the name not yet having been decided upon. They have a few hundred Leslie Paul which are giving excellent blooms but not in satisfactory quantity.

The store windows are again a constant attraction to passers-by. Lange and Mangel always have admirers before their displays and the handsomest show in town this week has been at Samuelson's, where Harrisii lilies were the prominent feature. Friedman had a fine lot of cyclamens for his window.

At last week's meeting of the Florists' Club the postponed discussion of the benefits of the annual flower show was opened by a brief paper by ex-president Edgar Sanders. The argument proved to be like the proverbial jug handle, no dissenting voice being raised when it was asserted that the horticultural society's exhibition are of incalculable value to the trade.

Chrysanthemums are nearly out of the market, such big growers as Poehlmann having cut the last of their stock considerably earlier than a year ago. At no time this year has the market been glutted with chrysanthemums and the general verdict is that the crop was marketed at satisfactory rates throughout.

J. A. Budlong is planning a further increase in his glass for next season. He will certainly build three houses 24x300 for Beauties and may conclude to put up five. They will be constructed upon the same lines as the three splendid houses built last spring.

Some of the local commission men say that the reported deal in ferns has proven ineffectual and that there will be no advance other than one governed entirely by the law of supply and demand.

The City of Chicago is going into the cut flower business, three greenhouses 15x75 feet having been built at the bridewell, in which the women prisoners will be employed.

E. E. Pieser's advice to growers, which will be found in another column, is particularly timely and well worth the careful attention of all growers.

Herman Holtz has embarked in business at 1047 Sheffield avenue and is constructing four houses, mostly for carnations and bedding stock.

A PROSPEROUS THANKSGIVING.—HEAVY DEMAND ACCENTUATES A SCARCITY.—PRICES HIGH.—DEALERS EXPECT MUCH OF THIS DAY.

Thanksgiving trade was very good, with stock of all kinds very scarce. The wholesale men were in great glee and prices went up a few pegs on all kinds of stock. Carnations were good sellers and the supply fair, although the demand was so great that they seemed scarce. Carnations keep well at this season of the year and very few sleepy ones are seen. The fancy varieties were up to $4 per hundred and even the common sorts brought $2 50. Roses were also in great demand. Beauties were $3 and $4 per dozen and fine teas brought from $4 to $8 per hundred. Chrysanthemums are almost entirely out of the market. Romans, narcissi, lily of the valley and other bulbous stock sold well but the supply was equal to the demand. Some of our largest florists predict that Thanksgiving day will soon equal Christmas. Henry G. Berning, one of our leading commission men, says that a great many shipping orders could not be filled this year owing to the scarcity of stock and the big demand at home. LOUISIANA.

BUSY SEASON DAWNS.—GREAT SCARCITY OF STOCK.—GOOD ROSES MADE POOR BY BAD PACKING.—SCOTT'S SONS GO EAST.

Trade has been very fair since the approach of Thanksgiving and stock has been scare. On Monday we had a genuine winter day with snow enough to block traffic. Now we're ready for the greens men. The shortage of stock was particularly noticeable on Wednesday, the day before the feast, and there were some very funny incidents at Kasting's, where buyers scrambled for anything with which to carry on their business; there wasn't nearly enough to go around. Carnations and violets were the hardest to get; roses were reasonably plentiful but the quality was only fair. It seems strange that some good growers should spend extra time and money in producing high grade stock and then ruin it by the miserable packing which we not infrequently see.

Wm. Scott, Jr., and David J. Scott have gone to New York and Philadelphia. The latter will spend a year or more familiarizing himself with the methods of the eastern specialists and fitting himself to become a worthy successor to his illustrious sire. W. A.

Kalamazoo, Mich.

Since my last call on Van Bochove Bros. some ten months ago, I found a marked change about their greenhouse establishment. Aside from the general improvements and overhauling, which gives this place an attractive appearance, they have added during the past summer three houses, each 26x150, a new boiler room and a coal shed. Thus equipped, they are now in a position to handle both their retail and wholesale trade in good shape. Their entire plant consists now of fifteen houses, comprising about 35,000 feet of glass, five of which are given to carnations, five to roses, four to palms and miscellaneous stock, and one to smilax.

A fine and commodious office, well lighted, splendidly furnished and equipped with all the modern conveniences, is another feature of comparatively recent introduction. A stroll through the houses showed the writer that roses, carnations and chrysanthemums are doing exceptionally fine in Kalamazoo soil, the soil that is known the world over for its celery producing qualities. However, with all due respect to the soil, I must not overlook the fact that Van Bochove Bros. are good all-around growers.

Mrs. Joseph Dunkley, who undertook the management of the greenhouses after the demise of her husband about a year and a half ago, proves conclusively that the American women—God bless them—are equal to the occasion, no matter what difficulties there may be in the way, and can manage a greenhouse plant just as well as they can attend to their household duties. Whatever changes I noticed about the place were of an improved character, while the general stock looked well and promising.

Business has never been better.

HOMO.

A Half Century of Development.

In July, 1833, there landed on the banks of the Erie Canal a family of four Alsatians, short in stature, but of strong build. The son, a lad of eighteen, led the way out to Pine Hill, New York, where a relative advised them to buy a farm with a small clearing, the rest with heavy pine and oak timber. This cleared, a beautiful piece of land was opened to view. It was farmed at first, but in 1849 the late Godfrey Zimmerman started upon it the Pine Hill Nurseries. Most of the orchards of western New York have been supplied with stock, sooner or later, from there. The streets of Buffalo are lined with trees and the lawns decorated with shrubs from these nurseries. During half a century the Pine Hill Nurseries have maintained a reputation for trustworthy stock and fair and honest dealing. This explains why they are so well known through western New York, and why the name is held in such respect. A reputation of this kind lasts.

Within the last few weeks a new department has been added to the establishment, now conducted by C. D. Zimmerman, that of cut flowers and interior decorating. A neat little store and greenhouse has been erected at the corner of Chippewa and Franklin streets, in Buffalo, transforming an unsightly lot full of rubbish into a very attractive spot. Inside all is beautifully arranged with cut flowers, palms and other decorative plants.

This establishment is now very complete in every line of horticulture. In the fruit department all new fruits are being tested and sent out. The ornamental and landscape gardening department has grown steadily. A large force is constantly employed under the direction of James Brown, planting, grading, etc., in summer, and trimming in winter. The store at No. 50 West Chippewa street is in the charge of Miss Skinner, and is already quite popular. The show of American Beauties and chrysanthemums this fall was not surpassed by any of the older stands. The electric lighting is fine, and draws many spectators like human moths to the big window.

Bay City, Mich.

Boehringer Bros. report a splendid trade all along the line, the demand for chrysanthemums of all grades, roses and carnations having surpassed their most sanguine expectations. Fortunately for them, they are well equipped this season to meet all demands and to take good care of their trade. Their general stock of cut flowers and plants never looked finer. During the past summer the Boehringer Bros. added two more houses to their plant, having also built a cold storage house where bulbous stock, intended for late forcing, is kept in fine shape. Messrs. Boehringer Bros. are but six years in the flower business, having started during the memorable panic of 1893, at a time when but few, if any, ventures were deemed wise. Despite adverse business conditions, they forged their way onward and through hard work, perseverence and indomitable energy they have achieved the success so well deserve. Their original plant has expanded to five times its size, until at the present time we find them with ten modern houses, 15,000 feet of glass. HOMO.

The Liberty Rose.

In your issue of the AMERICAN FLORIST of October 28, page 356, there is an article on Liberty rose, stating that a mock or spurious Liberty is being offered for sale, and that young plants were being offered to publishers of catalogues some months ago. We would like to state that the stock of Liberty is in the hands of two firms in this country, ourselves and Ernst Asmus, of West Hoboken, N. J., and no plants will be delivered before March, 1900.

The originators of Liberty rose, Alexander Dickson & Sons, of Belfast, Ireland, whose sole agents we are in this country, wrote us not long ago that the name Liberty was never applied at their nurseries to the seedling rose bearing that name; they only had a limited stock under number, and they are very positive that not a single scion or cutting has left their place excepting the stock shipped to ourselves and Mr. Asmus. We make this statement because the true Liberty is the best crimson rose ever offered to the American public, and we wish to protect your readers from any one wishing to sell them a spurious variety. It can only be had from ourselves and Mr. Asmus and from our several agents, and from E. M. Wood & Co., of Natick, Mass., who have the sole right for the New England states.

ROBT. SCOTT & SONS.

Sharon Hill, Pa.

I notice in your issue of October 21, under Philadelphia notes, page 326, that a mock Liberty is being offered. I would therefore warn all would-be purchasers of Liberty rose to be careful from whom they buy, if they want to procure the genuine Liberty, the best red forcing rose of the century.

The originators of Liberty are Alex. Dickson & Sons, of Belfast, Ireland, of whom I bought the half interest in the rose, which was then under number, and at my suggestion was christened Liberty. Nobody but myself and Robert Scott & Son, agents for Alex. Dickson & Sons, or our authorized agents and E. M. Wood, of Natick, Mass., who has purchased one quarter of the stock for the New England states, has a right to sell Liberty in America, and it will not be put on the market before March, 1900.

The mock Liberty, said to have been offered, is an old rose, being put on the market by P. Lambert, of Trier, Germany, in 1897, under name Gruss an Teplitz. It is said to be of climbing habit, only semi-double and worthless as a forcing rose and if, as has been said, this rose has been sold to catalogue men, with the intention of putting it on the market as Liberty, I hereby announce that I will prosecute any one who dares to substitute Gruss an Teplitz for Liberty, and sell it to the public as such.

Liberty has been registered by me, with the Society of American Florists, giving its full description. ERNST G. ASMUS.

Holiday Points for Growers.

Thanksgiving brought a repetition of the usual holiday experience with obdurate growers, not so bad this time as it frequently is, but just the same many of them held back stock until the last minute, getting it to market too late to be available for country orders and causing a slight over-supply of violets and carnations on Wednesday. The result was that, instead of realizing the top price, some long lots had to be forced in order to get back to the starting prices.

A grower who produces flowers for sale through a commission house should get the greater part of his cut in two or three days before each holiday, not as a matter of convenience to the commission man, but as a means of profit to both. The commission man must fill his long distance orders the third day before the holiday and the one night runs the second day; there's nothing left but the local demand for the twenty-four hours preceding the holiday. The grower must not forget that the commission man sells to the trade and that the retailer must have his stock in time to sell it himself on the day so many growers persistently select for consigning a big proportion of their cut.

Now to apply this advice to the future, Christmas comes December 25; every commission man wants his stock on December 22 and 23; he can make more money out of it then. The next day there will be nothing but the home trade to take whatever stock is held back, and there are a plenty of peddlers and more than fifteen wholesale florists to supply the wants of Chicago retailers.

Don't hold back, or "pickle" your stock; you will only hurt yourself. Remember that it is better to sell fewer flowers at a fat price than a greater number at a less figure. By keeping the stock coming you get the advantage of the increased price caused by the extra demand for the holiday, but if you hold back your cut you not only have poor flowers but you have made stock plentiful and both these influences cut down the returns which you might have.

There is still another point which growers should bear in mind. Don't cut too closely before a holiday, even if stock is scarce. Remember that it never fails that after a holiday with a scarcity and good prices the prices hold for a day or two and sometimes many days afterward, just as they have done at this Thanksgiving. Note that by not cutting too closely you keep down the holiday supply and do your part to help hold the prices which your finished flowers will then command, but you also remain in a position to profit by the opportunities of the next few days.

The principal point is that the buyers do not object to high holiday prices if the right quality is in the stock, but they are justified in protesting if you flood the market with poor grades and still ask the high-grade price; they simply won't buy if they can help themselves. The best thing to do is to write to your commission man and tell him just what you expect to have for each special occasion, tell him the quantity and grade and be just as honest as you can. Then when he answers you follow his instructions to the letter and ninety-nine times out of 100 you will be the gainer. Remember that the more fifteen per cent you pay the more eighty-five per cent you get; you can see for yourself that the commission man will not misadvise you if he can help himself. E. E. PIESER.

SPLENDID BUSINESS ON SHORT MARKET.—PRICES SURPRISE THE BUYERS.—FLORISTS' CLUB PLANS A FALL SHOW.

Thanksgiving trade was the best ever known here; the greatest difficulty was to secure the stock necessary to fill orders. Carnations and violets were very much in demand but the available quantity was short, although the quality was generally good. The necessarily increased prices of flowers of all kinds was a surprise to the public but was in most cases cheerfully acquiesced in.

The Florists' Club meeting on Wednesday evening was devoted to the consideration of the contemplated chrysanthemum show next year, and a committee was appointed to see the ladies representing the several charitable institutions of the city and ask their co-operation with a view to sharing the net profits of the show with those charities.

Breitmeyers' annual show merited the praise and admiration of the hundreds of visitors who crowded the place for four days. Orchids were a conspicuous feature, beautifully and skillfully arranged.

B. Schroeter had the extensive decoration of our largest dry goods store, all done with holly and ground pine, over 3,000 yards of the latter being used.

Our club has presented Robert Flowerday, the secretary, with a solid gold watch chain and Knights Templar charm in appreciation of his work in connection with our convention.

Visitors: C. W. Ward, Queens, N. Y.; S. S. Skidelsky, Philadelphia; Arnold Ringier, Chicago. J. F. S.

THANKSGIVING BRINGS BUSY SEASON.—PRICES DOUBLE.—POINSETTIAS APPRECIATED.—MEETING OF THE FLORISTS' SOCIETY AND OTHER NOTES.

While Thanksgiving but slightly stimulated the trade in pot plants, it brought excellent business in the line of cut flowers; these were sold out clean, both on market and in the stores, at prices almost double what they were the week before. A fair grade of roses brought $8 per hundred wholesale, carnations $4 and violets $2. Poinsettias, which formerly were used only for Christmas decorations, have this year been in demand since Thanksgiving. Evidently people are beginning to appreciate their value.

In spite of very unfavorable weather December 5, the meeting of the Society of Indiana Florists was well attended. Mr. Langstaff took the chair in place of Mr. Bowers, the vice-president, who was absent. Axle Nelson read a paper on rose culture which was received with much interest and provoked an animated discussion in which Messrs. Hatfield, Junge, Hartje and Rieman had a great deal to say. The secretary announced that a party of Cincinnati florists will stop here some time next week on their way to LaFayette. Messrs. Huntington, Huckriede and McKain were appointed a committee to take care of our friends during their stay. As customary, the secretary requested the appointment of a committee to examine the books of the association and Messrs. Hartje, Hatfield and Junge were named. At the annual meeting, which will take place in this city in January, the Indianapolis florists will take pleasure in giving an entertainment in honor of their out of town guests.

Wm. Bertermann has left for Asheville, N. C., to spend the winter.

Bert Stanley has opened a flower store on Fort Wayne avenue. H. JUNGE.

OBITUARY.

GEORGE CLARK.

George Clark, the veteran horticulturist, died at his home near Oswego, N. Y., December 2, aged 87 years.

MRS. A. M'ARTHUR.

Mrs. Andrew McArthur died at her home at Orange, N. J., on Saturday, December 2. Mr. McArthur has the sympathy of his many friends in the craft.

ISAAC MATTHEWS.

The senior of the well-known English nursery and seed firm of Isaac Matthews & Sons died November 10, aged 73 years. He succeeded his father in the business, which will now pass to the third generation.

C. N. WHITTEN.

Charles Newhall Whitten, son of the late C. V. Whitten, who died last week in New Orleans, was buried at Forest Hills Cemetery, Boston, Sunday, December 3. Mr. Whitten's death was the result of illness contracted while in camp at Tampa during the war. He was twenty-nine years of age.

CONCORD, N. H.—George Main celebrated his eightieth birthday on November 24, which was also the fifty-seventh anniversary of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Main. The day was pleasantly observed, many of their townspeople calling and extending congratulations.

SYCAMORE, ILL.—Elmer E. Boynton and Miss Rose Hollad Langhorn will be married on Tuesday evening, December 12, at St. Peter's Episcopal church and will be at home to their friends after New Year's day at 68 North Main street, Sycamore.

THE AMERICAN FLORIST CO.

Worcester Mass.

Taken as a whole, Thanksgiving trade was fairly satisfactory, under the peculiar conditions that we had to contend with. Owing to the unseasonable weather chrysanthemums were in short supply excepting white and yellow varieties.

Plenty of good Jones and Reiman were available and brought good returns.

Roses were in fair supply and cleaned up well at slightly advanced prices.

Carnations were plentiful with the exception of the dark pink shades and sold out clean at regular prices. There were no violets although we could have handled thousands of them.

Plant trade was not what it should have been with the exception of Begonia Glorie de Lorraine which went fast at fancy prices. A. H. L.

ORCHIDS. VALLEY... FERNS.....

TWO TENDENCIES have recently made their appearance in modern commercial life.

Specialization.

Direct dealing.

By specializing and confinining his energies to one or two lines of products, the producer finds that he can put forth a better article than his competitor.

By direct dealing with the producer, the consumer finds he can get a better article at the price of an inferior one.

THE special products of the Rosebank Nurseries are Orchids, Valley and Ferns.

The Orchids are the best in the market, both in point of variety freshness and beauty of bloom. Cattleyas, 50c.; others, 15c. per bloom.

The Valley, of an especially high grade, is offered on yearly contract at $3 per 100; on single orders, at $3.50.

The Ferns (Adiantum), unequalled in freshness, size and strength of fronds, are sold at the regular price of $1 per 100. These special products are sold direct to the retail florist.

Walker, of the Springfield Seed Co., Springfield, Mo.; and J. McHutchison, representing Aug. Rhotert, New York.

Seedsmen Meet.

A meeting of the seedsmen representing Jefferson county seed plants was held at the Otis house Tuesday afternoon. The result was satisfactory to all concerned, but has not been made public. Some of those in attendance were: M. D. Swan, of Belleville; Mr. Pease, superintendent of the Cleveland Seed Co.; A. H. Rogers, owner of a seed building in Chaumont; F. Williams, of Belleville; William Mather and W. A. Denison, of Ellisvillage; S. A. Devendorf, of Lafargeville, and a representative of the Cape Vincent plant.—Watertown, N. Y., Union, December 2, 1899.

Bermuda Bulbs.

There is a rumor abroad to the effect that seven hundred thousand (700,000) lily bulbs have been recently sent to Bermuda from abroad to be planted for the next season's market. This rumor, if it continues to be circulated, will create a wrong impression which will affect the value of next year's crop. Therefore the following information relating to the bulbs that have actually been imported here, will make things clear and remove, I hope, the wrong impression that has already been made. The table shows the quantity of bulbs imported, when and by whom they were imported, and whether they were Japanese bulbs or bulbs originally exported from Bermuda and returned to be replanted:

Lily bulbs Imported from Japan.		By Whom Imported.	Bermuda grw'n bulbs returned.
5 to 7			5 to 7
Sept. 25	10 cases	T. Outerbridge	15 cases
Oct. 16		S. D. Walker	2 "
" "	266 "	T. Outerbridge	23 "
Oct. 27	53 "	" "	10 "
" "		F. W. Stephens	15 "
Nov. 6		" "	15 "
" "		W. T. James	54 "
" "	57 "	T. Outerbridge	28 "
	386 cases		193 cases

Now each one of the Japanese cases holds 500 bulbs, and each one of the cases of Bermuda bulbs holds 400 bulbs. So the 386 cases of the former represent 193,000 bulbs, and the 193 of the latter represent 77,200 or about 270,000 in all—a long way from 700,000.—G. A. Bishop in the Bermuda Colonist.

THE NURSERY TRADE.

AM. ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.
W. J. PETERS, Pres.; D. S. LAKE, Vice-Pres.; GEORGE C. SEAGER, Rochester, N. Y., Sec'y.

THE outlook for the apple seedling business is remarkably bright.

THE importation of dutiable plants bulbs and seeds is steadily increasing.

A RETROSPECTIVE view of the fall season shows the nursery situation to be in the most promising condition known in years.

THE season of fall planting has been prolonged to a hitherto unknown degree this fall and nurserymen have been greatly aided in shipments thereby.

ACCORDING to Prof. H. T. Van Deman the apple variously called Gosh, Western Beauty, English Rambo, Big Rambo, Ohio Beauty or Musgrove, is properly known by the first name.

THE twenty-fourth annual session of the Iowa State Horticultural Society will be held at Des Moines, December 12 to 15, and, as usual, nurserymen will figure prominently in the proceedings.

Los Angeles.

EASY READING FROM THE PACIFIC.—BATCH OF BREEZY JOTTINGS.—THE DAWN OF PROSPERITY.— RAIN IN ABUNDANCE.—STATE OF THE MARKET.—PLANS FOR NATIONAL ARBORETUM.—THE MORALES WORM.—THE OLIVE.— PERSONAL MENTION HERE AND THERE.

Everything indicates that the wave of prosperity the east has been enjoying for some months has at last reached the Golden Gate. The rains so far this season have been all that could be desired. Stock outside has been greatly benefited and, as the weather continues quite warm, there is an abundance of all seasonable flowers. There is a surplus of violets, carnations and chrysanthemums. For the latter the demand has been disappointing and no grower has found chrysanthemums profitable this season. Violets are being retailed at 15 cents per bunch of fifty blooms. Princess of Wales is by all odds the best single for this section and Farquhar the best double. The rains and cooler nights have caused a wonderful improvement in carnations. They are now being cut in fine shape, large blooms on long, stiff stems, and sell at 25 cents per dozen, $1.50 per hundred, retail. The best chrysanthemums would only bring $1.50 per dozen. In roses Capt. F. Edward Gray is showing some good house-grown Beauties and Brunners, grown at his Ingleside Nurseries, and Alfred Roedder is proud of his field-grown Marechal Niels, Mme. Cochets and Kaiserins.

Los Angeles, being the owner of the largest park in the United States, is making a great effort to have the Department of Agriculture establish a national arboretum therein. Prof. Swingle, of the Department, has been appointed a special agent to examine and report on all sites proposed. We are informed that after a thorough investigation he said a portion of Griffith Park was the finest location he had ever seen for the purpose intended. Some $20,000 will be needed to prepare the grounds and furnish a water supply. The chamber of commerce has undertaken to raise this amount by subscription.

Ever since the appearance of the so-called morales orange worm in Mexico, California growers have feared it might be accidentally introduced into this state, where its ravages would eventuallly destroy the orange industry, as it virtually has in Mexico. Recently Mexican oranges have been shipped by ocean steamer to the northern part of the state. Upon inspection by the state quarantine officer they were found to be badly infected and were condemned and destroyed by that officer, whereupon the State Horticultural Commission has prohibited future importations.

A very interesting discussion which our nurserymen are watching closely has been occupying horticultural columns in the local papers. It is in regard to the olive as a profitable crop for southern California. To help settle the question Prof. A. P. Hayne has been sent by the State University to make a thorough investigation, the result of which will be published in a special bulletin.

The nursery business, which, owing to the dry seasons has been almost at a standstill for three years, is now experiencing quite a boom. Judging from orders and inquiries so early in the season there will be a heavy shortage in many lines. High prices this year for fruit will induce the planting of thousands of acres to deciduous fruits.

Max Keppel, of the Diamond Hill Nurseries, has opened a store on Commercial street, near Los Angeles street.

The Meserve Floral Company's store has been removed from West Second street to 244 South Broadway.

J. G. Morley, who with Mr. Acklin, is the pioneer florist and vegetable grower of the Klondyke, has returned to Los Angeles to spend the winter. Owing to dry weather during the growing season the crop of vegetables was not so large as expected but Mr. Morley is satisfied and will go back in the spring. He also has valuable mineral claims.

Miss Harriet Goodin, who has been in enforced idleness on account of severe illness since early last summer, is again in charge of F. Edward Gray's store at 140 South Spring street. Miss Allen, the bookkeeper in the same store, has resigned and gone to Seattle, Wash.

Miss Charlotte Sexton, of Santa Barbara, who was formerly in charge of the Redondo Floral Company's store, is visiting friends in this city.

Edmund D. Sturtevant, who, twenty years ago, was famous all over the east as a specialist in water lilies, is still giving that class of plants close attention. He has several large ponds on his ranch near this city and is quite successful in hybridizing. He has several new nymphæas that will pass inspection.

Howard & Smith find their trade increasing so rapidly that, notwithstanding the very high prices of all building material, they are compelled to build another large greenhouse. D. R. W.

HOWELL, MICH.—On the night of December 5 fire did $500 damage in the greenhouses of J. A. Brown.

OUR PASTIMES

Announcements of coming contests or other events of interest to our bowling, shooting and cycling readers are solicited and will be given place in this column.

Address all correspondence for this department to Wm. J. Stewart, 67 Bromfield St., Boston, Mass.; Robt. Kift, 1725 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.; or to the American Florist Co., 324 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

At Chicago.

The Chicago Florists' Bowling Club has entered the America League and will hereafter figure in the contests on the America alleys on Thirty-first street. After the club meeting last week a trio of members rolled one game, Chas. Sweigert 114, J. S. Wilson 118 and John Degnan 167. Coulson is the champion of the Central Park team of the West Side League, having made an average of 180 in the last six games.

At Philadelphia.

The handicap bowling contest brought the boys out in great style, although many dropped out when they saw they were not likely to finish one-two-three and did not care to be classed among the "also rans." George Moss rolled three fine games one day last week, making an average of 200, with one pin to spare. This is top notch bowling. There is now to be a high game handicap, the ten highest games for the month to count. No limit will be placed on the number of games; one may roll all one can in the month, handicapped the same as before, averages to make the handicap taken from the single highest game of each member to date. This should prove an exciting contest. The following is a record of all the games rolled last month and the averages:

At Flatbush.

Thanksgiving evening at the bowling alleys was as chock full of fun as the bowlers were of turkey meat. A man cannot be expected to be in first class bowling condition after a hearty Thanksgiving dinner, with its accessories, and it is not surprising that three members, Raynor, Prosser and Woerner, were physically incapacitated to participate in the fun and that Schmutz had so much trouble with his ball that he couldn't sleep after he got home, but those who did take hold deserve credit for their performance, as the score appended will show. The first pot was won by Eugene Dailledouze, whereupon Riley, the Pride of Flatbush, smiled and thereafter nobody got his fingers on a pot except Riley. This same gentleman also won a box of cigars put up by D. Mellis, who in turn won a turkey given by H. Dailledouze, and C. Wocker got the consolation prize in the last game, a turkey offered by Paul Dailledouze. A. Zeller was badly rattled all the evening not so much by Thanksgiving festivities as by Riley's aggressiveness. H. Dailledouze had hard luck and Papa Zeller missed several easy things, yet never grumbled. Scores as follows:

Player	1st	2d	3d	4th
Schmutz	97	148	141	137
Riley	151	177	172	177
P. Dailledouze	131	123	114	142

At St. Louis.

The Juniors were snowed under on Monday night in their match games with the St. Louis Florists' Bowling Club, the older club using three of its best men and three of lesser fame, winning by 419 pins in three games. The match was for the best three games out of five, the losing side to bear all expenses and the Juniors paid the bill. They are talking of another match in February. Here are the scores:

MAGNOLIA FOLIAGE.

Louisville.

The demand for flowers has been ahead of the supply the past week. Chrysanthemums are now about out of the market. The florists all did a good business Thanksgiving week, but flowers are not in such demand here as in northern cities for Thanksgiving day. Another great day for flowers in the north that is practically nothing here is Decoration day.

F. C. Haupt and Mrs. C. W. Reimers have each decorated the Galt House for society events here. The laurel garland has been used in these decorations very extensively, also southern smilax.

Messrs. Coenen & Bohnnan have added two houses to their establishment this season, each 20x80 feet. They built the greenhouses themselves, putting in heating and all, and the houses are constructed in first-class style. This firm grows bedding plants as well as cut flowers, and devotes one of their fourteen houses to palms. Mr. E. Morat was defeated in the race for park commissioner. This was a pity as he would have been a practical man. Mr. Claude Shanks, formerly a florist of Elkhart, Ind., is now in the employ of F. Walker & Co.

December 4th was the first snow of the season in Louisville. H. G. W.

W. H. CULLETT & SONS, Lincoln, Ill.

Malden, Mass.

It is quite evident that interest in the cross fertilization of the carnation is on the increase and a great many of the growers are anticipating nice results from a favorite batch of seedlings. John Foote is showing two of the most promising ones I have yet seen; one a white, Daybreak×McGowan, is certainly a fine sort, being a large pure white of good form and substance, very deeply fringed, borne on long, stiff stems, very much of the Daybreak habit of growth except that it shows no trace of hacteria, and flowers freely. The other is a cerise shade which Mr. Foote considers his best. It has much in its habit of growth to commend it; it is Scott × Foster. Some very fine Francis Joost are being cut and more of this variety are being grown at this place this year than all other kinds combined. I noticed a fine batch of Gen. Maceo. Mrs. Bradt is also grow fair but is splitting its calyx badly so far this season, owing, probably, to the temperature running too low for it, for I find that it likes a fair heat. Mr. Foote grows for the market wholly and is considered one of our best on carnations.

TAP.

WAKEFIELD, Mass.—Charlie Tuttle is cutting some fine Edith Foster carnations and considers this the best white that he has grown. Violets are not as good here as last season owing to the extreme drought through the summer.

THE GRAND NEW ROSE LIBERTY!

Won Highest Honors Wherever Shown.

The Finest Crimson Forcing Rose of the Century.

MOST nearly approached by Meteor in color, but far surpassing that standard variety in brilliancy and purity of color, as well as in size and freedom of bloom, never showing any deformed, black or bull heads, either in winter or summer. A remarkable keeper when cut, keeping its brilliancy of color without turning blue or dropping its petals, as is the case with Gen. Jacqueminot, which it somewhat resembles in size and fragrance.

To be sure of getting the best crimson forcing rose of the century and A1 stock, send your orders at once to the undersigned or his agents mentioned below. My stock for March delivery being all sold, I can only take orders for delivery in April and later. All orders filled strictly in rotation. First come, first served.

ETHEL CROCKER

Absolutely the BEST PINK CARNATION ever offered the trade.

Grown equally successfully by Hill, Craig, and myself; you are not buying it on a venture, but knowing that it is not a success in one soil and a failure in another.

In color, size, fragrance and stem it is just what the "storemen" want. In habit, constitution and freedom of bloom it is just what the grower wants, never out of crop from September to July, more flowers to the square foot than any other known variety and practically no seconds.

With 18,000 stock plants to work from there is no danger of over propagation, and you are not asked to wait until planting out time for your cuttings but can have them whenever wanted. Orders entrusted to me will have my personal attention, both in the selection of the cuttings and the filling of the order.

Price per 100, $10; per 25, $2.50; per 1000, $75; per 250, $18.75. HERR'S PANSIES at $4.00 now, and a regular assortment of CARNATIONS in a list ready Jan. 1st.

ALBERT M. HERR, Lancaster, Pa.

Rose Crimson Rambler.

As a pot plant for retail sales this rose is incomparable. Its hundreds of blossoms all open together and seem to improve for at least two and even three weeks. The bright crimson color holds without fading and contrasts finely with the glossy foliage. It Forces Easily. We have fine dormant stock.

2-year-old, 2 to 3 feet, well branched, own roots, per dozen, $2.00; per 100, $15.00.
3-year-old, 4 to 5 ft., well branched, budded or own roots, doz. $3.00; per 100, $20.00.

STATE OF MARKET.—DEPARTURE OF THE CHRYSANTHEMUM NOT MOURNED.—WITTERSTAETTER'S WAGON SMASHED.—JUNKETING TRIP PLANNED.

The supply of cut flowers has shortened considerably since last report, while the demand has increased and consequently prices have advanced. Thanksgiving trade was far better than anticipated. Cut flowers moved quickly and storemen made a rush for the wholesale houses and by nine a. m. everything was cleared out. Violets are and have been scarce, the reason we can not account for, as the weather this fall has been decidedly favorable. Chrysanthemums are about done, but a few choice blooms may be seen here and there; it seems as though the storemen are all glad that they are going. Roman hyacinths and Paper Whites are coming in plentifully with lily of the valley enough to meet demands. A lively Christmas trade in holly and evergreens is looked for by dealers here.

On the way home from market Saturday night Mr. Witterstaetter's wagon collided with an electric car, corner Sixth street and Mount Hope; fortunately the driver escaped injury.

E. G. Hill was a recent caller. Quite a delegation from here will take a flying trip to Lafayette en route to Richmond, Ind., on December 13. Any one wishing to join the party may address E. G. Gillett, 113 East Third street for further information. H. SCHWARZ.

NOVELTIES FOR 1900.
Ready for delivery in March.

HIBISCUS PEACHBLOW.

This is one of the finest plant novelties offered in recent years. The flowers are double and from 4 to 5 inches in diameter. Color, a clear, rich pink with a small, deep crimson center, an entirely new and most beautiful shade. 2½-in. pot plants per dozen $1 50; per 100, $10 00.

AGERATUM STELLA GURNEY.

The finest of all Ageratums, planted outside attains height of 6 to 8 inches, bushy, compact growth, early and continuous bloomer throughout the entire summer. Color is the deepest blue. Admired by all who saw it at our greenhouses. Per dozen $1.25, per 100, $8.00.

VAUGHAN'S SEED STORE, CHICAGO. NEW YORK.

3 NEW FORGET-ME-NOTS, "SUTTON'S GEMS."
IN 3 COLORS, PINK, WHITE, BLUE.

The strongest growers. The freest bloomers. The longest sprays. Grows and flowers best in cold house or frames. Brings double the price of any other. Large clumps, ready to divide, $5 per 100 or 25 for $1 50 by express. Smaller ones by mail prepaid, same price. A few hundred EXTRA LARGE CLUMPS, $10 per 100, $1.50 for 12.

ASPARAGUS SPRENGERI 2½-inch, fine, $4.00 per 100; 3½-inch $7.00 per 100.

A BARGAIN. Fine 6-inch pots, will give lots of green, 25 for $5.00; 12 for $2.50.

ASPARAGUS PLUMOSUS NANUS, $5.00 per 100; 25 at 100 rate.

THE LACE FERN, POLYSTICHUM PROLIFERUM.

Some say it's finer than "Boston Fern." Perfectly hardy; grows well under benches; fronds bring $1 per 12, last over one month in water. Young plants, 50c per 12, mailed; $4 per 100. Larger, $1 per 12 or $8 per 100, express.

THE ORANGE VIOLET. (Browallia Jamesoni). Fine plants 3½-inch pots $1.25 per 12, express.

THE GENUINE EDELWEISS OR SNOW FLOWER.

There is a world of poetry connected with this charming flower, to obtain which many travelers have sacrificed their lives. It blooms right through the snow and when cut lasts for years. Fine as a souvenir to your customers. 10 for $1, 25 for $2, mailed free. Send for sample flower.

Kift's Adjustable Hanging Flower Vase and Plant Holder.

Ornamental, practical and useful; just the thing for short-stemmed flowers such as violets, orchids, valley, etc. Indispensable for show window and house decorations. The clasps are adjustable and can be placed in any position or angle. The fixture is made of solid brass, heavily nickel-plated and is practically indestructible. A larger size for five to six-inch potted plants, such as Adiantum Farleyense, Cyclamens, etc., shows these plants to the best possible advantage.

Kift's Individual Cut Flower Vase...

A pointed glass tube fitted with a perforated rubber cap, through which the stem of the flower is placed. The cap holds the vase and the flower firmly together and prevents the escape of water in the tube, no matter at what angle it is placed. Useful for keeping flowers when sprayed on dinner tables, for basket handles, for orchid sprays which can be inserted in pots of Farleyense, etc., and is useful for hosts of decorative effects.

UNSATISFACTORY STATE OF TRADE.—LITTLE BUSINESS AND LESS STOCK.—A GOOD THANKSGIVING.—PROSPECTS OF HIGH PRICES FOR CHRISTMAS.

The present situation of the cut flower trade is hardly satisfactory to anybody. Business has been somewhat quiet since Thanksgiving, but there seemed to be no flowers to do even that little with. Carnations could be sold at almost any price that was not prohibitory, but growers have but few to offer, so that price possibilities benefit them but little. Roses are likewise in short supply and are somewhat poor in quality. Chrysanthemums are out of it entirely. Violets, at least so far as local sources are concerned, have taken to the woods. Paper Whites and Roman hyacinths alone are left to us. Retailers all say that business at Thanksgiving was good, much better than last year, but the shortage of chrysanthemums cut down the stock on hand woefully and some stores were sold out early. Should the weather continue for any length of time as stormy and unfavorable as at present the outlook is for a most unusual dearth of flowers for the holidays. In fact there is a quite general opinion that flowers will sell higher this Christmas than at any time within recent years. A.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA.—C. D. Henley, representing E. S. Nixon, of Chattanooga, Tenn, who has nine houses with 24,000 feet of glass and 6,000 additional feet over violets, has been in town making arrangements to have their stock handled here regularly. They make a specialty of American Beauties and have enjoyed some mail order business here.

Cypress
Greenhouse Material.

We are the pioneers in Clear Cypress Greenhouse Material. We discovered that Cypress is better than any other wood for greenhouses from top of posts up and we introduced it, and fought for it against many prejudices, and finally succeeded in bringing it into general use.

Others have attempted to follow where we lead, others are trying to reap what we sowed, but we have the experience and are recognized as experts in greenhouse construction.

Notes on Holiday Plants.

Among the Christmas offerings this year, stands out most prominently the lovely Gloire de Lorraine begonia. This plant is the grandest introduction in its class for many years. Its wealth of rosy bloom charms every one and the persistency of its flowers under changes of temperature and location makes it, whether in tiny specimens or large masses, the ideal house plant. As with many of our most popular commercial plants, we are indebted to the private gardener for having first demonstrated in this country the possibilities of Gloire de Lorraine, F. L. Harris, gardener at the H. H. Hunnewell place in Wellesley, Mass., having shown the first specimen of it at a banquet given by E. M. Wood, two years ago, and this fact having been duly noted at the time in the columns of the AMERICAN FLORIST. The following spring Mr. Harris is recorded as having received a silver medal from the Massachusetts Horticultural Society for a specimen of Gloire de Lorraine exhibited by him, a rather inadequate recognition in the light of the merits of the subject as now demonstrated. Already two forms are on the market, quite distinct as to color, the newest form being much lighter in tint, more stocky and compact in habit and indicating in its heavier textured and darker green foliage a possibly greater vigor than the type. Edwin Lonsdale is the possessor of this light flowered stock and says that his customers prefer it to the deeper variety. Differences in cultural methods have been noted among the leading growers who have been doing this begonia on a large scale, such thoughtful and experienced men as W. W. Edgar and Robert Craig entertaining opposite views as to the advisability of disbudding the flowering sprays during the period of growth. The principal difference between the two as compared now is that Mr. Edgar's plants, which were allowed to bloom naturally, are gracefully drooping, the masses of flowers hanging in profusion over the sides of the pot, while Mr. Craig's, which were pinched, are flowered in dense compact heads. Each of these forms being useful for special purposes, it might be desirable for the grower to provide himself with both. It would be a great pity to ruin the reputation of this plant by giving it any other treatment than that best calculated to encourage its good lasting qualities, so over forcing should be carefully avoided.

Red, red, is the universal demand now for Christmas plants. This fancy is growing and the proportion of red flowering or red foliaged plants called for by the public grows larger each year. Anything that will match nicely with the red of holly berries is eagerly seized and no florist need be afraid of getting too big a stock ahead in this line. Poinsettias, formerly grown mainly for cut purposes for which, however, their liability to wilt unfitted them, are now in big demand grown low and stocky in pots or in pans of from three to six specimens. Berried plants, such as solanums and ardisias, are enjoying a phenomenal sale this year, all the stock in hand with the big growers having been already disposed of. A new subject in this line has made its appearance. It is said to be a chance variety from seed of the Celestial pepper. It originated with Louis Schmutz, of Flatbush, N. Y., who has had no difficulty in disposing of a large stock at a good price.

Dracænas seem to be coming to the front again as acceptable holiday plants. Certainly there is no more lovely jardiniere plant than the old Dracæna terminalis well colored and with perfect leaves. As a companion rather than as a substitute the Lord Wolsley variety can be highly recommended. Its long, narrow and bright-margined leaves would long ago have made it indispensable were it not for the scarcity and consequent high price of the stock, which has prevented its general dissemination hitherto.

Azaleas for Christmas should be unusually good this season owing to the favorable weather for bringing them on. Simon Mardner is the best of all the reds for holiday purposes. It comes in easily without special forcing and the plants seen in bloom now are equal to the best Easter varieties. Vervæneana is by far the best of the early pink sorts and there is really but one white for the holiday season, Deutsche Perle, which is good enough for anybody. Cyclamens are receiving more attention from plantsmen than ever before. Seed selection has so developed the variegated foliaged types that these are now almost equal to the finest Rex begonias. While not much progress has been made in recent years in flower improvement it is yet true that the average of stock grown for commercial purposes is of a much finer type than was the case not long since. The so-called butterfly-flowered section has not given much satisfaction so far, the flowers being often imperfect and always soft and short-lived as compared with the old-fashioned kind.

A pretty little novelty, one of Sander's late introductions, is Calamus cinnamomea, a small growing palm with foliage not unlike that of Areca lutescens. The young foliage is handsomely variegated with white, frequently flushed on the edges with soft pink.

A Cincinnati Carnation Exhibition.

Perhaps the most interesting of the small exhibitions of the year was that of the Cincinnati Florists' Society, held at the rooms of the society in the Jabez Elliott flower market, December 9. The rooms are admirably adapted for small displays of this character, being well lighted and easy of access. The society holds monthly exhibitions in connection with their meetings from November to April, inclusive, offering mostly cash prizes for cut blooms. At the close of the show the prize-winning exhibits are sold at auction for the benefit of the society, and as the stock is usually of the highest quality, good prices are the rule. Chrysanthemums were the special feature of the November exhibition and carnations the attraction of the December display.

Special interest attached to last week's exhibition for the opportunity of viewing the new kinds which it was expected to afford, the gold medal offered by Hon. J. R. McLean, publisher of the Cincinnati Enquirer, for the best seedling—to be exhibited twice—proving a considerable attraction to the experts. The show was in every way a success, all the new varieties now on the market being represented, except Mrs. Thos. W. Lawson and The Marquis. In addition many excellent seedlings were exhibited, among the more prominent of which were Enquirer (Witterstaetter), No. 11 (Weber & Sons), No. 666 (Dailledouze), Irene (Crabb & Hunter), Dorothy (Graves), etc.

The gold medal was won by R. Witterstaetter, of Sedamsville, O., with Enquirer, a fine pink variety which scored 92⅔ points. Enquirer had a close competitor in No. 11, from H. Weber & Sons, of Oakland, Md. The latter was a trifle the lightest in color, but so good in other respects that we imagine the judges had considerable difficulty in coming to the decision in which No. 11 scored 90 points. In addition to Enquirer and No. 11, the following varieties were awarded certificates: Ethel Crocker (Hill) pink; No. 115 (Weber & Sons) pink; Estelle (Witterstaetter) red; Olympia (May) variegated; No. 666 (Dailledouze) variegated; No. 518A (Witterstaetter) pink; and J. Whitcomb Riley (Dailledouze) variegated.

A number of other varieties were entered for certificates, including Irene (Crabb & Hunter) pink; California (Hill) yellow variegated; No. 51 (Walz); Elinore (Witterstaetter) white; and Dorothy (Graves) pink. It was unfortunate that the judges failed to score all the varieties entered for certificates, thus losing an opportunity to inform the trade as to the merits of the various exhibits in this class. At a business meeting of the society later in the day it was made evident that the members approved of scoring all new varieties entered for competition, and the secretary was instructed to inform the exhibitors that their productions would be scored if again submitted at some subsequent meeting.

The prize of $10 offered by the Glenny Glass Co. for the best vase of seedling carnations, any color, went to H. Weber & Sons for fifty blooms of Genevieve Lord. Prizes were awarded to Sunderbruch Sons for the best vases of commercial white, pink and variegated kinds, fifty blooms each, for Evelina, Wm. Scott and Mrs. Bradt respectively. With America Wm. Murphy secured first place for red.

All the varieties certificated are shown on the opposite page. In this connection it should be remembered that some of the flowers illustrated traveled hundreds of miles and were cut several days before the photographs were taken.

Four prizes for roses were distributed as follows: White, George & Allan, for Bride; pink, Sunderbruch Sons, Bridesmaid; red, George & Allan, Meteor; yellow, F. S. Walz, Marechal Niel.

At the close of the exhibition Pres. Wm. Murphy ascended the improvised rostrum and in short order disposed of the winning exhibits.

CARNATIONS.

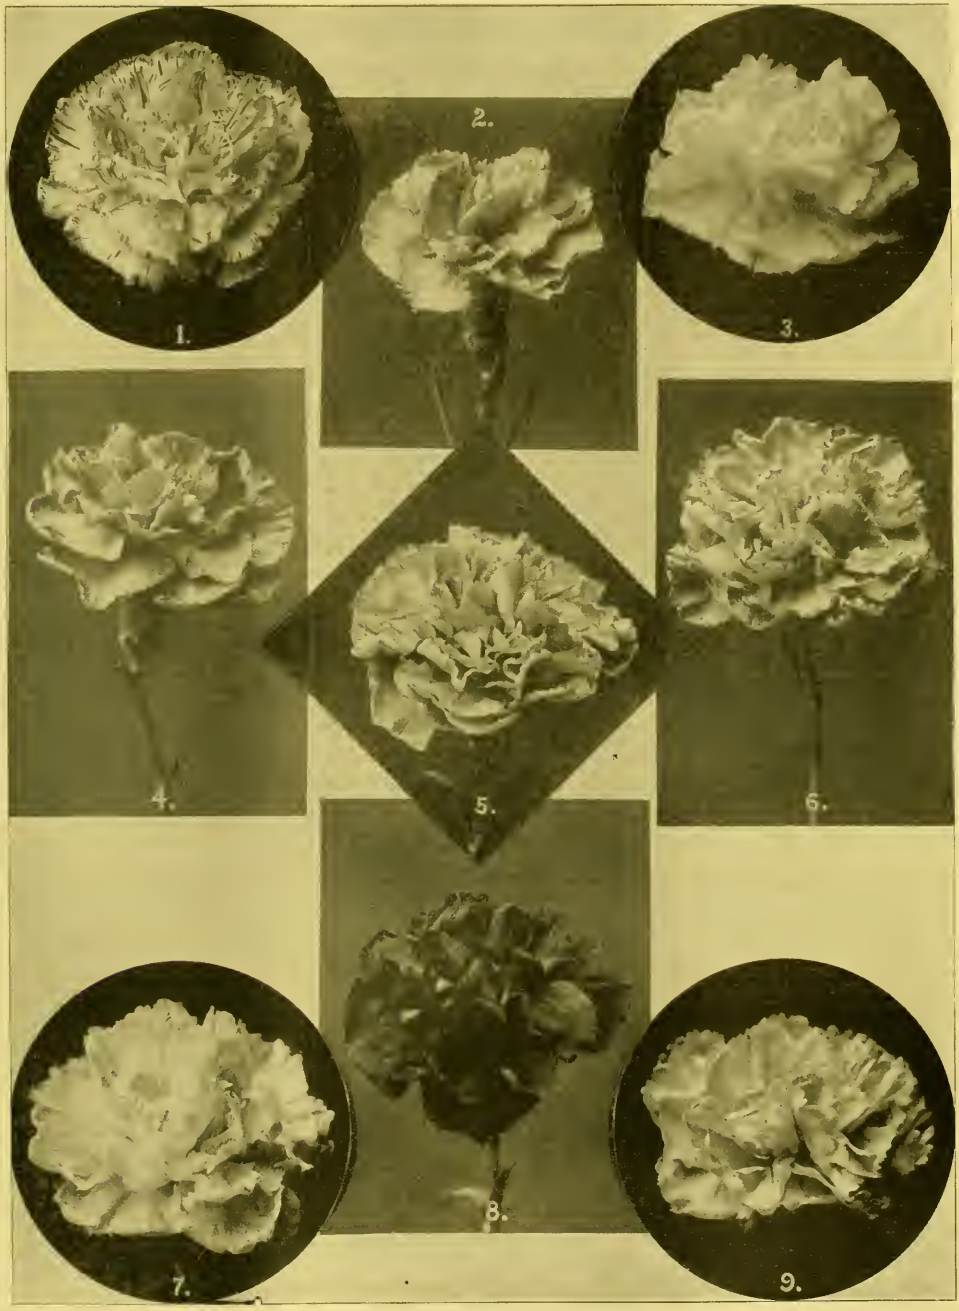
FORCING FOR CHRISTMAS.

Above all things do not attempt to force your carnations for Christmas; no matter what the condition of your crop, there is little to gain and everything to lose by forcing. I am speaking of forcing as meaning the employment of additional heat; a little extra heat, judiciously applied, may bring in a few extra dollars if it is started about December 18 and the temperature raised not over five degrees in the next two days, held at that for a few days and gradually lowered again. But even this is detrimental if not managed by a competent person.

Recently I visited a grower who had a full head of steam in his boiler, with the sun out bright and a house up to 90°; he told me he wanted to get an exceptionally fine crop of buds open for Christmas, but instead he was ruining what would have been as fine a cut as any grower could wish for; weak stems and soft flowers were even then beginning to show.

In contrast to this, I visited several of the best growers in the country and found their carnations in temperatures of from 45° to 50°, their plants the picture of health and the flowers heavy and well built, standing up like sentinels and, while not quite so plentiful as in the house first mentioned, they were worth more money to the square foot and a pleasure to handle, both for the grower and the buyer. These growers are as particular to have their houses at just the right temperature to produce good flowers as a rose grower is to avoid a crop of mildew, and therein lies the secret of their success.

Another thing that impressed me on these visits was that the most successful growers were following Prof. Arthur's line of thought in "Water, the Carnation's Greatest Need," and with excellent results. They of course do not keep their soil soggy with moisture, but it is not left to get very dry, in fact scarcely moderately dry. This, combined with the low temperature, seems to be just what most varieties need to attain perfection. I came home resolved to use a more liberal supply of water on my own stock, and already see an advantage. This system also requires an experienced hand and does not apply so well to varieties that are inclined to burst their calyxes.



Where it is apparent that the plants will stand a little extra feeding, a very good method is to mix bone meal with an equal bulk of potting soil, let it lie for a week in a thin heap where it will not dry out, and turn once or twice. Whether or not this fills the mixture with microbes that assist in changing the bone into plant food I do not know, but I do know that this mixture put on a batch of carnations with well set beds about ten days before Christmas is far better for bringing them into marketable shape than any possible rise in the temperature. There is, however, great danger in this method of forcing unless you are thoroughly conversant with your soil, the wants of your plants and the bone meal used. A very little is all that is needed, in fact rather less of the mixture than if you used the pure bone, as the mixture is at once available for food and the pure bone is only partly available. The application must be followed by a good watering and not too high a temperature.

ALBERT M. HERR.

FREEPORT, ILL.—John Bauscher, Jr. now has about 30,000 feet of glass in operation, growing roses and carnations mainly, but also a stock of palms and house plants. He reports trade good.

CROMWELL, CONN.—The completion of A. N. Pierson's new range of eleven houses gives him 350,000 feet of glass. Eight of the new structures, which are all 300 feet long and built of iron, will be used for roses, two for carnations and one for asparagus.

SPENCER, MASS.—Among the fine old trees in this town are a chestnut with trunk circumference more than seventeen feet at three and one-half feet above the ground, a sturdy oak with a girth of fifteen feet and a white birch with a diameter of two and one-half feet.

A House of Chrysanthemums.

The accompanying illustration shows a house of chrysanthemums grown by Gunnar Teilmann, Marion, Ind. The center bench is Major Bonnaffon and the side bench Ivory, white and pink. The former were propagated early and benched about the middle of June. They are grown with two or three stems to each plant, the object being to secure as many marketable blooms as possible from the limited space, nevertheless, blooms from this house won first premiums at the Chicago and St. Louis exhibitions. From the 358 square feet of bench space about 800 marketable blooms were cut, the first being ready October 20, two days before the photograph was taken. The average price was a good deal better than 10 cents per bloom, many of them wholesaling at Amling's in Chicago at from 20 cents to 30 cents each.

Rose Winnie Davis.

Nanz & Neuner, Louisville, Ky., have pleased the people of the Southland by christening their new rose "Winnie Davis" for the Daughter of the Confederacy. The rose was first shown at Richmond, Va., at the unveiling of the monument to the memory of Miss Davis and will not be offered for sale until next year. It is a cross between Kaiserin Augusta Victoria and Mme. Caroline Testout. In color it is salmon pink, shading to pure white at the base of the petals. The bud is long. A two-years' trial has convinced the originators that the seedling is hardy outdoors in the southern and middle states. It is of vigorous constitution and the illustration gives a fair idea of the beauty of its bloom.

ROUSING MEETING OF THE FLORISTS' CLUB.—OFFICERS ELECTED.—RESOLUTIONS OF SYMPATHY.—DISCUSSION OF CUSTOM HOUSE MATTERS.—PLANS FOR A DINNER.—COMMITTEE ON EXHIBITS REPORTS.—BUSINESS BOOMING.—WEIR A TRADE BAROMETER.—PROSPECTS FOR CHRISTMAS.—OLYMPIA A VISION.—TAYLOR BREAKS A LEG.—VARIOUS JOTTINGS.

One of the best attended meetings ever held by the New York Florists' Club was that of Monday evening, December 11. About sixty of the solid men of New York floriculture were present and an atmosphere of contagious good-fellowship prevailed that could not but deeply impress every friend of the club and augured well for the enthusiasm that is expected to carry the convention preparations to a grandly successful issue. A splendid exhibition of carnation flowers and cyclamen plants filled the center of the room. Philip Breitmeyer, of Detroit, Vice-president of the Society of American Florists, was present and received a very hearty welcome. Officers for 1900 were elected as follows: President, Patrick O'Mara; vice-president, A. Herrington; secretary, John Young; treasurer, C. B. Weathered; trustees for two years, Wm. Plumb, John N. May and W. A. Manda. Messrs. O'Mara, Weathered and Siebrecht, as instructed at the previous meeting, presented resolutions on the death of Wm. H. Brower, as follows:

WHEREAS: After a long, useful and honored life, the late Wm. H. Brower was called away by the Great Creator, we the members of the New York Florists' Club believe it to be our duty to express to his son, Wm. I. Brower, and the rest of his family our deep and lasting sympathy in their sorrow. We knew him in life as an affable gentleman; we honor his memory as one of the pioneers of the flower trade in New York City, one who showed its possibilities, who had the confidence and esteem of business associates and patrons, in every respect a credit to our business, and be it Resolved, that we spread the above on our minutes in full and send a copy to our friend and fellow-member, Wm. I. Brower.

Resolutions of the same nature were also presented and adopted regarding the death of Mrs. John Morris and Mrs. J. H. Taylor.

Quite a discussion was precipitated by the presentation by F. W. Kelsey of resolutions looking to action by the club for the abatement of annoyances and delays which plant and bulb importers are subjected to in the Custom House but, it being explained by Mr. O'Mara, who is chairman of the committee in charge of such matters for the S. A. F. and the N. Y. club, that the committee are attending to the matter and expect a conference with a similar committee representing the nurserymen's association at a later date with a view to co-operation, no decisive action was taken. Mr. O'Mara further explained that vague or general complaints of trouble do no good and that if parties wish to secure effective action they must in all cases of complaint furnish definite details and dates of transations; with such data in hand the committee can accomplish something. Messrs. J. N. May, W. F. Sheridan and C. B. Weathered were appointed a committee to arrange for the annual dinner of the club and instructed to fix the date of same to correspond with the time of the session of the S. A. F. executive committee, which it is understood will take place here in January. Messrs. H. A. Siebrecht, J. W. Withers, W. F. Sheridan, E. G. Asmus and F. L. Atkins were appointed a committee to care for subscriptions from the florist trade for the permanent Dewey Arch. Four new names were presented for club membership.

The exhibition committee made a report regarding the display of flowers and plants on this occasion, recommending for carnation Gov. Roosevelt shown by C. W. Ward, a certificate of merit and highly commending a group of seedlings from the same grower; for a seedling from Dailledouze Bros., a certificate and highly commending the varieties J. Whitcomb Riley and Lulu Fisher; for cyclamen plants from Lehnig & Winnifeld cultural commendation. The paplio-flowered form was included in this group and attracted much notice. Mr. Ward told of a visit to the greenhouses of Dailledouze Bros. and on his recommendation, as a representative of the judging committee, a certificate of merit was awarded, in accordance with previous recommendation, to their carnation No. 666, of which a superb display was made at this meeting.

Formal business being finished the entertainment committee took charge of the proceedings and two hours of social enjoyment followed. Mr. Cleary officiated at the piano and furnished accompaniment for songs by Messrs. Dimmock, Plumb, Butterfield, Wallace, Stewart and Bernie. Sam'l Henshaw contributed remarks on social customs and the usefulness of the kodak in Porto Rico as observed in his recent visit to that island and his auditors have hardly got through laughing yet. If any of them should be missing in the near future it will be easy to tell where they have gone and why. A very pretty little speech was made by Papa Zeller, who, in reply to a question, stated that the famous old DeGraw carnation was an American seedling introduced by Dailledouze & Co. and Zeller.

Business has been humming during the past week, although at present writing there seems to be a temporary lull in the steady pull that has brought so much gratification to all branches of the business excepting those whose best hold is dependent upon a condition of surplus. "Johnnie" Weir's demeanor under present conditions is a study. A downcast, dejected look on his face is unimpeachable testimony that his favorite commission man has just lost a grower, but the accession of a new grower makes him as sprightly as a four-year-old. If he can only create a diversion now that will bring about a brief era of good nature in Twenty-eighth street while he is making his purchases and the occurrence of such little curtain-raisers as the devouring of a dollar bill by J. K. Allen's pet office dog is a veritable god-send to him. Just at present he is feeling somewhat quizzical over the departure of James Weir on a holly collecting expedition to the south, carrying with him a gun and two dogs. The uninitiated reader may wonder what all this has to do with the cut flower trade of the metropolis but let him feel assured that "Johnnie" Weir is a very potent factor in the situation at all seasons, as every New Yorker knows. The price of American Beauties now and for the holidays is a fruitful theme for discussion and takes precedence of all other questions wherever three or more may gather. Judging from the general appearance of the rose houses in this vicinity the supply of American Beauty or anything else is not likely to be burdensome at Christmas but it will be well to take the plant grower into consideration in deciding just how much premium can with safety be piled on to the ordinary price of cut flowers during the coming fortnight.

John N. May has house after house of Olympia carnations that will be in superb form for Christmas. They are in superb form now, indeed, and to the visitor will prove a revelation in the possibilities of carnation culture. And there is no trouble with the stems either. All through Mr. May's place the same story is true; roses and carnations from first to last are excellent and their owner can congratulate himself with entire safety on the prospect of being right on top for the rest of the season. A bench of handsome Bon Silene roses here looks very cheering and awakens interesting reminiscences in the breast of the "old fellow" as he admires them. Stranger things have happened than that these old favorites should yet have another season of popularity. A nice lot of Cherokee roses also is full of suggestions as to the future.

John H. Taylor was so unfortunate as to break his leg by a misstep in alighting from his carriage recently. A committee consisting of Messrs. Nash, Siebrecht, Dailledouze, Dean and Burns has been designated to visit him and carry condolence and cheerfulness on behalf of the Florists' Club.

The Florists' Board of Trade has presented the club with a neatly framed photograph of the group of visitors at the Detroit convention of the Society of American Florists.

W. H. Siebrecht has a superb lot of bulb flowers just in shape for holiday trade, a novelty in this line, for the early date, being good trumpet narcissi.

A. Warendorf has opened a new store at Seventy-sixth street and Columbus avenue.

Fleischman's window displays a beautiful arrangement of birch bark and green foliage.

Longiflorum lilies are unusually good for the season.

Cypripediums are piling up fast.

STATE OF THE MARKET.—VERY HEAVY DEMAND AND A SCARCITY ON MANY ITEMS. —PROSPECTS FOR CHRISTMAS. — BIG ORDERS PLACED EARLY.—SUN IS GREATLY NEEDED.—AMLING TO MOVE TO LARGER QUARTERS.— FLOWERING PLANTS NOT PLENTIFUL.— JOHNSON'S SUCCESSOR. — IRENE IN FAVOR.—PERSONAL JOTTINGS OF INTEREST.—DOINGS HERE AND THERE.

Business has been reasonably brisk all this week and the market has held firm on nearly all lines, with slight advances here and there despite the fact that qualities have deteriorated slightly because of dark weather. Growers and wholesalers are near akin to the sun worshippers of old. The sun is what is wanted more than all things else to make the approaching Christmas the greatest on record. Advance orders were never so heavy and several big dealers are already sold up to the danger line and are refusing to promise anything further and in some cases are even declining to quote on big orders, several of which are in the market and as yet unplaced. One house has an order amounting to $700 for December 22 and 23. But all this apprehension will be for naught if the sun shines brightly next week, for almost every rose grower has a good cut nearly within reach and the carnation plants are loaded with buds which only require the light to be ready in fine form. The indications are that roses and carnations will be in equal supply. If the weather is bright and warm for the next few days all advance orders will be filled, but if it is dull and stormy the shortage of stock will be considerable, for at present the demand exceeds the supply on many items, good stock, in fact, of many kinds being exceedingly hard to find after the shipping orders have been picked out. Beauties are in particular demand and very scarce. All the commission men are beseeching their growers not to pickle stock and to aim to have the big shipments in on Saturday rather than on Monday.

E. C. Amling will move into larger quarters on January 1, having leased the commodious basement of the Trude Building at the southwest corner of Wabash avenue and Randolph street. The departure from 51 Wabash is necessitated by the pressure of increasing business and the change will put Mr. Amling in a position to take care of anything which may come his way. The new quarters are large, light, airy, have tiled floors and are better finished than any rooms heretofore occupied by a Chicago wholesaler. Mr. Amling has been in the field for four years and in that time has made no inconsiderable impression on the market. He has followed the strictest business principles and has been successful in attracting several of the best growers consigning to this city. For upwards of two years Walter S. Heffron has assisted in the management of the business and it is due in no small measure to his popularity and indefatigability that the patronage of the house warrants the present step. The new rooms will be fitted up in first-class style, the old fixtures and lease having been acquired by another member of the trade, a fact which indicates an early change in the personnel of the wholesale district.

The stock of flowering plants for Christmas is not adequate to the needs of this market, although several growers had something available, and the buyers will not have the opportunity to discriminate against cut flowers as they have been manifesting a tendency to do in the east. About the best thing in this line was the 500 or so plants of Cyclamen persicum giganteum from Mount Greenwood, which were in prime condition and were easily placed, most of them going to Wienhoeber. Friedman also secured 300 cypripediums from the same establishment. Poinsettias are the most numerous of the Christmas plants and are in stock with most of the retailers. There are otaheite orange trees in abundance and some azaleas, but these latter are not up to the usual standard. Wittbold and the smaller palm men have been experiencing a brisk sale for their product.

Thos. G. Williams has been appointed successor to C. W. Johnson at the Mt. Greenwood Cemetery. Mr. Williams has been foreman at the well known establishments of S. C. Nash, Clifton, N. J., A. L. Thorne and the John Henderson Co., Flushing, N. Y. Mr. Johnson and family are now at sea, having sailed from New York on Wednesday on the St. Louis.

Crabb & Hunter are sending their new carnation, Irene, to Kennicotts and it has been bringing 5 cents this week. It is understood that the stock is being worked up preparatory to dissemination next year. It has strong fragrance in addition to the necessary color, stem, calyx, size and freedom of bloom.

A few lots of Liberty from Robert Scott & Son, Sharon Hill, Pa., have found their way into the hands of retailers here and have been well received by the consumers.

Ambrose Martell, a former Springfield and Peoria florist, who had achieved much notoriety, was sent to the Cook County Insane Hospital on December 7.

A. L. Randall is the consignee for the production of ninety-eight 100-foot houses within a half mile of each other at Bowmanville, and the owners are all good growers, too.

Violet boxes are in favor and all the retailers have good assortments of them for Christmas.

Will Kyle, of Kennicotts, is suffering with his annual holiday complaint.

Phil. Hauswirth went to Philadelphia last Monday but will return to-day.

E. E. Pieser spent last Sunday with friends at Grand Rapids.

Visitors: H. Dailledouze, Flatbush, N. Y.; H. C. Ostertag, of Ostertag Bros., St. Louis.

LULL IN CITY TRADE.—EVERY ONE SANGUINE AS TO CHRISTMAS.—PLANTSMEN ARE HAPPY.—A QUESTION OF POLICY.—ANNIVERSARY AT EDGAR'S.—WOODEN WARE AND MERRIMENT.—MOTTOES AND CHEER IN THE POTTING SHED.—ORCHIDS AT HORTICULTURAL HALL.—AN EXPLOSION, A DINNER, AN ELECTION AND VISITORS.

City trade is less active this week, customers apparently holding off in preparation for the holiday season, as has been the experience every year. Among the various departments of the trade there is an air of expectancy and confidence that is very gratifying. No one doubts that the holiday trade will be equal if not go ahead of the record and are making preparations accordingly. In the cut flower line the principal solicitude is in regard to violets, which have suffered severely in the warm fall season and are in bad shape in this vicinity. The rose growers have endeavored to stiffen up the price of American Beauty because Christmas was coming, but a revolt has been detected and the outcome is problematical. The plantsmen are supremely happy. Everything in the way of a presentable Christmas plant has been bonded and the late-comer is informed that he is too late. The question comes up, in this connection, of the wisdom of letting the Gloire de Lorraine begonia out at all before the holidays. Specimens in the stores and elsewhere that have been working for a couple of weeks look rather dilapidated and it does the plant's reputation no good. It stands as well as and better than most flowering plants but is not made of china or iron and the conditions in most dwellings and stores are fatal to anything else. Next week will be a busy one everywhere, of that all are satisfied.

The crowning social event of the season took place on Tuesday evening, at Waverly, in commemoration of the fifth anniversary of the wedding of Wm. Edgar and incidentally to celebrate fittingly that gentleman's success with Gloire de Lorraine. The invitation cards were accompanied by a coat of arms, which we herewith present as indicating the literary trend of all Boston events. Like all heraldic devices, this interesting coat of arms is reminiscent rather than applicable to present conditions, for, unlike the original "pansy punch" occasion five years ago, which it commemorates, the affair this time was graced by the presence of the ladies. So that famous beverage having, like its introducer, become subdued by the mellowing processes of time, it is to be understood that the rolling-pin has been relegated to its place in the pantry and the lightning flash has ceased to disturb the midnight serenity of Waverly, Winchester, Dorchester, Waltham and other suburbs of the Hub. The boys did have a glorious time, however. They sent in advance a wagon load of tables, rolling pins, snow shovels, saw horses and other wooden ware appropriate to the occasion and when they reached Mr. Edgar's home they found the big potting shed transformed into a "salon" of most pretentious furnishings. Lanterns and bunting were profuse and two long, well loaded tables gave promise of hospitable fare. On the walls mottoes indicative of Boston culture were displayed, one of which will suffice for example. Here it is, a clipping from Romeo and Juliet, Act II, Scene III.

"Care keeps his watch in every florist's eye;
Where care lodges sleep will never lie.
Where the poor florist with cares upon his mind
Doth couch his limbs, there golden sleep doth find.
Therefore your pleasure we can now assure Regardless of the outside temperature."

A tour of admiration through the greenhouses was followed by a most enjoyable social time around the tables and the punch bowl, Edward Hatch officiating as chairman. Among the notable events of the evening were P. Welch's response on behalf of the ladies and the songs by Messrs. Walter Mott, Warren Ewell and the graphophone in the corner. Mr. and Mrs. Edgar did everything in their power to entertain their friends and the event will long be remembered. May they live to celebrate many such anniversaries.

At Horticultural Hall, December 9, J. E. Rothwell and Mrs. J. L. Gardner showed a number of fine orchids, most of the first prizes falling to Mr. Rothwell. Certificates of merit were awarded to Oakes Ames for Cypripedium insigne var. citrinum and Cypripedium Deedmannianum, a cross between C. Spicerianum and C. Chamberlainianum.

On the morning of December 11 an explosion wrecked the building on Boylston street in which is located the store of the Calder Floral Co., Mr. Calder being one of the heaviest losers.

On the evening of December 7 the Boston Market Gardeners' Association enjoyed their thirteenth annual dinner at the Quincy House, W. W. Rawson presiding.

The recent election in Boston should be gratifying to the florists, for Mayor-elect Hart was one of the best friends the local club had at the time of the S. A. F. convention here in 1890.

Recent visitors: C. W. Ward, Queens, N. Y.; T. J. Johnston, Providence, R. I.; Walter Mott, Philadelphia; Robt. Johnston and Robt. Laurie, Newport, R. I., and A. M. Rennie, formerly of Providence but now on his honeymoon.

CONDITION OF TRADE.—A RUSH FOLLOWED BY A BREATHING SPELL.—INDICATIONS OF A BIG HOLIDAY BUSINESS.—PRICES ON THE JUMP.—FAIR SUPPLY IN SIGHT.—STOCK OF GOOD QUALITY.—PLANTS AT CRAIGS'.—CRAWFORD HAS A HORSELESS WAGON.—LONSDALE PRAISES GLOIRE DE LORRAINE.—A SCOTT IN QUAKERTOWN.—VISITORS AND NOTES.

Last week was one of the best of the season so far; the debutants' teas were crowded together and it took all the good roses the growers could send in to supply the demand. Things are quieter this week and perhaps it's just as well, as it gives the dealers a chance to get their stock in order for Christmas and arrange their stores for next week's rush. Prices have advanced above last week; one more step and they will have reached the position from which the final grand leap is made. Beauties are now $2.50 to $6 per dozen, about $1.50 per foot of stem. Teas are $8 to $10 with a few extras at $12. Carnations are $2 to $6, the majority going for $2.50 per hundred. Violets bring $1 to $2 for the doubles and 75 cents to $1 for good Californias. Mignonette is now fine at $4. Lily of the valley is $3 to $5, Romans and narcissi $3 to $4. Cypripediums are not very plentiful at 15 cents.

The prospects for a good supply of flowers for next week are considered very fair by growers who are generally to be depended on, although some say that the past two weeks of mild weather have brought out a lot of flowers that with a colder temperature would have held until Christmas. If the conditions are favorable, however, from now on it is thought the supply will go as far toward meeting the demand as in former years. Prices were a shade higher, perhaps, one firm of Beauty growers saying that their specials will have to bring $18 per dozen where they were satisfied last season with $15. They say they are a shade better than last season and they think they can get the advance. Carnations will probably also range a trifle higher for the special stock, as it promises to be finer than ever. Even now carnations are coming in wide open and of extra size and the houses are said to be a blaze of color.

Robert Craig grew 1200 plants of Gloire de Lorraine for the holiday trade. They are all gone and he could have sold as many more. He has been training a lot of low, bushy-shaped branching rubbers as a feeler to see how this form will take among the buyers. They are certainly more attractive looking than the tall, ungainly specimens too often seen. Mr. Craig has rebuilt five houses this fall and reports the biggest business in the history of his establishment.

Robert Crawford's name is now uppermost as the topic of the hour and his new automobile is anxiously looked for. It will probably be on the street Saturday. Well, Eleventh street is looking up, surely! A real live florists' horseless wagon, the first of its kind in this city. Robert may well be proud. They come high but a little thing like a couple of thousand or so is not allowed to stand in the way of this pioneer. He has blazed the way and no doubt others will follow.

Edwin Lonsdale is proud of his Begonia Gloire de Lorraine. He has made begonias a study for a number of years past but says he is now convinced that there is only one begonia. It is, he says, not a century plant, but the plant of the century. He predicts a great future for it.

David Scott, of Buffalo, a son of William, is now a resident of Philadelphia, having connected himself with the Craig nurseries at Forty-ninth and Market streets. In his leisure hours he will doubtless show the boys a thing or two on the alleys, in which department of sport he is an adept. His brother William was in town last week as was also Phil. Hauswirth, of Chicago, who stopped off for a few hours on his way to Washington.

Smith & Whitely have dissolved partnership. The greenhouse and store business will be continued by Mr. Whitely.

CHRISTMAS TRADE PROSPECTS. — ROSES AND CARNATIONS IN SHORT SUPPLY.—HARRISII NOW IN.—FLORISTS' SOCIETY MEETS.—COMING MEETINGS AND EXHIBITIONS.—TRIP TO INDIANA POINTS.—VISITORS.

Orders are received daily at the wholesale houses with large demand for carnations and roses. For Christmas bulbous stock such as hyacinths, narcissi and lily of the valley will at least be sufficiently plentiful to supply the demand. Carnations will be short, also roses. Lilium Harrisii is in and quoted from 12½ to 15, with good demand, but there is only a very small quantity of them. Violets will be short to the extent of about fifty per cent. Holly has a normal position while lycopodium is in brisk demand.

Routine business was transacted at the regular meeting of the Florists' Society December 9. Two new members were elected. The date of annual meeting and election of officers was changed from January to June, the present officials to retain their respective positions until the latter month. The carnation exhibition held in connection with this meeting, full details of which appear elsewhere in this issue, was very successful. The special exhibition features of later meetings are as follows: January 10, violets; February 10, roses; March 10, carnations; April 21, bulbous and market plants. Prize lists and full particulars may be had on application to the secretary, George S. Bartlett, 34 Main street.

A party, including Wm. Murphy and brothers, the Sunderbruch brothers and Messrs. Bartlett, Rodgers, Giesy, Bock, Gillett, Adrian, Schumann, Windrum and Jackson, left on Wednesday for a visit to Indiana points of interest, including Lafayette, Indianapolis and Richmond, and reports an enjoyable trip.

Visitors: Fred. H. Lemon, of E. G. Hill & Co., Richmond, Ind.; Wm. P. Craig, of Robt. Craig & Son, Philadelphia.

BEST THANKSGIVING TRADE ON RECORD.—FINE PROSPECTS FOR CHRISTMAS.—PROSPECT FOR A SHORTAGE.—CHRYSANTHEMUMS MADE A GOOD RECORD.—COAL IS HIGH.—VISITORS.

Although it is rather late to report on Thanksgiving trade, we cannot let this opportunity pass without offering thanks for the best trade ever known for this holiday. Violets were very scarce, roses in fair supply, carnations fairly plentiful, chrysanthemums quite abundant and the demand for all exceeding the supply. Prices were higher than ever before at Thanksgiving, and both grower and retailer shared in the general prosperity. There is a good crop of buds now coming on, which should make a good cut for Christmas, but if the dark weather continues good blooms are apt to be scarce. All of the large retail stores are using greens more extensively than ever, the general favorite being lycopodium for festooning. While it may be too early to predict Christmas trade, all indications point to an unusually good demand for all flowers, while advance orders for greens are heavy and a shortage at the last moment would not be surprising.

Chrysanthemums are gone, unless some of the growers have a supply hidden away for the holidays. While their quality has hardly been up to the average of former seasons, owing to the hot October weather, they have sold at good prices and have been profitable alike to the grower and the retailer.

The mild weather still remains and, with soft coal at $5.50 per ton against $3.10 last year, is a subject for congratulations on the part of the growers.

Wm. Scott, who but recently returned from the Klondike, has set out again for those Elysian fields.

Recent callers were J. McHutchison, representing Aug. Rhotert, of New York, and Mr. Currie, of Milwaukee.

FELIX.

Richmond, Ind.

There is now much to interest visitors at the establishment of E. G. Hill & Co. Many of the seedling carnations are coming into bloom, and already there is promise of much new material of first quality. Ethel Crocker looks well, producing flowers of good size and color very freely. Olympia as seen here is certainly leader in its class. Mr. Hill has a high opinion of California Gold, one of Sievers' varieties. This is a variegated yellow and as it blooms very freely, will doubtless meet with considerable demand where there is a market for new and striking colors.

Numerous new roses (Mr. Hill's own productions) will render a good account of themselves later in the season. At the time of our visit several interesting European varieties were in bloom, the most meritorious being Sunrise, of the same general character as Perle and Sunset, producing flowers of a most attractive but indescribable new shade in great profusion. This variety will prove a great acquisition for forcing as well as for outdoor culture. Queen Olga of Greece (Paul) appears to contain some China blood, with flowers of a reddish pink shade; free in growth and bloom, and good for general bedding purposes. Exquisite (Paul) is a very fine large-flowered hybrid tea having the proportions of the hybrid perpetuals. In England we presume this rose is very fine, but under our hot sun, indoors and out, the blooms are of a slaty purple color of no value.

Scarcely a day passes in which some prominent personage of the trade does not put in an appearance here. In the past week the visitors included Henry Dailledouze, of Dailledouze Bros., Flatbush, N. Y., Wm. Walker, Louisville, Ky., J. S. Wilson, of Vaughan's Greenhouses, Western Springs, Ill., Wm. P. Craig, of Robt. Craig & Son, Philadelphia, Robt. George, of Storrs & Harrison Co., Painesville, O., and from Cincinnati and vicinity, Wm. Murphy and brothers, the Sunderbruch brothers and Messrs. Bartlett, Rodgers, Giesy, Bock, Gillett, Adrian, Schumann, Windrum and Jackson.

Scranton, Pa.

The prospect for a good Christmas trade is very bright with the Scranton florists. The good times that the rest of the country have been enjoying are just reaching Scranton. The opinions of the drummers of all lines on the prosperity in different sections of the city is a pretty safe barometer on industrial conditions and the men with the carpet bags say that Scranton is the last city to feel the hard times and the last city to feel the good times. Just now the herald of activity is in the air. Stock is good. The growers on the Kingston flats are cutting some extra fine roses and carnations. Poinsettias will not be plentiful, but there will be some fine ones. Chrysanthemums will nod their last farewell on Christmas day. Holiday greens from the south will be plentiful, as well as our native greens, which abound in this section. In plants a few nice azaleas will be in. Roman hyacinths, narcissi in 5-inch pots, with a fewforsythias, will be the principal blooming plants, besides cyclamens and primroses. The genial Mott and the persevering Skidelsky have supplied most of the boys with a fine lot of palms and other foliage plants for the festive season. The annual Bachelors' Ball on December 29 will be the most noteworthy social event and the decorations at this are always quite elaborate. St. Peter's Catholic church will be extensively decorated for Christmas.

G. R. CLARK.

W. & T. SMITH Co. report that the nursery trade in Geneva, N. Y., has been larger this fall than for several years past. In fact, all the nurserymen have had more orders than they could fill and at greatly increased prices. The outlook for spring is certainly flattering, the only drawback to the business being the small amount of stock with which to fill orders. Roses, clematis and ornamentals are in great demand and it seems as though the nursery business was getting its share of the general prosperity.

American Rose Society.

Secretary Paul M. Pierson, Scarborough, N. Y., is distributing the preliminary premium list of the approaching exhibitions of the rejuvenated American Rose Society, the first to be held at the Eden Musee, on Twenty-third street, New York, on March 27, 28 and 29, 1900, to be followed by a June show, the date and location of which are yet to be determined. The announcement is made that, although the preliminary list is large enough to secure the finest rose show which this country has ever seen, many additional special prizes are assured to lend additional attractiveness to the emoluments for exhibitors.

It has been deemed wise to divide the list into classes open to all, open to establishments where not more than 20,000 feet of glass is devoted to roses, and open only to private gardeners and amateurs. In the several sections cash prizes aggregating $1164.50 are offered for the March exhibition, these supplemented by no less than six silver cups valued at $225, certificates, etc. Already the June show is assured of $246 in money premiums and four silver cups. A gold and a silver medal have been offered by the New York Florists' Club the conditions of the competition for which will be announced in the final schedule.

It is gratifying to every one interested in the advancement of the rose that the aid to the society and its first exhibitions is so generous from all quarters. There can be no shadow of doubt as to the value of this movement to the florist trade and that awakened interest assures success is a matter for particular felicitation among commercial growers.

Price of Glass Comes Down.

The American Window Glass Company has announced a cut in the price of glass of thirty-three and one-third per cent. This is most welcome news to greenhouse men, who have been suffering under the exorbitant charges of the combine, and is all the more encouraging in that leading jobbers believe that reasonable prices will prevail from this time on, at least until the demand shall have neared the point of the possible production for the season now approaching.

"There are no greenhouse sizes now available in quantity," said Frank Hayes, of the H. M. Hooker Co., when interrogated in the matter, "but such small lots as are in the jobbers' hands may be obtained at prices which appear very reasonable in comparison with the rates prevailing during the past year.

"The American Window Glass Company states that in 1899 its factories cut ten times as much greenhouse glass as in 1898, which in a measure accounts for the rise of fifty per cent in prices and easily explains the depleted state of the market, which is such that the independent factories have not yet accepted the reduction made by the combine. The present cut in prices was doubtless due to the effect of the large production of these independent factories, amounting to about forty per cent of the total output, and the prospects are that the lower prices will hold unless the demand exceeds the possibilities of production, for the outside concerns are believed to have more than their due proportion of the blowers.

"The American Window Glass Company has ordered the fires started in all its factories, preparatory to resuming operations January 1, and, although the season will be short, it is probable that enough glass can be turned out in six months to afford all the greenhouse sizes which will be required next year. There are now in this country 2800 pots but not more than 2200 blowers, so that at least 600 pots must lie idle; with a majority of these idle pots within the combine the indications are that the causes leading to the reduction will hold the prices down unless there comes an unprecedented demand.

"The indications point to large building operations among florists all over the country and since the telegraphic reports of the cut in price all jobbers have received numerous requests for prices for both immediate and future delivery. It will be impossible to make shipments of large lots until toward the middle of January."

The Substitution of Soda for Potash.

Anent the discussion of this subject, the following extracts from a report of Sir J. B. Lawes and Sir J. H. Gilbert in the "Proceedings of the Royal Horticultural Society 1899," (English) should be of interest:

If potash be liberally available, the produce is much more stemmy, and the amount of soda, of lime, and to some extent of magnesia, will be less, relatively, to the potash. In defect of sufficient potash, on the other hand, more of soda, or of lime, or of both, will be taken up and retained; but the herbage will at the same time be more leafy and immature. That is to say, the constituents are not mutually replaceable in the processes of growth, but accordingly as the one or the other predominates, so will the product of growth be different.

The report above noted deals with the results of experiments which have been carried on continuously for forty-four years.

Red Forms of Primula Obconica.

Primula obconica, introduced from China into our gardens at a relatively recent time, has largely and rapidly changed in character from the original. In 1892 the Revue Horticole published a description of its first improvements. In 1897 one of its editors, who was mentioning some of the newer and more important varieties, was not able to explain this progress, particularly the increase in the size of the bloom, except by attributing it to the influence of the pollen of the large Chinese primrose.

Extraordinary as it may seem, this hypothesis does not correspond to the real facts. The numerous varieties produced under the care of Verrieres are all selections from variations of the original plant. All attempts at the hybridization of P. obconica with the Chinese primrose, as with garden primroses, have so far remained without results. Hardly was P obconica known before my father predicted the quality and future of this plant. He foresaw a rival of the Chinese primrose and was continually seeking with unceasing interest for its perfect development. If death had not so soon claimed him, it is he who should to-day have had the honor of presenting to the readers of the Revue the latest progress realized in the amelioration of this beautiful species.

The new, large, scarlet variety marked with purple, if I may so speak, is the commencement of a new era in the evolution of P. obconica. We were already far from the original type; the plant, having lost none of its hardiness nor of its profuseness of bloom, had produced larger and still larger flowers, sometimes fringed or fimbriated on the edges, and variable in color from rose to pure white. It now appears to move in a contrary direction, that is to say, towards the darker tints of its primitive color. Without being too presumptuous, we anticipate that in the near future it will be able to hold its own with the Chinese primrose. It has already the advantage over the latter of being more healthful, more hardy and floriferous, carrying its clusters of bloom on longer stems, with the foliage better separated.

What more could we unless except in the size of the flower and the variety of its hues, two desiderata to which an intelligent selection brings it nearer every day.—Philippe—L. de Vilmorin in the Revue Horticole.

[The above article is accompanied by a colored plate of a handsome deep red variety of P. obconica.—Ed.]

CARLINVILLE, ILL.—George Biegert, formerly of Biegert & Mueller, florists here, is now in charge of the Carlinville Cemetery.

SABETHA, KAN.—G. Christ has added another house to his establishment and is now well equipped with a general stock.

Publications Received.

PRACTICAL FORESTRY IN THE ADIRONDACKS.—Bulletin No. 26, U. S. Dept. of Agriculture, Division of Forestry.—It may not be generally known that the Department of Agriculture has offered to make personal studies and prepare plans for forest preservation and management, and to supervise their execution, making no charge for such work upon small tracts, and charging only actual traveling and subsistence expenses for larger works. The present bulletin deals principally with the work done upon two such tracts. It is very full and complete and abundantly illustrated and should prove of value to all persons interested in the proper and profitable handling of forests.

MARYLAND AGRICULTURAL EXPERIMENT STATION, TWELFTH ANNUAL REPORT.—This report contains the most complete account of the San Jose scale, its distribution and methods for its destruction which has come to our notice. It is fully illustrated and should be of interest to all nurserymen. The balance of the report is devoted to matters of strictly agricultural interest.

THE EXPERIMENTAL VINEYARD.—Virginia Agricultural Experiment Station, Bulletin No. 94.—This contains a very minute description of two systems of grape pruning and training fully illustrated, also reports on varieties in the station vineyard.

OBITUARY.

S. C. GAUSE.

Samuel C. Gause, the only brother of G. R. Gause, of Richmond, Ind., died at Asheville, N. C., November 27, and was buried at Richmond, December 2. The deceased was formerly in business with his brother at Richmond, and had gone to Asheville for the benefit of his health, having been subject to lung troubles.

Peoria, Ill.

The prospects for Christmas trade are very bright. Chas. Loveridge has a magnificent crop of carnations in sight and Cole Bros. have a large house of azaleas which will be in. J. C. Murray also has a bench of azaleas and several thousand narcissi, also a good lot of carnations and roses. Kuhl, of Pekin, has the best roses grown in this locality and Washburn, of Bloomington, the finest carnations, with good Christmas stocks in sight in both places. There will be a shortage of both American Beauties and violets. The plant trade is not heavy here and the prices of cut flowers are not so high as in larger cities. PEORIAN.

PORTLAND, ORE.—S. C. Dennett & Co. have moved into their new store and are nicely situated.

BARING CROSS, ARK.—Frank Vestal reports good business with splendid prospects for spring.

THE AMERICAN FLORIST CO.

New Haven, Conn.

Business has been very good for the past few weeks, flowers of all kinds being very scarce and hard to get at any price. Bridesmaids of first quality are worth $2.50 to $3 per dozen, while carnations bring 50 cents for ordinary sorts and $1 for fancy varieties. At present all the local florists are very busy preparing for a large Christmas trade.

Ludwig Wolf has finished a nice house 18x76 for carnations and has commenced cutting some very nice blooms.

We are to have one more florist; Hull, the druggist, intends putting in a floral department as soon as alterations are completed.

THE SEED TRADE.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

ALEXANDER RODGERS, Pres; ALBERT MCCULLOUGH, Vice-Pres; S. F. WILLARD, Wethersfield, Conn., Sec'y and Treas.

THE demand for onion seed is rather quiet at present.

VALENTINE beans are still advancing in price, also Wakefield cabbage.

NEW YORK.—Trial of the Manda-Elliott case resulted in a verdict favorable to the defendant, Wm. J. Elliott, December 7.

M. F. WILKINSON, formerly at Grand Ledge, will open a seed store at Olivet, Mich., under the firm name of M. F. Wilkinson & Co.

AT Rose Hill, a suburb of Chicago, M. Hermes suffered by fire on December 12 the loss of his barn and $600 worth of seeds, mostly insured.

VISITED CHICAGO: A. J. Brown, of Grand Rapids, Mich.; Mrs. S. Y. Haines; the Misses Sadie and Jessaline Northrup, daughters of J. E. Northrup, Minneapolis.

VARIOUS flower and vegetable seeds, after having been exposed to the action of liquid hydrogen in producing a temperature of—453° Fahr., have germinated readily.

THE Department of Agriculture will begin its distribution of seeds a little earlier this year than last, shipping them south the beginning of January and perhaps sending a few shortly before the first. This year the seeds for distribution to all parts of the country will consist of 13,000,000 packets of vegetable seeds, 1,560,000 of flower seeds, besides field and lawn grass seeds.—Washington Post.

Carbon-Bisulphide for Insects in Seeds.

Seeds infested with insects such as weevils, grain-beetles, meal-beetles, etc., ordinarily are best freed of the pests by the use of carbon-bisulphide.

A careful germination test of beet seed treated with this liquid was made to determine definitely whether it was safe to thus treat beet seed in order to rid it of any insects that might infest it. Three separate lots of seed were exposed to two different strengths of the gas for different lengths of time.

In lot No. 1, 100 fruits, each containing from one to seven true seeds, were exposed for twenty-four hours to the gas at the rate of two drams of the liquid to a cubic foot of air space.

In lot No. 2, 100 fruits were placed in an atmosphere saturated with the gas for twenty-four hours.

In lot No. 3, 100 fruits were placed in a jar without any of the liquid, as a check on the others.

In lot No. 4, 100 fruits were placed in an atmosphere saturated with the gas for forty-eight hours.

The seeds employed were Vilmorin's Improved.

After the seeds had been subjected to the action of the gas for the required time, they were placed between moist sheets of filter-paper, each lot under a separate bell jar. In the case of lot No. 1, 93 of the 100 fruits germinated at the end of two weeks; in lot No. 2, 76 germinated; in lot No. 3 (check), 93 germinated, and in lot 4, 50, in the same length of time.

Exposure to the weaker strength (two drams to the cubic foot) somewhat accelerated the germination without injuring the seed, while exposure to the stronger gas killed the seed directly in proportion to the time exposed.

The gas is strong enough when used in the lesser rate to kill all insects and vermin that may infest it. Great care must be employed in using the substance, for it is explosive when lighted and very poisonous to breathe. The seed or grain should be in air-tight bins or barrels, and means should be at hand to close them tightly and quickly. The space in the bin or barrel should be computed, counting in any air space above the seed, for the gas will occupy the space, too. For every cubic foot of space, one dram of the liquid should be used, for every 100 cubic feet one pound of the liquid will suffice. Shallow pans or dishes should be placed on top of the seed and the liquid poured into them, after which the bins or receptacles should be quickly and tightly closed. Wet blankets and old carpets will do very nicely for this purpose if enough of them are used.

If the seed or grain is more than three or four feet deep, some of the liquid should be poured into it at some depth to ensure its spreading evenly and filling all the space treated. This is easily done with a piece of gas-pipe fitted with a wooden stick for its entire length. The pipe, with the stick in place, filling the hole, is thrust down half way, the stick is withdrawn and the liquid poured down through the pipe. The stick merely prevents the pipe from being filled with grain when pushed into place.

The liquid carbon-bisulphide on being liberated, will be quickly transformed into a gas, which, being heavier than air, settles to the bottom and fills all the air-spaces between the seed or kernels. The liquid costs about 30 cents for a single pound, or about 10 cents per pound when purchased in fifty-pound lots. It can be used to kill insects in the granary, in the pantry, clothes-moths, and in fact any insect in material that can be placed in trunks, chests or barrels that can be tightly closed. In general, one dram should be used for a cubic foot of space, as some seeds are injured if subjected to too strong a treatment. The work must be done in the daytime, away from lamps, stoves, or fires of any sort, and no fires must be allowed to come near it until everything has been aired thoroughly. Grain should be shoveled over several times. Great care must be observed to breathe as little as possible, for it is very dangerous and will as easily produce death among men as among insects.—Michigan Experiment Station Bul 175.

THE NURSERY TRADE.

AM. ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.
W. J. PETERS, Pres.; D. S. LAKE, Vice-Pres.; GEORGE C. SEAGER, Rochester, N. Y., Sec'y.

AT Tangent, Ore., H. W. Settlemire, has planted a ton of peach pits.

THE nurserymen universally report unprecedented fall planting of ornamental stock.

PARSONS & SONS CO, Flushing, N. Y., have sent a consignment of nursery stock to Eastern Siberia.

CHARLES L. STERNS, North Syracuse, N. Y., has a seedling apple which experts consider of high promise.

IRVING ROUSE, of Rochester, has returned from France, where he made arrangements for large importations.

THE Western Association of Wholesale Nurserymen will hold its semi-annual meeting at Kansas City, Mo., December 20.

THE Carolina poplar, a tree of quick growth is recommended for planting in cities for its power of resisting smoke and gas.

W. T. HOOD, of Richmond, Va., does not believe that the increased demand warrants nurserymen in excessive plantings.

THE nursery of Richman & Mills, Fullerton, Cal., is to be doubled in capacity. They are experiencing a strong demand, especially for apricots and walnuts.

Trees for City Streets.

The proposition to make a grand boulevard on Broad street, Philadelphia, shaded by lines of trees, has drawn much attention to the subject of street tree planting. A great deal of discussion is going on as to the proper kind of trees to employ, and very properly, too, but at the same time the most important matter is the provision of suitable situations for them. It is useless to expect trees to thrive where the whole surface above the roots is air tight, as is the case in many of the streets in our large cities. With asphalt-covered streets, cement sidewalks and but a little space, perhaps but eighteen inches square, around the tree, how is the tree to grow? That it is this alone that makes so many of our street trees an eyesore is evidenced on very many of the streets of every town. I would call the attention of any one to Girard avenue, of our city, as an illustration. Many of the residences along it have little gardens attached to them, and in these gardens are trees of various kinds thriving as well as any one could wish. And very often these trees are not many feet away from miserable looking "street trees." In fact, wherever there is a little spot with a reasonable space of surface soil free to the air, sun and rain, a tree will thrive, if the soil be of reasonable quality.

The tendency of the times is to have both street and sidewalk made impervious to water, and this means a harder struggle for trees. In former days trees along our streets did much better than they do to-day. Those were days of macadamized roads, cobble stones and Belgian blocks, which we are glad to be rid of, even at the expense of losing our trees. But those pavements permitted the growth of roots, and trees thrived. The only hope for trees on our "improved" streets is to have a considerable space of uncovered soil. Should the sidewalk be cemented, as so many are, a space, say two feet wide, parallel with the curb, should be left open. If desired that it be covered in some way use bricks, which would permit of air and moisture finding a way through.

There are, no doubt, certain trees much better fitted than others, there being among them some reckless fellows, apparently glad to be permitted to grow anywhere, but some of these, the ailanthus for one, are not just what are wanted. I venture the opinion that if more attention were paid to the requirements of the roots, there would be much less discussion needed as to what kind to plant. Not only should more exposed surface be given about the roots, but the nature of the soil itself must be considered. Many city streets have been filled in, which means loads of ashes, tin cans, bricks, and all manner of rubbish; others have been graded below their original level and top soil has disappeared, and a subsoil of stiff clay is what the trees are expected to grow in.

The city of Washington is often cited as showing what can be done in the way of street trees, and certainly there are some valuable hints to be received there. The famous avenue of ginkgo trees leading to the Agricultural Building do not have to depend on a covered-in street surface for their existence, and along the other streets my recollection is that quite large spaces are left open around each tree. Besides this, the care of the city streets is under a commission of practical men, who make sure from the start that they provide for the requirements of the tree for the present and the future, as far as it is possible to do. JOSEPH MEEHAN.

GRAND ISLAND, NEB.—Brewster & Williams, who now have 8,000 feet of glass, are having a good trade and expect great things of Christmas.

TRENTON, N. J.—C. Ribsam & Son report holiday orders far ahead of past years, both for plants and cut flowers, and prices much better.

YOUNGSTOWN, O.—E. Hippard says that holiday business will be big but that roses and carnations will be scarce because of the warm autumn.

BRAMPTON, ONT.—H. Dale states that there has been more than the usual inquiry for Christmas stock. There will be a fair supply of good quality, violets being the only exception; these are good but scarce.

SOUTH HADLEY, MASS.—The plant houses erected by Hitchings & Co. in the Talcott Arboretum at Mt. Holyoke College, cover a ground space of 6,500 square feet, and consist of a curvilinear palm house and three other houses each 50 feet long, with work rooms, class room, laboratory and propagating house. In the center of the palm house is a large tank for aquatics.

The MODEL Extension Carnation Support.

LANCASTER, PA., June 17, '99.
MR. THERON PARKER, Brooklyn, N. Y.
Dear Sir:—Your Model Carnation Support is all right in every way and will no doubt be considered as necessary as good plants with growers when better known. I consider it the best on the market, and if your other specialties are equally as good, they should make another addition to the money makers of 1900. Respectfully,
ALBERT M. HERR.

MR. THERON PARKER.
Dear Sir:—It gives me much pleasure to congratulate you upon your success in getting up carnation supports. I think that those I have had from you are about as perfect as anybody will be able to make them. They certainly fill my bill for an ideal carnation support, a thing I have been looking for a long time. Wishing you every success in the sale of them, I am

At Richmond.

There was an interesting game at the Monarch alleys, Richmond, Ind., December 11, when the following scores were made, E. G. Hill being among the spectators:

Player	1st	2d	3d	Av
J. S. Wilson	121	142	154	139

On the alleys the good work is kept up by the enthusiasts, who never tire of trying for the 200 mark. Hamilton is the greatest offender, scarcely a week passing that he does not put up one or more games that eclipse the double century. Geo. Moss is often a suspect and frequently is found guilty of the same offence. Old Man "Bake" will have to get a move on or that long line of two hundreds will no longer appear to project so far. K.

At Denver.

The following scores were made Tuesday evening, November 28, at the alleys of the Denver Florists' Bowling Club:

Charles Zeller.

The genial president of the Flatbush Florists' Bowling Club, whose portrait appears herewith, needs no introduction to many of our readers. Although now seventy-three years of age he is rarely missing from the weekly meetings of the club and is as enthusiastic a bowler as the youngest. The boys all love him, for his heart is in the right place, his good nature is inexhaustible, his kindly smile an inspiration and there is a warmth in his companionship that is irresistible. Mr. Zeller stands high in his profession and his rare attainments as a cultivator were recognized more than a generation ago, but "that is another story." Although, as with most of his colleagues, his life has been one of toil, yet he is always ready, at the proper time, to enter heartily into the social pastimes that count for so much in the existence of the hard-worked gardener. We hope he will be able to bowl for many years to come.

CHARLES ZELLER.
President Flatbush Bowling Club.

Orange, N. J.

At the annual meeting of the N. J. Floricultural Society, Peter Duff was elected president; J. B. Davis, vice-president; Geo. Smith, secretary and Malcolm Macrorie, treasurer. The selection for the presidency was a particularly gratifying one, for Mr. Duff's character as a man and ability as a gardener, his long service in the interests of the society, his sound judgment and wide popularity make him the ideal man for the position. The vice-president's extreme modesty caused him to protest against being selected for the honor but the club knew best and insisted on giving him a unanimous vote as the successor of John Haynes, who had declined a re-election. George Smith's sunny disposition will make him a popular secretary. He holds the responsible position of superintendent of the estate of the heirs of Samuel Colgate. Mr. Macrorie is an able executive officer, having served the society as president for two years, and the treasury will be in good hands. With such able officers the society has the brightest of prospects for the coming year. The next meeting will be the installation dinner, which takes place on January 3.

A very interesting address was given before the club after the election formalities by J. I. Donlan, on "Ancient and Modern Floral Art," whose acknowledged skill as a floral decorator was a guarantee that the talk would be well worth listening to and a good sized audience was present. Mr. Donlan's remarks were illustrated by practical demonstration with flowers, foliage and ribbon which had been provided, and covered the topics of the wreath, the garland, hand bouquet, corsage bouquet, boutonniere, table decoration and hall decoration. A hearty vote of thanks rewarded the lecturer and the entertainment was declared to have been one of the pleasantest in the society's history.

RACINE, WIS.—A. J. Fidler has his six 110-foot houses well stocked for the Christmas trade and expects good business.

FINDLAY, O.—On the night of December 6 fire caused by over-heating destroyed the greenhouse, 18x26, at the county infirmary.

SEDALIA, MO.—Chas. Koeppen has been attracting many flower admirers to his greenhouses by the excellence of his public chrysanthemum shows.

LEXINGTON, KY.—John A. Keller reports business excellent this fall. Chrysanthemums were good, plentiful and in demand. Violets are scarce but stock looks well.

ALLENTOWN, PA.—A. B. Ellsworth remarks that he has never yet been able to supply the holiday trade and that he expects this year to prove no exception to the rule.

LANCASTER, PA.—H. D. Rohrer notices an increased demand for well grown carnations, especially red. As a wholesale grower he finds the supply sadly inadequate to meet the calls.

FORT FAIRFIELD, ME.—The Aroostook Co. Pomona Grange Seed Association has been organized here with the following officers: President, F. P. Grant; Treasurer, A. F. Haines.

NEWBURYPORT, MASS.—E. W. Pearson has just finised installing a 150-horse power boiler in a new building 20x50. During the season he added a violet house 8x125, a plant house 22x100 and a cold frame of 150 sash. He now has 20,000 feet of glass.

BANGOR, ME.—The annual flower festival at City Hall opened on November 23 and continued for two days. The decorations, under the direction of Carl Beers, were the most beautiful ever seen in Bangor, and the whole affair was a pronounced success.

TRADE QUIET.—GOOD PROSPECTS FOR CHRISTMAS.—GREENS IN DEMAND.—CLUB PUTS BAN ON DONATIONS.

As is usual before a holiday, trade is rather quiet; we expect it is the lull before the storm. The advance orders are numerous, especially for greens for store decoration, fully up to last year. Roses and carnations are again becoming scarce; the growers are evidently preparing a stock for Christmas.

At the last club meeting a resolution was adopted that no florist donate plants, flowers or services to an employee after December 15 and the dealers are generally agreeing to the decision; it is certainly a step in the right direction.

W. F. Kasting has been at Erie, Pa.

Recent visitors: Arnold Ringier, representing W. W. Barnard & Co., Chicago; S. B. Smiley, Lancaster. W. A.

Worcester, Mass.

Since Thanksgiving all trade has been very good and flowers have been scarce at times. The quality of the blooms and plants sent in has never been surpassed at this season of the year, with the one exception of violets, which are very short and of poor quality. At this writing the prospects are for an enormous Christmas demand and not enough flowers to supply it. We shall have a good supply of plants.

The trustees of the Worcester County Horticultural Society, at their annual meeting, voted to hold no chrysanthemum exhibition next year. This is certainly a backward step.

Chas. D. Thayer and wife celebrated their silver wedding December 9 and were the recipients of many tokens of esteem.

ETHEL CROCKER

Absolutely the BEST PINK CARNATION ever offered the trade.

Grown equally successfully by Hill, Craig, and myself; you are not buying it on a venture, but knowing that it is not a success in one soil and a failure in another.

In color, size, fragrance and stem it is just what the "storemen" want. In habit, constitution and freedom of bloom it is just what the grower wants, never out of crop from September to July, more flowers to the square foot than any other known variety and practically no seconds.

With 18,000 stock plants to work from there is no danger of over propagation, and you are not asked to wait until planting out time for your cuttings but can have them whenever wanted. Orders entrusted to me will have my personal attention, both in the selection of the cuttings and the filling of the order.

Price per 100, $10; per 25, $2.50; per 1000, $75; per 250, $18.75. HERR'S PANSIES at $4.00 now, and a regular assortment of CARNATIONS in a list ready Jan. 1st.

Detroit.

All indications point to a great demand for flowers at Christmas but the scarcity is everywhere apparent, all local growers reporting off crop of carnations and roses, while violets were never before so scarce. There will be some Romans and Paper White narcissi and possibly enough of such stock to meet the direct demand for it, but it is the bright-colored flowers that are sought for at Christmas. Chrysanthemums are all gone and the situation is made still worse by the scarcity of flowering plants, which would be largely used if they were obtainable. The retailers feel all the more alarmed by reason of the little relief expected from outside sources of supply, as the shortage seems quite universal. J. F. S.

Minneapolis.

Thanksgiving trade was better than last year. Chrysanthemums were plentiful, of good quality and sold at fair prices. Roses and carnations were not so plentiful. Violets were scarce and have been ever since. The way it looks now flowers are going to be very scarce for Christmas; chrysanthemums are all gone and roses and carnations are coming very slowly on account of the dark and cloudy weather. Cut flowers will be high; flowering plants, palms and ferns will be in demand and there seems to be a good supply. L.

Keene, N. H.

Disagreeable weather did not deter a large gathering at the establishment of Ellis Bros. to witness the illumination of their houses and grounds at the close of their second annual exhibition. The firm has eleven houses, some 25,000 feet of glass, of modern construction. The illumination was accomplished by using over 1,000 candles, while the grounds adjacent to the houses were lighted by Chinese lanterns, making a novel and pleasing effect. Guides were stationed about the houses to explain to many an interested visitor the habit and growth of the various plants. The most brilliant show was the chrysanthemum house, well filled with its mass of blooms. The color effects under the lights were really fine. The rose house also presented an attractive appearance, with a fine crop just on. Several houses devoted to carnations are looking well, with a good crop coming on. The remaining houses are devoted to the stock usually found in a retail place.

An exhibition of this kind may be a novelty to a good many growers but has much to recommend it to the trade. This is the second show held by this firm, who find it a splendid advertisement. TAP.

SHAMOKIN, PA.—Two of the greenhouses of Joseph Harris were destroyed by fire December 7, entailing a loss of $1,500.

COLUMBIA, S. C.—August Becker is foreman for A. Stark, Jr., who is starting into business with excellent prospects. Two houses are soon to go up, with boiler shed and accessories.

PROSPECTS FOR CHRISTMAS.—MOST LINES SELLING CLEAN NOW.—PROSPECT FOR A SHORTAGE.—FOUNTAIN IN BUSINESS IN SEATTLE.

This season is encouraging although it is quite evident that every one will not be satisfied. Most flowers are selling clear now. The principal growers who supply this locality have been painstaking and have a better prospect for high grade flowers than usual at this season. The sun, over which they have no control, will determine whether orders can be filled completely or in part. Stevia of high grade is quite popular and those who grow it will fill contracts, but with none to spare. Cypripediums, poinsettias, begonias and primroses and the bulbs in pots are mostly engaged now. Florists are booking orders for holly and Alabama smilax to a larger amount than usual. Smilax is scarce.

Fred Fountain, once a popular florist at Racine, Wis., and well known throughout the state, after spending a few years in Hamilton, Wis., in mercantile business, has returned to the florist trade, opening a store at 1232 Jackson street, Seattle, Wash. C. B. W.

ALTON, ILL.—Rock Spring Park is to have a commodious greenhouse for the propagation of bedding plants.

DAYTON, O.—J. B. Heiss reports that the wholesale palm trade has been unprecedented this year and that the prospects are for the biggest Christmas on record. Cut flowers are apt to be in short supply, especially carnations and violets, and palms are already moving lively, the favorite sizes being those which retail at from $2 to $5.

NOVELTIES FOR 1900.

HIBISCUS PEACHBLOW.

This is one of the finest plant novelties offered in recent years. The flowers are double and from 4 to 5 inches in diameter. Color a clear, rich pink with a small, deep crimson center, an entirely new and most beautiful shade. 2½-inch pot plants, per dozen, $1.50; per 100, $10.00. March.

AGERATUM STELLA GURNEY.

The finest of all Ageratums, planted outside attains height of 6 to 8 inches, bushy, compact growth, early and continuous bloomer throughout the entire summer. Color is the deepest blue. Admired by all who saw it at our greenhouses. Per dozen, $1.25; per 100, $8.00. March.

Large clumps, ready to divide, $5 per 100 or 25 for $1.50 by express. Smaller ones by mail prepaid, same price. A few hundred EXTRA LARGE CLUMPS, $10 per 100, $1.50 for 12.

ASPARAGUS SPRENGERI 2½-inch, fine, $4.00 per 100; 3½-inch $7.00 per 100.

A BARGAIN. Fine 6-inch pots, will give lots of green, 25 for $5.00; 12 for $2.50.

ASPARAGUS PLUMOSUS NANUS, $5.00 per 100; 25 at 100 rate.

THE LACE FERN, POLYSTICHUM PROLIFERUM.

Some say it's finer than "Boston Fern." Perfectly hardy; grows well under benches; fronds bring $1 per 12, last over one month in water. Young plants, 50c per 12, mailed; $4 per 100. Larger, $1 per 12 or $8 per 100, express.

THE ORANGE VIOLET. (Browallia Jamesoni). Fine plants 3½-inch pots $1.25 per 12, express.

THE GENUINE EDELWEISS OR SNOW FLOWER.

There is a world of poetry connected with this charming flower, to obtain which many travelers have sacrificed their lives. It blooms right through the snow and when cut lasts for years. Fine as a souvenir to your customers. 10 for $1, 25 for $2, mailed free. Send for sample flower.

Kift's Adjustable Hanging Flower Vase and Plant Holder.

Ornamental, practical and useful; just the thing for short-stemmed flowers such as violets, orchids, valley, etc. Indispensable for show window and house decorations. The clasps are adjustable and can be placed in any position or angle. The fixture is made of solid brass, heavily nickel-plated and is practically indestructible. A larger size for five to six-inch potted plants, such as Adiantum Farleyense, Cyclamens, etc., shows these plants to the best possible advantage.

Kift's Individual Cut Flower Vase...

A pointed glass tube fitted with a perforated rubber cap, through which the stem of the flower is placed. The cap holds the vase and the flower firmly together and prevents the escape of water in the tube, no matter at what angle it is placed. Useful for keeping flowers when sprayed on dinner tables, for basket handles, for orchid sprays which can be inserted in pots of Farleyense, etc., and is useful for hosts of decorative effects.

ENCOURAGING OUTLOOK FOR THE HOLIDAYS.—STOCK IS SCARCE.—CHRYSANTHEMUMS DISAPPEAR.—GREENS IN GROCERIES.—JOTTINGS.

The outlook is for a good Christmas trade, as cold weather has set in and people will now appreciate blooming plants and cut flowers. Flowers will be scarce, but not more than in former years. Beauties and violets will be the especially short items. Roses and carnations are of good quality. Bulbous stock is plentiful. Chrysanthemums are all gone and none could be had after Thanksgiving. In blooming plants the florists are well stocked with azaleas, primulas, and poinsettias. The latter sell well if grown with three to four flowers to a plant. Holly and green are remarkably cheap and the grocery stores are full of them, to the disadvantage of the florist; in fact, it is hardly worth while for a florist to handle them.

C. H. Frey and E. Eider, of Lincoln, were recent visitors. They report a good business and are shipping in some fine carnations and violets.

The Douglas County Agricultural Society has elected E C. Erfling a member of the board of directors. GRIPPE.

ST. PETER MINN.—The new 100-foot greenhouse at the state hospital is completed. The structure is valued at $2,500 and was built by the labor of the interested patients.

Some Hints About the Salesroom.

How to secure new customers and how to retain their patronage afterwards is the first consideration with any tradesman dealing direct with the public. The florist, especially, from the nature of his business, can do much to make his place inviting and the memory of a first visit there so pleasant that the caller will be influenced to come again, or he can, by careless neglect of his opportunities, as readily produce an effect directly the reverse.

What a pity it is, when we consider the possibilities our business affords for attractive embellishment of the salesroom, that in so many instances we find this place turned into a rough workroom, where possibly the first feature to catch the eye of a customer may be the unavoidable details of preparation for the construction of some grewsome funeral design. Remember that constant familiarity with anything, however revolting it may be, soon hardens a human being so that sentiment is calloused; that the physician or the undertaker can enjoy peaceful sleep or relish a good meal after attending to duties that would spoil the appetite and sleep of the ordinary mortal for a week; so, also, the florist, by reason of long association, can turn from the construction of a casket cover to a bridal bouquet with entire equanimity, while over his head hang in company the equally unsympathetic wire forms for occasions of all kinds. But how about the customer, whose days are not spent in constant companionship with these reminders of the saddest events in life? He wants, perhaps, a "true lovers' knot" as a token of joy over some happy engagement; think you he looks on with easy composure as he sees you pull down the wire form from between a broken heart and a vacant chair or listens without a shiver as, picking up the very roses you have prepared for a funeral piece, you describe to him their adaptability for that lovers' knot?

I often think that we are all wrong in giving such prominence to the funeral uses of our flowers, in associating with such scenes so constantly the sweetest of the products of our greenhouses that their very odor in the dwelling house is so distressingly reminiscent to the sensitive inmates as to be almost unbearable. It cannot be denied that funeral work is one of the main supports of our business and the largest source of revenue to many country florists, but who shall say that the use of flowers for other and more joyous occasions would not have been increased manifold were it not for this unsavory association of our business with the sorrowful side of life?

While we cannot, if we would, discourage the use of flowers to deck the dead, we can do much to keep this feature in the background, so that it will not intrude itself unnecessarily upon the public. It is not too much to say that all funeral designs should be made in secluded workrooms. And not only funeral work, but cheap design work of any kind, such as every florist is called upon to put up more or less frequently, and which does him no credit. You explain to your nice customer, when you see his look of suspicious disapproval: "Oh, this is just a cheap order; they won't pay anything for it and it uses up my rubbish," but nevertheless you and your business have fallen a point in that man's estimation. By all means make up this kind of work in the cellar or back room, anywhere out of sight. And if you will make all your design work, whether good or bad, in the same place, where the materials can be handled with freedom and the litter of wire clippings, scraps of moss, stems and butts of flowers and splashing of water can do no harm, it will be another step in the right direction. Your salesroom can then be easily kept in such a condition of dainty attractiveness that the passer cannot get by without looking in, and eventually stepping in, and it will not be long before he will make a purchase instead of waiting until some member of his family dies and then come reluctantly on a disagreeable errand.

Other things being equal, it is certain that the establishment where the greatest cleanliness, cheeriness and taste are displayed will in due time get the lion's share of the business in the neighborhood.

Chrysanthemums in Japan.

An American lady in Tokio, Japan, has sent to her friends in this country a very entertaining account of the home of the chrysanthemum, its people and their customs. Among other matters reference is made to our favorite autumn flower, and we are indebted to E. G. Hill, of Richmond, Ind., for permission to print therefrom the following descriptions of a chrysanthemum exhibition and one of the finest private collections of these plants in Japan:

"Last Wednesday we went to Dangozaka to see the famous chrysanthemum show. Dangozaka is a park in the city, about six miles from here, full of interesting temples, trees, etc., but the most attractive thing at present is the street. All along down this lane or street are side shows, admission to which costs five cents, and there one finds all sorts of legendary history carried out in chrysanthemums. There are wire forms, for instance, of a man, woman, boat, house, etc., and the chrysanthemums are trained from the beginning over these wire forms. The roots being inside, the dress, for example, of a woman, sleeves, sash and all, are one mass of color, and at a distance look like changeable silk. Very small kinds are used, but in all colors imaginable. The forms are all life size. For instance, one very fine figure was that of a Japanese warrior slaying a mammoth dragon, all in flowers except the face and hands, which were of wax. In one place they have represented the famous waterfall at Nikko all in white chrysanthemums, and the spray and waves at the foot of the fall are almost perfect. Then there was a big boat, all of the flowers, in big waves, with life-size figures in it, and the whole thing, figures and all, worked by machinery. A man sat down and told the history of all these things. All I can say about it is very far short of the reality. No one can form any idea of the real ingenuity of these people, unless one really sees it. The individual flower they do not care for; it is the way they can train them that receives their admiration."

Referring to the gardens of Count Okama the writer continues: "The entrance to the grounds is beautiful, such hedges, such trees were never trained in America, such picturesqueness was never seen out of Japan. I cannot go into detail, but will try to tell about the chrysanthemums. The plants are in sheds of a sort made of bamboo and immaculately clean and tidy. There were six sheds altogether, one devoted to wild chrysanthemums entirely, one to those that are trained up to bear one flower only, but not one kind anywhere near equals those we have seen in Mr. Hill's greenhouses. Count Okama's secretary says they care least for that part of the cultivation of these plants. Each flower is on a wire frame and the petals all combed out on the frame. In one shed were three plants, a white ragged kind and two red ragged ones; they are trained in a wire frame, and one plant has over a thousand blooms, each bloom is at the end of a single stalk, and all this from a single root. It is fully fifteen feet across. In fact, a short distance off it looks like one mammoth bouquet of flowers, or rather like one big flower. The flowers themselves all are about the size of the palm of the hand. Another shed has each plant trained to fourteen blooms arranged as a picture; they are rare kinds and the plants are raised in back and in diagonal rows. It is a beautiful sight and very pleasing after one gets used to the conventional way. Another house has one big plant and from a single root there are forty kinds and colors of flowers, all having been grafted upon the single root. It is marvelous and there is no sham about it, for one can see the root and trace the flowers. It looks like a huge bouquet of all colors and kinds. Then there were two immense balls at least four feet in diameter, each color in sections like an orage, with a bow knot of flowers at the bottom, all growing inside, but a solid mass of bloom on the outside."

MACON, GA.—The East Side Florists' and Gardeners' Club was recently organized here with D. B. Lumsden as president.

Superintendent John P. Cleary.

J. P. Cleary is the nominee of the New York Florists' Club for superintendent of the trade exhibition in connection with the S. A. F. convention. It goes without saying that the executive committee of the national society will endorse the selection and that the gentleman whose portrait appears herewith will officiate as superintendent of the exhibition of 1900, which promises to be the largest display of this character ever made. Mr. Cleary was born in Haverstraw, N. Y., in 1872, and his first horticultural experience was when he went into the employ of Wm. Elliott & Sons, in 1891, in the plant auction department. In the fall of 1896 he severed his connection with that house and in the following spring opened a horticultural auction house on his own account. He is popular, as his nomination for this important position testifies, and his success in his own business is the best augury for his future in the important office to which he has been assigned. The trade exhibition of 1900 is safe in the hands of John P. Cleary.

CARNATIONS.

WITH LONG ISLAND GROWERS.

On a recent search for information I made a trip to Long Island, and saw sights to gladden the heart of any carnation grower. At Dailledouze Bros'. one finds a range of houses that are just right to bring the very best out of a carnation plant and, coupled with the careful manner in which everything is grown, these houses bring out a little more than most of us manage to get.

The motto here seems to be to grow carnations just a little better than any one else does; then the three brothers get under the prices and give them a push and up they have to go. This is a method we might all practice to advantage; first have something that is worth a good price and then don't let go for less money. Most of us make a mistake in accepting whatever we can get for our product instead of establishing a price and sticking to it. We have to do this if our product comes into competition with the general stock on the market but when we have something that has practically no competition on account of its superior quality we should set our own price.

The Dailledouze brothers adhere to the bench method of growing carnations and claim that benches give them forty per cent more flowers than do the beds in one house which they have by way of experiment. This ratio may be reversed by the entire cut of the season but it certainly looks as if, in their case, benches are a matter of economy instead of an item of expense.

When it comes to varieties they prefer those with which the majority of growers make a failure; at least that would be the natural inference from the fact that they are growing Hector and Eldorado in quantity. Hector, with most growers, was simply no good, bursting its calyx and going to grass without making blooms, but here it is the finest-colored carnation on the place and quite good enough otherwise to place it in the special class. Eldorado shows very little rust and the stems and flowers are as nearly perfect as one could wish. White Cloud seems to be made for their soil and treatment and G. H. Crane is also quite a success, excepting that a few are being lost by stem rot. Mrs. Bradt is found very productive and gives these growers longer stems than are usual with this variety. Triumph, my favorite pink up to this season, is also well done and while those on the benches may have produced more flowers than those in the solid beds, the latter were far the finer flowers and looked quite as good as the crack pinks at last season's shows.

A number of seedlings are on trial here and, judging from their No. 666, one must expect some good things from this place in the near future, for that variety was bringing $25 per hundred flowers at the time of my visit and this was to be doubled for Christmas. The variety seems, in addition to its extreme size, to have good habit in every particular and also seems quite free in bloom, so that it gives promise of becoming a standard sort when they are ready to let it go. They are also growing J. Whitcomb Riley successfully, a lightly penciled fancy which seems to have a place in the interjacence between the whites and Mrs. Bradt. Cerise Queen is one of their pets; it has not been taken up by the general line of growers and this is, perhaps, one of the reasons why so many of them are found on their place.

After my departure from the Dailledouze establishment my next stop was at Queens, the Cottage Gardens. Here are more model houses and in addition to thorough construction there is automatic ventilation and sub-irrigation, which, with the management given by Mr. Ward, make carnations a splendid success at this place also. To enumerate varieties here would take up too much space, but we find the same results with White Cloud and G. H. Crane as at Flatbush, with the latter grown largely. As seen growing here Crane may fall a few points short of being the ideal scarlet but it certainly is ahead of everything in its class. Gen. Maceo and Gen. Gomez are, of course, grown in quantity and the amount of bloom and buds on the plants warrants the assertion that they are profitable sorts.

The seedling houses here are perhaps the greatest attraction to the carnation grower, as in them are to be found several which give promise of being the long-wanted, model white, some scarlets that promise to outclass all of the present day scarlets, other colors without end of combination, and the grandest crimson it has been my pleasure to look upon. This variety has been named Governor Roosevelt and is head and shoulders above all competitors. In color and habit it seems just right, in size and form a little ahead of most carnations, with stem and calyx that are perfect. Coupled with all these good points is the fact that it is early in coming, looks as if it might be perfectly continuous and quite as free blooming as any other variety. Unfortunately the stock will not be on the market for a few years, but it is not likely, even with the rapid strides in carnations, to be outclassed for some time to come.

Mr. Ward, like the Dailledouze brothers, believes in growing first-class flowers and then demanding first-class prices for them, and in these two points lies the main secret of their business success. In attempting to follow their lead, however, it is well to bear in mind that the first thing is to have the class of flowers that are worth good prices, and to have these we must have good houses, good culture and good varieties.

STEM ROT.

Messrs. Card and Adams, of the Rhode Island Experiment Station, have been making quite extensive experiments in this little understood disease, which at the present time has perhaps more terrors for the carnation grower than any of the other numerous ills to which the plant is subject. The experiments were designed to show the influence of clean sand versus old sand for propagating, vigorous as against diseased cuttings, and manure versus chemical fertilizers, as influencing the prevalence of disease. Tests were also made of the use of Bordeaux mixture. The experiments were begun in the spring of 1899, some 1500 cuttings of the variety Flora Hill being used. A part of these were obtained from plants among which stem rot had been very prevalent, while the others were from healthy stock.

Although the experiments have not progressed far enough to be regarded as conclusive, certain indications are pointed out as well worthy of note. The most marked is the great importance of using fresh sand for propagating, some of the lots propagated in old sand showing losses of over one-half from stem rot. It is unsafe to dip the cuttings in Bordeaux mixture, and no special benefits seem to result from it. The experiments do not show any increase of the disease in soil fertilized with stable manure.

One of the fungi causing the disease is thought to be the same as that causing the rot of sugar beets and the damping off in other plants. It would seem safer, therefore, to avoid soil in which beets have been grown and not to use sand in which cuttings of any kind have been rooted, that is, use a new, clean lot of sand for each lot of cuttings.

The conclusions in regard to propagating sand are in accord with the practice of many of our best commercial growers and should be heeded by all. It is to be hoped that these gentlemen may be able to continue and complete their experiments.

Officers of the New York Florists' Club.

We take pleasure in presenting herewith portraits of the gentlemen whom the New York Florists' Club has selected as its standard bearers for the important year of 1900. Many of our readers are already well acquainted with them personally and many more will be before the close of the year of the great convention in the metropolis.

Patrick O'Mara, president-elect, is the well-known business manager of the plant department of Peter Henderson & Co. Mr. O'Mara is 41 years of age, having been born in County Tipperary, Ireland, October 16, 1858. At the age of eight years he came to this country and when eleven years old went to work for Peter Henderson, at first only during the busy spring season and three years later as a regular employe. From 1883 to 1887 he traveled for the firm and in 1888 Peter Henderson made him his assistant in office work. At Mr. Henderson's death he assumed the position he now fills. Peter Henderson's good judgment in the selection of men for special advancement in his employ was never better demonstrated than in the case of Mr. O'Mara. His manliness, fidelity and sound common-sense have commanded for him the respect and love of his business associates, and his keen wit, his sagacity and diplomacy make him a popular companion. It would be impossible to find in the ranks of the New York club a man combining in greater degree the requisites of a safe and popular leader and in his selection the success of the greatest year in the club's history is assured beyond question.

A. Herrington, the vice-president-elect, has been in America but four years, having come from England in December, 1895, immediately thereafter assuming the position which he still holds of superintendent of the estate of H. McK. Twombly, at Madison, N. J. His gardening career began in 1878, when he worked for four years under his father. Later he spent four years in the Royal Horticultural Society's gardens at Chiswick and two years superintending the laying out of the estate of William Robinson. After a term of four years in charge of Shrubland Park Gardens, at Ipswich, he returned to Mr. Robinson and in addition to his gardening work was engaged on the staff of The Garden. That Mr. Herrington has in the brief period of his sojourn here made himself so well and favorably known as to be selected for so important an official position speaks sufficiently for his abilities. In placing him where they have, the New York club has gone far toward securing the cordial co-operation of the private gardener element in this section.

Messrs. John Young and C. B. Weathered have held the positions of secretary and treasurer, respectively, for many years and so faithful have they proved that their re-election each year is practically unanimous. Our readers are thoroughly familiar with their features and their characteristics through many introductions in the past. In work or recreation the visitors to New York next summer will find them "jolly good fellows."

Philadelphia.

MR. WATSON HAS A FLING AT HIS FRIENDS. —THE MATTER OF PRICES.—CRAWFORD'S AUTOMOBILE BEATS THE WONDERS OF OLD.—DAVID SCOTT REFUTES A CALUMNY. —MAULE GETS HIS CATALOGUE OFF TO THE SOUTH.—MICHELL AND THE PROOF SHEETS.—SEEDSMEN PUSHING GREENS IN LOCAL DAILIES.—RETAILERS ARE CHEERFUL.—CAMELLIAS IN FAVOR.—MAKING A MOUNTAIN OUT OF A MOLE HILL.—A MATTER OF FREE ADVERTISING.—THE QUESTION OF WHAT'S IN A NAME.

Esteemed reader, you will get no prices from Philadelphia this week, for two reasons—first, because my friend Robert is too busy to write his usual budget of news and gossip, and, second, because the present scribe don't know. For that matter what he don't know would fill a book, but he does know that if he quotes prices too low the grower will kick, and if he quotes them too high the retailer will kick, and if he should, by accident, get them just right, both might kick together with both feet at once, and might thus fall down and hurt themselves. So you see it's sometimes best not to know more than is good for you, as General Otis would say, and if you don't like it you can send a round robin to the editor. Prices are a delusion and a snare, anyway.

The sensation of the week is Robert Crawford's new automobile. It's a dandy. Battles, with his prancing grays, and Habermehl, with his proud Kentuckians and plate glass, sink into comparative insignificance before this new wonder. Robert is nothing if not up-to-date, and this new proof of his enterprise only emphasizes the claim. The wooden elephant inside the walls of ancient Troy or the German Emperor's war chariot were both eye-openers in their way, and we now have a faint idea of how the ancients felt when confronted with such wonders. Now, then, altogether: Hats off to the first automobile in the florist trade of Philadelphia. (Will yours truly get a pansy punch or a punch in the ribs for this send off? The latter, most likely.)

John Smith, late of Smith & Whitely, has gone up the Hudson on a holiday. He carries with him the best wishes of the trade here for his speedy recovery to renewed health. After his return to Philadelphia he will take a temporary position with Robert Craig & Son. It is understood to be his intention to get back to private gardening as soon as circumstances warrant.

According to latest reports David Scott was succeeding in getting up on time in the morning, and, far from being slow in that respect, as has been hinted, he is a shining example to the Craig forces. Perhaps the notion was engendered by the old calumny about a slow town. No, sir! We all rise with the early bird down here, that is, all those who don't work all night to catch up with the rush of business, or get out a catalogue to be ahead of New York, Buffalo or Chicago in catching the early trucker in the wilds of Florida.

Wm. Henry Maule mailed his first batch of catalogues on Thursday to the far south, where the bulbul or some other tropical sparrow is already piping the lay which tells of the advent of spring, while up here the snow ought to be covering tired nature in a mantle of purity, but isn't. If it had been I could have rounded off that sentence in a workman-like manner. Indeed, so far from it that I'm not at all surprised as I look up from my desk and see a dandelion blossom in the button-hole of Secretary Stewart, who has just dropped in. The said blossom was one of many that went not by the calendar in their desire to adorn the by-ways of suburban Philadelphia and show carping strangers how smart and go-ahead everything was in these parts.

Speaking of catalogues reminds me that I called on H. F. Michell the other day, and he wore a worried and care-worn look which spelled weary night vigils over refractory proof sheets. I've been there myself and know something of what that means. In the meantime the Christmas trade in plants and greens is lively, but there is probably not a great deal of money in it, as the newspapers charge "like sixty" for space, which now-a-days seems to be considered indispensable in running this line. Johnson & Stokes and Landreth are two other seed houses, both pushing the plant trade this year, the former especially having put up a lively campaign in the daily papers and street cars. Their ads are bright and catchy and ought to bring them lots of trade.

All the retail florists are apparently cheerful over this year's holiday prospects and the growers are already counting their chickens. All kinds of stock have sold well and there is very little surplus. John Westcott was as chipper as you please on Tuesday. Sales had been exceptionally good and, although prices had not advanced in comparison with other lines, the clean-up really was equivalent to a twenty per cent advance in his estimation. Robert Craig & Son had a cheerful tale to tell, also—everything cleaned up at good figures—and this is the general index of the state of trade here among the growers.

Sweet seventeen is bubbling over the white camellia which Battles has a little corner on this season and is getting about as much out of as if it were the newest of the new in flowers—and to the rising generation I suppose the camellia is as much of a rarity as if it had just "arrove" in this land of Liberty or Death—I mean Liberty or Gruss an Teplitz, of course. By the way, Messrs. Scott and Asmus need not be so scared about Death—I mean Gruss an Teplitz—it looks to me like "much ado about nothing," and half of the protestations would have been quite sufficient to squelch effectually the miserable spuriosity. But then what a glorious chance for some free advertising! I've succumbed to that temptation occasionally myself, so I suppose I should not throw stones. One can see the effect of the Galvin-Lawson crusade in this and other things. For instance, here's friend Dailledouze working the Associated Press to this effect:

NEW YORK, Dec. 16.—A new carnation grown for the purpose of rivaling the famous "$30,000 Lawson Pink," was put on exhibition in this city yesterday. It was grown by Dailledouze Bros., of Flatbush, for J. Fleischman, florist, who now has it on exhibition. The experimentation, which has taken up a year, was intended to produce a pink bloom, but the unexpected result was a white carnation striped with cerise, a combination more highly regarded by florists than the solid pink. The flower is very stiff-stemmed, has a peculiarly curly foliage, and has that fluffiness of blossom so much sought for, and produced, in the ordinary carnation, by artificial loosening and wiring. It is said that this carnation will last for from eight to ten days, and that it opens out as it grows older, instead of closing as do other flowers of the species. The present exhibit of sixty odd flowers is the first considerable output of the new plant

I suppose that now that P. O'Mara is proudly walking the quarter-deck of the New York Florists' Club he will have no time to be interested in "what's in a name." But if this should happen to catch his eye he can ring "half speed" for a minute while he reads the following extract from the Horticultural Advertiser, of Nottingham, England:

"Whatever our relative merits as cultivators may be, there is no question that our cousins over the water beat us in finding popular titles for their wares to catch the public eye. We are all pretty familiar with the old Erica gracilis, but we do not think it has occurred to any one here to attract the crowd by labeling a batch of it as "Heather from South Africa."

And just think how that canny and versatile Scot, Wm. Falconer, has developed since he left the sacred precincts of Picadilly to enable him to do that labeling that so excites the admiration of his erstwhile English compeers. And, for the matter of that, see how the said "W. F." has developed from his nomenclature committee days, when he was after us with a redhot poker for little things like Ball of Snow and Celandine poppies!

I hope Robert will be still busy this day week. I haven't got a whack at half the men and things this column opens to me and to be bottled up until next Easter will really be a very serious matter for yours truly. G. C. WATSON.

MORE LIKE MAY-DAY THAN CHRISTMAS.—CUT FLOWERS SHOW UNMISTAKABLE SIGNS OF AGE.—MAY BE A GLUT OF OLD STOCK.—FRESH FLOWERS IN DEMAND.—THE HOLLY SITUATION.—VARIOUS JOTTINGS.—VISITORS.

New York is at sea so far as the cut flower business is concerned. The mild, May-like conditions prevailing are so unusual at this season that all past records fail to give any precedent on which to base action regarding the approaching Christmas. But when this report has reached the eye of the reader Christmas will be practically over and its story indelibly written, so further consideration of present conditions might as well be dropped. The florists' windows are fairly ablaze with holly or ilex, ribbons and red immortelles, poinsettias, ardisias, solanums and azaleas, with a generous contrast in white lilies and heaths. Enormous quantities of green festooning have been used in exterior decoration this year on stores and buildings of all classes giving, with the many spruce trees, a very green and cheerful aspect to the thoroughfares.

Holly, up to date, has proved to be only fair in quality and moderate in quantity received. Really good holly is scarce. It brings readily $3 50 to $5 per case in open market and it would not be surprising if it should jump to $6 before the end. At the same time there is holly, so-called, on the docks that can be bought for a shilling a case and it would be high even at that. No domestic mistletoe is seen anywhere in this market. One hundred cases of French mistletoe sold at auction on the dock at $2.37 per case; $10 per case seems to be the prevailing figure to buyers and it is none too good at that.

The most noticeable thing in the cut flower market is the scarcity of first-class, fresh, bright stock and the abundance of faded material, showing unmistakable indications of storage. The warm weather has made the stock short-lived and it is brought in apparently because it is impossible to hold it till Saturday. Judging from present facts it looks rather dubious for the flower market, at the finish, on this account. Should a wintry spell come just in the "nick of time" the result may be all right, but as yet there is no sign of such a change and wholesalers are fairly trembling at the prospect of an overwhelming avalanche of roses, carnations and violets of more or less uncertain age. Fresh-cut material in the higher grades will go all right, however, all agree, and shippers of that kind need have no fear for the outcome.

Frank Traendly has been ill with acute laryngitis for a week but hopes to be out in season to attend to the holiday business.

James Weir, Jr., is going about on crutches, nursing a broken leg.

Roman hyacinths and narcissi are overstocked badly at all wholesale places.

ALL ATTENTION CENTERED UPON THE CHRISTMAS TRADE.—WEATHER A GREAT FACTOR. — PLANT DEALERS CLEANED OUT.—EDGAR'S BEGONIA TAKES THE LEAD.—AZALEAS ARE FINE —ANOTHER PLANT OF COMMERCIAL VALUE.—CULTURAL METHOD OF ITS DISCOVERER.—MUCH HOLLY, BUT MOSTLY RUBBISH.

At present all eyes and all thoughts are turned toward the close of the week and Christmas prices and prospects for trade are the main topics of conversation and speculation. A warm, September-like December, such as we are now enjoying, is a new experience, and the views expressed regarding its ultimate effect on the product for the holidays vary greatly, so that ideas as to values of leading cut flower specialties are widely different. Regardless of whether crops are off or on, it is argued by the old heads that unless a sudden change to cold and dark weather intervenes, we can depend upon the warm sun to bring out all the stock the market will stand. A flurry was created in the American Beauty camp last week by an organized effort on the part of local growers and wholesalers handling this rose to advance its price. As usual, the retailers put up a vigorous protest and are said to have succeeded in supplying themselves at cut rates through the kindly medium of Philadelphia wholesale sources, so the upward movement received a somewhat rude repulse for the time being and the manipulators are not exactly in love with this practical demonstration of brotherly love toward the poor retailers of the Hub.

The plant dealers in this section are practically sold out on all desirable Christmas things. Local growers are, indeed, far from supplying the demand for flowering plants and a great many plants are seen in the retailers' windows that bear the ear-marks of New York or Philadelphia growers. The leading home-grown specialty is naturally Gloire de Lorraine begonia, in which Mr. Edgar takes the lead, there being, other than his, none grown here, commercially, worth mentioning. The demand for this plant is very widespread, Mr. Edgar having filled orders as far west as Montana. He finds a fine sale for small poinsettias in pans this year. Azaleas are in remarkably fine condition for Christmas, owing to the warm weather. For an early red azalea Mr. Edgar prefers Pauline Mardner to Simon Mardner as being more even in its blooming and a little more pleasing in color. He is trying some pots of lily of the valley, but as to their reception by the public it is impossible to tell till after Christmas, the retailers declining to stock up, in advance, on white flowering plants for the holiday season. Warren Ewell is elated over the remarkable demand he has experienced for azaleas, primroses and Jerusalem cherries, on all of which he is completely sold out, and Thos. W. Dee reports equal success on cyclamens and primroses, which have been called for as fast as they could be induced to unfold their blooms. Bock, Foster and others making a specialty of ferns or palms all tell of unprecedented prosperity in their line.

George McWilliam, who grew the plants of Luculia gratissima, illustrated in this journal some time ago, exhibited a specimen, bearing thirty-six flower heads, at Horticultural Hall on December 16, for which he was awarded a certificate of merit This plant was three years old, but Mr. McWilliam asserts that fine plants in 4 to 6-inch pots and bearing from two to a dozen heads of bloom may be had for Christmas from cuttings struck the previous season. We are indebted to the private gardeners for having introduced to our attention many plants valuable to the commercial florist, and it would seem that this was another instance where the commercial plant grower cannot go wrong by following the lead of the private gardener, for the lovely pink blossoms and delicious fragrance will surely make Luculia gratissima popular. Mr. McWilliam's cultural rules are very simple. The flowering wood makes good cuttings and the hard wood roots as well as any. He says it is unnecessary to waste wood in taking two-eyed cuttings, as one-eyed cuttings are just as good. They are rooted in the same place and with the same general treatment as carnations, and are watered overhead twice a day while in the cutting bed. They are potted in light sandy loam and about June 1 are planted out in the garden in a location that azaleas would do well in. About last of August they are lifted and potted moderately hard. If potted too late they do not set buds well, and after buds are set a temperature of 50° to 60° is indispensable, otherwise they are apt to drop the bud. Mr. McWilliam has no stock to dispose of, so it will be useless to write to him for any. His calanthes are in for Christmas, as usual, and are finer than ever before.

Holly sells well enough, but even the street fakir demands the privilege of peeping into corners of the case before he will buy it, so rank is some of the stuff sent here by the shippers or by some of the dealers who are trying to supply this market from a distance. Local dealers are obliged to inspect every case before sending it off to their country customers and it is becoming more of a problem every year to find sources of supply that can be depended upon as uniform in quality and honestly packed. Despite the insistence of the freight lines upon prepaid or guaranteed charges, which it was hoped would keep most of the tramp stuff out of the northern market, it is a fact that the docks and market places are obstructed with huge quantities of holly which is being sold in single case lots at figures lower than our wholesalers can buy in quantity, but as a rule the stuff is the veriest rubbish.

The closing meeting of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society for 1899 was held December 16, when final reports of the various working committees were presented. The committee on gardens awarded the Hunnewell triennial premium for the best laid out and planted estate of not less than three acres to A. F. Estabrook. First prize for house of trained chrysanthemums went to Mrs. B. P. Cheney, for benched chrysanthemums to Chas. Pfaff, for house of carnations to F. A. Blake, for house of roses to Waban Conservatories, and house of tomatoes to Wm. Nicholson. This committee visited Waban Conservatories last week.

E. M. Wood starts this week for a ten days' vacation on a yachting trip in southern waters and will be ready for hard work as president of the S. A. F. on his return. Before going he concluded a contract with the Lord & Burnham Co. for the erection of two rose houses, each 700 feet in length.

The Gypsy Moth Commission will ask the legislature for another appropriation of $200,000 for continuing the war against this pest during the coming spring.

Pansies are blooming in many of the gardens and strawberry blossoms in the warm nooks in the woods are occasionally found.

WEEK STARTS WITH A CALM —RUSH BEGINS ON FRIDAY.—PROSPECTS FOR SUFFICIENT SUPPLIES.—BEAUTIES A GREAT SCARCITY. —BULBOUS STOCK TO SPARE.—SIGNS OF PICKLED ROSES.—REINBERG BROTHERS DISSOLVE THEIR SELLING RELATIONS.—WITTBOLD BUSINESS INCORPORATED.—WINTER HAS A SIEGE.—LAWSON TO BE LARGELY GROWN.— TOWN FULL OF HOLLY.—GOOD CARNATIONS FROM INDIANA.—VARIOUS JOTTINGS.

The first of the week was very quiet in this market, there being little local trade and no great pressure of shipping business. However, stock was very short and prices were inflexible, in fact advancing day by day until the Christmas scale was reached. Some long distance shipping orders went out on Wednesday and more on Thursday, but the rush did not begin until Friday afternoon. It promises to hold through Sunday. As the days have succeeded each other the prospects for supply have improved until on Friday afternoon it looked as though there would be enough of everything to go around except of American Beauty; of these there are not one-third what are asked for at prevailing rates. Meteors are another item which may run short. Of other roses, particularly Bride, there will probably be a sufficiency. It is to be regretted that many growers have resorted to the old practice of holding back their cut. That they have done this is shown by many consignments which came in Tuesday and Wednesday simply because they would not stand another twenty-four hours. Of course such stock was well sold at 3 cents on days that the best fresh blooms brought 20 cents; they would have easily averaged 8 cents if shipped when cut. The supply of carnations seems to be adequate for all advance orders and of violets there was a sufficient supply up to Friday night. Of bulbous stock there is a decided surplus. Romans, Paper Whites and lily of the valley are all too plentiful and are well sold at prices prevailing last week.

With the new year George and Peter Reinberg will sever the relations by which they have marketed their output for the past eight years. Their great ranges of glass at Summerdale have always been conducted independently of each other, the partnership only relating to the sale of the stock. The old quarters at 51 Wabash avenue had become too small for both brothers and, as intimated in last week's issue, George Reinberg has purchased the Amling lease and fixtures and will open across the hall from his brother, who will remain in the old quarters. Archie C. Spencer, who has managed the sale of the product of the Summerdale establishments, which have a combined glass area of 800,000 square feet, will remain in charge for Peter Reinberg, and Robert Northam, for some time one of Mr. Spencer's assistants, will attend to the management of the new establishment.

The George Wittbold Company has been incorporated with a capital stock of $48,000 and the stockholders and directors, Mr. Wittbold and his five sons, have elected George Wittbold president and Louis Wittbold secretary and treasurer. This move was the method adopted by Mr Wittbold to admit his sons to a share in the business. He retains the controlling interest. The young men have for some years borne the cares of the big trade which their house enjoys and this recognition of their services cannot but add to the prestige of the rapidly growing establishment.

S. Blair Winter, who figured in the wholesale market up to last May, has been confined to his couch since August 25 and since that date has undergone five severe surgical operations. He is now reported on the road to his usual health. Mr. Winter is a nephew of J. I. Blair, the multi-millionaire New Jersey railroad magnate who died last week.

All the local growers are going to plant a few Mrs. Lawson carnations for next year and several of the larger ones are going in to the extent of a few thousands. Lange has had the cut blooms from the east in his window this week but they have hardly attracted the attention which they did last season.

State street has been full of holly this week and the overflow has extended to the limits of the town. It is a mystery where all the stuff comes from and a greater problem where it all goes. Most of it was poor enough to be within the reach of all.

Some of the finest carnations which have ever come to this market are the White Cloud which Mrs. Graves is sending up from Richmond, Ind. Her pink seedling, Dorothy, is also good enough to command the top price at Amling's.

Mrs. Emily Dunham, mother of Mrs. A. L. Vaughan, died last Saturday morning at her residence, 305 Campbell avenue, and was interred Monday at Forest Home cemetery.

Kennicott Bros. Co. received thirty-one dozen poinsettias on Thursday and the buyers took all but three dozen on sight at $4 per dozen. The rest went quickly at 20 cents each.

A. C. Kohlbrand, having completed his education in wholesaling at Kennicotts', has taken up retailing at T. D. Mosconesotes, in the Masonic Temple.

Klehm's Nurseries are sending in some very good Papa Gontier roses, which are well received as a break in the usual diet.

J. B. Deamud received 1500 orchids Wednesday, said to be the largest shipment ever made to this city.

The unexpected announcement of the death of Charles Held came on Wednesday.

O. P. Bassett moved into his new home at Hinsdale during the week.

Visitor: Mr. Underwood, of Underwood Bros., Columbus, Ohio.

MEETING OF THE CLUB.—PREMIUMS ORDERED PAID.—A EUCHRE PARTY.—AN EXHIBITION.—WEBER ENTERTAINS.—STATE OF THE CHRISTMAS MARKET.

The Florists' Club held its monthly meeting December 14. The attendance was rather slim. The show committee presented a preliminary report and was given until the January meeting for a final statement. The show premiums were ordered paid in full. A euchre party will be given some time in February and the money will go to help pay the show prizes. The president appointed John Kunz, F. C. Weber and J. J. Beneke to help the trustees in arranging the affair. Resolutions were offered expelling a member, but action was deferred until the next meeting. At the next meeting, on the afternoon of January 11, a carnation exhibition will be held. Chas. Connon, Sr., was proposed for membership and Mr. Kruse was elected to the society.

Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Weber entertained at euchre last Saturday night, only florists and their families being present. Miss Meinhardt, Mrs. Kunz and Mrs. Meinhardt won the ladies prizes and John Young and Carl Beyer won first and second prizes among the gentlemen. C. C. Sanders won the booby prize. Refreshments were served and John Kunz, Miss Lulu Beneke and Herman Weber contributed to the entertainment of the guests.

The cut flower market was rather dull just before the holiday rush. The commission men gave out their Christmas prices to-day. American Beauties of the first choice will be very scarce at from $12 to $15 per dozen. Other roses will range from $10 to $20 per hundred. Carnations, fancy, will be $8 and common $4 and $5 per hundred. Bulb stock will be plentiful and smilax and asparagus will remain at the old price.

PLEASING PROSPECT FOR CHRISTMAS.—FAIR SUPPLIES OF STOCK IN SIGHT.—CARNATIONS THE PRINCIPAL SHORTAGE.—AGREEMENT TO REFUSE ALL DONATIONS.—OTHER NOTES.

Up to the hour of writing every indication is for an excellent Christmas trade. Roses will be in fair supply but carnations are scarce. Violets we hope will be equal to the demand. Bulbous stock will be plentiful. Plants, it seems, will again be in favor, especially palms, poinsettias and azaleas. Trade has not been heavy the past week but the presence in our city of Admiral Sampson and Capt. Chadwick gave one of our stores a good order. One of the best things gotten up for the occasion was a center piece of poinsettias.

Continued pressure has at last caused the worm to turn and the local florists all have reluctantly agreed to make no more donations to societies or charities. They have signed an iron-clad agreement which provides for a forfeit of $25 for every violation of the compact. The drain had grown to be a severe one.

S. A. Anderson has put in a new ice box which is a great improvement to his already pretty store. W. A.

PROSPECTS FOR A BIG BUSINESS.—SHORTAGE OF STOCK WILL HURT.—COMPLAINTS OF PRICES.—VISITORS FROM CINCINNATI.—THIRTEEN MEN HAVE THIRTEEN KINDS OF FUN.—BERTERMANN AND HIS THERMOMETER.

Prospects for the holiday trade in this vicinity would be excellent if it were not for the great scarcity of cut flowers. For many years past December has not been so short of cut flowers as is the month this season, and, as the supply of blooming plants is not larger than usual, it is feared that the florists will not be able to secure their full share of the heavy Christmas trade. Some of the retailers say that growers' prices are too high to enable them to handle the goods with profit, but this opinion is not generally shared, because we have had higher Christmas prices before, when the retailers were well satisfied with their profits. The fact remains, however, that the prevailing condition gives the small grower who retails his own goods an opportunity to undersell the storemen and still make a handsome profit. Some of the former take this advantage in gaining new customers. In this city the trade in Christmas greens can no longer be considered a branch of the florist business.

The party of thirteen Cincinnati florists arrived in Indianapolis as per schedule last week and our people enjoyed an evening with them at the Walhalla Bowling Alleys. After leaving Cincinnati the discovery that thirteen were in the party caused some uneasiness. Finally they selected one man to drop by the wayside, but as he wouldn't have it, they had to take their chances. All went well until their train was pulled out of Indianapolis by engine No. 213, which proved too much of a hoodoo, causing a brakedown between here and Lafayette, which delayed their arrival in that city so much they had only about thirteen minutes to look at Dorner's large carnation plant. Jackson proved his wisdom in resisting their dumping proposition by taking all prizes in the bowling contest, his highest score being 13x13, 169.

John Bertermann spent part of the only zero night we have had comparing his pet thermometer with that of the weather bureau. He had the satisfaction of establishing the correctness of his instrument but caught a cold. H. J.

New Haven, Conn.

The prospects for the holiday trade here are very encouraging, more orders having been placed for Christmas greens than in any of the recent years. The holly this season is of exceptional quality and finds ready sale. Cut flowers will be quite plentiful, but will command very good prices. Violets are the only scarcity, but they only bring $3 per hundred for the first quality. G. H.

BUSINESS GOOD ON THE COAST.—STOCK SCARCE AND PRICES FAIR.— CHRYSANTHEMUMS INJURED BY RAIN.—THE FAVORITE VIOLET.—BATCH OF BREEZY PERSONAL JOTTINGS.—DOINGS IN THE TRADE.

Business has picked up very much lately and every one seems to be busy. Prices are very good for there is a great scarcity of first-class stock. This is particularly true of roses. Beauties are in good demand, also Brides and Bridesmaids. There were some very fine President Carnot at Pelicano's last week. There has also been quite a call for Brunners. Chrysanthemums are about over. A great many were sold on Thanksgiving day, particularly yellows and reds, the occasion being the annual football game between the University of California and Stanford University. The rains came much earlier this year than in seasons past, consequently large quantities of out-door blooms were destroyed, but the Chinese growers are still bringing in some small outside whites, chiefly used for funeral work. The weather has not been favorable for violets. Princess of Wales is the leading variety and is in good demand. The demand for Californias has fallen off considerably since other varieties have become known. Marie Louise and Swanley White enjoy a steady demand. Carnations of good quality may also be said to be in short supply, Sievers' being about the best stock to be had at present. Some very good Roman hyacinths are to be had but at the present price they are not a very profitable crop. Quite a number of cattleyas are to be seen in the different stores and seem to move fairly well.

E. W. McLellan & Co. are now permanently located on Grand avenue.

Emil Serveau spends several days each week at his ranch at Menlo Park.

Chas. C. Navlet, of San Jose, was a recent visitor, on his way to his branch store at Sacramento. Mr. Navlet says trade is good in that city.

Raymond T. Crocker has succeeded to the cut flower business of the Garden City Floral Co. at San Jose. The company, however, still conducts their nursery on Tenth street, under the management of Arthur Cann.

Tony Rossi has resigned his position with Pellicano & Co. and has entered the employ of E. W. McLellan & Co.

Joseph Carbone is now head gardener for Mrs. Kohl at San Mateo.

Podesta & Co.'s store, since its remodeling, presents a very fine appearance, the show windows being especially effective.

The Sutter Street Florist is the name of a new store a few doors off Kearny street.

Geo. Nunn is now gardener to Mrs. Franks at Burlingame.

P. O'Hearn has resigned his position as head gardener to D. O. Mills and is again growing carnations for this market.

Thos. McIntyre, gardener to C. W. Smith, of Menlo Park, and well known as a chrysanthemum grower has sustained his reputation of former years as a grower of prize blooms.

M. Schmidt is now in charge of M. Lynch's range of glass at Menlo Park.

THE CHRISTMAS RUSH IS ON.—INCREASE IN THE USE OF IMMORTELLES.—EARLY FOR CUT FLOWER BUYERS.—SCARCITY OF STOCK —MANY PLANTS.—HALLIDAY BROS. VERY BUSY.

The streets and shops are thronged with eager buyers, but business is still rather quiet among the florists at this writing. The places that do a large cemetery and funeral business report a very encouraging improvement over last year, Fred. G. Burger rating it as high as twenty-five per cent, chiefly in immortelle work, the demand running even more strongly to plain red than last year, with perhaps a spray or two of statice or something else to break the monotony. Among the dealers who handle natural flowers more exclusively and do family or party work, the improvement, if present, is not so marked, though it is hardly possible to estimate Christmas business until within a day or two of the holiday, as far as plants and cut flowers go. The supply of both seems rather short. Some very fine stock is in sight, but the quantity is anything but large. As might be imagined, prices are good and well sustained, the brisk demand taking up everything offered.

Halliday Bros. have had the largest ball decorations so far this season and are busy as bees at both stores. The window decorations on Charles street are not yet completed but promise to be elaborate in all the plate-glass fronts.

The markets have a genuine holiday appearance, with stacks of wreaths, trees, holly and wreathing everywhere, and many of the stalls have nicely grown azaleas, primulas and solanums, besides the usual assortment of palms, rubbers and ferns.

MACK.

Cleveland.

As has been previously intimated, the outlook is for a scarcity of flowers here for the holidays. The fact that, here and there among the growers, carnations were not doing as well as usual has not tended to relieve the situation so far as staple flowers are concerned. Add to this the fact that the return of prosperous times puts people in a better buying mood and the situation seems to be a better demand than usual, with less on hand to satisfy it with. There will probably be a somewhat larger supply of potted plants than has heretofore been the case. In addition to the usual stock there will be solanums, poinsettias, etc., which have not been much used in past years. Holly is plentiful and appears to be of pretty good quality. Undoubtedly, however, the usual quantity of rubbish will be dumped here sooner or later.

A.

Providence, R. I.

A ladies' night and complimentary entertainment was given by the retiring president of the Florists' and Gardeners' Club, William E. Chappell, at the hall of the society, December 14. The program was: Overture, Miss Corena Clegg; quartet, Y. M. C. A. Quartet; reading, Miss Lillian Macrae; solo, Mr. Lamson; zither, Miss Lillian Metzger; club swinging, Grace Patterson; reading, Miss Annie E. Wallace; quartet, Y. M. C. A. Quartet; piano solo, Miss Clegg; quartet, Y. M. C. A. Quartet; reading Miss Lillian Macrae; club swinging, Miss Patterson; solo Mr. Nicholas; zither, Miss Metzgar; reading, Miss Wallace; quartet, Y. M. C. A. Quartet. Mr. Chappell was assisted in receiving by several members of the club and during the evening refreshments were freely served.

The prospects are for a good Christmas trade and plenty of stock, but no surplus; for the past two weeks everything has been consumed. It looks as if the trade in green goods would be overdone as all the provision men are handling them; we may have to put in meats and canned goods to get even.

Wm. Appleton, Jr., has opened a branch store in Westminster street for the holidays and makes a good display.

Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Rennie have returned from their honeymoon.

LITTLE RHODY.

Rochester, N. Y.

Good flowers of every description are decidedly scarce and have been so ever since chrysanthemums went out of the market. Prices rule much higher than usual, and the advance is a serious drawback, reducing the profits of the retailer to a minimum. The supply of carnations is entirely inadequate, and the same may be said of violets, which are badly diseased in our section. The prospects for a Christmas supply of roses is more encouraging, but prices will be stiff. Bulbous stock is more plentiful and excellent in quality, but the demand for white is rather limited. The outlook is bright for a largely increased plant trade, and the stock of flowering plants is much larger and perhaps more varied than in former years; still our leading florists express the opinion that there is not enough in this line to supply all and that they will have to fall back on palms, though to look at the gorgeous display in their windows seems to contradict these statements. There are azaleas in variety, begonias, yellow and white Marguerites, poinsettias, ericas, primroses, one firm exhibiting a fine lot of well flowered Primula farinosa; cyclamen and blue daises, and the berried plants, such as ardisias, solanums and dwarf oranges, are represented everywhere. Palm and similar decorative plants are very plentiful, but bright flowering plants will naturally have the preference at this season, and it is possible that these will sell out cleaner than ever. The season so far has been a prosperous one all around. Even in the height of the chrysanthemum season, with the rather unfavorable warm weather, good flowers sold readily at a very fair price.

J. B. K.

Toronto.

The remarkably mild weather is not favorable to the florists' trade, but the principal dealers report that not only has business been excellent, but the indications are that the holiday trade will be exceptionally good. There is a fairly large supply of cut stock in sight, the quality of which would be somewhat improved if we could get a little more sunshine. Roses are coming in well. Some growers have kept back a small stock of chrysanthemums specially for Christmas and there will be a few good blooms on the market. Violets are scarce and prices high but the stock coming in is of excellent quality. Freesias are early and fine, carnations good but somewhat scarce. Dunlop appears to be the first on the market with some good azaleas in bloom.

GEORGE KIMBALL, Chicago manager for the Pittsburg Plate Glass Co., states that the cost of production of greenhouse glass has increased fifteen per cent in the past year, labor receiving one-half the increase.

GROWERS will bear in mind that the annual meeting and exhibition of the American Carnation Society takes place at Buffalo, February 15–16 next, and arrange accordingly. Full particulars may be had on application to Secretary Albert M. Herr, Lancaster, Pa.

WE have lately seen disastrous results from the use of a new insecticide supposed to be of the same strength as similar preparations. The manufacturers of such commodities should include with every package concise but complete directions for their use, and growers should always be careful to test a small portion of each new remedy before extensive employment.

L. B. BRAGUE.

Woodlice or Sowbugs.

In reply to several requests for information as to the best method of exterminating these pests, we cannot do better than repeat the advice already given in these columns, as follows:

"To a quart of cornmeal add enough brown sugar to sweeten, mix well together and add two tablespoonfuls of Paris green. Moisten a little with water, just so it will hold together. Place the mixture about in small quantities on or under the benches, or wherever the bugs may be."

Other remedies: "The sowbugs may be expelled by placing gas lime about their haunts. Slices of carrot poisoned with some arsenite are also said to be efficacious."

Begonia Gloire de Lorraine.

The plants when used in the dwelling-house or mansion for decoration are apt to be upset a little, and to lose a quantity of blooms from various causes. Some growers may be inclined to prune off the flowering shoots rather than have bedraggled specimens. This begonia is a winter-flowering species, however, and to cut off the flowering shoots at so early a date as this is equal to spoiling the plants as producers of cuttings. The basal shoots which spring up after the cutting back process, almost certainly will produce flower buds, and such short flower-bearing shoots can hardly be expected to withstand any detrimental influence whatever. They do not develop into sturdy and serviceable plants either. What is proved to be the better plan is to let the plants flower on and on until their strength in this direction is spent. Then cut them back, slightly rest them for a fortnight and restart them. If the old plants are to be grown on again into larger specimens, they may be shaken from the old pots and repotted. Stout cuttings, with a strong foundation from which to start, are then to be obtained. Leaf cuttings and stem cuttings produce plants of quite distinct habits. The plants from leaf cuttings are by far the most graceful, their flowers being larger, though paler, and the shoots themselves longer. From stem cuttings very bushy and floriferous plants develop, but they lack the free style of those grown from the leaf.—Gardening World.

The Matter of Prices.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—I would like to ask why the prices of flowers here in the east do not rise in proportion to the increased price demanded for merchandise which the florist has to purchase? Our prices do not rise, however, and I fail to see the reason, especially as most lines of stock are scarce here. Violets are 50 cents per 100, carnations 25 cents per dozen, with no distinction as to color or quality, and roses 50 cents to $1.00 per dozen. If anyone can see a profit in growing flowers at these prices I would like to have it figured out so as to afford six per cent on the capital invested. The above prices are retail and just the same at Christmas as at any other time excepting spring.

A Spring Show at Philadelphia.

The Pennsylvania Horticultural Society at its monthly meeting December 19, decided to hold a spring flower show, March 20, 21, 22 and 23, upon lines similar to that of last season. The committee on establishing premiums is composed of Edwin Lonsdale, W. Atlee Burpee, John G. Gardner, John Westcott, W. K. Harris and John McCleary.

Letters were read from the Department of Agriculture at Washington and the Division of Pomology, asking for photographs of Horticultural Hall and the officers of the society, to have place in the Department's exhibit at the Paris Exposition, and advising of arrangements in progress for supplementing the show there of apples of 1899 with the early fruits of 1900 in their season.

Premiums were offered by Henry F. Michell for competition at each of the monthly meetings of 1900; also at the March and November shows. Fourteen new members were elected and fourteen others were proposed for membership.

The exhibit of the meeting was of seedling orchids from George B. Wilson, West Philadelphia, Alphonse Pericat, gardener. Five of the lot were imported; one, Cypripedium G. B. Wilson, very dark and effective, was grown by the exhibitor. The judges, Edwin Lonsdale, J. D. Eisele and J. McCleary, recommended a silver medal for Cattleya Percivaliana alba, a certificate of merit for a cattleya cross, C. grandiflora and C. eldorado alba, and honorable mention for the others; also a vote of thanks for the superb display.

Officers were chosen as follows: President, James M. Rhodes, Ardmore; vice-presidents, Henry F. Michell, Robert Craig, George Goebel, M. D., Edwin Lonsdale; treasurer, Sidney W. Keith; secretary, David Rust; botanist, Thomas Meehan; entomologist, Dr. H. C. McCook, D. D.; chemist, Dr. Persifor Frazer; executive council, John Westcott, Dr. J. Cheston Morris, Moses Paxson, W. K. Harris, Chester Davis, Thomas Long and John McCleary.

Helpful Reminders.

Christmas is upon us again and it occurs to me that to the florist should its recurrence be particularly welcome, for it marks the beginning of longer days. To have flowers when sunlight is most scarce has taxed our ingenuity. Although we have the most severe weather of the season to experience during the next two months, Christmas really marks the beginning of spring to the plants in a general stock. Plants seem to know, without sun-dial or calendar, that the shortest day has passed and time for waking up has come.

The quality of your output from now until July is dependent on your judgment now. As new leaves show signs of forming, plants should be provided sufficient light, the temperature should be maintained and an increased amount of water made available as the newly formed foliage develops. Perhaps one of the greatest mistakes commonly made is to allow dormant plants to start up and make considerable foliage and new roots before they are placed on the bench where they are to grow. Every time you change the position of a plant which is making new growth you retard it. If you will notice the arrangement of leaves on a plant that has not been disturbed, you will find that they are spread out so as to secure all the light possible and, when the plant is moved, every leaf is obliged to shift its position more or less before it is in working order. Plants moved frequently or crowded can never come to maturity in a perfect condition.

Such plants as acacias, genistas, hydrangeas, lilies, geraniums, Marguerites, libonias and linums should be alloted the requisite space for perfect development and given that space at once. Now is the time to guard against the errors of crowding and frequent shifts. Take best care of your plants and your customers will take best care of you. C. B. W.

NEWS NOTES.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.—Charles L. Stanley rented a down-town store for the holidays and disposed of a good stock.

COLUMBUS, O.—Albert Knopf states that the indications are that Christmas trade will equal that of any previous year.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.—L. E. Marquisee reports the prospects rather below par, flowers being very scarce, especially carnations.

HAMILTON, CAN.—E. G. Brown, expects fair crops to meet a heavy holiday demand but says that sunshine would be appreciated.

NASHUA, N. H.—G. E. Buxton reports that his carnations are right in crop for the holidays and that other supplies are fair to meet a very brisk demand.

JERSEY CITY, N. J.—C. Soltau & Co. say that cut flowers are off crop very generally in this section because of the warm autumn. Plants have the call for Christmas.

BUTTE, MONT.—Law Bros. report that stock is scarce and that the heavy holiday trade makes prices high. There is large demand for holly. All stock is generally good.

DANVILLE, ILL.—There are nine florists, big and little, in this town and the holiday season brings them all they can do; in fact, this year it will bring too much, for roses and carnations are off crop.

SWAMPSCOTT, MASS.—E. G. Blaney, Jr., has a splendid house of callas and some fine violets. He considers Princess of Wales the money maker.

HOUSTON, TEX.—Trade is very good and Mrs N. E. Westgate voices the general opinion when she predicts an unprecedented holiday trade. Stock is plentiful. The first white frost of the season come December 16.

WEST HOBOKEN, N. J.—E. G. Asmus states that there was a strong early demand for holiday stock and that many orders were booked ahead. The weather conditions make the matter of filling them quite uncertain.

WATERTOWN, N. Y.—W. R. Skeels states that because of the past two months of cloudy weather cut flowers for Christmas are in only one-half the usual supply. There promises to be a heavy sale of both flowering and decorative plants.

MANCHESTER, N. H.—G. A. Campbell, treasurer of the Ray Brook Garden Co., reports that they were all sold out for Thanksgiving and expect to dispose of everything for the holidays, although they have a large supply, thanks to their nine new houses.

MALDEN, MASS.—E. D. Kaulbach reports trade good. He usually sells everything he can grow and buy at Christmas but says that he gets little profit out of cut flowers as the wholesale prices are so high. This year he expects stock to be scarce.

FALL RIVER, MASS.—The outlook is good for Christmas, as there is a fair supply of roses and carnations. Violets are scarce. There is a limited supply of azaleas and Roman hyacinths in pots. The call for palms and ferns is excellent, according to C. Warburton.

LOUISVILLE, KY.—F. Walker & Co. predict that this year's holiday season will be the best on record, with short supplies of flowers and high prices, American Beauties retailing ten days before Christmas at from $10 to $12 per dozen. Plants of all kinds will be in demand. Several large decorations are in sight for Christmas week.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.—Chas. Chadwick reports that holiday trade promises to be the heaviest, and at the highest prices, ever known here. Carnations and American Beauties are very scarce, other stocks in fair supply. The Grand Rapids Floral Co. has a large number of cypripediums, the only stock here. Henry Smith has a fine lot of potted plants, particularly azaleas. Crabb & Hunter are strong on lilies and violets. James Hancock, of Grand Haven, has a good stock ready.

Evan Griffiths Hughes, the inventor and manufacturer of the insecticide known as fir tree oil, died at his home in England December 2.

CHARLES HELD.

Charles Held died at his home, 920 North Campbell avenue, Chicago, on December 20, after an illness of two years' duration. For the past two months he had been at Thomasville, Ga., in hopes of recruiting his failing energy. The end came quite suddenly and his demise was caused by dropsy. Mr. Held was 45 years of age and was widely known in the trade. He was very popular and many close friends mourn with his widow and four children, three boys and a girl. The funeral will be held from the residence on Sunday afternoon, December 24.

V. EBBESON.

This former member of the firm of Rice & Co., Sparkill, N. Y., died at Liberty, N. Y., December 7, after an illness of seven months' duration. Mr. Ebbeson was a member of several secret and benevolent societies and his obsequies were with the rites of Odd Fellowship. He leaves a widow and a two-year-old child.

CHAMPAIGN, ILL.—Thos. Franks is anxious to learn of the whereabouts of his former employe, James Griffith, an Englishman about 45 years of age, who left here for parts unknown December 1.

THE AMERICAN FLORIST CO.

Salem, Mass.

At Mrs. J. M. Julyn's active preparations are being made for a large trade on pot plants. Carnations are good but off crop. Roses are good but violets poor; this I find a very general complaint throughout this section. Chrysanthemums have been a very unsatisfactory crop this season, especially as pot plants. This may be because of the extremely hot weather experienced hereabouts so late in the season and this, too, may have something to do with the present condition of the violet.

H. T. Conant & Co. and McGee, Geary & Co. are as busy as usual and report trade better than a year ago. Potted plants will be an important factor this season.

Wm. Walke is cutting some fine stock and finds an eager market for it. This is his first season and he is highly pleased so far. TAP.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

I take pleasure in announcing to you that I have this day purchased the Wholesale Cut Flower and Commission Business of G. L. Ilgenfritz & Co., No. 444 Sixth Ave., Pittsburg, Pa., and shall continue the business at the same address. I trust I shall receive from your hands the same fair treatment and patronage which you extended to the old firm, and take this measure of soliciting your patronage.

Respectfully,
JOHN B. FERGUSON.

THE SEED TRADE.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

ALEXANDER RODGERS, Pres.; ALBERT McCULLOUGH, Vice-Pres.; S. F. WILLARD, Wethersfield, Conn., Sec'y and Treas.

PEAS of the canning sorts are scarce and advancing in price.

VISITED NEW YORK: W. H. Grenell, of Pierrepont Manor, N. Y.

EUGENE SCHAETTEL sailed for Paris Thursday from New York.

FULL prices are asked for perennial grasses and Italian rye grass on the London market.

THE first general seed catalogue of 1900 reaches us from F. Barteldes & Co., of Lawrence, Kas.

VISITED CHICAGO:—S. F. Willard, of Wetherfield, Conn.; Eugene Schaettel, of Paris, France; J. H. Beagley, of Sibley, Ill.; L. L. Olds, Clinton, Wis.

CONTRACT prices for peas and beans for crop 1900 are not yet generally fixed, but growers are expecting some advance to cover present value of seed stocks.

A NEW seed growing establishment has been started at Nimes, France, under the name of Jacques Hasslach, trading wholesale in vegetables and flower seeds, especially phlox, onion and cauliflower. J. Hasslach is well known in the seed trade, having been fifteen years with Jacques Rolland, of Nimes.

California Notes.

Waldo Rohnert, the popular young seed grower of Gilroy, was married to Miss Elizabeth Ashby on the twelfth of this month at San Jose.

The continual rains are greatly retarding the seed growers, making planting very difficult, the result being that they are away behind in their work.

METEOR.

New York Seed House Sustains Damage.

On Saturday evening last, December 16, fire broke out on the third floor of the Electric Battery Company's building, located at 14-16 Ninth avenue, New York city, the ground floor and basement of which is occupied by the Cox Seed Company. In the operation of extinguishing the fire some stock in the warehouse of the seed company was damaged. Fortunately the larger part of the scarcer and most valuable seeds were removed from the premises in time to be saved, so that the damage was confined to those stocks of which the firm has an abundant supply in its other warehouses. The damage, which was comparatively slight, is fully covered by insurance. No inconvenience or delay will result from the fire to the customers of the Cox Seed Company.

Malden, Mass.

E. D. Kaulback reports trade far ahead of last year, both at his down town store and at the greenhouses. Of these he has ten and finds even this number insufficient to supply the demand. He has a fine lot of Harrisii lilies coming on for New Year's, when an excellent sale is found for them.

Peter Ball reports trade as showing an increase over last season, but his roses are completely off crop, his cut being only a few hundreds a day.

John Foote is cutting some of the finest flowers of Mrs. Joost. TAP.

To the Flower, Seed, Nursery and Allied Trades.

THE next edition of our Directory will soon be ready for the press. This book is in constant use by all the leading wholesale and retail seedsmen, nurserymen and florists of the United States and Canada, and there are many thousands of them. The names and addresses are in process of revision, and the new edition will be issued promptly on January 1. An advertisement in this publication will largely increase your trade; and to insure good position and display, we should have the order early. A copy of the book will be mailed free of charge to all advertisers.

Many of our patrons have expressed the highest satisfaction with the increase of business due to having their names on the alphabetical list in large type. This feature will be continued in the next edition at the small cost of $1.00. For $2.50, sent with order, we will place your name in large type (in the alphabetical list in which it appears), and mail you a copy of the next edition. The book will save you many times its price in the course of the year.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

THE RATES FOR ADVERTISEMENTS ARE AS FOLLOWS, EACH INCLUDING A COPY OF THE BOOK:

FULL PAGE : : : : : :	$25.00

THE NURSERY TRADE.

AM. ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

W. J PETERS, Pres.; D. S. LAKE, Vice-Pres.; GEORGE C. SEAGER, Rochester, N. Y., Sec'y.

THE Northwestern Fruit Growers' Association will meet at Tacoma, Wash., January 16 to 18.

J. COLE DOUGHTY, for years manager of the Jewell Nursery Co., will take a winter's rest in New Mexico.

AT Riga, Russia, more tons of pine seeds are put on the market each year than at any other point in the world.

THE F. & F. Nurseries, Springfield, N. J., are now the property of Wm. Flemer, O. H. Felmly having retired from the firm.

STEPHEN CRANE, Norwich, Conn., has been the victim of one of the individuals who extract commissions from nurserymen by means of forged orders.

COL. U. B. PEARSALL, secretary and treasurer of the Western Association of Wholesale Nurserymen, will, on January 1, become quartermaster of the Soldiers' Home at Leavenworth, Kas., but will continue the general supervision of his nurseries at Fort Scott.

THE Association of Horticultural Commissioners of Southern California has drafted a bill to be submitted to Congress proposing the establishment of a national quarantine against infested nursery stock of all kinds imported from foreign countries. The bill contains provisions of similar nature to operate as an interstate law.

Western Association of Wholesale Nurserymen.

At its tenth annual meeting at Kansas City, Mo., the Western Association of Wholesale Nurserymen discussed an alleged discrimination in the laws of certain states which unfairly protect home nurserymen from outside competition. Another subject, one which will be taken up by a committee, is the matter of freight rates and classification. It was developed that stocks are lower than for many years and that prices are fully twenty-five per cent above those of a year ago. The plantings next spring are estimated to be about as usual on apples, peaches and grapes but considerably below the average of pears and cherries. The following officers were elected:

President, A. L. Brooke, North Topeka, Kan.; vice-president, R. H. Blair, Kansas City; secretary and treasurer, U. B. Pearsall, Leavenworth, Kan; executive committee, A. Willis, Ottawa, Kan.; Peter Youngers, Geneva, Neb.; E. S. Welsh, Shenandoah, Ia.; J. L. Bagby, New Haven, Mo.; E. J. Holeman, Leavenworth, Kan.

Following are the firms which were represented at the meeting: Bates Bros., Floral, Kan.; Blair & Kauffman, Kansas City; R. H. Blair & Co., Kansas City; Brewer & Stannard, Ottawa, Kan.; A. L. Brooke, North Topeka, Kan; A. H. Griesa & Bro, Lawrence, Kan.; Holeman & Bente, Leavenworth, Kas; D. S. Lake, Shenandoah, Ia.; New Haven Nurseries, New Haven, Mo.; Peters & Skinner, Topeka, Kan.; Stark Bros.' Nursery and Orchard Company, Louisiana, Mo; L. R. Taylor & Son, Topeka, Kan.; Sedgwick Nursery Co., Sedgwick, Kan.; E. S Welsh, Shenandoah, Ia.; A. Willis, Ottawa, Kan.; J. Wragg & Sons, Waukee, Ia.; F. W. Watson & Co., Topeka, Kan.; Youngers & Co., Geneva, Neb.

The next meeting will be at Kansas City on July 10, 1900.

Lynn, Mass.

Lynn has never seen such a general use of Christmas greens as is in evidence this season. All that is lacking is snow to make this a real, old-fashioned Christmas.

Gibb's Bros., at their down-town store, are disposing of a big lot of greens and are booking many orders for Christmas boxes of cut flowers. They had a wedding decoration last week that called for some fine work. Their houses are looking well but tell the same violet story as most of the growers.

Wm. Miller & Son are cutting a fine lot of carnations and report trade better than a year ago.

Wm. F. Newhall has as fine a lot of Campbell violets as one could find and is cutting a fairly heavy crop.

W. B. Newhall, H. G. Wyman & Son, S. H Davenport, Quinlan Bros. and S. T. Good all report trade as better than a year ago, and the holiday demand is considerably ahead of the supply.

Miss A. G. King is about the only one in town who has any chrysanthemums left and so is holding on to them. Miller & Sons have a few Bonnaffons and expect to get a good price for them. TAP.

At Philadelphia.

A match game between teams captained by John Westcott and William Baker was rolled on the club alleys Thursday night, Baker's team winning by eighty-nine pins, A. L. Brown rolling the high single and total scores. With the first of next year the florists' team will arrange a number of games with other local bowling clubs. The score:

WESTCOTT'S TEAM.

Player	1st	2d	3d	Total.
Westcott	105	123	132	360
Conner	160	157	125	442

Stoneham	169	133	126	368
Craig	126	136	132	394
Team totals	635	739	775	2167

At New York.

The number attending the customary services at the alleys on Monday evening was small, holiday interests evidently keeping the usual attendants otherwise occupied, but there was a deal of fun enjoyed nevertheless. The only man who took a melancholy view of life was Mr. Hafner, whose ball seemed unaccountably endowed with the peculiar characteristics of the Mexican jumping beans which one frequently sees at the country fair. Scores as appended were made:

Player	1st	2d	3d	4th	5th	6th	Av
Lang			153	162	118	147	145
Donlan	132	122	151	139	144	155	137

Siebrecht	120	151	109	112	105	136	122
Stewart	128	100	90	167	101	123	118
Shaw	91	97	133	110			108

The next meeting of the Bowling Club will be on the evening of Tuesday, January 2.

HOLIDAY BUSINESS BRISK.—TOO EARLY TO MAKE ESTIMATES OF RESULTS.—HUSCROFT SELLS OUT TO JOHN B. FERGUSON.

Trade is good this week. Everyone has all that he can attend to in sight for the days preceeding Christmas but at this writing it is impossible to state how far the supply will go toward meeting the demand or how the cash volume of business will compare with previous years. But we are all sanguine.

The principal item of interest is the sale of the business of G. L. Huscroft & Co. to John B. Ferguson, who will continue it at the old stand, 444 Sixth avenue. Mr. Huscroft's retirement, it is stated, is necessitated by his health. Mr. Ferguson is well known to the trade, having a prosperous business as landscape gardener and florist, with greenhouses at 5515 Fifth avenue. He gives it out that he will conduct his new venture along the strict business lines which have made his success in previous undertakings and prosperity should be assured him thereby.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.—W. G. Saltford reports Thanksgiving trade as very good and bright prospects for Christmas. American Beauties will be scarce. His carnations are in full crop and he gave a free carnation show in his greenhouses December 18 to 20. Two or three growers have excellent violets but several others have closed up their houses. Black fly seems to be a bad fellow to get rid of.

Rose Crimson Rambler.

As a pot plant for retail sales this rose is incomparable. Its hundreds of blossoms all open together and seem to improve for at least two and even three weeks. The bright crimson color holds without fading and contrasts finely with the glossy foliage. It Forces Easily. We have fine dormant stock.

2-year-old, 2 to 3 feet, well branched, own roots, per dozen, $2.00; per 100, $15.00.
3-year-old, 4 to 5 ft., well branched, budded or own roots, doz. $3.00; per 100, $20.00.

ETHEL CROCKER

Absolutely the BEST PINK CARNATION ever offered the trade.

Grown equally successfully by Hill, Craig, and myself; you are not buying it on a venture, but knowing that it is not a success in one soil and a failure in another.

In color, size, fragrance and stem it is just what the "storemen" want. In habit, constitution and freedom of bloom it is just what the grower wants, never out of crop from September to July, more flowers to the square foot than any other known variety and practically no seconds.

With 18,000 stock plants to work from there is no danger of over propagation, and you are not asked to wait until planting out time for your cuttings but can have them whenever wanted. Orders entrusted to me will have my personal attention, both in the selection of the cuttings and the filling of the order.

Price per 100, $10; per 25, $2.50; per 1000, $75; per 250, $18.75. HERR'S PANSIES at $4.00 now, and a regular assortment of CARNATIONS in a list ready Jan. 1st.

ALBERT M. HERR, Lancaster, Pa.

Helena, Montana.

This section has apparently been favored with much the same kind of weather this fall that most other parts of the country have experienced. The mildness of the past three months brought in chrysanthemums earlier than usual and Thanksgiving Day practically saw the last of them. The first crop of roses and carnations from new plants was also earlier, owing to the same cause, and the supply for Christmas will be accordingly small. The demand for flowers promises to come up to the standard of former years, while the call for decorative greens of all kinds is heavier than usual. Winter has just arrived.

The Wells Conservatories, now managed by Mr. Allen, are reported to be in excellent condition.

Charles Horn is still doing business at the old stand, the Sixth Avenue Greenhouses, and has Mr. Rustler as head man. The latter gentleman's name seems to be a most appropriate one.

Mrs. Mattie Miller, at the Broadwater Greenhouses, is turning out some of the best Scotts we have seen in a long time.

The State Nursery Co. recently completed a violet house 8x130 which will be used for tomatoes temporarily.

DOINGS IN TENNESSEE.—MANY ADVANCE ORDERS FOR THE HOLIDAYS.—PROSPECT FOR FAIR SUPPLIES.

Florists in this city are looking forward to a big business for the holidays, for advance orders are numerous and several of the leading dealers report a larger booking than for several years past. The fine weather of autumn hurried on the stock to such a degree that there will be no surplus for the holidays. But, all conditions considered, the leading dealers think they will have plenty to supply all demands. Prices will be higher than formerly, but buyers seem to realize the conditions and are meeting the rise with good nature and liberality. One dealer reports that he will have an unusual and abundant stock of American Beauty. Kaiserins are very fine and will come in just in time for the holiday trade. Another grower, whose specialty is carnations, says that he will have a good stock, particularly of Scott. The smaller flowers, Romans and narcissi will be abundant and will be sold comparatively cheap. Plants are abundant.

Joy & Son have had a palm sale for the past ten days, working off at good prices all the young plants that they did not desire to keep for stock.

We are well supplied with all the novelties in baskets, jardineres and violet boxes. M. C. DORRIS.

Mansfield, Ohio.

The first thing that attracted my attention upon alighting from the train, was a handsome delivery wagon, drawn by a pair of spirited horses, an outfit that would compare favorably with the best I have seen in larger cities. A neat inscription showed that it belongs to the Berno Floral Co. That enterprising firm, with young Mr. Berno at the head, seems to have achieved its success by leaps and bounds, as the saying goes. In 1892 they made their start with one house; a year later a second one was added, and, little by little, as business began to show some signs of improvement, other structures were built. The addition during the past summer consists of two houses, one 10x60 and the other one 16x40. All told their establishment consists of 10,000 feet of glass. Another house, to cover 16x180, especially adapted to carnations, will be built in the spring. HOMO.

Simplicity in Greenhouse Construction.

During our long experience we have not only made many improvements in greenhouses, but we have so simplified the construction that building a greenhouse is no longer a matter so full of complications as to tax the patience and the ingenuity of even the most intelligent mechanic. Our is worked out in the best manner ready to be put up, and we furnish our customers such complete detail drawings that any workman of only ordinary capabilities can put it up correctly.

THE CHRISTMAS TRADE.

THE considerable number of reports of the Christmas trade which have come to hand represent nearly the entire country and are generally optimistic in tone. Few fail to specify an increase and in not more than one or two instances is there complaint of decrease in the volume of business and, these isolated cases being probably the result of local causes, it may safely be asserted that the season has been the best on record. There was some scarcity of stock but increased glass area has done much to overcome the usual Christmas shortage. Beauties were very generally in greatest demand and shortest supply but Meteor was a close second in favor. Carnations, particularly bright colored sorts, were in stronger demand than ever before and, even with greatly increased production, were in short supply at many places. Violets were scarce but bulbous stock was plentiful. It is noted that qualities were generally of the best. Nearly all reports indicate increased sale for plants, particularly flowering or berried subjects, and in many cases prices, both for cut flowers and plants, are reported slightly higher than in recent years. Several correspondents mention largely increased sales of holly. A number of the reports follow:

LARAMIE, WYO.—Mrs. G. A. Hertzog states that Christmas trade was twenty-five per cent ahead of a year ago, and that stock was scarce.

ATCHISON, KAN.—R. J. Graves says Christmas was big, but only about equal to other years. There were too many roses; everything else sold clean. Ferns were in particular favor.

NEW LONDON, CONN.—Trade was one-fourth heavier than last year, according to John Spaulding. There was enough stock, but prices were higher. The call was for carnations and cheap plants.

OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA.—There was not enough stock to supply the trade and prices were very good. There were two calls for carnations to one for roses, according to the Oklahoma Floral Co.

TOLEDO, O.—Geo. A. Heinl estimates trade as ten per cent better than a year ago. Roses were very scarce but the supply was of better quality than usual. There was an increased sale for plants of all descriptions.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA.—H. A. Lindsay reports double the flowers sold but at half the usual Christmas prices. There was a heavy demand and shortage of red carnations and roses. There was but little call for plants.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—Violets were the short item and carnations the favorite for Christmas, says W. E. Chappell. The increase in business was twenty-five per cent. Plants sold well. There were more lilies than ever before. People made no complaint at the prices for good stock.

PADUCAH, KY.—C. L. Brunson & Co. say their Christmas sales were more than double those of a year ago. Prices were about the same. Carnations were the greatest shortage. Flowering plants were in marked favor.

NASHUA, N. H.—August Gaedeke & Co. report a small increase in trade but prices were low. There was enough stock, most of it good, except carnations, which were much sought. Poinsettias and primroses led the plants.

OTTAWA, ONT.—Trade was one-third greater than last year and prices advanced slightly. Carnations were in especial demand. Graham Bros. report a great trade on flowering plants, a trade which is increasing year by year.

PITTSFIELD, MASS.—Trade was one-fourth greater, both on plants and cut flowers. John White says that there was stock enough, and good, except violets. Palms, cyclamens, primulas and begonias were in favor in the order named.

WILMINGTON, DEL.—Harry P. Potter writes it down that sales were double last year's, with prices about twenty per cent higher. There was enough stock, mostly very good, except violets. Twice the usual number of plants were sold.

DETROIT, MICH.—J. F. Sullivan estimates the city's Christmas expenditures for plants and flowers as one-fifth greater than last year. Prices were not higher, but selling was easier. Beauties were very scarce, violets and good carnations only less so. There was sale for all flowering plants, and poinsettias and other novelties sold easily at good prices.

SPRINGFIELD, ILL.—Trade was about the same as last year and that means that it was good. Louis Unverzagt reports that he could not sell poinsettias at any price.

OMAHA, NEB.—Hess & Swoboda report that the Christmas business in this city exceeded any previous year. There were enough flowers of improved quality and prices did not advance.

LANCASTER, PA.—H. D. Rohrer says that the supply of carnations was far short of the demand but that the sales equalled last year. Stock was better than usual all through.

KENNETT SQUARE, PA.—Christmas business was a fourth larger than a year ago. Supply equalled demand. Stock was better than usual. Wm. Swayne noted that orders came early.

LYNN, MASS.—Stock was short but business increased ten per cent. Carnations and chrysanthemums were much sought. J. L. Miller reports Begonia Gloire de Lorraine in great demand.

KOKOMO, IND.—There was a marked increase in Christmas calls for carnations and W. W. Coles estimates business as ten per cent greater than last year. Palms sold best among plants.

PONTIAC, ILL.—W. A. Miller reports a Christmas trade ahead of any previous year, although roses were scarce. He had plenty of carnations and Jubilee was an especial favorite because of its color.

WATERBURY, CONN.—A. Dallas sums up the trade as follows: Fifteen per cent increase; supply all right; same old complaint of salted stock; carnations in unusual demand; plant sales increased one-half.

TRENTON, N. J.—There were enough flowers except Beauty, say C. Ribsam & Sons. Beauty was in greater demand than ever. Qualities were generally good. Bulbous stock did not move. Plants were in greater favor, especially rubbers.

NEW HAVEN, CONN.—Business was double last year's; prices higher although stock was plentiful; qualities were good; red carnations and Meteors had the call; flowering plants in fancy receptacles sold better than ever.

KNOXVILLE, TENN.—Everybody is satisfied with an increase of about twenty-five per cent; supply equalled demand; largest call for Beauties ever known. A very noticeable decrease in the sale of plants is reported by C. W. Crouch.

BRIDGEPORT, CONN.—Five firms have started in business here since last Christmas and did well but the old houses sold as much as ever. There was less call for flowers, more for plants. Jas. Horan & Son note a special call for narcissi.

TOPEKA, KAN.—The Bates Floral Co. say that business was about the same as last year. There was a shortage of pink roses, carnations and violets, for which there was increased call. Fewer blooming plants were sold, more decorative.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.—C. B. Whitnall reports that the trade as a whole enjoyed the best Christmas on record and that there were neither flowers nor plants enough to go around, although the call for the latter seems to assure a better supply next year. There was much good stock and an increased call for orchids, poinsettias and stevia. The demand for Beauties was far beyond the possibilities of supplying.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.—Christmas trade was double last year's; prices were the same; stock was good, carnations and violets particularly scarce. There was a big call for azaleas and primroses and E. S. Haskell reports great trade in greens.

FORT WAYNE, IND.—Markey Bros. report trade in this city one-third heavier than a year ago, with an adequate supply of flowers but higher prices. There was an increased demand for carnations, for flowering plants and for greens of all kinds.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.—H. W. Rieman says trade averages twenty-five per cent better than last Christmas. Supply was adequate as a rule and prices and qualities the same as a year ago. Blooming plants of all kinds were good sellers; so were palms.

THE LATE BENJAMIN K. BLISS.
(See page 645.)

LINCOLN, ILL.—W. H. Gullett & Son enjoyed a Christmas trade sixty per cent greater than a year ago. There was sufficient stock but prices were slightly higher. To quote them: "People had money and let loose of it without roaring over prices."

CHAMPAIGN, ILL.—Thos. Franks thinks trade fifty per cent better than last year and prices twenty-five per cent higher. Stock was short but good. The special calls were for carnations and flowering plants. Large quantities more of greens could have been sold.

BANGOR, ME.—The holiday trade was as good as could be wished. Cut flowers were plentiful and popular, but there was sale for more blooming plants than could be supplied. Carl Beers says that the season has been excellent and that the outlook for spring is bright.

ST. LOUIS, MO.—Ostertag Bros found their Christmas trade double that of a year ago and believe that their experience was no exception to the rule. There was enough stock and the quality was better than usual. The marked preferences were for Beauties and Meteors in flowers and palms and rubbers in plants. They sold a great many Christmas bells, three to ten inches high, made of thin wood and covered with immortelles.

HARTFORD, CONN.—D. A. Spear says trade showed a twenty-five per cent increase. Stock was short and prices higher. Violets and carnations were favorites. There was decreased call for flowering plants but better sale for decorative stock, especially ferns.

ADRIAN, MICH.—Nathan Smith & Son say that Christmas trade was half again larger than last year. In cut flowers qualities were high with supply equal to the demands. There was increased call for decorative and flowering plants. Greens, like everything else, sold well.

BALTIMORE, MD.—E. A. Seidewitz says that trade was about the same as last year, with enough cut flowers and lower prices, except for carnations. There was a decided increase in the call for blooming plants, the medium values of which Mr. Seidewitz says are taking the place of cut flowers.

OSWEGO, N. Y.—The Christmas sale of cut flowers was something unprecedented and decorative plants sold well at good prices. W. M. Mattoon reports his trade double that of last year. There was enough stock, nearly all good, and it cleaned up well. Violets and Roman hyacinths were favorites.

UTICA, N. Y.—The Christmas trade was one-third better than last year according to Wm. Matthews' estimate. Prices were higher but there was not sufficient stock to go around. The special calls were for violets, orchids, red roses and fancy carnations. Medium priced pot plants were in demand.

IOWA CITY, IA.—Christmas trade showed a fifty per cent increase according to James T. Aldous & Son and prices were a great deal higher, although there was enough stock. The qualities were fine. There was a marked increase in calls for carnations and plants of all kinds sold better than ever before.

ELMIRA, N. Y.—Everything sold which was in shape for Christmas. Prices were reasonable and qualities good. Palms and blooming plants went well. Grove P. Rawson had about 2,000 late chrysanthemums, Wm. H. Chadwick, Eclipse, Mrs. S. T. Murdoch and Cullingfordii, which brought good prices.

CLEVELAND, O.—Fifteen per cent is A. H. Graham's estimate of the increase in Christmas trade. F. R. Williams places it at ten per cent. There seems to have been enough stock, but with none to spare. Carnations were in big demand and flowering plants in increased popularity. People paid the price with better grace than usual.

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH.—P. T. Huddart estimates the Christmas trade as one-third ahead of last year, with a shortage of stock, good qualities and better prices. There was extra call for violets, carnations and good roses. Plants sold no better than heretofore. People were ready to pay for good stock, but poor flowers would not go at any price.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.—J. A. Creelman estimates the holiday trade of this city at twenty-five per cent more than last year, largely due to better prices. There was a supply of cut flowers about equal to the demand, violets leading in favor, red carnations and roses following. In plants all flowering stock went, Henry Smith making a hit with azaleas. The Grand Rapids Floral Co. did well with a large supply of poinsettias.

COPYRIGHT, 1899, BY PAN-AMERICAN EXPOSITION CO.

HORTICULTURE, GRAPHIC ARTS AND FORESTRY BUILDINGS OF THE PAN-AMERICAN EXPOSITION.

ALBANY, N. Y.—Goldring Bros. found trade about the same, plenty of stock and prices a little lower. There was lively sale for flowering plants but not at big prices. People will not stand the high prices for the holidays and those who buy throughout the year use other merchandise for Christmas.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.—The consensus of opinion is that the Christmas trade was the best on record. R. H. C. Bard reports an unprecedented call for blooming plants, which the mild weather made easy of delivery. Meteors and red carnations were in short supply. Holly was in demand and most of it fine.

HARRISBURG, PA.—There were flowers enough and to spare for a Christmas trade which G. Hanson estimates as nearly a third greater than last year's. Flowering plants sold well, but the call was for cheap goods, due perhaps to a department store's precedent established with some over-forced stock.

ST. JOSEPH, MO.—L. J. Stuppy says that the holiday business was greater than usual and prices higher. Roses at $2 to $3 per dozen were a little too much for most people and carnations at 75 cents to $1.50 went better. Azaleas were in favor and there was increased sale for all plants in pots and pans.

WORCESTER, MASS.—The increase in Christmas prices was twenty per cent, according to A. H. Lange's estimate. Prices were high, stock good, but there was a shortage of red flowers. There was increased sale for both decorative and flowering plants, and for berried subjects, such as oranges, solanums and ardisias. Boston fern was also a favorite.

LINCOLN, NEB.—The business for Christmas was the best ever known here, fully forty per cent ahead of last year. Stock was good and higher prices prevailed. According to Chapin Bros. trade has exceeded the supply quite regularly of late, despite the fact that pretty nearly every one built last year, and the indications point to extensive building again next summer.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—J. B. Kellar reports that the Christmas trade here was very satisfactory. Prices were very high on cut flowers and the sale for plants is increasing every year. Violets were $5 per hundred, Beauties $18 to $24 a dozen and no carnations sold for less than 75 cents while fancies went up to $4. Poinsettias were in high favor. The call was for bright colored flowering plants but the scarcity of the usual subjects compelled recourse to many things not ordinarily popular at this season and good prices were the rule.

PITTSBURG, PA.—The wholesalers had a big Christmas and the retailers were rushed, trade exceeding expectations. Extra Beauties retailed as high as $36 a dozen; violets, which were fine, brought $4 to $6 per 100. There was an overstock of poinsettias. The demand for good holly far exceeded the supply. Plants of all kinds sold better than in previous years.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.—M. J. Lynch believes that the volume of Christmas trade was ten per cent greater than a year ago. There were plenty of good flowers except Beauties, which were higher. Carnations were in greatest demand. There was more call for flowering than for decorative plants. Twice as much holly was sold as last year, and at good prices.

DES MOINES, IA.—R. L. Blair says that Christmas trade was cut down by advance reports of scarcity and high prices. Buyers refused to place orders and at the last minute there was sufficient stock and prices were lower than quoted in advance. There was a greater demand for blooming plants and Boston ferns. Palms and rubbers sold well but azaleas were not in it.

TORONTO, ONT.—Holiday trade was greater than ever with John H. Dunlop. Beauties and select stock were higher in price. Supply was not equal to demands and qualities were not high because of much dark weather. Violets and Meteors were the especial favorites. Flowering plants were chiefly called for. G. H. Mills says that everything salable was taken and orders went begging.

Horticulture, Graphic Arts and Forestry Buildings of Pan-American Exposition.

The three buildings for horticulture, graphic arts and forestry at the Pan-American Exposition of 1901 form a picturesque group at the end of the west garden. The largest of these, the Horticulture building, stands between the other two on an axis with the garden. The Forestry building is on the north side; the Graphic Arts on the south, adjoining the lake. Arcades connect the three buildings, forming in front a semicircular court. Between the arcades the ground rises slightly to the level of the Fountain of the Seasons. The area of the Horticulture building is 45,000 square feet. The Graphic Arts and Forestry buildings each cover 30,000 square feet, and are similar in design. In plan, the Horticulture building is square, with central lantern, rising to a height of 240 feet at the intersection of the four arms of a Greek cross, which includes in its angles four small domes. On the center of each facade is a deeply recessed arched entrance. The Graphic Arts and Forestry buildings have four corner towers, and on the east facade a vaulted loggia of three arches forms the main entrance. Above the red roofs of Spanish tile numerous, lanterns, pinnacles and Venetian flagpoles bearing gaily colored banners add a festive picturesqueness to the sky line.

The broad white wall surfaces of the buildings are ornamented with colored bas-reliefs. Arabesques of twining vines of fruit and flowers, among the branches of which are children and birds, decorate the numerous pilasters of the facades and arcades. Above the eastern entrance of the Horticulture building are two colored compositions representing Ceres, the goddess of the harvest, bearing in her arms a sheaf of golden wheat. Her chariot is drawn by three lions led by two mythologic figures. The decoration of the Graphic Arts and Forestry buildings is chiefly confined to the vaulted ceilings of their loggias, where the brilliantly colored decorations remind one of the famous example of the Villa Madama.

The Propagation of Ferns.

Perhaps the most interesting feature of the cultivation of ferns is their propagation. This is effected along two chief lines—(1) vegetatively, or (2) by means of spores. There are various ways in which ferns may be vegetatively reproduced. Some, like adiantums, nephrolepis, platycerium, produce tiny plants and bulbils on their roots, which, at the proper time, may be severed from the parent plant and made to start life on their own account. Others, again, develop young plants at the tips of their fronts, such as some aspleniums and adiantums. These, if the parent fronds are pegged down to the soil, will emit roots in a short time, and soon after being severed from the frond, grow into plants resembling their parents. Other aspleniums, as A. bulbiferum, and a few other ferns, such as Cystopteris bulbifera, produce tiny bulbils on their fronds. This mode of vegetative reproduction differs from the last in the fact that the young plantlets do not develop foliage leaves until after they have established themselves as independent units, and put forth roots into the soil, and in the fact that while in the former case the offspring become fixed by their roots in the soil before severance from the parent fronds takes place, the bulbils drop off at an early period, and having food substance stored up in their fleshy tissues can set about emitting roots and establishing themselves, preparatory to developing into ordinary individuals, at their leisure.

APOSPORY.

There is a species of aberrant vegetative reproduction termed apospory, in which, not as in the asplenium, etc., a "fern plant," but a sexual plant or prothallus, is produced in the place of spores. In the Athyrium filix-fœmina var. clarissima and Pteris aquilina, the sporangium suspends its usual function of spore production and develops a green prothallus in their place. In Polystichum angulare var. pulcherrima, Scolopendrium vulgare, and Trichomanes alatum, the prothalli are produced quite independently of the sporangia, as outgrowths from the edges of the pinnæ. An abnormally moist environment may be one of the factors inducing this phenomenon.

Ferns with underground rhizomes, such as some adiantums and struthiopteris, as also those with creeping subaerial rhizomes, such as davallia, may be propagated by careful division of their rhizomes, care being taken that each severed portion is provided both with a growing point, root, and fronds, and has not yet started into new growth. Plants such as Adiantum cuneatum and A. Farleyense, as also some of our common hardy ferns, such as the polystichums and lastreas, which form a number of distinct crowns, may be easily multiplied by careful division and pulling apart of these crowns, so that each new piece which is to form a fresh plant shall be possessed of plenty of roots and leaves wherewith to start its independent existence. Lastly, the nephrolepis, and a few others, send out runners or sarmenta bearing bulbils at intervals, which, eventually rooting, start life on their own account, and become severed from the parent stem.

APOGAMY.

I have spoken hitherto of vegetative reproduction; i. e., in which the special reproductive organs of this generation, known as spores, take no part as it occurs in the "fern plant." But in the sexual plant vegetative reproduction is also known to occur under certain conditions, in which a young "fern plant" is developed as an out-growth of the prothallus quite apart from, and independently of the sexual organs. This phenomenon is known as apogamy. It must be regarded as an abnormal species of reproduction, due, probably, to the peculiar conditions to which the prothalli are subjected. Apogamy is known to occur in Pteris cretica, Aspidium filix-mas var. cristatum, A. falcatum, A. frondosum, Lastrea dilatata var. cristata gracilis, Scolopendrium vulgare var. ramulosissima, Athyrium filix-fœmina, Todea Africana, T. pellucida, and T. rivularis. In Trichomanes alatum apogamy and apospory are combined, the prothalli produced on the fronds being apogamous.

In Scolopendrium vulgare var. ramulosissima and Lastrea dilatata var. cristata gracilis prothalli have been discovered assuming partially the rôle of "fern plants," for they bore sporangia like those produced normally on the fronds of the asexual generation.

In Gymnogramma leptophylla the "fern plant" is annual; but the prothallus is perennial, forming adventitious branches, which subsist as tubers in the ground from year to year.

In the hymenophyllaceæ, or filmy ferns, the production of small gemmæ, or buds, from the prothallus, is of frequent occurrence, as in hymenophyllum and Trichomanes alatum. In vittaria, one of the polypodiaceæ, peculiar chains of gemmæ are formed at the ends of short stalks. In all these cases, the gemmæ on germination give rise to new prothalli. This formation of gemmæ is no doubt connected with the damp habitat of the plants concerned.

It will thus be seen how ferns, like many other plants, have adopted numerous methods of reproducing themselves vegetatively, i. e., without the aid of spores or sexual organs, whether it be by means of bulbils or tiny plants produced on the fronds, stems, roots of the asexual or "fern plant," or on the thallus of the sexual plant or prothallus, or by means of the lateral extension of the rhizome, whose newly formed portions may or may not become eventually detached from the original parent stock. It would seem also, that, as in the case of many another plant, so also with ferns, many of those species which for a long period have become addicted to this vegetative method of propagation, have in some degree, lost the power to reproduce themselves by means of spores or sexual organs. This, however, as in the case of some of the higher plants, may be partly a result of the long treatment under cultivation to which they have been subjected.

THE LATE JOHN GIBSON.

The species with an upright caudex or stem, such as the tree ferns, some lomarias, and many of our hardy forms, such as the lady and male ferns which are naturally incapable of having their stems divided, must always be propagated by means of spores.

PROPAGATION FROM SPORES.

The circumstances connected with the development of ferns from spores, are among the most captivating and interesting in the whole history of plant-life. The ordinary fern plant, consisting of stem, roots, and leaves, so well known to everyone, can hardly, strange as it may seem to say so, be considered as representing the ordinary normal stage of the plant's life-history; the latter must rather, as in the moss-plant, and all flowering plants, be that in which the sexual reproductive organs are developed —organs which in the "fern plant," as "the man in the street" knows it, are entirely absent. The fern plant is rather to be regarded as a new stage—a new generation, as it were—intercalated into the life-history, when the ancestors of these plants first assumed a terrestrial habit of life. On adoption of this terrestrial mode of life, the plant, which before was a simply built organism, gradually became a highly complex being, with strongly differentiated tissues, which eventually, in the course of ages, culminated in the "fern plant" as we know it to-day. The main object of this greater differentiation of the various organs, and their increase in size and number, was the production in as large numbers as possible of asexual reproductive organs, known as spores, adapted by their minute size and lightness for transportation by the wind to a great distance. But the original, simply built sexual generation, still, of course, persisted, although it, too, assumed a terrestrial life, though confined always to situations sufficiently moist to allow of the antherozoids, or male reproductive bodies, swimming about and reaching the female organs. Every new individual developed sexually from the simple primitive generation gives rise to the "fern plant," or asexual generation. Each spore thrown off from an asexual "fern plant" develops in its turn into a sexual plant, bearing antheridia and archegonia, and commonly termed a "prothallus." This is the highly interesting and absorbing cycle of the life history of the fern. The multiplication by means of spores enables the plant to spread itself widely over the face of the earth; but there must always be the constant cyclic return to sexual reproduction at a given period, or else the vigor and extensive distribution of the race could not be maintained.

The compost used on which to sow the spores should consist either of the mixture of loam, peat, leaf mould, and sand above given, when the soil should be well sterilized, so as to destroy all spores of other ferns or of fungi, etc., which may be lurking therein, or it may consist of finely broken bits of peat, sandstone, brick, or loam; we used a mixture of chopped sphagnum moss and finely broken crocks. The surface of the compost in the pot or pan, after being moistened, should be thickly covered with spores, and the pot or pan then covered with a glass shade or lid, so as both to keep the surface moist and to prevent the entry of any foreign bodies. The pots or pans should thereafter stand in saucers, and be watered from below, so that the water rises from the saucer up through the soil to the spores on the surface, and thus constantly keeps the latter damp. If watered from above, the spores are sure to get displaced and disturbed.

After a certain period the spores will begin to develop, by the extension of its tissue, and the production of chlorophyll therein, each into a green body, the prothallus bearing the sexual reproductive organs, the antheridia and the archegonia on its lower surface. Each such sexual plant exhibits no differentiation into stem and leaf, like the asexual plant, but consists simply of a flat thallus, like a liverwort, in which stem and leaf are united in one, and roots emitted from the lower surface of the latter. The moisture in which these prothalli must constantly be bathed by means of adequate watering from below, affords the medium in which the spermatozoids, escaping from the antheridia, are enabled to swim about and reach the archegonia, whose ova they fertilize.

Small areas of the mass of prothalli, after they have reached a certain age, must be separated, and placed in pans, and when the young fern plants which have developed from the fertilized archegonia have attained a certain size, they require to be pricked out in rows in pans or boxes until they are large enough to be planted in some suitable shady situation out-of-doors.

Thus we see how different must be the cultural treatment of these lowly cryptogamous plants from what obtains in the higher circles of plant life, and a careful study of their life history will necessarily greatly aid us in acquiring a right comprehension of the why and wherefore of their peculiar mode of culture.—W. C. Worsdell in the Gardeners' Chronicle.

Christmas Advertising in Philadelphia.

The samples reproduced are interesting as showing the tendency to an increased use of the daily newspapers in pushing business among the retail stores. At the rates which the papers charge I doubt whether spasmodic advertising in this direction pays. If it is kept up continually and judiciously the outlay would be money well spent eventually. This in addition to a well written, well displayed advertisement. Fox's offer on the upper left is an example of good advertising, Crawford's at the lower center of bad. If the Crawford advertisement had been in the possessive case it might have been harmless even if it was a waste of money. It is but fair to this house to state that they usually do much better.

CARNATIONS.

LIME FOR CARNATIONS.

There are few soils which will not be benefited by an application of lime and practically none that will be injured by it. To ascertain the exact amount required have your state experiment station analyze the soil and find out just how much available lime it contains, then add sufficient to bring the analysis up to two per cent. If you do not care to be so exact give the soil an application of lime about as heavy as you would of bone meal and you will be pretty nearly right.

Lime has a direct chemical action on the soil and aids in making nearly all the fertilizing constituents of the soil available for plant food. This is especially noticeable in soils that have been heavily manured and yet do not seem to bring the flourishing growth one would expect. A good application of lime to such a soil will act almost like magic and will stiffen up and exhilarate the plants almost beyond recognition. Lime also has the power to sweeten and bring back into shape for use soils that have been soured by the over application of fertilizers.

Some soils are not porous enough to allow the water to pass through them freely, and in consequence the air, which is necessary for the healthful development of the roots, is excluded. Lime is an effective remedy for this condition, and whenever it exists in a carnation house the antidote cannot be applied too quickly.

About the only place where lime would prove injurious would be on a very light soil which contains only a small amount of plant food, as in such a case it would hasten the decomposition of what little fertilizer the soil contained and leave it practically barren. It is from the application of lime to such soils that the adage, "liming makes rich fathers and poor sons," originated. I do not suppose that there is one carnation bed or bench in this whole country filled with soil so deficient in organic matter that it would come under this class.

Some growers claim that a liberal dusting of lime over the foliage of a rusty plant will check the growth of rust. I cannot say that I have ever seen a case where such a remedy really did check the rust, but I have seen numerous cases where rusty plants were in soil which needed lime and the heavy dusting proved so beneficial that they practically outgrew the rust.

The best form of lime to use for carnations is the ordinary air slacked lime produced from quick lime, obtained by burning oyster shells or limestone. For greenhouse use have it well slacked and it will then be in a powdery condition, easily applied and ready for immediate action. Next of value is unleached wood ashes, which can be obtained almost anywhere and which contain about thirty-five pounds of lime to every hundred pounds of ashes. They also contain from five to seven per cent of potash, one to two per cent of phosphoric acid and from three to five per cent of magnesia, and on this account should not be applied more than twice as thick as you would apply the pure lime, although they contain but one-third the quantity of lime. Wood ashes should never be allowed to lie on top of the soil, but should be well stirred in and watered at once, whatever may be the practice with the first mentioned form.

Do a little experimenting with lime and see if your flowers do not come a little brighter in color, with a much stiffer stem and some addition to their size.

ALBERT M. HERR.

LENOX, MASS.—J. O'Brien has brought suit for $5,000 damages against Lena D. Babcock, lessee of the Livingston place, alleging that she falsely charged him with the larceny of palms to the injury of his business standing.

NEW HAVEN, CONN.—J. N. Champion has taken legal measures to collect a bill from a Yale student who ordered flowers sent to a chorus girl. The defense is that the young man is not of age and flowers for a chorus girl are luxuries for which his father cannot be compelled to pay.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—Herewith find resume of the work of the committees of the Chrysanthemum Society of America. It would have been best to have published this last week, and this would have been done but for the late exhibits of Mr. Zvolanek, the reports on which did not reach me until the latter part of the week.

PLAN OF ROSE HOUSES 700 FEET LONG TO BE ERECTED BY LORD & BURNHAM CO., FOR E. M. WOOD & CO. NATICK, MASS.

WITH THE GROWERS.

PETER REINBERG, CHICAGO, ILL.

The largest grower about Chicago says that this is really his first year with carnations. To be sure, he has grown them by thousands in previous seasons, but he has thrown the plants out early to make room for new rose stock and has always considered the "pink" a side issue. The manifest rise of the carnation in popular favor induced him to go into this specialty in good earnest this year and now he has more plants under glass than any one grower in the west if not in the United States. And the whole cultural method has been changed.

"There is no use denying," said Mr. Reinberg in a recent conversation, "that the people prefer high grade stock, even at high prices, to the inferior grades at little or nothing. I have produced both kinds and I know where the profit lies. One can always sell stock that is strictly good. That's why I am giving my carnations the very best attention that I know how to give." And the plants show their appreciation of the careful handling they are receiving. There is not a weak spot in the house after house of plants and the thousands upon thousands of buds promise a tremendously heavy cut as soon as there are a few consecutive days of sunshine.

The spirit of progression has seized Mr. Reinberg and is leading him to seek the best in everything. His latest move has been to install an engine and dynamo in his main boiler room, stringing incandescent lights throughout the great range, with an occasional arc light above the glass. This, of course, entailed a considerable expense, but this sum Mr. Reinberg states that he expects to save during the first year by lengthening the working day of his employes in the dark days of winter, when labor virtually ceases some time before 5:30, the regular hour for closing.

The electric lights are only another step in the policy which led Mr. Reinberg to last spring invest many hundreds of dollars in stock of the newest carnations, which caused him to try Golden Gate and make it the most profitable rose on the place, producing with Perle and selling at nearly twice the price; which has caused him to order 3000 plants of Mrs. Lawson, 2800 of The Marquis and 5000 of Liberty for earliest delivery.

There are probably more varieties of carnations in the Reinberg houses than in any other in the west, and the fact that all the new sorts are growing there makes it the Mecca for scores of those who wish to compare the various varieties before making their selection of sorts for next year. This great interest has induced Mr. Reinberg to go into the cutting and plant business on a scale vastly greater than before. What he is prepared to do is shown by an incident which occurred a few days since during a conference between the grower and his selling manager, Mr. Spencer, who predicted a great demand for cuttings of a certain sort and wanted to know how large a supply he could depend upon. "Go ahead; sell all you can," said Mr. Reinberg. "But how many can you root?" insisted Mr. Spencer. "Oh, eight or ten thousand a day," replied the proprietor. "For two or three days?" interrogated the manager. "Yes, for two or three months," smiled Mr. Reinberg, and Mr. Spencer subsided.

Triumph is the favorite carnation of both Mr. Reinberg and Mr. Spencer, as the records show that it is the greatest money maker on the place, but Mr. Reinberg hastens to add that Mrs. Bradt and G. H. Crane are not far behind. Mrs. Bradt has a reputation for unproductiveness, but Mr. Reinberg affirms that this is a libel upon one of the finest flowers ever grown. He says that plant for plant it may not produce with some of the most floriferous sorts, but that it may be planted close enough to bring the producing capacity of a bench up to the record of any other sort. He says that he believes the variety to be improving from year to year in vigor and strength of stem, and says that the selling price of the blooms is the top of the market, second to none unless it be G. H. Crane, which has averaged better than 7 cents for the past two weeks. Crane has been leading America up to date, but Mr. Reinberg states that the latter sort is now showing rapid improvement and that he rather expects it to forge ahead.

Leslie Paul and Gov. Griggs are other new sorts which please Mr. Reinberg and his many guests, and Frances Joost is a variety which is rapidly fattening his bank account. Melba was not at first in favor, but the reason was found by a reduction of heat, and this sort is now coming after a fashion which gives the grower much pleasure. He states that he will use Evelina for an out-door white next season, believing that it will produce three to one of any other sort.

Mr. Reinberg had trouble in his Beauty houses early in the season, and the dark weather of November and December did not hasten the growth of the plants in the range of twelve big houses put up last summer, but one could not find a finer lot of plants than are now setting buds, and the prospects are that another month will bring on a Beauty crop the like of which has never been known on the place, at least that's what the foreman, George Collins, says, and appearances bear him out. The Brides and Bridesmaids are in good crop now and for Christmas this establishment was well fixed for Meteor.

Over at George Reinberg's preparations are being made for a big business in carnation cuttings. White Cloud is a joy there and the stock of it is very large.

MOUNDSVILLE, W. VA.—Chester Wright has again opened his store for the season.

Development in the South.

John Woll embarked in the florist business at Savannah, Ga., in 1895 with the investment of his entire capital, $36, in a hot bed. Since then he has prospered greatly. In 1896 he admitted Frank E. Keilbach to partnership and the two soon had a range of 5,000 feet of glass. On March 20, 1899, Mr. Wolf bought his partner's interest and now is the sole owner of the fine establishment shown in the accompanying illustration. He has a paying business and has already made a bargain for the purchase of the land on which his houses stand when his lease expires next near. The range now covers 13,000 square feet.

CHRISTMAS A DISAPPOINTMENT TO CUT FLOWER GROWERS.—ONLY THE SELECT GRADES FOUND READY SALE. — POOR STOCK OF ALL KINDS SUFFERED ON THE UNCERTAIN MARKET.—SPECIALTIES DID WELL.—PLANTS A FEATURE EVERYWHERE.—RETAILERS REPORT GENERAL SATISFACTION.—SOME OF THE NOVELTIES.—MANY VERY FINE WINDOW DECORATIONS.—EVERYBODY MADE MONEY.—NOTES.

The result of the Christmas business is equivalent to a notice served on the cut flower people that the plants, as a factor in the situation, have come to stay and summed up, as seen from the standpoint of the flower grower and flower wholesaler, was simply a disappointment to all excepting those making a specialty of high grade stock and desirable novelties. The dividing up of the immediate holiday business into two days caused uncertainty as to the final demand, with a consequent fluctuation of prices. The condition of the greater part of the roses and carnations received on Saturday was poor, the same unmistakable evidences of senility as seen earlier in the week being present, Bridesmaids lacking color and carnations ready to go to sleep. In fact this is true of the majority of roses, even including those shipped on Sunday afternoon. The market was weak from the start and roses hung fire at low prices excepting for Bridesmaids of extra and fancy grades of good color and size.

Notwithstanding Saturday's disappointing experience all looked forward hopefully to Sunday, but when at 6 a. m. on that day rain began to come down, continuing all day, no one out and stock coming in heavily, the set-back was very severe for those whose business it was to find a good outlet for the vast accumulation. Buyers were very exacting and would touch nothing but the best stock. There being only a limited supply that could come under this head it went briskly at high figures. American Beauty more than held its own as compared with last year, the supply of specials being less. The longest stemmed buds found the readiest sale, $1.50 each being the top notch. Meteors, along with special Bridesmaids, touched 25 cents and Liberty, of which Thorley got Asmus' entire cut, brought big figures, the entire sale of this rose being about $1,000. In carnations there was no trouble to dispose of red varieties and superior stock of fancy kinds and such specialties as Olympia brought high prices. Orchids also sold in the liveliest manner.

The balance of the story, and that covers the greater part of the receipts, is one of extreme glut and a surplus difficult to move at any figure. This included all white flowers such as narcissi, Roman hyacinths, Bride roses and heaps upon heaps of white carnations, together with violets and mignonette, a large proportion of which was left over as unsalable and had to take its chances in the everyday trade of the balance of the week. Many violets had to be unloaded as low as $4 a thousand and carnations of ordinary grades were well sold at $1 per hundred. Violets had been lingering all through the week and the slump in their case was not unexpected, but it was much worse than any one had looked for. As to quality there were all kinds but the general run was good. The lower grade roses had to be sold very cheap but they did sell for something, which was not the case with much of the other stuff.

At the retail stores general satisfaction with the Christmas trade is expressed. The cut flower trade gave them no solicitude and all interest in it was deferred until Saturday afternoon, when the usual rush was experienced and a brisk business, estimated at twenty-five per cent over that of last year, was done. Holly wreaths and material of that class, with the enormous plant trade, fully occupied their time for the entire week previous and they all made money. The demand for Parisian baskets of growing plants showed an increase of fully thirty per cent in the establishments where they have been a feature in past years and they were seen in many localities for the first time this season. The windows of the leading Broadway and Fifth avenue stores were exceedingly beautiful as a rule and electric lighting was freely used to add to the brilliant effects obtained by the display of bright flowering and foliaged plants.

Thorley displayed ardisias and araucarias in white wicker pots, each decorated with a bow of scarlet ribbon; ericas, including melanthera and Wilmoreana in baskets and hampers, and fruiting oranges in baskets with orange satin trimmings. Here, as in other leading establishments, the soil in the flower pots was invariably hidden by green moss. The effect of Fleischman's window decoration was exquisite. It was framed with a garland of asparagus with pendant clusters of coral berries. Birch bark pots with scarlet sashes held specimen ericas, and Dailledouze Bros.' big No. 666 carnation occupied a central place. Only one thing marred the picture—a little pot of the common "lobster cactus" (Epiphyllum truncatum), labeled "Century plant, blooms once in 100 years." One of Small's big windows was ablaze with poinsettias arranged in a sloping tier, and the other was massed with Gloire de Lorraine begonia, Erica melanthera and oranges, with big wreaths of evergreen and scarlet bows, suspended above. Theo. Lang's Sixth avenue store was a perfect bower of green and scarlet Christmas bells. The sidewalk was like a dense Maine forest. Mr. Lang superintended the Christmas tree department, while Mrs. Lang presided over the indoor fineries.

All the Fifth avenue establishments were deeply engrossed in the plant trade, some of them finding an extra store necessary to accommodate the stock, as at Easter. In fact, the general effect was similar to Easter, the lilies alone being noticeably absent. Some establishments were so filled with plant arrangements as to leave only a narrow passageway open down the center for customers. George Stumpp had in one window an elaborate arrangement of Japanese curios, with a fantastic cave in the center, its depth illuminated by a wierd red light. Combination baskets were, as in the past, a leading feature here, the azaleas being among the best ever seen at this date. Primula obconica in low baskets and adorned with lavender ribbon, made a very delicate and pretty effect. Here another novelty was also seen—prunus branches in full bloom. Hodgson's big new store windows were resplendent with azaleas, primulas and ponisettias and some large baskets of Erica Wilmoreana arranged with Adiantum Farleyense were exceeding rich.

An electric fountain danced in the center of one of Alex. McConnell's windows, and the handsome combination baskets, which Mr. McConnell claims were first made popular here, were arranged in high tiers on all sides. Many of these were filled with bright dracænas as center plants and heaths of the melanthera, regerminans, and Wilmoreana sorts were also used largely. Two ladies were constantly employed giving the finishing touches with bright ribbons, etc. Mr. McConnell reported the biggest advance order trade in his history, and he had just completed the work of decorating the Gould establishment at Lakewood for the great Christmas fete. Another, and one of the handsomest window displays in the city, was that of Wadley & Smythe. A mass of Gloire de Lorraine, ericas and oranges filled the front, and this was flanked and backed by a little forest of poinsettias and dracænas, while overhead an enormous clump of mistletoe was suspended with scarlet ribbon. The Gallatin, a new place next door, had its show window filled with azaleas, over-dressed and smothered in colored tissue paper.

Siebrecht & Sons' place was very elaborately decorated, magnificent pyramids of bay, holly and box giving dignity to the exterior, and a brilliant massing of poinsettias, azaleas and heaths filled the interior. Choice orchids here and there added a rich effect to the display, and overhead hung heavy festoons of laurel and mistletoe. The busy crowd of assistants gave a good impression of the big holiday business being done. At the Rosary, Begonia Gloire de Lorraine looked very attractive in hampers with cover half opened, and Mr. Troy reported a large call for them in this form. Cattleyas and cinerarias were among the special things seen here, and some pyramidal box trees looked quite cheery with branches of red ilex berries introduced among their foliage. These ilex branches were generally used with effect in plant baskets where color was otherwise lacking.

Dards' Madison avenue store was almost impassable with plant baskets in great variety of combinations. Mr. Dards stated that he found his customers rather afraid of Glorie de Lorraine on account of previous experiences with all begonias, and asserted if it could only be shown that this lovely thing could be kept in perfect form for one week in a store window he could foresee an immense popularity for it. One of Mr. Dards' windows was exceedingly pretty and spring like in a delicate framing of yellow and white daisies, Paper White narcissi, hyacinths and lilies. Further up the avenue the McDonald Company and Hanft Bros. made a big display. Mr. Hanft stated that the business, both regular and special, had been unprecedentedly large, and the activity shown in and around this busy place proved his statement to be true. A novelty here was some well-flowered genistas.

The weather remains still exceedingly pleasant for the season. One Brooklyn firm reports having done a job of sodding last week, and the ground is scarcely crusted anywhere yet.

Alex. McConnell shipped on the St. Paul recently a box of thirty-six American Beauties which are said to have arrived in England in good condition, and were presented to the Queen.

A. Schultheis reports the most extensive plant trade ever experienced by him. All heaths and other flowering plants were sold out clean two weeks before Christmas.

The violet cords and tassels did not take this time among the swell florists of New York or their customers.

Foley has given up his up-town store.

ANOTHER CHRISTMAS HISTORY.—SATISFACTORY TRADE ALL AROUND.—RETAILERS REPORT BIG BUSINESS.—ADEQUATE SUPPLY EXCEPT OF BEAUTIES.—PALMS AND AZALEAS IN FAVOR.—GREENS WENT WELL.—HABERMEHL HAD A GOOD ORDER.—DOINGS AT BALA.—HUEBNER RECEIVES MUCH PRAISE.—RAILROAD GARDENING.—GOOD TALK FOR THE TRADE.—A NEW YEAR'S GREETING.

The great holiday has come and gone and leaves the flower trade here fairly well satisfied with results. In some cases the trade was, perhaps, not as large as was anticipated and prepared for but on the whole it has been satisfactory. The only item which could be said to be on the scarce list was American Beauty, the crops of several of the principal growers, notably Heacock and Burton, being off. Anderson had a fair supply and C. J. Price was in good form, while quantities of medium stock came from many smaller growers and helped to keep figures from soaring to any great altitude. Mr. Heacock says it's a hard condition, not only for the pocket-book but because regular customers are suspicious that they are not getting a fair proportion of the cut. They think that maybe Baltimore or Washington are getting some and are apt to glare at you in a warlike way very disconcerting to a timid person. Robert Craig says, "Joe, why don't you invite them out to your place and show them how little you've got?" But Joe says, "No, that wouldn't work because each one would want the whole lot to himself." There's one consolation, it's no trouble to get rid of the stock and that's a problem indeed when there's too many around. Besides, look at the big cuts and good prices all through the early part of the season.

Good violets were hard to get at the last moment, although quite plentiful all the early part of the week. Carnations were in ample supply, especially whites, and on Saturday and Monday there was a glut of stock that had rather a salty look. Extra fine flowers sold readily of course and brought good prices, 12½ cents being the maximum.

In plants palms and azaleas had the call, the latter being very good for the season, and were picked up quickly. Many more could have been sold if they had been forthcoming and in good flower. Lorraine begonia was, of course, the star novelty at most places and, although there were some left over, they sold well considering the rather high price. Mr. Cartledge is enthusiastic over this plant and thinks it one of the grandest things of recent introduction. He is inclined to favor Mr. Lonsdale's pale pink form because it holds its flowers better than the other when put into their greenhouse. The blossoms are larger also, and open out more. Cyclamens did not go so well but solanums and ericas were in good demand—the latter when fixed up with a bit of tartan ribbon hit the popular fancy to a dot and more of them could have been sold than were around. John Westcott's solanums were an exceptionally well fruited lot and at $5 a dozen gave the retailer a chance to offer an elegantly berried plant at $1.50 and big value for the money.

Holly, mistletoe and other greens sold fairly well, although there was a good deal of poor stock around. Christmas trees were a drag. One consignment of twelve car-loads were left untouched on the Huntingdon street siding and there were lots at every street corner late on Saturday evening begging for a buyer at half and quarter regular prices.

One of the notable events of the past week was the Irving reception by the Clover Club at the Bellevue. The decorations were by Hebermehl and were on a magnificent scale. Artistically they were all that could be desired and did credit to Mr. Habermehl's high reputation in this line. There were innumerable other receptions and parties of private, semi-private or public character and all the principal stores had their share of this class of trade during the week.

Joseph Kift & Son put in the busiest Christmas in their experience and the radiance around that neighborhood was so rubicund that one was not at all surprised to hear snatches of a glee song early on Christmas morning as the sun peeped over the horizon. "Hail, smiling morn, whose rosy fingers tip the hills with gold. Hail, Hail," and other refulgent outbursts of a similar character.

Pennock Bros. also report a splendid trade, their cash drawings being fifty per cent ahead of last year, which was up to that time the best in their history. Graham, Battles, Craig, Crawford, and Fox also report very satisfactory trade and are entirely happy, and I fancy most of the other stores are well pleased, so that on the whole, Christmas, 1899, will go down in history as one of the best the trade has yet experienced.

Jno. Haulbert, at Bala, has just commenced the erection of a three story stone dwelling for himself on Bryn Mawr avenue and has made extensive alterations on his greenhouse property to make room for this improvement. The next thing we will be likely to hear from this growing suburb will be a similar improvement on David Bearn's estate there. If the little blind god only knew what a fertile field there is here there would be some building going on in short order, sure.

Paul Huebner has received and is still receiving a gratifying amount of attention from the press on account of the paper on railroad planting which he read at the last meeting of the Florists' Club. To-day the Record quotes extensively and approvingly from it and adds the following interesting bit:

An interesting anecdote, illustrating the change of heart experienced by railroad officials in the past concerning this subject, is related of J. Lowrie Bell, now general traffic manager of the Jersey Central. Mr. Bell was for years general freight agent of the Reading, and in that capacity had occasion to visit Palmyra, a station on the Lebanon Valley branch. The agent in charge of the station at that time was Mr. Metzler, the present assistant transportation master, who, being a great lover of flowers, had devoted his spare time to planting flower beds about the station. When Mr. Bell saw these he apparently did not take kindly to them, and he suggested to Mr. Metzler that a station agent of the company had better devote his spare time to hustling for business rather than planting flower beds. Mr. Metzler acted upon the suggestion and planted no more flower beds at Palmyra. Ten years elapsed, and Agent Metzler had in the meantime been transferred to the station at Germantown. Here, Mr. Bell, in a visit one day, much to the agent's surprise, suggested that he secure some flowers and plant them about the station. Mr. Metzler called his attention to what he had said to him years before, and asked him if he had forgotten it. With characteristic candor, Mr. Bell replied: "No, I have not forgotten it, but you were just ten years ahead of us, and we are just catching up." What is being done on the Reading in the way of station landscape gardening is done even more extensively on the Pennsylvania lines, and there are comparatively few of the more important lines that do not give more or less attention to it. The Michigan Central has gained an enviable reputation for the beautifully-kept gardens at all its stations. At Ypsilanti the display in summertime is equal to that made by many ambitious parks, and every woman passenger on the through trains is presented with a little nosegay from a heaping basket kept for that purpose.

All of which is not only interesting but is the kind of talk every one in the trade should make it his business to foster and encourage. The Florists' Club here did a good thing in getting the Reading's gardener to talk before them, it added to his and the company's prestige and incidentally encouraged them and others to go on with the good work. It was good advertising for the Railway Company and just as good for horticulture. Now then, what's the matter with other florists' clubs going and doing likewise? Verbum sat sapienti, gentlemen, twiggez vouz? Get to work.

By the time this greets the eyes of my esteemed readers in Philadelphia, New Year's day, 1900, will have dawned and a general holiday in all lines will be in force. To the average florist New Year's day has more time for recreation than Christmas and I know of no better place to spend a few pleasant hours among congenial friends than at the Florists' Club. Chairman Jno. Westcott will be, as usual, master of ceremonies for the day and with his force of willing satellites will do the utmost possible to make things agreeable for everybody. Every one is welcome to come and sample the Commodore's punch and enjoy themselves, greeting friends, taking a hand on the alleys or in some other pastime to make the hours pass swiftly and agreeably. It will do you good. Don't make the mistake of supposing that the golden sands of time are naught but gravel or that the angels we meet are only angels after they are gone. Put on your seeing spectacles, not the wooden ones most of us usually wear, but the X ray kind that will infallibly find the good points which, take my word for it, predominate in most humans if we only had the wit to find them—the good points, I mean.

Wishing each, and all, happiness and prosperity for 1900, and that they may live till they knock out their brains, as Paddy said, with the silver knocker of their own door, I remain, yours in all sincerity, G. C. WATSON.

AN UNPRECEDENTED CHRISTMAS TRADE.—PLEASANT WEATHER AND MANY BUYERS.—LOCAL TRADE REMARKABLY HEAVY.—SHIPPING BUSINESS NOT AS GREAT AS USUAL—NO RUSH OF ADVANCE ORDERS.—WHOLESALERS BEAR THE BURDEN.—FIGHT AGAINST HIGH PRICES.—WHITE STOCK SUFFERS.—PLANTS IN FAVOR.—AFTER CHRISTMAS STOCK SHORT.—MANDA EXHIBITS CYPRIPEDIUMS.—NOTES.

Nobody on the ground disputes the fact that Boston's Christmas trade beat the record. Beginning with greens, following with plants and ending with cut flowers the business was unprecedented in its steadiness and volume. For this the remarkable weather was largely responsible. With the exception of a few rainy hours on Sunday afternoon, it was as pleasant as September out of doors. Everybody went shopping and the florists got their full share out of the multitudes that thronged the city streets and made them almost impassable for a whole week. What it would have been had the financial flurry not occurred when it did no one can say, but the shrinkage in holdings in Boston alone is estimated at nearly two hundred million dollars and this must have affected the flower buying more or less.

The retail stores all employed extra help and found all they could attend to right along up to Monday afternoon. The holly trade was limited only by the capacity to make it up in bunches and wreaths and all other green material, mistletoe alone excepted, enjoyed an equal demand. Plants were in better quality and fuller supply than heretofore at this season and the liberal way the various stores stocked up on Gloire de Lorraine, azaleas, primroses, etc, showed their confidence in this feature, which events proved to be not misplaced. On cut flowers they seemed so easy in their mind that with the exception of certain special stocks that are always in short supply, they refrained from giving orders ahead, being content to leave the responsibility of carrying the stock with the wholesalers who, in the absence of advance orders, were at a disadvantage all through and unable to foresee the outcome with any certainty. This careful policy left the retailers pretty well cleaned out when closing time came on Christmas day, with empty ice chests and depleted windows and if a belated customer showed up the necessary material to satisfy him was easily located by telephone.

The wholesalers once more learned that the market is no longer inclined to respond to the demands of the growers for advanced prices on flowers at the holidays. A few specialties such as prime Beauties and scarlet carnations finished up in good order but on most other goods rates were maintained with great difficulty and on white stock such as Roman hyacinths, white carnations and roses, lily of the valley, etc., as well as violets, the light demand and enormous output made a serious congestion, and although quotations on such material in quantity went down to the lowest notch large quantities remained unsold. The country trade, so large a factor generally in Boston's holiday business, did not develop the eagerness of previous years and the dealers at the cut flower market, as well as the commission men, felt it. Doubtless the weather, again, was responsible, for these out-of-town buyers have, with few exceptions, more or less greenhouse area of their own and this year the home production was everywhere at high water mark. Under such conditions a raise of twenty-five cents on violets or half a dollar on carnations is stubbornly contested and means the loss of sale for thousands of these flowers. There were a good many carnations of inferior quality in this market and returns on such are very low. While quite a percentage of stored stock was in evidence yet the proportion was not excessive nor to be compared with former practices in this direction which, considering the way everything turned out, is very fortunate for all concerned. The abundance of flowers in all localities made it rather an up-hill job for those who bought early at stiff figures to realize more than the first cost of material. Colder weather immediately following the holiday so curtailed the cut from the plants already depleted of their last available bud that there is still a fair chance to work off the surplus of white stock left over, where it is not too aged, but not at holiday figures.

W. A. Manda exhibited at Horticultural Hall on Saturday Cypripedium insigne var. Mrs. Geo. B. Wilson. This is the finest of the yellow flowering forms and this is its first appearance here. It was awarded a silver medal.

NEW RECORD ESTABLISHED BY THE HOLIDAY TRADE.—ENOUGH STOCK EXCEPT BEAUTIES AND METEORS.—BULBOUS FLOWERS SUFFER.—PRICES GENERALLY HIGH.—CITY BUYERS PAY BIG MONEY—SCARCITY FOR NEW YEAR'S.—PLANTS A FEATURE WITH SEVERAL RETAILERS—SOME GOOD WINDOWS.—WIETOR BROS PLAN TO BUILD.—JOTTINGS HERE AND THERE.

If any one failed to do business last week it was because he didn't try. There was business for every one, retailers, wholesalers, plantsmen and all. It was certainly the greatest Christmas Chicago has ever known. It was a bigger Christmas than a year ago despite the scarcity of stock. Pretty nearly everyone reports an increase over previous years, the only notable exception being Bassett & Washburn, whose principal stock is Beauties, and, as everyone knows, Beauties were in only half the usual Christmas supply. Mr. Washburn states that they turned away ten times as many Beauty orders as they filled. With the exception of Beauties and Meteors there was enough stock to meet all requirements, despite the forebodings engendered by the dark days of the two weeks previous. In fact there was a slight surplus of Brides, the call being for red. Of carnations there was a shortage of colors and white sold out clean. Violets were just equal to the demand and the only items of serious oversupply were lily of the valley, Roman hyacinths and Paper White narcissi. Of these the Romans were the only ones which suffered seriously. On the whole it may be accepted that the week's trade, if not the month's business, established an entirely new record for the cut flower business of this section, and one which it will be hard to eclipse. Shipping orders were large and numerous, and the city buyers were in anxious search of good stock. Out of town dealers need make no complaint at the prices of high grade blooms for 20 cents was readily paid in town for fine Meteors and one or two extra select lots brought 25 cents. Strictly fancy carnations were taken by the leading retailers at from 8 cents to 10 cents without a protest. In justice to the growers it must be said that most of the stock was of good quality and fresh.

Trade was quiet from Christmas day up to Friday, but everything had been cut so closely the week before that there was little stock in the market and prices held right up to the Christmas list. For several successive days it has not been an easy matter to fill orders and the local people found it a difficult task to get the stock they required. In addition to Beauties and Meteors, violets and calla lilies were put on the list of scarcities. Present indications point to a good supply with a few days of warm, sunny weather, but it will be a month before Beauties become plentiful.

The Christmas window at H. F. Halle's, on West Madison street, was among the most elaborate ever seen here. The plants used were ericas, poinsettias, cyclamens, primulas, well grown begonias, several varieties of azaleas and a few araucarias. All of the plants were either set in fancy jardinieres, baskets or trimmed with crepe paper, and the report is that all sold well.

Wienhoeber's display of Christmas plants was very extensive, his store and show house being filled to their utmost capacity. The stock included baby primrose in 6-inch pots, some very well grown cyclamens and primulas in from 4 to 8-inch pots as well as a number of fine plants of Deutsche Perle azalea and several other varieties. Mr Wienhoeber also had a collection of fancy baskets containing cyclamens and other blooming plants and ferns and, in common with other dealers who had provided stock of this character, found that they sold rapidly at profitable prices.

Wietor Bros. believe that the time is ripe for a considerable increase in their establishment at Rogers Park and are now in the market for material. They have placed orders for a portion of their glass and expect to require upwards of 3000 boxes. This is proving a very prosperous year for them and the consummation of their present plans will result in an addition of 150,000 feet to their producing capacity.

Lange had a show of choice blooms in his window last week which attracted much attention. He makes a special effort to have the best flowers the market affords for his window display and thousands of people stop to admire them. Other down-town retailers made good use of poinsettias, immortelles and other colored stock to obtain bright showings.

W. S. Kenney, head of the James H. Rice Co., is treasurer of the National Window Glass Jobbers' Association, which was recently chartered in New Jersey with a capital stock of $500,000, and is also president for the western division of the organization

The George Wittbold Company found the holiday trade the best on record and point to the unprecedented call for Christmas trees as a sure indication of the city's prosperity. They say that trees were not to be obtained last Monday.

W. W. Barnard & Co.'s cash drawer was rifled of about $100 on the night of December 23. It is thought the thief was concealed in the store at closing time.

Saginaw, Mich.

That the tide of prosperity has come this way and business is all that could be desired is admitted even by the most conservative element. It would be no exaggeration to assert that never in the history of this prosperous Saginaw valley were things in better condition than they are at the present time.

Improvements are noticeable on all sides. Wm. Roethke & Son have, during the past summer, enlarged their already extensive plant by three additional houses, each covering 20x170. As usual, no expense has been spared to make the houses all that might be called models of their kind. As I strolled along from house to house inspecting the carnations and roses it seemed to my mind that many a grower whose stock "don't seem to do so well," might profit by a trip to Saginaw and a call on these growers. Mr. Roethke does not claim to be a specialist, though his general stock is decidedly of the special order.

Grohmann Bros. have kept pace with the times in a manner commensurate with the progressive spirit of the up-to-date florist. Besides enlarging their plant, located on the outskirts of the city, by two good-sized carnation houses, they have also remodeled, enlarged and refurnished their Fitzhugh street store with its adjacent conservatory, introducing several attractive features, such as incandescent lights, tiled counters, etc. Grohmann Bros. grow a general stock of cut flowers and plants for their retail trade, their stock usually being of a fine grade.

One seldom calls on Chas. Frueh & Son without finding something about their fine establishment to interest him. Those elegant oil paintings on the walls of their flower store are decidedly attractive and, in my opinion, are fine enough to adorn the parlor of any pretentious house. The roses and carnations here, though invariably good, are doing especially fine this season. The chrysanthemums were the finest in years and sold at sight, while palms and decorative plants are as fine as one sees in a month's travel. And right here I wish to extend congratulations in behalf of his many friends in the trade as well as my humble self to Chas. Frueh, Jr., upon the happy event of his recent marriage to Miss May Regnadt. May their shadows never grow less!

Mr. J. B. Goetz is improving and enlarging his place. During the past summer he built two additional houses, one for violets, 10x50, and the other one for carnations, 18x100. Mr. Goetz does things in the right way. With a well-equipped modern plant and a thorough knowledge of floriculture, born of years of experience, there is but little wonder that things about his establishment look spick and span and his general stock is all that could be desired. Mr. Goetz is experimenting upon two scarlet seedlings, one of which, in the opinion of all who have seen it, being decidedly meritorious, possessing all the good points required of a first-class carnation. Its color is especially attractive, being a brilliant scarlet, unlike anything seen in a scarlet of recent introduction. It is Mr. Goetz' intention to exhibit it at the coming carnation show in February.

Mrs. Geo. Waldbauer reports a good trade all along the line. HOMO.

Grand Rapids, Mich.

As anticipated the Christmas trade was a record breaker. The weather was magnificent, bringing out thousands of blooms that otherwise would not have opened. Prices were the best, particularly on carnations, which sold at from 50 cents to $1 per dozen, the 75 cents rate being the most popular. The trade in holly wreaths was "out of sight" and the town was cleaned up of every little vestige of the red berried shrub. Plants were in wonderful demand and sold out close, unless it was palm stock, which is not as much sought after as formerly. Flowers of all kinds, especially colored stock, were not up to the demand, and nothing was wasted. Shipping was excellent. Everyone hopes that this era of prosperity has come to stay. The volume of business is variously estimated at from ten to twenty-five per cent in excess of last year. G. F. CRABB.

NORTHAMPTON, MASS.—A. Parks has put in a new refrigerator, which is a beauty.

ROCKLAND, ME.—Harry A. Mather was married on November 29 to Miss Augusta A. Sherman.

BALTIMORE, MD.—Patterson Park conservatory has been closed as unsafe. It is hoped that the structure may be rebuilt in the spring.

DANVILLE, ILL.—Prosperity has brought John Willis a bright baby boy to add to his working force and in time succeed his father, who was recently appointed florist at the Soldiers' Home.

UTICA, N. Y.—Peter Crowe has been cutting some fine maidenhair ferns. Wm. Mathews a large crop of orchids and fancy carnations and Geo. Benedict some extra Bridesmaids from year-old plants.

MONMOUTH CO., N. J., HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.—At a well attended meeting of the Monmouth County Horticultural Society on December 15, 1899, a communication from Prof Byron D. Halsted was read and it was decided that his lecture shall be on chrysanthemum rust and mildew on roses, to be given in January. The treasurer, W. Kennedy, read his annual report, which shows that the bank account of the society is increasing annually. James Roe was elected to active membership.

NEWPORT, R. I.—The annual meeting of the Newport Horticultural Society was held December 13 and was largely attended. Reports of the various officers indicated that the society is in a gratifying condition in all respects. Officers were elected as follows: President, Robert Laurie; vice-presidents, Joseph Gibson and Alexander Ogg; recording secretary, Robert Johnston; financial secretary, Bruce Butterton; treasurer, Richard Gardner; sergeant-at-arms, William F. Smith, and an executive committee of twelve members. The outcome of this election seems to indicate that a young and progressive element will be at the helm during the coming year and without doubt the society will be heard from.

The Garden (English) mentions a pale yellow sport from Chrysanthemum Western King which has been named General Symons.

Cyclamen Papilio as exhibited at English shows has been commented upon very unfavorably, the general effect of the groups being said to be ragged and poor.

A so-called white form of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine is advertised by an English nurseryman under the name of Caledonia. It is said, however, that the flowers are not pure white, but rather cream-colored.

We send the American Florist every week to the address of any person in the trade of the United States, Canada and Mexico for only $1 per year; to all other countries in the postal union $2 per year. Please send your subscription now.

While we still import about $1,000,000 worth of window glass annually the amount reaching our shores from abroad has been reduced over 300,000 boxes annually during the past four years and only twelve per cent of the consumption is now covered by importations.

It is proposed to hold a sweet pea exhibition and conference in London, England, during July, 1900, in celebration of the bi centenary of its introduction into Great Britain. The secretary and treasurer is Richard Dean, 42 Ranelagh road, Ealing, London, W., England, who requests the support of all interested.

Xl all insecticide, according to a late English paper, is a combination of nicotine and camphor dissolved in dilute alcohol, this being the testimony of a chemist given in a suit against a dealer for selling it contrary to the laws governing the sale of poisons. The actual analysis was: Nicotine 37.3 per cent, camphor 34 5 per cent, alcohol 15 1 per cent, the balance being water.

In England a number of analyses of soil have been made from various places noted for the superior qualty of the roses there produced In chemical and mechanical composition the different lots varied widely and the conclusion was reached that the great excellence of the roses produced was not due to any special ingredients in the soil but was more likely to be due to favorable climatic conditions.

To Prevent Fro ting of Windows.

The following recipe for preventing the frosting of shop windows may be given in good time, so as to be at hand when needed: Paint them with a solution of glycerine in sixty-three per cent spirits of wine. Glycerine, like chloride of lime, has the property of absorbing water, and this action serves to entirely overcome the difficulty.—Commoner and Glassworker.

Mr. Donald's Chrysanthemums.

Ed. Am. Florist:—In reply to the query of "Alpha" in your issue of the 23d inst. as to whether the chrysanthemum plants recently illustrated in your columns were grown in jadoo or ordinary compost I have to state that they were all grown in ordinary compost. I take this opportunity to add that since these illustrations appeared I have had several requests from your subscribers for information about the culture of chrysanthemum plants, and wish to state that I can give no better advice than that which has already been given in previous issues of the American Florist by Mr. T. D. Hatfield. Wm. Donald.

The C. S. A. Cup Contest.

The silver cup offered by the Chrysanthemum Society of America for the seedling scoring the highest average before three or more committees, is awarded to Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich., for their new variety, Goldmine, which scored as follows:

At New York.....	Com. scale	95	Exhib. scale	95
At Philadelphia..	" "	88	" "	88
At Chicago.....	" "	92	" "	..
At Boston.....	" "	97	" "	97
		372		280

Average commercial scale, 93; average exhibition scale, 93.33. The two scales give a grand average of 93 16.

The variety Colonel D. Appleton was a close second in this contest, with a total average of 92.16.

About Fungicides.

Ed. Am. Florist:—Can Bordeaux mixture be used in a dry state on carnations and chrysanthemums? If so, how is it prepared? What are the best fungicides mostly used by florists for chrysanthemums, carnations and violets, and where can they be purchased? A Beginner.

There is no satisfactory dry Bordeaux mixture. Preparations of this name have been prepared, but their value has not been shown. One of the best fungicides for use under glass is ordinary flowers of sulphur applied as a dust directly to the foliage. Fungicides containing copper have a tendency to more or less injure the plants under glass, hence we do not generally recommend them. A very good fungicide can be made by mixing three ounces of copper carbonate with eight ounces of slacked lime. This should be applied in the form of a powder. Such fungicides are not in the market and therefore will have to be prepared by the user himself. B. T. Galloway.

DEPARTMENT OF PLANT REGISTRATION.

Benjamin Dorrance registers new rose Sara Nesbitt, a sport from Madame Cusin, a size larger than the parent. Color, light pink, very delicate, shading deeper in center; does not grow dark in summer weather; a better grower than Madame Cusin, habit otherwise identical. Wm. J. Stewart, Sec'y.

Chrysanthemum Society Committees.

Boston, December 16.—Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich., exhibited Superba, a silvery pink Japanese incurved, which scored commercial scale 88 points.

Cincinnati, December 16.—Superba before this committee scored commercial scale 91 points.

Philadelphia, December 19.—Anton Zvolanek, West Hoboken, N. J., exhibited Miss Florence E. Denzer, a light pink Japanese reflexed, which scored commercial scale 83 points.

Boston, December 20.—Miss Florence E. Denzer before this committee scored commercial scale 86 points.

Cape Flowers and Immortelles.

All the immortelles of commerce are produced in southern France. The plants are grown in the open field, propagation being effected by division of the roots, and it takes three years to develop a good bearing plant. It follows that if destructive freezing weather is experienced the crop is short for two years in succession, a contingency which has happened more than once within the memory of American dealers. The yellow flowers are picked when fully expanded, about July, bundled up and hung in lofts to dry, and are graded first, second or third according to quality. The next process is to bunch, case and ship at the best possible price. The growers sell to the jobbers who are themselves partly growers, and who distribute the goods to dealers all over the world. Dealers like to dilate on the enormous business they do in this line and individuals have been known to sell about three times the entire crop of immortelles in one year! All dyed immortelles are first bleached white and the most imperfect white ones are mostly used for dyeing purposes, the second and third grade of yellow finding their principal outlet in this way.

Cape flowers grow wild in South Africa. They are collected when half expanded and in the best quality are given special treatment in drying and sun-bleaching by careful packers. A large percentage of the crop, however, is picked and packed at random and, as most florists have learned to their sorrow, is very much mixed. The collectors send to the country merchants who trade the goods off to Cape Town commission men or consign them. The crop is mostly engaged by the European merchants, from whom the supply for America is generally bought. The market price of Cape flowers is governed by the laws of supply and demand. They are apt to rule high this year, not necessarily because of the South African war but on account of a reported shortage in the crop. As to quality, we shall know nothing until we see the goods.

OBITUARY.

LORD PENZANCE.

Lord Penzance, originator of the Penzance sweetbriars, died at his Eashing Park residence, Surrey, England, on the 9th inst., aged 84 years.

G. C. STEDMAN.

George C. Stedman, who conducted a prosperous business at Middletown, Conn., died December 17, after two weeks' illness with pneumonia. He was 47 years of age.

ALFRED OUTRAM.

Alfred Outram died at his residence in London, England, December 8, at the age of 52. Mr. Outram was well known to the trade of the United States and Canada, having transacted business in both countries frequently in the interests of the English firms, B. S. Williams & Son and Sutton & Sons.

A. R. STARR.

The recent demise of A. R. Starr is reported from Joliet, Ill., where he was for many years in business at 110 Macomber street. He was a native of Ithaca, N. Y., but established himself at Joliet in 1871. He had suffered from paralysis for some time. Mrs. Starr and three daughters survive.

JOHN GIBSON.

John Gibson, one of the pioneer gardeners of Newport, R. I., and father of Gibson Bros, the florists, died December 19. He was an octogenarian, having been born November 28, 1819, at Armagh, Ireland. He served a nine year's apprenticeship at the Palace Gardens at Armagh, beginning with 1835, and for three years was head gardener to Lord John Beresford. It was in 1847 that he came to New York, where he worked with Andrew Reid, afterwards becoming superintendent for Alfred Bridgeman, at Astoria, and then going to Highcliffe for a four year's engagement. In 1859 he took charge of Charles H. Russell's place, Oaklawn, at Newport, remaining in the employ of the family until the estate was sold to James Stillman, in 1891, with whom he continued until his death. Mr. Gibson was married in 1848 and his wife, their three sons and three daughters survive him. Mr. and Mrs. Gibson celebrated their golden wedding less than a year and a half ago, receiving their many friends with characteristic hospitality. The obsequies on Friday, December 22, were largely attended, the concourse including most of the florists and gardeners of Newport, who gathered to pay a last tribute to one who was always their friend.

B. K. BLISS.

Benjamin K. Bliss passed away in Boston, Mass., on Christmas morning. Mr. Bliss was born in Onondaga, N. Y., October 4, 1819. He was engaged in the drug business in Springfield, when his love for flowers led him to make the selling of flower seeds in a small way an adjunct to his trade. This developed so rapidly that he finally gave up the drug business and in the year 1845 established himself as a dealer in seeds, flowers and plants. He was one of the first to perceive the possibilities in the catalogue mail trade and the series of catalognes issued by him, beginning with the year 1853 were convincing evidences of his foresight and progressiveness. Early in the sixties he began to make use of fine illustrations in his lists and a beautiful colored plate adorned his autumn bulb catalogue issued in 1867. In this year the firm name was changed to B. K. Bliss & Sons, Messrs. Samuel B. and Elijah W. being taken into partnership, and an auxiliary store was opened in New York city. In 1869 the entire establishment was removed to 41 Park Row and 151 Nassau street, New York, in 1871 to 23 Park place and 20 Murray street and two or three years later to 34 Barclay street, where business was continued until the crash of 1885, which was the close of the business career of the firm. Among the valuable novelties in flowers and vegetables which Mr. Bliss claimed the honor of having introduced were Bliss' American Wonder, Everbearing and Abundance peas, Early Rose and Triumph potatoes, auratum, Krameriand Hansoni lilies, Aquilegia chrysantha and Ipomœa leptophylla. In his bulb catalogue of 1869 appeared a fine colored plate of Lilium auratum, bulbs of which had been up to that time selling at from $2 to $5 each. Mr. Bliss was a pioneer in all that is enterprizing in the seed trade as carried on to-day. He had a rare faculty in advertising and made liberal use of the mediums afforded for interesting the public in his goods. He was a remarkably good judge of merit in a novelty and was always ready to pay a good price for anything that was worthy. His whole heart and soul was in his business and his amiable disposition and pleasant manner made him universally liked by his business associates. His invitation in his catalogue for strangers in the city to call whether purchasers or not was not made thoughtlessly, as those who had the privilege of calling on him learned, for he was never too busy to stop and extend a kindly greeting. After the closing up of his business he spent about one year with W. W. Rawson, in Boston, and then retired to a quiet home in East Bridgewater, frequently visiting the library and exhibition rooms of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society. On August 22, last, while at Onset he received a stroke of paralysis and since that time has been confined to his room in Boston with his mental faculties perfectly clear, but physically almost helpless. He leaves a widow—his second wife, to whom he was married fifteen years ago—one daughter and one son, Samuel, the other two sons having died some years ago.

ST. JOSEPH, MICH.—The greenhouses of August Loeffler were destroyed by fire on Christmas eve, entailing a loss of $5,000 with no insurance.

ROCHESTER, N. H.—A portion of the conservatory owned by Stephen A. Tuttle was destroyed by fire on the morning of December 17. The loss, including plants and structure, is estimated at $1200.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.—In regard to violets M. J. Lynch states that black fly ruined the early crop in a good many houses, and that it is safe to say that half the growers have not, up to New Year's, picked 100 flowers where they picked 1000 last season. The continuous warm weather since October seems to have aided and abetted the black fly in causing trouble. Spot is not so bad as last season and seems to be decreasing year by year. Flowers are a better color than usual, but are short-stemmed and in little demand.

Little Falls, N. Y.

John O. Graham, formerly of Graham Bros., of Binghamton, moved to this city some two years ago, embarking in business on the corner of Garden and Second streets, almost in the center of the city. With a thorough experience in the florist business he had but little difficulty in building up a trade that surpassed even his own expectations. Thus encouraged, he kept on improving his place from time to time and during the past fall a modern rose house was added to his range. Roses, carnations and violets are his specialties. A good, all-around grower, Mr. Graham is also a skillful decorator and designer, a combination of faculties that go a good way toward paving one's way to success.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

I take pleasure in announcing to you that I have this day purchased the Wholesale Cut Flower and Commission Business of G. L. Huscroft & Co., No. 444 Sixth Ave., Pittsburg, Pa., and shall continue the business at the same address. I trust I shall receive from your hands the same fair treatment and patronage which you extended to the old firm, and take this measure of soliciting your patronage.

Respectfully,
JOHN B. FERGUSON.

THE SEED TRADE.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

ALEXANDER RODGERS, Pres; ALBERT McCULLOUGH, Vice-Pres; S. F. WILLARD, Wethersfield, Conn., Sec'y and Treas.

VISITED CHICAGO: Charles P. Braslan, of San Francisco, en route to Philadelphia.

CONTRACT prices on peas and beans for the crop of 1900 are now interesting the larger houses in the trade.

THE supply of clover seed at Toledo, Ohio, is considerably smaller than it was at this time in the two previous years.

WITH the passing away of B. K. Bliss, particulars of which appear elsewhere in this issue, a most notable man in the seed trade and a pioneer in the catalogue business is no more. Though out of active business for a score of years, his mind was bright and undimmed and his interest in all horticultural matters keen to the last. Peace to his ashes.

Cincinnati.

CHRISTMAS FAIRLY SATISFACTORY.—THE UNFAVORABLE WEATHER HURTS TRADE.—STOCK ENOUGH EXCEPT OF RED.—GOOD WINDOWS.—NOTES.

Christmas is now a thing of the past and the boys are all well pleased, having done a good business in their various lines. Some of the storemen report a small increase over last year, while others claim it to be about the same. The market was not up to expectations owing to unfavorable weather. We had a cold and disagreeable rain all day Saturday and cut flowers were retailed at about wholesale prices. Louis Pfeifer's Sons had a magnificent lot of roses in market, which they held back, and whether they learned a lesson or not is hard to say, but they could have realized twenty-five per cent more had they disposed of them wholesale. The Cincinnati Cut Flower Co. had more and far better carnations than ever before; they had enough stock to fill orders with the exception of red roses. Violets were mostly all shipped in from Virginia. Messrs. Peterson, Sunderbruch, Critchell, McFadden and the Hoffmeister Floral Co. had grand displays in their show windows. Notable among blooming plants were cyclamens, azaleas and poinsettias. Harrisii were in limited supply with little demand.

One of Mr. Prochauzky's boilers sprung a leak during the cold snap and Christmas was therefore not as pleasant to him as it might have been. H. SCHWARZ.

WEST HAVEN, CONN.—A. I. Thompson was painfully injured by a fall, caused by attempting to step over a seat in leaving a theatre last Wednesday afternoon.

MALDEN, MASS.—Benj. Grey has closed his store. Peter Ball has a house of particularly fine adiantum. J. W. Foote is cutting some extra good Daybreak carnations.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.—In the absence of President Newbold, Wm. G. Saltford occupied the chair at the December meeting of the Dutchess County Horticultural Society. H. J. Osterholdt, Paul Seidlin and J. C. Barrett were elected to membership. Secretary W. G. Gommersall announced his intention of offering a resolution at the next meeting changing the hour of the session from afternoon to evening in hopes of securing a larger attendance.

THE NURSERY TRADE.

AM. ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.
W. J PETERS Pres.; O. S. LAKE, Vice-Pres.; GEORGE C. SEAGER, Rochester. N. Y., Sec'y.

AMERICAN nursery stock is meeting with favor at Cape Town, South Africa.

THE board of commissioners of Lincoln Park, Chicago, will this week complete new plantations which have cost about $21,000.

J. E. BAKER, Commissioner of Horticulture of the State of Washington, states that many stories of the destruction of infested imported nursery stock are gross exaggerations.

D. J. FOGERTY, of Omaha, is suing several parties to recover damages to the amount of his profits had they not refused to accept goods ordered on the usual nurserymen's contract.

The California Privet.

What is known as the Californian privet, though really a Japanese shrub, Ligustrum ovalifolium, is an uncommonly profitable shrub for florists to handle as well as for nurserymen. Until its use as a hedge plant, some ten or more years ago, there was nothing which served its purpose in the north. The south has its Cherokee and Macartney roses and its pyracantha, but the roses are not hardy enough for northern use and the pyracantha cannot be increased as quickly as is desirable; besides that, it does not form a hedge in as short a time as the privet does.

Privet hedges were nothing new when the Californian was introduced, but the one before used, Ligustrum vulgare, did not possess the quickness of growth nor the lovely green foliage of the other. And not only are the leaves large and bright green, they are almost evergreen as well. In fact, I am told that the officials of the custom house in New York have it classed as an evergreen, but in this they differ from standard authorities as well as from the hundreds who grow it as single specimens and in hedges. Nevertheless it is very nearly evergreen. In mild winters the foliage holds green until the new growth is almost ready to appear, and in sheltered positions, when in hedge use, it forms a screen to some extent until the young leaves come, and especially when the plants are young and vigorous.

There are many places where this privet is as yet almost unknown as a hedge plant and were a hedge of it set out by some one, to show its merits, it would soon be called for by many of those who would recognize its desirability. The ease with which it can be increased and transplanted, and the severe prunings it may receive without harm, all place it above any other plant known for its purpose.

This privet has been grown about Philadelphia for perhaps fifteen years and until last winter without any injury from cold. The unusually severe winter of 1898-99 slightly injured some hedges and plants on sunny slopes, but to no serious extent anywhere. But injury to it in this way is no great loss, as it is nothing more than a pruning, resulting in a far bushier growth than before.

The propagation of this privet may be by cuttings of either hard or soft wood. The former is by taking the shoots of the past season, cutting them into eight-inch lengths, and setting them out in nursery rows in the spring. Make them during winter and bury them underground, or in boxes of sand or soil in a quite cool cellar or cave until spring comes. Green cuttings are from young growing shoots and are to be struck in frames or in greenhouses in summer. Under either system a good stock is soon had.

There are two other ligustrums on trial for the same use, viz., L. Japonicum and L. lucidum. These are two evergreens, both natives of China. The tests are chiefly to prove what degree of cold they will stand. L. Japonicum has a very pleasing foliage, reminding one a good deal of the European myrtle, Myrtus communis. There is no doubt of its evergreen character. Last winter its tops suffered somewhat from the below zero weather they endured for several days, but, as suggested in speaking of L. ovalifolium, this simply acts as a pruning and makes the plant bushier. It is much used as a single specimen about the capitol grounds at Washington, which is where I first saw it. The other one, L. lucidum, is well named, as its very large leaves are of a lustrous, shining green, and are quite persistent. It has not had the trial for hardiness L. Japonicum has, but its reputation for standing cold is good. Should it prove as hardy as L. ovalifolium it will make a leading hedge plant, being vigorous, large-leaved and evergreen. A dwarf variety of this species, L. coriaceum, an uncommonly pretty-leaved kind, is met with here and there in collections under the name of L. Ibota. L. Ibota is not at all like it, being a tall growing kind with relatively small foliage. JOSEPH MEEHAN.

Minneapolis.

Christmas trade was the best that has ever been known here. Flowers were in good supply and fair quality. Beauties sold at $18 per dozen for the best and other roses sold at from $2.50 to $3 per dozen. Carnations, fancy, sold readily for $1.50; common, sold for 75 cents to $1, which was higher than ever before. Violets brought from $3 to $4 per hundred. The demand for plants is increasing from year to year, and palms and Boston ferns sold well. There was much inquiry for poinsettias, which were only displayed in limited quantity. Holly and green sold readily, but the supply was equal to the demand. R. Will & Son brought in a very fine lot of carnations. E. Nagel & Co. had the best lot of violets that has ever been exhibited here; they were Marie Louise, large flowers with stems over six inches long. Part of them were grown in bottomless pots, which have proved to be very successful. L.

BURLINGAME, COL.—E. W. McLellan recently had a narrow escape from the loss of his sight. He was showing some visitors the arrangement of his coal oil boiler when a tongue of flame flashed into his face, removing his hirsute and burning him painfully.

The Hitchings Ball.

The employes of the well known firm of horticultural architects and builders, Messrs. Hitchings & Co., announce their third annual ball, to be held in Columbia Hall, 608 Ocean avenue, Jersey City, N. J., Tuesday evening, February 6, 1900. The committee on arrangements is an unusually active one and promises that this ball will eclipse all previous attempts. At the recent meeting for the election of officers for the ensuing year the following were chosen: President, Walter G. Gibbons; vice-president, John N. McArthur.

Orange, N. J.

The section usually designated as the Oranges extends from South Orange to Newark and includes an area of thirty-six square miles, wherein every branch of the trade is represented. Beginning with the large wholesaler, we go first to the extensive houses of W. A. Manda, where Daniel MacRorie is our guide, if we chance to catch him between trips "on the road," and as we walk through the labyrinth of aisles he points to the great gaps in the stock which show what has gone out in the last week. Nearly everything available is sold, for there is a demand for all kinds of decorative plants. They have sold quantities of Dracæn terminalis, the call being strong for anything red.

There is quite a colony of rose growers around Mountain Station, who send their stock chiefly to the New York market, and one and all speak of the promise of brisk Christmas trade; "it is not, however, because there are so few in the business," says Mr. Boyle. The Lyon houses are in charge of Raymond Kuhn and are devoted to roses and carnations, with a few plants in pots for chance retail trade. During the summer two of the larger houses have been thrown into one span, a new roof covering the structure, which is now filled with carnations in full crop. Mr. Kuhn pointed with pride to the roses ready for packing and speaks of the interest with which he is looking forward to the delivery of the new rose Liberty; he was formerly with E. G. Asmus. His carnations are promising a large crop and consist mainly of Scott, Dean, Daybreak and McGowan. There is but little stem rot this season in houses where it formerly was very troublesome. Smilax also is grown here.

Even the Japanese greenhouse, a little lower down, has made preparation for Christmas and Chabo Hiba, Bon Sai and fern balls mingle with quaint cacti and native grass in unique pots; in fact, ceramics figure here as prominently as do plants. A quantity of dwarf cherry trees in jardinieres are seen at the back of the house, resting.

Leaving the vicinity of the railroad passing over to "Castlewood," always of interest to the gardener because the birthplace of so many chrysanthemums of prominence, we find five large houses stocked with carnations. George Atkinson says he has no canse to complain except for the scarcity of flowers. The chrysanthemums caused delay in getting the carnations in and he still has many chrysanthemum blooms; the trade will hear of some novel seedlings in due time. His mushrooms are doing well and the nine houses, formerly Herman's, one mile south from here, are stocked with fine lettuce now ready for market. It calls for rare executive ability to run two places when they are so far apart, but Mr. Atkinson is equal to it.

On the main street of Orange, Popken & Collins' plate glass windows are a perpetual flower show. Their houses are on Bell street, a block or two away. Referring to the two acres of carnations planted last spring and now housed, Mr. Popken says that they have no over supply of these flowers, that instead they are running short. In regard to the prospect for Christmas trade, he says, that if florists but equal the trade in other lines, all will do well.

The old established house of John McGowan shows some fine carnations, grown chiefly for his own trade, those of largest size being Mrs. Bradt. He complains of the scarcity of both flowers and plants, a heavy demand for potted plants having sprung up. He speaks of enlarging his glass to meet the demands of the wholesale trade which his reputation as a carnation grower has brought him.

The area of the violet grower is both over and under the mountain, the houses of Louis Conrad, of West Orange and J. C. Williams, of Montclair, being the most prominent. Both complain of the scarcity of blooms; though the quality is good the yield is only half what it was at this time last year. Mr. Williams' carnations are particularly fine; 2,000 were waiting shipment and many more were uncut on the benches. He complains of stem rot.

David Rose, at his new quarters, is making preparation for a large Christmas trade in palms and decorative plants; he says trade is good. Mr. Rose has other good things besides Polly Rose.

A. S. Wallace, the largest lily of the valley grower in this section, has also some fine primulas and poinsettias, besides smilax, asparagus, tulips and general stock. He is making large shipments each day to the New York market.

A. Chesney, up toward Pompton, has all he can do and Rassbach & Son, of Bloomfield, have their houses filled with roses and carnations for which there is greater demand than they can meet.

On the whole the outlook is encouraging and the feeling of cheerfulness at the prospect of a large Christmas trade reflects itself on one taking this round, making it a most enjoyable trip.

HARTFORD, CONN.—The Connecticut Horticultural Society at its annual meeting decided to give but three shows during the year 1900, namely, a sweet pea show in July, fruit, vegetables and dahlias in September and chrysanthemums and carnations in November. ETHEL CROCKER

Absolutely the BEST PINK CARNATION ever offered the trade.

Grown equally successfully by Hill, Craig, and myself; you are not buying it on a venture, but knowing that it is not a success in one soil and a failure in another.

In color, size, fragrance and stem it is just what the "storemen" want. In habit, constitution and freedom of bloom it is just what the grower wants, never out of crop from September to July, more flowers to the square foot than any other known variety and practically no seconds.

With 18,000 stock plants to work from there is no danger of over propagation, and you are not asked to wait until planting out time for your cuttings but can have them whenever wanted. Orders entrusted to me will have my personal attention, both in the selection of the cuttings and the filling of the order.

Price per 100, $10; per 25, $2.50; per 1000, $75; per 250, $18.75. HERR'S PANSIES at $4.00 per 1000, and a regular assortment of CARNATIONS in a list ready Jan. 1st.

ALBERT M. HERR, Lancaster, Pa.

Rose Crimson Rambler.

As a pot plant for retail sales this rose is incomparable. Its hundreds of blossoms all open together and seem to improve for at least two and even three weeks. The bright crimson color holds without fading and contrasts finely with the glossy foliage. It Forces Easily. We have fine dormant stock.

2-year-old, 2 to 3 feet, well branched, own roots, per dozen, $2.00; per 100, $15.00.
3-year-old, 4 to 5 ft., well branched, budded or own roots, doz. $3.00; per 100, $20.00.

BUSINESS BRISK AND STOCK GOOD —RELATIVE VALUE OF VIOLETS.—SIEVERS' CARNATIONS IN THE LEAD.—NEW STORES.—PERSONAL JOTTINGS OF INTEREST.

Business is now very good in this city and seems likely to continue so. There is enough stock to go around. The quality has improved all along the line and one can now have first-class flowers. Roses are very good, both in color and size. There are some magnificent Bridesmaids and Brides now coming in from Mr. Nicholson at San Lorenzo. Beauties and Meteors are of fairly good quality. Violets are in good demand, particularly Princess of Wales. There is also a good sale for Californias, as they stand shipping much better than the Princess. Marie Louise violets are quite scarce as many of the growers have discontinued growing this old-time favorite. Sievers' new seedling carnations are very fine and are quite the rage. They hold up very well in price. Some splendid Flora Hill are in the market also. Some very fine lily of the valley were seen last week at Pelicano's. They retailed very readily at $1 per dozen. Romans seem to move slowly as also do chrysanthemums, which are of poor quality now.

P. J. Murray and A. Lallemond have opened a flower store at 61 West Santa Clara street, San Jose, under the name of the Golden Gate Floral Co.

Luther Burbank, of Santa Rosa, attended the fruit growers' convention at San Jose last week and delivered a highly interesting and instructive address upon new fruits.

The fourth annual ball of the San Francisco Florists' Club was held on December 10. Frank Pelicano was floor manager, ably assisted by Prof. Peter Matria. The hall was tastefully decorated and the event was a financial success.

Gualteri Armeti has accepted a position with Mrs. Leland Stanford at Menlo Park.

Michael Pieata, who started the first market garden near San Francisco, died last week. He was 77 years of age and came to the coast in 1848. He leaves a widow and five children.

B. J. Welsh has started a flower store at 613 K street, Sacramento.

Tiffin, O.

Louis Ullrich's Christmas trade was none the less for the excellent three-column illustrated write-up of his establishment which appeared in one of the leading local papers a few days prior to the holiday. The story was told of the growth of Mr. Ullrich's floricultural interests from an amateur beginning to the range of fourteen houses in which he raises a variety of good stock to meet the demands of his large local and shipping trade, and the narrative lost nothing in the telling by the fact that it was all true. His success with Golden Gate is known the length of the land, probably even better than it is known at home, and served as an introduction to his good work with other varieties. Carnations came in for their share of publicity, and blooming plants and the great variety of miscellaneous stock were commented upon in a way which might be commended to the notice of other owners of greenhouses containing many things which the public would like to read about if the tale were told in a pleasing way.

Butted Glass.

This is no longer an experiment, it has come to stay. There are various ways of making Butted Roofs, but the best way is with the Clipper Bar.

With this bar you can make a roof that is absolutely free from drip, and glass cannot be torn out by the wind. Butted glass makes a tight roof, a warm house and saves fuel. It lasts longer, looks better and costs less than the old-fashioned roof. But do not think that this is the only bar we sell, for it is not; we furnish what people want and there is nothing in greenhouse material that you cannot get from us, and all of open-air-dried Cypress clear of bright sap, stained sap, knots and all other defects.

HOLIDAY TRADE.

Many reports of good business during the holidays continue to reach us, a number of which follow herewith:

OLEAN, N. Y.—Mrs. F. H. Johnson says Christmas trade was the best in ten years and everybody paid cash.

AUGUSTA, GA.—H. W. T. Balk states that Christmas trade was double previous years and that the prospects for spring are bright.

HAVERHILL, MASS.—G H. Hill reports trade slightly better than a year ago. There was increased sale for flowering plants and holly.

LITTLE ROCK, ARK.—Tipton & Hurst found a twenty-five per cent increase in trade with the usual holiday prices but hardly enough stock.

FARGO, N. D.—Christmas trade, says A. T. Shotwell, was forty per cent ahead of last year, with just stock enough to go around. There was not much call for plants.

CHATHAM, ONT.—Fanny Tissiman says Christmas trade beat all records. Carnations were largely called for and azaleas and cyclamens sold best among plants.

LOUISVILLE, KY.—Fred Haupt reports good trade and sufficient stock. The only feature different from previous Christmases was the increased call for violets.

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH.—R. E. Evans says trade was more than double last year's. Prices were much higher although there were enough flowers for all. Palms sold very well.

BUTTE, MONT.—Law Bros. say trade was double last year's, with prices much higher. There was a great call for Beauties. Plants were scarce but anything would have sold.

FREMONT, NEB.—C. H. Green says Christmas trade was the best on record here. Supply was almost equal to the demand, but prices advanced from thirty to fifty per cent.

PORTSMOUTH, VA.—W. J. Harris says trade was thirty per cent ahead of last year. Carnations were scarce and prices higher. There was sale for any plant which bore a flower.

ERIE, PA.—S. A. Baur reports trade an increase of ten per cent over last year; home stock inadequate; qualities high. Violets and Beauties were leaders. Plants sold as well as usual.

WAVERLY, Md. — Robt. L. Graham reports sales ten per cent ahead of last year, with stock enough for all. Red immortelles sold better than ever, especially in original bunches.

SPRINGFIELD, MO.—W. A. Chalfant found trade twenty-five per cent ahead of last year. Roses and carnations were scarce. He reports a decreased sale for palms and flowering plants.

BRATTLEBORO, VT.—D. McGillivray says Christmas trade was far ahead of previous years. Everything sold, but carnations were in greatest demand. Plant trade was extra good.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—Farquhar Macrae noted an increased call for carnations. The preference was for azaleas, cyclamens, primroses, ardisias and solanums; decorative plants went slowly.

DES MOINES, IA.—W. L. Morris noted as a peculiarity of the largest holiday trade on record, that buyers preferred to pay a big price for fine carnations rather than to take roses at prevailing rates.

WEST HOBOKEN, N. J.—John Birnie has a tale of Christmas woe. He grows carnations exclusively and says that he cut less and received less for them than he has received in twenty-five years.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.—Christmas was one-fourth better than last year, reports U. J. Virgin, and there was stock enough. There was a marked increase in the call for Beauties and plants of all kinds.

ALEXANDRIA, VA.—J. Louis Loose, who sells in Washington, had enough stock to meet a twenty-five per cent increase in Christmas demand. Double the usual quantity of flowering plants were sold.

ST. JOHNS, N. B.—H. S. Cruikshank says trade was ten per cent better although prices did not advance. Roses and carnations were both short. There was increased sale for flowering plants.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—A. Gude & Bro. report that the plant trade almost equalled Easter. Trade was a little heavier than a year ago. There was enough stock except of carnations. Everyone is satisfied.

BANGOR, ME.—Adam Sekenger reports cash receipts fifty per cent larger than a year ago and prices a twenty-five per cent advance. There was a great call for pinks. Azaleas, Begonia de Lorraine and ferneries also sold well. Twice the holly was needed.

BUCKSPORT, ME.—Fred. H. Moses enjoyed a considerable increase in Christmas trade, with plenty of everything except carnations, which were in great demand. More holly might have been sold.

KANSAS CITY, MO.—W. J. Barnes noted the particular demand for colored flowers. Trade was half again larger than a year ago and everybody was rushed. Roses brought much better prices than usual.

FAIRBURY, ILL.—John Milne & Son report a marked increase in Christmas trade, with prices higher than in previous years. The principal call was for colored carnations and their stock was nearly in full crop.

MONTGOMERY, ALA.—W. B. Patterson enjoyed Christmas trade double his best previous record; prices were twenty-five per cent higher than a year ago. Plants shared in the increased demand, particularly flowering subjects.

OAKLAND, CAL.—H. M. Sanborn says the increase was thirty per cent; carnations were up twenty-five per cent in price and were in great demand, especially red. There was hardly enough stock although the supply was large.

HAMILTON, ONT.—E. G. Brown reports trade about the same as last year with prices a little better and a short supply. Violets were particularly popular and scarce. Flowering plants and palms of higher value sold well.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.—Jas. T. Lynch estimates the increase in holiday sales as fifteen per cent, principally caused by higher prices. Stock was in short supply and all cut flowers sold. The plant trade was about as last year.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.—L. E. Marquisee says that this was his best Christmas, more business, better prices. He had stock enough except of carnations. Some report increased plant sales; he did not experience extra demand.

WHEELING, W. VA.—Max L. Hess says trade was two-thirds heavier than last year; there was stock enough and the greatly increased prices were an error and resulted in poorer sale for flowers and more call for plants.

BURLINGTON, VT.—C. E. Gove says that trade was twenty-five per cent ahead of last year and prices twenty per cent higher. Twice the usual quantity of holly was used. Primroses, cyclamens and Boston ferns all sold.

TACOMA, WASH.—At McCoy's they estimate the Christmas trade as twenty-five per cent ahead of last year's; prices were higher; carnations and violets were short because of unusual demand; calls for plants were few; greens sold well.

COLUMBUS, O.—The Livingston Seed Co. estimates business as ten per cent ahead of last year, with better prices for leading flowers. American Beauties and violets were in great demand and scarce. Holly sold ahead of the supply. Decorative plants led everything. Trade began early.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—S. S. Pennock says the Christmas trade exceeded last year's, with better prices on Beauties and fancy stock but entirely too much cheap stuff in market. Beauties, orchids and extra qualities were in great demand. There was a large increase in plant sales, mostly flowering subjects.

PORTLAND, ORE.—Geo. Otten reports an increase of twenty per cent in trade. Prices were higher for fancy stock. Red carnations were in highest favor. There was increased sale for ferneries but expensive plants did not go. S. J. Lemmon says the increase was thirty-five per cent and that there was enough stock.

Some New Sweet Peas.

Last week we received some excellent samples of indoor-grown sweet peas from Ant. C. Zvolanek, of West Hoboken, N. J., who states that the seeds were sown the first week of September in 4 inch pots and placed outdoors. During the last week of October the seedlings were planted in the greenhouse benches, succeeding early chrysanthemums. In the last week of December they were in full crop, a temperature of 45° being maintained. The varieties, all new and promising, were originated by Mr. Zvolanek, and are illustrated herewith. No. 1 has been named Zvolanek's Christmas; No. 2 is a seedling from Emily Henderson; No. 3, variegated seedling; No. 4, sport from Zvolanek's Christmas; No. 5, seedling of Katherine Tracy. The plants were four and a half feet high December 28.

ROSES.

AMMONIA IN WATER.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—Please inform me through your columns of the effects, if any, on roses of water containing 19-100 of free ammonia, applied to the plants as often as they need watering? Would it have a tendency to turn the foliage yellow? HARRIS.

Replying to your correspondent, I certainly should hesitate to use water continuously on roses containing nineteen per cent free ammonia, as the effect would certainly be injurious. If used, say, once a month, with clear rain water at all other times, it would be beneficial. Usually too much ammonia will cause the foliage to turn pale and check the growth of young shoots. If his plants are now in that condition a couple of waterings of lime water will help materially to correct the trouble. Take about a peck of fresh lime and slake it as if preparing to make mortar; when thoroughly dissolved add about fifty gallons of rain water if it is to be had, allowing it to stand till clear; then when the soil is on the dry side thoroughly soak the whole; in two weeks repeat the same application, giving only light syringings of clean water on bright days till the plants get back their natural green color.

ABOUT BRIDESMAID.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—I have a rose house in which are planted Perle, Wootton, La France, Bridesmaid and Hoste, and would like to ask why the buds on Bridesmaid dry and drop off about the time they begin to form, laterals starting next to them at the time they drop? Those flowers that mature are small. The other varieties are all right and up to this time, with Bridesmaid, made good growth and gave a crop early in November. The plants were then kept on the dry side in a lower temperature; they are now starting another crop, but Bridesmaid continues to drop its buds. The plants were benched July 10 in a stiff sandy loam, with one part cow manure to three of soil, composted last spring. One part bone to fifty of compost was added when filling the benches. With artificial heat and ventilation the night temperature was 60° to 65° during September and October, and 70° to 90° during the day. My benches were infested with eel worms the two preceding seasons, but this year they were thoroughly cleansed and a heavy coat of whitewash applied. The soil is of a different character from that previously employed, and was taken from another locality. The plants are green and healthy and do not resemble stock affected by eel worms. W. D. T.

The cause of your correspondent's Bridesmaids dropping their buds is hard to explain from the information at hand, but I am inclined to think it may be caused by the heavy application of bone, as the roots of Bridesmaids are much more sensitive in the matter of food than the other varieties growing in the same house. The partial drying off in November would indicate that the bone is largely to blame, as bone will kill the roots of almost any plant if, after they have started feeding on it, they are allowed to get too dry. I once saw a field of cabbages which had been heavily dressed with bone (though nothing like the proportion "W. D. T." has given his roses) before planting; it happened to be very wet weather for three or four weeks afterwards, and the young cabbages grew amazingly, but a spell of dry weather followed, and nearly every cabbage plant withered up and died inside of three weeks. On careful investigation it was found that every root touching the bone was burnt brown.

If "W. D. T." will keep his soil uniformly moist and keep the night temperature down to 54° to 56°, give all the air reasonable during the day and use nothing but soft water on his plants, I think he will find a decided improvement in the flowers in a short time, though it may take a month or more to get them into good bearing state. He does not state what the character of the water is he has been giving them; if there is any lime in it, there is all the more reason to lay the trouble to the bone. If my supposition is not correct then there must be some element in his compost detrimental to the tender roots of this particular rose. A very careful examination of the roots of his worst affected plants would undoubtedly help materially to solve the problem. The humus in the compost will of course ere this have turned the bone a dark color, but by using an ordinary lens the bone can be found easily enough in the soil around the roots. If the latter have turned brown where they came in contact with the bone, it is a good reason to lay the trouble to the bone. JOHN N. MAY.

MAID OF HONOR.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—How is it we hear so little of the new rose Maid of Honor? It was largely advertised last winter and spring and also well spoken of by some of the leading rose growers at that time, but I see no mention made of it now. I felt induced to invest in fifty plants but my experience with it is not at all satisfactory. In the first place it is more subject to mildew than either Bride or Bridesmaid, and most of the buds produced so far have been malformed, the larger number of them having a green bud in the center. It looks much like being a repetition of the short-famed Waban of years past. Several other growers in this neighborhood have had the same experience with it, although they are very successful with other varieties. Booming up a variety which at once proves to be a fizzle is very apt to scare the average florist from investing in new varieties before he can satisfy himself by observation that he is getting something that is actually meritorious. I shall be pleased to know of the experience of other growers with this variety. OHIOAN.

In reply to the above, permit us to ask "Ohioan" why we should advertise our new rose Maid of Honor now? There is no sale for the plants at the present time. It is not always the most loudly advertised plant that is the best. In spring he will hear from us again. With regard to mildew, Maid of Honor is far less subject to it than Bride and Bridesmaid, if grown properly. When grown at the right temperature the buds will not come malformed, or produce green centers. And once for all, it should be remembered that Maid of Honor is a winter-blooming rose and not a summer variety. Is every grower successful with Meteor and American Beauty? Is he who fails with these two varieties justified in saying they are "a fizzle?" What is true of these varieties in this respect is also true of our rose.

Perhaps "Ohioan" did what we have seen some other Ohio florists do—try to grow his Maid of Honor plants successfully in the same house with Meteors, Perles, Brides, Bridesmaids, violets, palms and ferns. Now every successful rose grower knows that each variety will only be a success when grown in a house by itself, so that it may receive the proper treatment. For the benefit of "Ohioan" and his fellow-sufferers we give the following directions: Early in July house the young plants of Maid of Honor on benches with three inches of good clay soil, thoroughly mixed with one-fifth part of well-rotted cow manure. The soil should remain loose until the plants are well started. Do not overwater at this time. Now, the benches being in proper condition, press or beat down the soil to about two and one-half inches in depth. Six weeks after the beating process apply a light top-dressing. When the plants are well developed, do not spare the liquid mulch. This rose, being a very strong grower and prolific bloomer, necessarily will need considerable nourishment. Grow the rose cool, with a night temperature of 52° to 56°. Give the house plenty of ventilation by means of ventilators opening from the ridge-piece. Grow the plants somewhat dry; do not keep the soil soggy and wet.

All fall we have been cutting great numbers of well-formed, beautiful rosy pink Maid of Honor buds from a five-bench house of 25x125 feet. And now, December 20, we are cutting from 400 to 700 buds from this very house daily, although in this locality we have had only two days of sunshine since Thanksgiving. Can "Ohioan" cut that many well-formed, finely colored Bridesmaids from a house of equal dimensions? We invite every one to come and look at our rose houses, and compare the growth, productiveness and fine shaped bud of Maid of Honor with those qualities of all other varieties. "Ohioan" surely had the privilege to communicate with us, as we are always willing to give all the information required.

Problems in Floralville.

"Well, what do you think of it?"

The rose grower, the private gardener and the oracle had just turned the corner by the club-room where stood the philosopher, the orchid crank and myself. It was club meeting-night just after Christmas and, the usual greetings over, Christmas experiences being under discussion, the philosopher popped the above query at the rose man.

"Oh," replied that worthy, as he blinked complacently behind the fragrant smoke of a "fifteen straight," "we had nothing to cut, all off crop and didn't cut half the stuff we ought to have done. But I suppose we've got to be satisfied. I've found it does no good to be kicking all the time."

"Huh," said the funny man who, accompanied by Mr. Cooney and the man hard of hearing, had just arrived on the scene, "I see you're wearing your pants outside your boots; that's a sign you're feeling amiable enough only you don't like to say it;" and added, as the laughter following this shot subsided, "Boys, I'll bet he's just been to lunch with his commission man. You can tell any time whether a rose man thinks he's making money or not by the way he wears his pants."

"Well," said the philosopher, "it appears to me that you make a grave mistake when you attempt to increase the price of flowers one or two hundred per cent simply because Christmas is coming soon. When the demand for any one quality or grade is greater than the supply then values on those things will advance of themselves whether it is Christmas or any other time, and so long as the demand stands that way you are safe to keep on and encourage the boosting, because that very fact indicates that you have the support of the buyers. But without those conditions this doubling up looks mischievous to me and expensive, especially to the cut flower interests generally. If I were a plant grower I can think of nothing that would give me greater encouragement than to see you flower growers carrying on just as you always do before the holidays."

"You're only talking foolish," retorted the rose man. "The only trouble is that we don't stand together. If all the Beauty growers, for instance, had got together before Christmas and said 'our wholesale price is to be $2 for top quality' and stuck to it, they'd have got it. You can make it $2 just as well as $1, if you go about it with any kind of system. Just look at the glass manufacturers; they get together and agree"——

"I wudn't thrust wan av ye peaches as far as I could see ye." He was a self-important little chap, was Cooney, wearing a pipe of prodigious size and as full of distrust of everybody else in the business as he was of confidence in himself. "Look at the way ye played it on the jude over by Soonny Dell lasht winter whin ye inticed him into dooblin' up the price of violets, an' before ye'd lave go of him ye had the poor devvil himself doobled up like a cod in a pot. Not that the likes of me is sympathizin' wid any college graduate that puts kid gloves on whin he's pickin' violets."

"Cooney, you're just the kind of man that ought to join the club," said the funny man. "We need somebody to stir up the animals. Let me propose your name to-night?"

"Yer club's like Biddy McGlinchey's pocket, a recipticle for ivery ould rubbish. Ye have the jude in there wid his golf shirt an' all. An' look at the laddy-buck that shtarted the toney shtore on the avenue lasht year—the shtyle he put on, livin' at the Hawtel Gr'rand. An' he'd have his man come wid the carriage ivery day at tin o'clock an' dhrive him to th' office an' thin to th' bank an' thin back again to th' office an' his wundy lookin' like a dhream, all filled wid Beauties wid heads on thim like dooks' eggs. Oh, he was as foxy a bucko as iver carried an impoorted top coat over his ar'rm. Shure, your prices was niver too big for him. I gave him three mont's to live, but ye made him a thrustee or somethin' of the sort in the club in racog-nation av his su-perior pro-pinsity an' shtandin' in horti-culturism. Ye niver towld us how much he shtuck ye for whin he departed widout askin' yer lave, Mr. Specialmaid."

The rose man looked at Cooney as though he'd like to make a meal of him, but said nothing.

"I think you cut flower people are in more danger from the plantsmen than you realize," said the philosopher. "The retail dealers use the plant growers as a safety valve against any pressure you fellows may try to put on and they're 'getting there' more and more every year."

"Oh, that's all bosh," replied the rose grower. "What can you give to a lady that will be so acceptable under any and all circumstances as a bunch of fine roses or carnations? You can't kill the flower business. A lady can't wear a plant to the theatre and no plant, anyway, has half the sentiment that goes with a nice box of flowers. Say," turning to the plantsman, who had been silently enjoying the discussion, "how did you come out this Christmas?"

"Sold out of everything two weeks before and could have sold plenty more if I'd had them to sell."

"Then you were a fool not to advance your prices. When they want the goods that's the time to make them pay for them."

"And get the plant trade into the same bad habits as the cut flower trade? No, it won't go."

"That's all right about you commercial men," broke in the private gardener, "you have your own share of bad habits. Look at the stuff you bring in—all forced out and soft with steam and heat. Why don't you grow your plants slow and cool so they'll keep over night after you sell them? And then, there's lots of nice things you don't touch at all. Where are the grand old favorites we used to——"

"Come on and finish out that argument up here; we want a quorum," shouted the president-elect from the top landing.

"In my opinion we are the people," remarked the deaf man, as they trooped up the stairs.

"Ye're convinced of that, shure," replied Cooney," between puffs, as he struck his fifteenth consecutive match. "Ye're great blathers whin ye're outside, but whin ye get on the flure the par-la-mintry champeens'll do all the talkin' an' ye'll niver open yer mouts."

And Cooney was about right.

A Prize Chrysanthemum Design.

The accompanying illustration shows the design with which Otto Fehrlin won the first prize offered for floral work at the recent chrysanthemum exhibition at Galveston, Texas. Mr. Fehrlin exhibited in four classes and won the blue ribbon in each. To Mrs. Fehrlin is credit due for the tasteful arrangement of the large number of exhibits in the hall. The show made a profit of almost $500, which will be turned over to worthy charities.

SPORT OF FLORA HILL.

ED. AM. FLORIST: — Please inform me whether there is in existence a pink sport of Flora Hill with pure white edge?

F. L. S.

To the best of my knowledge there is no such sport, but it is not safe to bank on a sport from any variety as being the only one in existence. A. M. HERR.

TREATMENT FOR RUST.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—Having seen some remarks on carnation rust in your columns recently, I venture to give you some details of my experiences during the fall. I planted some Daybreaks and soon discovered they were badly affected by rust. The diseased foliage was removed until the plants almost resembled, in point of bareness, a turkey ready for Christmas dinner. One of my neighbors, however, informed me that he had cleared his plants of the disease by applying a strong force of water, and although opposed to my ideas in the matter, not caring what happened to the stock, I tried his plan with the result that after three applications the plants are all right and growing nicely. It is now a month since I applied the water. T. A.

TROUBLE WITH EVELINA.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—I have lost about half my stock of Evelina and would like to ascertain the cause. This variety is in the same bench with Flora Hill and Lizzie McGowan, both of which are doing well. The soil was prepared from bluegrass sod and is of medium quality, a small quantity of decayed manure having been added. Good care has been taken of the plants. They start to die off by the foliage at the bottom turning yellow. J. C. S.

Evelina seems to be almost without vitality and all that I have tried or seen are in the same condition as those of the inquirer and about the only thing he can do is to use the space occupied by them for some other purpose. It seems a great pity that this variety has proven such a failure, as it has many good points, but the stock seems to be so infected with bacteriosis that it is impossible to get it to live. A. M. HERR.

ROOTING CUTTINGS.

Varieties which make slow growth or are inclined to come into bloom late can be propagated to advantage this month. Quick growers and early bloomers may be left until February or even March. Any clean sand will do as a rooting medium and if you have such sand there is no use bothering with anything else. I have considerable trouble in getting good sand and have been experimenting with other materials. One of these has been jadoo and with it I have had excellent results but found it too expensive.

Over a year ago I recommended jadoo as being a good thing for cuttings but in the spring I received a demand for the replacing of a number of cuttings that had been lost by a grower who used it on my recommendation; since then, I have not recommended anything new, except for trial. To any one having fairly good success with sand my advice now is to experiment in a small way with any new material before risking many valuable cuttings in it.

Last season I experimented extensively with "tropik fiber" and this season am growing nearly all of my cuttings in it; it is inexpensive, for I have found that I can mix it with an equal bulk of ordinary soil; a ton of fiber mixed with soil fills a bench 5x90 to a depth of four inches. The soil should be free of humus or fungus-breeding material and it and the fiber should be sifted through an ordinary sieve, so as to mix thoroughly. Prepared in this way it makes a very light and porous material. When we are ready to put in the cuttings it is watered lightly and the cuttings can then be inserted without the use of any dibber or knife; then a heavy watering is given, as the compost absorbs a great quantity of moisture before it is thoroughly soaked.

The selection of cuttings is a matter of taste; one grower prefers those from the flower stem while another wants them from the base of the plant. The best rule to follow is to take such cuttings as have given you good results before. One very important rule, however, is to take no cuttings from a plant that shows the least sign of stem rot or bacteriosis, the latter being especially a hereditary disease. Some growers trim their cuttings down to almost a stub; others trim nothing at all from them. I take off such leaves as would get under the sand and clip only an occasional lanky fellow at the top.

Keep the cuttings at about the same temperature in which the stock plants have been growing, or possibly 5° lower, with the bottom not over 5° warmer than the top of the bench. Shading can be done with whatever is handy, although muslin is both the best and the cheapest. The best results will be obtained by keeping the cuttings pretty dark up to the time they begin to callus. As soon as they begin root formation they may be gradually inured to light so that by the time they are ready to take out they have had the full sun for three or four days. Up to the time the cuttings begin to root the bed should be almost wet, but then the roots must be given a chance to harden enough to stand transplanting. A cutting from pure sand should be taken out as soon as it is well rooted but in the mixture I use the soil helps to feed the plants as soon as roots are formed and there is no particular haste in getting them out.

It is far the better plan, no matter what material you use, to have it fresh for each batch of cuttings. One of the experiment stations has demonstrated that stem rot is worse when sand has been used several times for propagating and almost any florist who has kept his eyes open can vouch for the correctness of the assertion. As long as ten years ago I made the statement that stem rot had its origin in the cutting bed. I do not mean to say that stem rot cannot come from any other cause, such as growing the plants on the same soil year after year, or the use of soil that is soured by constant manuring, but there is no more sure way of getting it in quantity than by using sand filled with fungus.

CARNATIONS REGISTERED.

By Philip Heilig, Franklin, Pa.—Christmas Rose, a rich cerise, flowers three to three and one-half inches in diameter and two and one-quarter inches deep, fragrant and slightly fringed; stem long and strong; a strong, healthy grower not subject to rust; blooms from December until October. J. E. Sibley, a rich maroon, medium to large flower, strong calyx and finely fringed; a free bloomer on long, slender, stiff stems; foliage narrow, a dark bluish green and healthy; can be grown without support and planted closely. Dorothy Forbes, light pink, a shade darker than Daybreak; flower well built in the center; round petals, very large and lasting and with strong calyx; a free, continuous bloomer and strong grower with light green foliage.

By Thomas Capers, Wellesley Hills, Mass.—Conquest, white, a cross between Daybreak and Mrs. Fisher; very double flowers measuring three and one-half inches on an average; strongly fragrant; handsome grower, extraordinarily profuse in bloom, never being off crop throughout the season.

Mignonette Culture Under Glass.

Having been often asked how we get our mignonette to produce such large spikes all through the winter season I have thought a few remarks on its general culture may be of interest to some of your readers. The accompanying illustration from a photograph recently taken is a fair sample of the character—foliage, length of stem and size of flower—of the material we are daily sending to market. The spikes would get much larger and longer if allowed to remain on the plants; but most of our customers prefer to have it in this stage, ks by changing the water daily it can be kept for two weeks or more, during which time it develops much longer spikes.

Mignonette requires a good, rich loam, to four parts of which one part of well decomposed manure is added, mixing thoroughly. If grown on a raised bench the soil should not be less than six inches deep, but it does best on a raised bed of soil with plenty of rubble for drainage. Here we employ six to eight inches of compost as above. The surface of the soil, when the bed or bench is ready to receive the seeds, should not be more than three feet from the glass and it should be pressed firmly and evenly. With a walk on either side the beds or benches should not exceed four feet in width; with a walk on one side only they should not exceed two feet nine inches in width, otherwise it will be difficult to reach the plants for necessary disbudding, etc., later on.

The time at which the seeds should be sown depends on when the flowers are needed. We usually make two sowings, one about August 12 to 15, the other ten days later; but the ten days difference at sowing time make a difference of thirty days in the time of cutting the flowers. If the flowers are wanted from December 1 onward seeds must be sown on the earliest date given. In sowing the seeds take a triangular piece of wood equal in length to the width of the bed, press one edge into the soil and thus make drills half an inch deep and sixteen to eighteen inches apart. In these drills drop from four to six seeds at intervals of about twelve inches, and cover carefully and firmly with a little fine soil. Water thoroughly and keep the house shaded and a little close until the seedlings are well above ground.

At this stage the shading may be reduced, giving all the air possible day and night. Water only when the soil is on the dry side, giving enough at each watering to thoroughly moisten the bed, and allow it to go dry again before giving more. When the plants have made four leaves thin the clusters out to one plant each. This should be done when the soil is nice and moist, potting and placing in a shady house some of the plants taken out to fill up vacancies caused by death or accident. After this the principal requirements are watering when necessary, giving all the air possible and keeping the beds free of weeds. An occasional very light stirring of the surface soil between the rows will prevent the weeds from getting a start.

By September 1 the plants will begin to need some support, as all the first buds on leading shoots should be pinched out and the side shoots encouraged to make all the growth possible. These, as they start out from the plants, should be supported so that they make straight, upright growth. For supports we have found nothing better than wire stretched tight the length of the bed between each line of plants and across the bed on either side of the rows we stretch two-ply jute string. This forms a square of about twelve inches for each plant, leaving a little space for cleaning, watering, etc., between each row. The first wires are placed about seven inches above the soil, the next series six to seven inches higher and so on until the desired height is attained, care being taken to keep each plant as nearly as possible within its allotted space, thereby securing straight stems.

It is absolutely necessary to keep butterflies out of the house or the caterpillars will soon destroy the crop; for this purpose it is best to stretch pieces of muslin or mosquito netting over each ventilator immediately the seed is sown, also over the doors; this costs but a trifle and is effectual. As soon as cool weather comes and it is necessary to close the ventilators at night, the average night temperature should be 40°, with all the air possible by day. The side shoots or laterals on all blooming spikes should be regularly removed as fast as they appear, but this must be carefully done in order to preserve the main foliage on the spikes will look bare when cut, a condition which spoils their sale. JOHN N. MAY.

Helpful Reminders.

Just now, while poinsettias are in popular demand, is a good time to inform you of the most simple and satisfactory method of growing a stock for next season. After the heads are cut place the plants under the bench of a warm house and give but little water until warm weather, when you can afford them bench room; then water freely to induce fresh growth. In June you will have good material for cuttings. The young growth should be cut in sections of three leaves each, with the joint of the lower leaf close to the end, placed in sand and kept moist; they strike root readily. They should be kept on the shift as rapidly as the roots reach the edges of the pots until the 6 inch size is reached; by that time the weather is so cool as to require artificial heat and care should be taken to maintain a temperature of from 60° to 70°. As the pots fill with roots the red bracts begin to form and come in much better and easier and earlier than where hard-wood cuttings are employed. Plants grown in this way give much better satisfaction than those grown on benches.

Longiflorum lilies should be in position now for Easter blooming. They should be in 5 or 6-inch pots, according to size of the bulbs. Place them on benches not more than five feet from the glass; the pots should be about five inches apart and filled in between with sphagnum moss. They should have a sprinkling mornings to keep the foliage clean; go over them carefully each afternoon and water thoroughly any that may be partially dry, but do not pour water on all of them. The temperature should not be above 50° at night for the next month; 60° during the day will do no harm. No green fly should attack such plants, but if they appear destroy them at once with tobacco extract. Longiflorums grown in this way come clean, strong-stemmed and uniform.

There are quite a number of new varieties of geraniums, roses and carnations on the market this season, each one advertised as excelling all others. You cannot afford to ignore any of them, for if they are half what is claimed for them their virtues will not disappear in a single season. Although the disseminators give such glowing accounts in good faith, you cannot be sure what will be your measure of success with them. Give them a careful trial; a dozen plants will serve the purpose. With such as prove valuable you can go in heavier another year. If your dozen plants are a failure a few hundred or a thousand would have been a greater failure, and there have been many instances where greatly lauded introductions proved useless for general purposes. Rochford's Institute.

To most horticultural pilgrims to the old world, one of the objective points is the truly great establishment of Rochford. It is the greater perhaps because it is the creation of the man himself, and typical of his energy, foresight and practical business ability. The huge quantities produced in this establishment of grapes, tomatoes and cucumbers alone, to say nothing of many acres of one variety of palm, such as may be seen here under glass, makes one wonder where it all goes to and think that truly the British public are lovers of horticulture and its best products. The illustration reproduced herewith gives a good idea of the way Mr. Rochford houses and provides for the welfare of his men, for not only are they well lodged, better perhaps than in most ducal gardens, but they are also provided a restaurant, library, concert and lecture halls, and we know that his men are among the best paid, if not the best, in any commercial establishment around London, showing that as a matter of business it pays to get the best and treat them well in order to get the best results.

Mr. Rochford is not alone in this line; other great firms are doing as much, notably that of Sutton, where a similar establishment is maintained for the employes, even their spiritual welfare being cared for in the case of those who wish to attend the classes. A fine gymnasium is also maintained by the latter firm. Let us hope that the time may come when these examples will be followed on our side. When this is done it will be done equally well no doubt, but at present we are unaware of any such attempt to provide for the "men behind the guns." E. O. ORPET.

Allamanda Williamsii.

This variety of allamanda makes one of the best pot plants that I know of for either greenhouse or house decoration in the autumn, though for the latter use the plants should be frequently changed; I find that by doing this they can be used three or four times. They are of comparatively easy culture, the most important point being to give them plenty of sun when growing and a very little shade when they are in bloom—a shade that can be put on in the middle of the day or while the sun is on them and then taken off. I grow them in summer in a rose house, which gives them the ideal temperature.

The plant in the accompanying illustration was one of a lot rooted in October of 1898, in a warm plant house, and potted as soon as rooted in 3-inch pots in a mixture of loam, leaf mold and sand, with rather more loam than leaf mold. They were shifted along until they were in 8-inch pots with a little richer compost than that used at the start.

One of the best features of this variety is that it is a bush plant, but it has a tendency to roam if not well pinched. This pinching is very important to get plants as dwarf as the one in the picture, it being but eighteen inches high, pot included, and two feet through. Of course the old plants can be rested and grown on the next year and if well pinched would make fine specimens, but I have not the room to spare, so root some every season and find those in 8-inch pots the best suited to my purpose.

The delicate perfume of the flowers enhances its usefulness in no small degree. The old climbing varieties, though greatly admired, are really of little service except in the greenhouse, but this, blooming when so dwarf and at a season of the year when pot plants are scarce, is a great acquisition to our list of flowering pot plants. W. DOWNS.

WITH THE GROWERS.

ROBT. CRAIG & SON, PHILADELPHIA.

The establishment of Robert Craig & Son at 60th and Market streets, which, as is well known, is under the management of William Paterson Craig, the young and energetic president of the American Carnation Society, was the Mecca of many visitors on the week preceding Christmas. The carnations here were in grand condition and the flush of the crop being on, they were certainly worth going a long way to see. House after house in the pink of condition met the gaze of the visitor, and the flowers were as thick as a field of wheat. Here a gorgeous expanse of pink; there a sea of scarlet; in another place a field of purest white. And such flowers! In nearly every case, big robust fellows, three to three and one-half inches in diameter and holding themselves with heads erect like soldiers.

ALLAMANDA WILLIAMSII.

Melba was looking well. This fine variety seems to have improved since last year. The plants are cleaner and it seems to flower more freely. The flowers of this variety averaged two and one-half inches, which is small compared with some sorts; but there are none of the big fellows that have the exquisite color of this charming sort.

A small batch of Mrs. James Dean was noticed, but none of the plants were in flower. It appeared to me that Mr. Craig was rather non-committal about this variety, which led me to think that he feared that there was not much in it.

Leslie Paul, one of the new California varieties, is a fine thing in cerise; but it is a rather shy bloomer and for that reason, as Mr. Craig expressed it, "Leslie won't trot."

Ethel Crocker, the Californian, which has the field all to herself among the good sorts which have come to us from the Pacific slope, is as promising as ever. Mr. Craig told me that just previous to my visit he had had a call from C. W Ward, the carnation expert, and he was so well pleased with the appearance of the plants, their vigorous, branching habit and abundance of new shoots indicating enormous cropping qualities, that he increased his already large order for cuttings forty per cent on the spot. Mr. Craig justly considered this a good endorsement of his claims for this newcomer.

A small lot of Maud Adams was seen. It seems to be a free flowering variety, but is too small. Last season there was a controversy as to whether this was identical with Richmond. Mr. Craig says the question is not now a burning one. It may be called Manayunk or Kalamazoo, or any old name. It is not in the race, which is a pity seeing that it bears the name of the charming lady it does.

Olympia was in fine form. It has a great stem and flowers three and one-half inches across; an exquisite variety and very promising.

In one corner was a little lot of Edna Craig, healthy and as charming as ever in form and color, which brought up pleasant reminiscences of eight or nine years ago. If the stock had only kept healthy this would undoubtedly have been a standard variety, and if it keeps as free from disease as this little lot now is, it will be worth growing even to-day, if only for its exquisite form and color. The stock here mentioned was accidentally discovered by Mr. Craig up in the neighborhood of Pittsburg about a year ago.

For a lightly penciled white variety, J. Whitcomb Riley is undoubtedly the leader, although it seems a pity that Lily Dean, which in my opinion was the more attractive in this class, has had to be discarded.

Agnes Shellem, the new white from which great things were expected, is not doing so well here. It is a fine thing, very large flowering and vigorous, and good in every way except that they cannot grow it here on account of its bursting. I do not know whether this is the case elsewhere, but it has certainly badly bursted here.

On a bench of seedlings were noticed one or two promising sorts which are being taken care of for future experiment, among them a good scarlet, a good white, a yellow, and a very promising pink of Mr. Shellem's. The color of the latter is something out of the ordinary.

Gen. Gomez and Gen. Maceo were in strong force and carrying everything before them as fine croppers and good all-around sorts of their color. Mr. Craig declares that Maceo gives more flowers to the square foot than any other variety grown to-day, which is certainly a very emphatic endorsement.

A bench of indoor America looked fine. This lot was even ahead of Crane from outdoors. America, though criticised as to color, brings as good a price as any of them on the market. The flowers of this lot averaged three inches in diameter and seemed very free. The bench bottom was of brick tile, which probably helped to the good showing made in this instance. It was stated that no single flowers had been seen here in this variety, although this complaint has been made elsewhere.

There was half a house of G. H. Crane, which is a grand good thing in all particulars. It is generally considered to be a better color than America, and it is possibly, taking it all in all, the best red grown today.

Flora Hill looked pretty good but a little droopy as usual. The White Clouds were better.

Jubilee appears to be a dead one, or to put it in the picturesque phraseology of Mr. Craig, "Jubilee took to the tall timber when Crane appeared."

Mrs. Frances Joost is here looking magnificent, as is also Mrs. Bradt. Both are grand as to size and very vigorous. The stems of the latter are not over twelve inches, but the succeeding crops will show more stem.

Asked to name the big five of this year, Mr. Craig gave the following: Ethel Crocker, G. H. Crane, Gen. Maceo, Gen. Gomez and White Cloud.

Ante-Christmas prices for the best flowers were 12½ cents, which although not just Mrs. Lawson's figures, is quite respectable, and is mentioned with a satisfied intonation which indicates a slight profit over the cost of production.

In the propagating houses the men were busy at work putting in carnation cuttings in the now famous rotten mica rock which gives them 100 per cent strike every time. There were 40,000 Ethel Crocker in one batch, with the others in proportion.

W. P. Craig certainly deserves credit for the fine condition of his establishment and I am sure all will join with me in congratulating him on this pleasant state of affairs. G. C. WATSON.

THE NEW YEAR STARTS WITH A DULL WEEK.—SHIPPING ORDERS ALL THAT PREVENT A GLUT.—POOR STOCK ACCUMULATES.—SUPPLY RAPIDLY INCREASING WITH BRIGHT WEATHER.—SCHUBERT REVIEWS THE YEAR.—AMLING IN HIS NEW QUARTERS.—BRANT & NOE TO BUILD.—A GENTLEMAN FROM INDIANA.—JOTTINGS OF A VARIETY OF INTERESTING THINGS.

This has been a dull week in the local market and the steady out-of-town demand for material for decorations and mortuary work has been the only thing which has prevented a serious overstock. The New Year's trade was good, Bassett & Washburn reporting it unprecedentedly heavy, but since then the city retailers have done nothing and the result has been that first grade stock has been all that has had a quotable price; as is inevitable at such times cheap grades have been cheap indeed. Beauties are just beginning to come in and should the present remarkably prolonged period of bright weather continue the crops will be on in short order. The same sun is bringing out Brides and Bridesmaids in increased quantities and the former hang fire seriously. The production is now very generally of good quality. Carnations are also in increased supply but are not so difficult to move, particularly the bright colored sorts. There have been few too many violets, although on one or two days there was a surplus, and bulb stock is not the glut that it was. Of course under such conditions, prices took a tumble. For good stock $6 to $8 has been a fair rate for roses and $2 to $3 for carnations nearly all the week. Just what to look forward to is hard to predict; much depends on the weather. Tulips are in but are not received with wild acclaim.

In a review of the past year the Record presents the following from John C. Schubert as representative of the florist trade:

In common with other lines of business, florists have shared in the prosperity which has marked the year 1899. This means that there has been a marked increase in the volume of business done over that of 1898. In all branches of the trade, including growers, jobbers and retailers, the business done has been quite satisfactory. The feature of 1899 was the fact that many times during the year the supply of flowers was not equal to the demand. At such times prices of course ruled high, and in the main were satisfactory for the entire year. During the season choice flowers have been scarce, owing to unfavorable weather for cultivating and developing the highest-prized specimens of floral beauty. The grower may control temperature, but he has not yet discovered an artificial light under which flowers can be grown as successfully as under sunshine. Floriculturists have added many new varieties during the year, many of which have become favorites with the flower-purchasing public. As a flower market, Chicago ranks second to no other city. The steady increase of the trade for the last few years is an indication of the taste of the Chicago people in this direction. The outlook for the coming year is of the most encouraging nature. Dealers generally are looking forward to an increased business during the year 1900.

E. C. Amling is nicely domiciled in his new place at 32-36 Randolph street and, although the fixtures are not yet all in place, the improvement over his former quarters is very marked. He has considerable room to spare and it is not unlikely that one or two growers or others may go in with him. Mr. Amling's removal from 51 Wabash leaves that floor entirely in the hands of the specialists, Wietor, the Reinbergs and Poehlmann, George Reinberg having started in auspiciously in the vacated room.

Brant & Noe have caught the building fever and Forest Glen will shortly be the scene of operations which will double the present range. The details of the plans have not yet been decided upon but from 25,000 to 50,000 feet of glass for roses will go up. Damm Bros. are also among those who will build in the spring; they have bought the glass for a 150-foot house.

Myer Heller, of the South Park Floral Co., was up from New Castle the other day ready to place an order for 1060 boxes of glass. Mr. Heller is more than satisfied with Christmas profits and proposes to be able to take full advantage of the demand for Beauty next year by increasing his plantings from 4,500 to 20,000.

George N. Worth, manager of the Vermont Fern Co., of Barre, Vt., is in town in the interests of his firm. Mr. Worth informs us that it is his intention to open a branch office in this city for the exclusive sale of hardy cut ferns at wholesale.

Kennicott Bros. Co. state that 1899 showed an increase of twenty per cent over 1898 in the amount of their sales, making the year far the greatest on record. December was a "corker."

Geo. Reinberg is sending a great many very good Flora Hill carnations to his new wholesale house. He is shipping considerable quantities of cuttings.

A. G. Prince & Co. will be in with Harrisii in a week. Last year they had them in November and held a virtual monopoly of the Christmas market.

Geo. F. Allen, who has opened a retail store at 2138 Michigan avenue, reports an excellent trade thus far.

Bassett & Washburn have commenced cutting smilax from the big house erected this season.

Peter Reinberg turned on the current in his new system of electric lighting on January 2. It is a great thing for the big range.

W. N. Rudd's home was burglarized one evening early in the week; a pocketbook and jewelry are missing.

A. Lange has closed a prosperous year with a present from the stork of a big baby boy.

FATIGUES OF CHRISTMAS ARE FORGOTTEN.—A QUIET NEW YEAR'S.—THE MARKET WELL CLEANED UP.—QUALITIES IMPROVE WITH WINTER WEATHER.—BULB FORCERS MAKE RESOLVES.—LAWSON CARNATION STILL POTENT.—OLD ROSES WANTED.—VARIOUS JOTTINGS, PERSONAL AND OTHERWISE.

Boston florists have nicely recovered from the fatigues and perplexities of the Christmas season and left over stock has been either disposed of in some sort of trade or deported via the dump wagon; the ground is now cleared for a steady winter business. New Year's came in with a lively snow storm and, winter having apparently taken hold in earnest, we may look to see receipts diminished, quality improved and prices maintained generally. New Year's means nothing to Boston florists excepting the duty of sending out and of receiving due bills, for the event is not celebrated socially as in New York, hence there are no special calls for flowers, and the annual coupon clipping and collection of dividends, which some good people indulge in, is a process as yet unlearned by the Boston florists.

Carnations are, as might be expected, improving in quality and many fine lots are seen at the wholesalers. Roses, too, are beginning to run in finer grades. Violets remain unaccountably dull and all bulbous stock moves very sluggishly. The good resolutions made at the beginning of this New Year by the bulb forcers to put in only about one-half the quantity of white flowering material another year is most commendable and it is to be hoped that it will not go the reputed way of most New Year resolves.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Club met on Tuesday evening and voted to suspend active operations, the next regular meeting to be held the first Tuesday in January, 1901, and special meetings to be called at the discretion of the president. Robt. Cameron, the president-elect, having declined to serve, W. H. Elliott was re-elected for the ensuing year.

The Lawson carnation still succeeds as a potent attraction in the windows of Thos. F. Galvin, for although the sensational interest of last year is lacking, yet the wonderful brilliancy of the display of this sturdy flower in masses is bound to attract, whether advertised or not.

Norton Bros. report a very decided fancy on the part of their best customers for the old-fashioned small rose buds, such as Bon Silene, Isabella Sprunt, etc., and have been doing quite a lively trade in these favorites of by-gone years.

James Comley exhibited to an admiring group at the last meeting of the Horticultural Club a branch in flower of the rarely-seen Stenocarpus Cunninghamii.

Jas. A. Penman is sojourning in Boston at present and once more displaying his natural aptitude as a book-seller. He reports a flattering reception to the volume which he is introducing.

Warren Ewell's regular daily trips with bulbous stock blooming in pans have begun. He was in at Christmas with some colored tulips that were excellent considering the season.

W. W. Edgar shows his visitors, with much pride, the finest stock of Acacia armata ever seen in this neighborhood, in training for the Easter demand.

J. M. Cohen, the Bosworth street wholesaler, reports a good run of country shipping orders during the past week.

Welch Bros. are receiving Bon Ton carnations that are dazzlers.

Chas. Fohn announces his intention to give up his Back Bay store.

James Rough, our naturalist florist, took twenty-three firsts and seven seconds out of thirty-two pigeon prizes at Worcester recently.

The prize schedule of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society for 1900 is nearly ready for distribution.

NEW YEAR'S TRADE PROVES A SURPRISE.—A RUSH AT THE LAST MOMENT.—BEAUTIES SCARCE. — PLANT BASKETS IN FAVOR.—ENDURANCE OF GLOIRE DE LORRAINE. — LONSDALE'S SPORT THE BEST SELLER.—ROBERT CRAIG PREDICTS EVEN BETTER RESULTS NEXT YEAR.—GRAHAM HAS MANY FINE ORDERS.—MEETING OF THE CLUB.—FACTS ABOUT CARNATIONS.

Many thanks, George, from yours truly and the rest of the craft, who so thoroughly enjoyed your very interesting letters.

The New Year's trade rather took the boys unawares, as not many advance orders were given, but the business developed into a rush before the middle of the day and all the good roses, particularly Beauties were cleaned up in a jiffy and no amount of telephoning could find any more, as everything had been cut close. The demand was mostly for boxes of choice cut flowers and baskets of plants or nice specimen azaleas or begonias in good flower. We must say something more of this beautiful plant, which was seen at its best at Christmas. There has been much said about the frailty of Gloire de Lorraine, but our experience is that out of our 200 plants, including Mr. Lonsdale's sport, sold during December, we have yet to hear the first complaint. Mr. Lonsdale's light pink sport proved the best seller as, standing side by side with the old variety, it was invariably selected where only one was taken. His plants were a mass of bloom from the very edge of the pot up and were, as one customer put it, "too beautiful for words." Robert Craig & Son's stock was also very well grown, having been given plenty of light and air. The flowers were hard and firm and stood well above the foliage, which could scarcely be seen. It seems there is one great enemy of this plant and that is green fly, which if it gets a start cripples the buds so that they do not open. That there is a great future for this plant there is no question. While it propagates easily it requires careful management during summer, but when well grown it will pay handsomely. Mr. Craig says that next winter's plants will far surpass those of this season, as he is certain it can be done much better.

Hugh Graham is now loaded up with orders for large dances and balls, most of which are held in Horticultural Hall. One very elaborate affair last week, was fashioned after an Italian garden, with its terraces, statuary, trimmed trees, etc., all well carried out On the terraces quite a number of well grown Begonia de Lorraine plants were used with good effect and the same plants were used a week later for another ball, showing that when well grown they will stand considerable usage and still remain presentable. At this second function over 2000 strings of smilax were used to canopy the ball room.

Prices have fallen from their holiday pinnacle. The best Beauties are now $9 per doz. Teas, select, $12 per hundred. Carnations are weakening in price but the quality is now first-class; $2 to $3 is the price for select stock, with a few of the fancies ranging from $4 to $6. California violets 60 cents to 75 cents per hundred; Doubles 75 cents to $1.50. Lily of the valley, $3 to $4. Mignonette $2 to $4. Hyacinths for what you like to offer.

The January meeting of the Florists' Club last Tuesday evening was interesting, particularly to carnation growers. Mr. Herr's paper on latest facts about carnations did not belie its name and was prepared, as all Mr. Herr's essays are, from facts within his knowledge and experience, which makes it valuable to the carnationist. He says the ideal white has not arrived as yet and prefers Crane above all the reds. Wm. P. Craig says that America does best with him and Crocker is doing even better than was expected of it.

John N. May, of Summit, exhibited some very handsome Olympias, which were pronounced by all present as the finest thing in striped carnations they have ever seen.

A "ladies' night" entertainment is to be given the latter part of January under the management of John Westcott, which means that everybody present on that evening will have a good time. K.

BEST HOLIDAYS ON RECORD.—POPULARITY OF FLOWERING PLANTS IS PROVEN.—NEW YEAR'S BRINGS CUT FLOWER BUYERS.—BREITMEYER PUTS UP A FINE DECORATION.—A NEW RETAIL STORE.

The holiday season just ended was certainly the best ever experienced in this city; the increase over last year is variously estimated at from ten to fifteen per cent, but it is safe to say it was fully twenty per cent better. The popularity of flowering plants and dainty arrangements of baskets with plants was shown more decidedly than ever before. American Beauties and violets sold well, and of the latter the supply was far short of the demand; good carnations of the brighter colors were also scarce, but the quality of the available stock was generally good. Bulbous stock was plentiful enough, but the supply of good roses was not sufficient, though heavy shipments were received from outside markets. Ground pine and holly, which was all of good quality this season, sold well at better prices than last year. New Year's day brought out the buyers, who invariably sought for cut flowers and cleaned up all the stock available and at good prices.

Breitmeyer had a decoration January 2 which was the most extensive as well as the most novel and beautiful work of the kind ever done here. It was for a social event in Strassburg's hall and the whole ceiling was screened with wild smilax, studded with groups of pink and white artificial flowers and clusters of electric lights. The end of the hall was banked high with beautiful Christmas trees, in the center of which a large electric star blazed, with garlands of laurel reaching from it to the ceiling. Along the sides of the hall on the floor was a row of bay trees, Japanese arbor vitæs, palms and box trees. On the panels of the galleries on both sides wild smilax almost completely covered the woodwork and was brightened with large bows of pink ribbon and electric effects. An open circle was formed in the center of the floor with rustic fence entwined with wild smilax and laurel under an immense circular canopy of the same materials. A fountain with gold fish in mid-winter was a feature of the decoration which, for general effect, it would be difficult to improve upon and which showed clearly the great possibilities of wild smilax for such work.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA RECEIVES A CHRISTMAS GIFT.—RAIN OF GREAT VALUE.—TRADE EXCELLENT.—HEAVY CALL FOR NURSERY STOCK.—GRAPES TO BE GROWN EXTENSIVELY.—GOOD ROSES AND CARNATIONS.—PERSONAL DOINGS.

As I write this letter Southern California is receiving a most acceptable Christmas gift. It comes from the rain-god and nothing could be more welcome. Since I have known this state the beginning of no season has been more auspicious. In a measure the absence of frost is a drawback to the florists because of the abundance of flowers in everybody's garden, yet trade is reported to be very good. This trade is to a large extent funeral work. One leading florist last evening reported having sent out forty funeral pieces during the day.

Since the outlook is so favorable, and owing to the good prices received for fruit last season, the demand is very heavy for some varieties of fruit trees, apricots, for example, and prices have advanced 300 per cent, with the supply inadequate at that.

There is a renewed interest in grape culture in the southern part of the state. Some years ago disease destroyed many vineyards and the industry waned, but last week a company was formed with a capital of $150,000 which will plant 2000 acres to grapes for wine making.

At present nearly all the roses grown outside for winter blooms as suffering from a severe attack of mildew. A notable exception are those sent in by R. Leithead, of the Raymond Nurseries, South Pasadena.

Morris Goldenson made a ten-strike when he bought the entire crop of the Vawter carnation gardens in South Santa Monica. They are among the best carnations coming into the city.

Thomas Patch, who has been in charge of one of the departments of the Ingleside Nurseries, at Alhambra, is about to embark in business for himself near Long Beach.

J. G. Morley, who recently returned from the Klondyke, and Herbert George, for some time past employed by Henry Feder at Redondo, have formed a partnership and intend growing flowers and vegetables.

Henry Christensen, senior partner of the old firm of Christensen & Huston, is sojourning in Old Mexico. His family having recently removed there it is presumed he will locate permanently in that country. D. R. W.

INDICATIONS point to an unprecedented amount of greenhouse building in 1900.

WE are pleased to note that the general press is out after the scalps of the purveyors of green carnations.

THE premium list for the Buffalo meeting of the American Carnation Society has been mailed to members; others interested may obtain copies by addressing Secretary Albert M. Herr, Lancaster, Pa.

A WRITER in the Garden (English) recommends propagating Begonia Gloire de Lorraine from the leaves, stating that plants thus obtained break more freely, are less apt to damp off and do not run to flower so quickly as do those from cuttings.

THERE will be a two weeks' school of horticulture at the Rhode Island College opening February 26, 1900. Special attention will be given to the study of soils, fertilizers, propagation and spraying. Particulars may be obtained of Prof. Fred. W. Card, Kingston, R. I.

NOW that the poinsettia is popular with a large number of our florists, it is interesting to learn, from the Gardeners' Magazine, that Mr. Buist, of Philadelphia, was the first to apply this name to the plant, calling it Euphorbia Poinsettiana, after the discoverer, Mr. Poinsette. It was also through Mr. Buist that the plant was introduced to English gardens about 1834.

In last week's Philadelphia notes Habermehl was given credit for the Clover Club decorations for the Irving reception. It should have been Graham. EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE APPOINTMENTS.

President Wood has appointed Messrs. J. D. Carmody, Evansville, Ind.; J. F. Sullivan, Detroit, Mich., and A. B. Cartledge, Philadelphia, Pa., members of the executive committee to serve for a period of three years from January 1, 1900. WM. J. STEWART, Sec'y.

New Houses of E. M. Wood & Co.

We are indebted to E. M. Wood & Co., of Natick, Mass., for the following particulars of the two 700-foot houses being erected for this firm by Lord & Burnham, plans of which were reproduced in our issue of December 30: "The two new houses being erected by us are each 700 feet long, three-quarter span, with glass walls on the side four feet high and rear walls five feet high. The houses are connected at center and one end by glass passage-ways. The sashes are hinged upon the purlins and open from the top. The houses are built upon our most modern plan, the ridge being placed to the rear as far as possible to avoid the throwing of any shade upon the plants. The houses are twenty-one feet wide and adapted to either solid beds or benches. It is intended to have the ventilators operated by electricity."

ELEVENTH ANNUAL REPORT STORRS EXPERIMENT STATION.—The second part of this report is devoted to the consideration of subjects of purely agricultural interest.

TWELFTH ANNUAL REPORT RHODE ISLAND EXPERIMENT STATION.—Some ten of the 222 pages in the report relate to horticultural subjects, among which are "Renovating an Old Apple Orchard," "Blooming Period of Fruits," "Crosses of Sweet and Sour Cherries" and "Carnation Stem Rot."

FOURTH REPORT ON JAPANESE PLUMS.—Bulletin No. 175, Cornell University Experiment Station.—In this bulletin Prof. Bailey attempts to correct the nomenclature of these fruits, carefully describing and discussing the qualities of a large number of varieties. The bulletin contains some nineteen excellent plates, illustrations of varieties discussed. Clear, plain English, not too technical, an abundance of good illustrations, good paper and good printing combine to make everything coming from Prof. Bailey's department very attractive.

COMMERCIAL VIOLET CULTURE.—By B. T. Galloway.—A. T. De La Mare Printing and Pub. Co., New York.—A long-felt want is supplied in this book on violets and their culture. Prof. Galloway has given these plants much attention during the past few years, growing them as a strictly commercial enterprise, and his experiences as here set forth are well worth the attention of all growers. All phases of culture and marketing are treated fully, plainly and practically. The book in itself is quite attractive, well printed and appropriately illustrated.

DULL DAYS FOLLOW CHRISTMAS.—NEW YEAR'S HAS LOST ITS VALUE.—PRICES WEAKEN.—ROSES FROM MADISON.—A SPECIAL SUNDAY TRAIN.—PLAN A SCHOOL OF HORTICULTURE.—PERSONAL JOTTINGS HERE AND THERE.

Since Christmas business has been spiritless, with a downward tendency in values and a general protest all along the line in consequence. New Year's has not for some years made any impression worth mentioning, being, so far as the florist trade is concerned, but a faint echo of the Christmas experiences as to character of the demand. There was a moderate accumulation on the preceding Saturday in wholesalers' hands, caused by the hoarding up of a certain proportion of the cut flower product after Christmas, but customers or special demand did not materialize and the only effect was to still further depress prices. The Thirty-fourth street market was the scene of quite a lively time on Saturday morning, the usually staid and demure occupants apparently having tried to imitate the brokers in their frisky New Year's gambols and it was nearly noon before quiet was restored. The only ripple in the New Year's demand came late on Monday, when an unexpected call for violets was developed, but unfortunately too late to be taken advantage of. Since then business has been discouragingly dull.

The number of boxes sent to the New York wholesale dealers from Madison rose growers on the Saturday and Sunday preceding Christmas is said to have been nearly 800. The D., L. & W. railroad has arranged to send a regular train from Madison every Sunday morning on which the roses that heretofore have been shipped on Saturday night will be despatched. Prospects for a Sunday of rest for the New York dealers appear to be receding.

A movement is on foot to establish a school of horticulture in New York city where young men may perfect themselves in the science. The project has the support of men of means and is likely to be carried through.

John H. Taylor is out again and hopes to soon be as well as ever. He is still obliged to use a cane in walking.

Gus. Bergmann, John Young's right-hand man, is laid up with a severe attack of pleurisy.

Chas. Schwake, formerly in business on East Thirty-fourth street, is now with Hagemann & Meyer.

W. H. Gunther received and disposed of 173,000 violets in the three days of Christmas trade.

Cold weather has been getting in its work during the past week and a good many frozen consignments have been received.

E. C. Horan is receiving some good sweet peas, but they find a very slow sale so far.

The best yellow tulips seen so early in the season are coming in to Julius Lang.

A JOYOUS HOLIDAY SEASON AT THE CAPITAL.—BIG TRADE AT GOOD PRICES.—FLOWERING PLANTS IN HIGH FAVOR.—AMONG THE RETAILERS.

The holiday trade was very good, especially in blooming plants. The demand was good and the supply plentiful and in fine condition. There were many calls for hardy greens, holly and mistletoe, then asparagus and smilax. A. Gude & Bro. had a fine display of azaleas, which sold easily at $2 to $5 each. Cyclamens were extra fine for this time of the year and sold at from $1.50 to $3 each. Poinsettias, six or eight low plants in 10-inch pans, were in great demand at $1.50 to $2.50. In fact the sales in blooming plants were as good as at any Easter. Gude & Bro. also had a lot of Major Bonnaffon chrysanthemums, flowers and leaves as good as in November, which brought fair prices.

Cut flowers retailed about as follows: Beauty, $6 to $18; La France, $5 to $6; Bride, Bridesmaid, Kaiserin, Golden Gate, $3 to $6; Meteor, Perle, Mme. Chataney, $2 to $4; Carnot, $3 to $5; carnations, $1 to $2; bulbous stock, 50 cents; violets, $3 to $4 per hundred.

The American Rose Co. had a good run on poinsettias at $2 to $4 per dozen and had many calls for red immortelle wreaths with ribbon. Their new rose, Ivory, is making a good showing and brings from $2 to $3 per dozen.

J. L. Loose had a five-hundred-dollar ball decoration on Christmas day for Gen. A. E. Bates, Paymaster General of the army. The ball room was decorated in holly, green, mistletoe and poinsettias, the dining room in American Beauty roses and the drawing room in yellow carnations.

J. R. Freeman is cutting a large quantity of fine carnations; his Bradts are something extra. His violets are fine and sold at Christmas at $4 per hundred. Araucarias sold well, but there was more demand for cheaper things, such as ardisias and solanums.

C. F. Hale had a good holiday demand for Cypripedium insigne at $4 per dozen, lily of the valley at $1 per dozen and poinsettia $3 to $6 per dozen.

J. H. Small & Sons had the Christmas decoration for St. Patrick's church. Back of the main alter palms and poinsettias were banked; each flower had a small electric bulb in the center producing a fine effect.

At New Year's prices held up to the Christmas scale and trade was good. Orchids and violets were scarce. J. H. Small & Son showed some fine blooms of Weber's Genevieve Lord.

The first white lilacs of the season were used in a basket sent to President and Mrs. McKinley.

Gloire de Lorraine shed its flowers too quickly, probably because grown soft; I think it will be better at Easter.

BELATED CHRISTMAS VERDICTS.—EXPERIENCES OF THE RETAILERS.—EVERYONE PLEASED.—A SPIRIT OF ENTERPRISE AROUSED.—WINDOW DECORATIONS, A FAKIR AND A NEW WAGON.

A canvas of the stores and market men shows a very satisfactory holiday season to all. Nearly every man approached pronounced it far ahead of last year. The amount of holly and immortelle work disposed of in the markets was enormous. Geo. Siddons, who had a sort of corner in holly wreaths at Lexington market, sold between 500 and 600 dozen, and the rest of the crowd were not idle by any means.

Feast & Sons, can not yet make an accurate comparison with last year. The demand for Beauties was ahead of anything else, but ten wagon loads of plants were sold.

Wm. J. Halliday thought plants rather slow, the demand being for roses and carnations, violets going slowly at $3 per hundred.

Halliday Bros, were enthusiastic over the results, which they pronounced the best they have experienced. This firm handled all the Ulrich Brunners and American Belles that came to this market, and the demand for them and Beauties as well as small roses was far beyond their expectations. Of carnations Bradt, Gomez, Maceo, Matt. Richmond, Daybreak, Scott and Flora Hill are all grown in large quantity and extra quality by them, and they cut and sold in three days over 8,000 blooms.

It is gratifying to see the flower trade keeping pace with the growth of the city, and no one could visit any number of retail dealers now without being impressed with the fact that more business has been done than was expected and that a spirit of enterprise has been aroused that will make the next season better still.

The window decorations of the stores were more striking and original than ever. The hanging fasteners for cut flowers were greatly in evidence, one column of Halliday Bros'. being made into a pillar of orchids, another being Roman hyacinths. A showy window was one bank of dazzling poinsettias at W. J. Halliday's, and in fact every window seen showed taste and skill in some degree.

We now have a fakir who is up to date and may hope to some day equal Philadelphia's plate glass street stalls. This man has a large glass show case on wheels, and draws up to the sidewalk with his cheap flowers, much to the disgust of nearby dealers in good stock.

Halliday Bros.' new delivery wagon is a dandy. From the delicately traced monogram on the black-green sides to the rubber tired wheels, it is a model of usefulness and elegance without a peer among us.

Trade has been good all fall, especially out of town, and having plenty of good stock it was no trouble to fill orders until Christmas, when late orders could not be supplied. There seems to be a growing demand for blooming plants and we sold hundreds of chrysanthemums this fall, 6 and 7-inch pot plants, at good prices, and now have good sale for cyclamen, primulas in variety, azaleas, sword ferns, small palms, etc.

In the new carnations America and G. H. Crane are both good growers and free. Gen. Gomez and Gen. Maceo are the two best crimsons, the freest bloomers we have on the place. White Cloud and Frances Joost are fine flowers but not very free. Jubilee will have to go, as stem rot seems to have the better of the argument with it on our place. One of the best selling carnations I have is Kohinoor, grown warm; though somewhat mottled in midwinter it is always called for. C. H. FREY.

THE SEED TRADE.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

ALEXANDER RODGERS, Pres.; ALBERT MCCULLOUGH, Vice-Pres.; S. F. WILLARD, Wethersfield, Conn., Sec'y and Treas.

FOR the coming season's crops on the Pacific coast, ideal weather conditions now prevail.

ST. PAUL.—Recent visitors were W. H. Small, C. P. Braslan and Alex. Rodgers, President of the American Seed Trade Association.

VISITED CHICAGO: W. H. Marcon, of Toronto, Ont., formerly with the Steele, Briggs Seed Co.; Lester C. Morse and wife, of Santa Clara, Cal.; W. H. Grenell, of Pierrepont Manor, N. Y.

PEAU D'ESPAGNE is the name of a new sweet pea which will be brought out by S. Y. Haines & Co. the coming season. We hear that the description rivals those written by the greatest sweet pea specialists in their palmiest days.

M. H. CROUPIN, a French writer, finds that after leaving seeds for long periods—in some cases nearly a month—in contact with the vapors of chloroform and ether, no injury to their germinating qualities was apparent under test. He states that the introduction of a small amount of chloroform into air-tight receptacles for seeds is a very simple and effective method of destroying any insects which may attack them.

Some Recent Fires.

BALTIMORE, MD.—On December 28 fire destroyed the greenhouse of Emma A. Clarkford. The structure was 40x125 and the loss was $500, insured.

PITTSFIELD, MASS.—Two barns, a potting shed and a portion of the greenhouses of G. J. Reuter & Son were destroyed by fire on the night of December 23. Loss $1000, partially covered by insurance.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.—At midnight December 30 fire destroyed all but two of Charles Chadwick's range of greenhouses, inflicting a loss of about $5,000. Mr. Chadwick has no idea as to the origin of the fire and was uninsured.

PEORIA, ILL.—J. C. Murray is confined to his home by rheumatism.

LISBON FALLS, ME.—Elwood Goddard, who recently leased the business of M. D. Goddard, has added one house for miscellaneous stock and built a new boiler house.

GREENWICH, CONN.—Alexander Mead & Son have recently completed a range of four additional houses in which they have installed a Hitchings heating apparatus.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.—During the past season L. E. Marquisee added three new carnation houses, with side ventilation, to his plant, one being 26x70 feet and the other two 21x46 feet.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—But little preparations for the New Year's trade were deemed necessary, but our florists were agreeably surprised to find that the call for cut flowers was very brisk. A goodly number of plants were also disposed of, principally palms and ferns. The week has been a decidedly busy one and the year 1899 was one of our most prosperous in the last decade. J. B. K.

LILY OF THE VALLEY PIPS.

NEW TOMATO FOR 1900

Livingston's MAGNUS

This very distinct and most promising new variety, of the color of BEAUTY and ACME, is the latest addition by Livingston to the Tomato family. It is thicker, heavier, and more solid than either of the above, making it easily the most handsome sort in cultivation. The form is perfect, uniform, large and attractive. Flesh very firm. It is a robust grower, with short joints, setting its fruit clusters closer together than most varieties, and is therefore a heavy cropper. We have tested it for several years for forcing in greenhouses, and it has excelled all other varieties for this purpose.

PRICES:— Per Pkt., 20c; 3 Pkts. 50c.; 7 Pkts. $1.00

THE NURSERY TRADE.

AM. ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.
W. J. PETERS, Pres.; D. S. LAKE, Vice-Pres.; GEORGE C. SEAGER, Rochester, N. Y., Sec'y.

Who killed the peach crop?
"I," said the liar,
"With my 'special wire,'
I killed the peach crop."
—National Fruit Grower.

THE Elizabeth Nursery Company reports that inquiries up to date indicate a very heavy spring business.

GUTHRIE, OKA.—Furrow Bros. now have an establishment of 10,000 feet of glass and twelve acres in nursery stock.

RECENT experiments show that the frequent removal of strawberry runners increases the number of fruits, but retards the time of ripening.

TREE strawberries have been produced by L. Baltet, according to the Gardeners' Chronicle, by tying up the runners vertically and removing the lateral buds.

THE wineberry, Japanese mayberry, loganberry and strawberry-raspberry are not regarded favorably by Prof. Taft. The latter, he says, bids fair to become a troublesome weed, and as it has no value its cultivation should be discouraged.

Winter Protection for Evergreens.

It is quite common to find in many florists' collections an assortment of small evergreens, coniferous and otherwise, which they find of much use for decorating, as well as salable for planting out purposes. These collections, besides containing species fairly hardy in the northern states, have, perhaps, English and Portugal laurel, sweet bay, English holly, Magnolia grandiflora and Euonymus Japonicus, which, while not considered hardy enough for general planting, are quite enduring in this vicinity, if protected a little while young.

When in pots, as florists usually have them, an open frame may be used, sheltered from the wind and entirely free from sunlight. There must be enough leaves or similar material placed above the pots to keep frost out; then there will be but little to fear from the cold of winter.

It is now well understood that it is the bright sunlight which causes the injury to evergreens so often witnessed in winter. This is why placing the plants in a shady place for the winter is so desirable. When such a situation does not offer it can often be provided; many ways will suggest themselves.

Let me call attention to what I think a most valuable help to evergreens in winter. I refer to the keeping of frost from their roots. Whether in pots, tubs or in the open ground, there is no help so useful as a mulching of sufficient depth to prevent frost penetrating. When in an open place, with intense light overhead and ground frozen solid about the roots, it is impossible for the roots to make good the enormous loss by transpiration the foliage sustains, and injury results. This is often seen in the case of rhododendrons. With protection such as is here advocated these evergreens will winter well, but without it they suffer greatly, despite their apparent effort to help themselves by rolling up their leaves, as they do.

It is not too late to do the necessary work now. The sun is low yet, and injury may be said never to occur until after New Year's. The prime points to remember are that the tops must be in darkness and the roots in unfrozen soil.

It will interest many of your readers, familiar with the shrub, to know that despite the severity of last winter, a two-foot specimen of common English laurel was wintered by me entirely uninjured in leaf or branch, by mulching with leaves to keep out frost and standing a board on its southern side to keep off the sun; and it has just been fixed in the same way for this winter's trial.

Philadelphia. JOSEPH MEEHAN.

Syracuse, N. Y.

BUSINESS EXCELLENT.—A VISIT TO THE MARQUIS.—ROSES AT QUINLAN'S.—CARNATION JOTTINGS.—BURT REPORTS FINE TRADE.

Choice stock has been somewhat scarce, the demand of late having exceeded the supply by a good margin. What is really needed is a few bright, sunny days. Bright weather, to put it in the words of an apprentice boy about one of the greenhouse establishments, will soon "fetch 'em in great shape," for there is an abundance of stock grown about Syracuse.

There is one attraction which is drawing many a grower from afar and that is The Marquis. Although planted late, it seems to have received no set-back whatever; on the contrary it has made splendid growth and is going ahead in a manner to convince the most conservative of its superior constitution and other good qualities. Mr. Marquisee informs the writer that of the 18,000 plants housed, two-thirds at least will be used for cuttings exclusively. That the florists know a good thing when they see it, may be gathered from the fact of the large quantity already sold.

At P. R. Quinlan & Co.'s things are as usual in "apple pie" order. Lady Dorothea, as grown here, is a magnificent rose and Mr. Bard, the genial manager of the establishment, assures me that it has a future before it. Golden Gate is grown to perfection here and Mme. Hoste could not possibly be surpassed anywhere. Kaiserin, though generally conceded to be a summer rose, does equally well here in midwinter, while Bride, Bridesmaid and Pearle are as fine as these varieties can be grown anywhere. What attracted my special attention was a house of American Beauties, every bud of which has been sold in advance. These were beauties in all that the term implies. In carnations Red Jacket is Mr. Bard's favorite. Genesee and McGowan still hold their own here, although White Cloud will be given a fair test during the coming season. Albertini and Scott make up the pinks, the former showing up exceptionally well.

Henry Burt reports the best trade he has had in years, with supply barely keeping pace with the demand. Mr. Burt grows a general line of stock for his retail trade. HOMO.

OUR PASTIMES.

Announcements of coming contests or other events of interest to our bowling, shooting and cycling readers are solicited and will be given place in this column.

Address all correspondence for this department to Wm. J. Stewart, 67 Bromfield St., Boston, Mass.; Robt. Kift, 1725 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.; or to the American Florist Co., 324 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

CHARLES L. SEYBOLD, Baltimore's champion bowler, for several years superintendent of Carroll Park, where his work has been of the highest order, has been appointed landscape architect for the Baltimore park system at a salary of $1,800 a year. He will enter upon his duties January 15.

At Minneapolis.

The following scores were made by the Twin City Florists' Bowling Club at their last contest:

Player.	1st	2d	3d	Av.
G. Will	168	158	148	158
J. Hartman	145	171	115	143
E. Nagel	124	130	136	130

John Monson	117	131	122	123
H. Barsch	105	104	100	103
				N.

At Chicago.

In the absence of regular games during the holidays some of the Florists' Club bowlers are rolling with other teams and making good scores. In the North Shore League Geo. Stollery has played fourteen games, making a total of 2320 pins, an average of over 168. Coulson is the leader of the Central Parks, of the West Side League, having hit 2111 pins in twelve games, giving an average of 176. His best game was 223.

At New York.

Tuesday evening, January 2, saw a very jolly party at the alleys and it was in all respects one of the most enjoyable meets of the series. The scores were as follows:

Player	1st	2d	3d	4th	5th
Traendly	127	156	127	162	121
Siebrecht	115	105	130	117	120

At Flatbush.

Thursday evening, December 28, was a hilarious occasion at the bowling alleys, it being the date of the annual "mysterious prize" drawing. The best average for the evening was made by Eugene Dailledouze and a case of high grade liquid refreshments was his reward. Theo. Lang drew a package of a similar nature; it lasted about two minutes and a half after Theodore had taken the company into his confidence. A box of collars fell to Alfred Zeller's lot. What they lacked in length they made up for in height, being of the most pronounced "tower" style. Boxes of cigars, tobacco jars, etc., made up the bulk of the prizes. Papa Zeller made his customary felicitous little speech and promised to be on hand in the same capacity in 1901. David Y. Mellis, having recently been made chaplain of his lodge, cannot now be expected to exhibit his former triskiness, and was becomingly sedate throughout the exercises of the evening. Theodore Lang and J. P. Cleary were the only visitors.

At Denver.

Following are the scores made by the Denver Florists' Bowling Club, on December 26:

Player	1st	2d	3d	Av.
Chas. Franz	159	176	201	179
A. E. Mauff	180	196	158	178

Our Boiler Explosion.

How many practical florists are there, who, if called upon, could perform the duties of fireman and do it with safety to themselves and the property in their charge? With high pressure boilers the dangers are many but with the modest low pressure ones danger is ever present, as the writers have found out at a very dear price. It is for the benefit of others, who, for the sake of economy, have undertaken the responsibility of night and day fireman besides the other regular duties, that this article is written.

We have a cast iron, upright, sectional boiler—capacity 1500 feet of radiation—using hard coal. On Christmas day, at 9:30 a. m., steam was shut off entirely, the day being bright. The fire was then banked and the check draft opened. The steam quickly dropped to zero on the guage. About 10:30, however, it began to get cloudy, making it necessary to turn on steam. All the valves in the flow pipes and all the returns were shut tight. Now comes the interesting point. The main valve of one house was being gradually opened, when, with a loud crash, two sections burst asunder, sending the contents over the floor. In a twinkling, the bright prospects for the future had vanished and merciless destruction stared us in the face. Outside the temperature was many degrees below freezing and was rapidly sinking, going as low as 8° below zero during the night. It was time to act and act quickly. No time could be spared to hunt and set up stoves, so fires were kindled in the paths and for thirty long hours, while the boiler was being repaired, we kept the houses from freezing in this way.

After the excitement was over and the fire was again kindled, the cause of the accident was the first thing to demand our attention. A committee of experts after careful examination of the ruptured section, pronounced it sound and without a flaw. The lower section that was broken, being the firepot, and least injured, was squeezed together with a strong iron band and is now doing good service. The decision was that when the valve was opened the water suddenly lifted and drained the lower sections, leaving them exposed to the fire. When the cooler water in the returns struck these heated surfaces, the result was the disaster described above. Up to this time we had always waited until we had ten or fifteen pounds pressure before opening the valve, but this time less than a pound was registered. Here lies the secret of it all. Had the pressure been high enough to prevent the water from rising we would have saved many dollars and we hope that our brother florists may profit by our experience and not suffer as we have.

It may be of interest to know how the plants stood the long exposure to smoke, which was so thick at times as to nearly suffocate the attendants. Coleus, heliotrope, ferns and cinerarias were nearly ruined. Roses, smilax, lilies, geraniums and other bedding stock were considerably injured. Carnations, violets, vincas, callas and palms came through apparently uninjured. Fuschias and cyclamens were uninjured, Chinese primroses partially. Although we had a very good business it turned out to be a not very merry or profitable Christmas for us but one long to be remembered.

RETROSPECTIVE VIEW OF CHRISTMAS.—PLANTS MAKE UP THE VOLUME OF A SATISFACTORY BUSINESS.—BUYERS REBEL AT HIGH PRICES.

The holidays are past and I think we are all satisfied, at least the Christmas business was heavy, with most of the stores undoubtedly larger than last year. But the increase was on plants, not in cut flowers or in prices. Plants were our strong hold and sold well at fair prices. Poinsettias were the leaders and most of them were much improved by dressing in crepe paper and ribbon. We were told two or three weeks in advance that roses, carnations and violets would be scarce and high and we ordered sparingly. There certainly was a drop in the sale of cut flowers. The regular, all-the-year-around buyers declined to pay the prices and either chose plants or something altogether outside our line. It is a certainty that, whatever may be the case in New York and Philadelphia, one cannot get these great holiday prices in Buffalo. As I said at Easter, the sooner the growers give up the notion that they can make Christmas and Easter pay the whole year's expenses, the better it will be for all of us. The retailer has to satisfy his customers, whatever the grower has to do, and Buffalo will not stand for violets at $4 a hundred, Brides and Bridesmaids at $4 a dozen, Beauties $2 apiece and carnations $2 a dozen, even if the qualities are the best. On Christmas day the growers sent in great quantities of stock which should have arrived one or two days before to be of use, but of course it all moved sooner or later for trade has been good and stock scarce. There have been several receptions, some banquets and a few funerals to keep things moving and everyone seems to be sharing in a general prosperity. W. A.

ETHEL CROCKER

Absolutely the BEST PINK CARNATION ever offered the trade.

Grown equally successfully by Hill, Craig, and myself; you are not buying it on a venture, but knowing that it is not a success in one soil and a failure in another. In color, size, fragrance and stem it is just what the "storemen" want. In habit, constitution and freedom of bloom it is just what the grower wants, never out of crop from September to July, more flowers to the square foot than any other known variety and practically no seconds. With 18,000 stock plants to work from there is no danger of over propagation, and you are not asked to wait until planting out time for your cuttings but can have them whenever wanted. Orders entrusted to me will have my personal attention, both in the selection of the cuttings and the filling of the order.

Price per 100, $10; per 25, $2.50; per 1000, $75; per 250, $18.75. HERR'S PANSIES at $4.00 now, and a regular assortment of CARNATIONS in a list ready Jan. 1st.

ALBERT M. HERR, Lancaster, Pa.

Rose Crimson Rambler

As a pot plant for retail sales this rose is incomparable. Its hundreds of blossoms all open together and seem to improve for at least two and even three weeks. The bright crimson color holds without fading and contrasts finely with the glossy foliage. It Forces Easily. We have fine dormant stock.

2-year-old, 2 to 3 feet, well branched, own roots, per dozen, $2.00; per 100, $15.00.
3-year-old, 4 to 5 ft., well branched, budded or own roots, doz. $3.00; per 100, $20.00.

GENEVIEVE LORD.

THE peer of any light pink Carnation ever offered to the trade. A commercial triumph. Its beautiful color, large size and its matchless length and stiffness of stem make it, beyond a doubt, the queen of its class. There is nothing like it. We offer it to the commercial grower as a money getter of the first magnitude.

As an exhibition flower, it ranks high. It will take care of itself in its class. It has carried off the highest honors wherever shown. The blooms are now being sold in the most critical market and bringing highest prices. It will not be over-propagated. Our book will close as soon as the limit is reached. Order early and be sure.

Tarrytown, N. Y.

At the December meeting of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society the following officers were elected: President, Wm. Turner, gardener to Wm. Rockefeller; vice-president, Wm. Stevenson, gardener to Chas. Graef; secretary, Wm. F. McCord; treasurer, E. W. Neubrand; executive committee, Wm. Scott, J. W. Smith, F. Gibson, John Egan, Robt. Angus, Jas. Nicol and J. J. Connellan. Four new members were received.

Following the election, the members present, some seventy in number, repaired to the banquet hall, which was tastefully decorated, and partook of an excellent repast. Wm. Scott acted as master of ceremonies and in the entertainment of the company was assisted by Judge Andrews, F. R. Pierson, J. W. Withers, John Shore, J. I. Donlan, W. E. Marshall, J. T. Scott, John Laaffe and Messrs. Butterfield, Angus and White.

There were several excellent exhibits of carnations and roses. Wm. Turner was given a certificate of cultural merit for New York carnation and Mrs. Morgan rose. He also received special mention for a vase of Bridesmaid roses, as did Mr. Cockburn for Melba carnations.

THE OLD YEAR GOES OUT WITH A RUSH.—TRADE GOOD AND CHRISTMAS PRICES PREVAILING.—PLANTS SOLD WELL AT CHRISTMAS.—RED FLOWERS IN DEMAND.—PICKLED STOCK A MENACE.

Holiday trade has been very satisfactory, Christmas sales being especially gratifying. Everything sold well and the aggregate is, I think, the largest in the history of the dealers here. Much inferior holly was seen though some very choice stock was offered. Mistletoe was scarce and generally inferior. Some very fine stock came in from western Texas and New Mexico. Bouquet green was very plentiful and sold readily when made into wreathing. All kinds of plants sold well. Azaleas were the favorite. Baby primroses and Primula obconica grandiflora were the novelties and sold fairly well. In cut flowers there was a lamentable shortage of good Beauties, Meteors and red carnations. Other stock was fairly abundant, there being somewhat of a surplus in white. Swanson had a few good poinsettias, which seemed almost like a novelty, as they have not been grown here for several years.

Home grown stock was very good, the bright weather increasing the quantity and improving the quality of the cut. Shipped in flowers, however, gave many evidences of pickling, disgusting the average store man and hurting his trade. Many people do not object to paying high prices for a choice article but nearly every one objects to paying fancy prices for inferior stock. The growers may gain for the time being, but they lose the rest of the season. I do not deprecate high prices, for the average grower realizes little enough, but high prices and inferior stock are not compatible.

The country trade was simply immense and shippers were fairly swamped with orders. New Year's was clear and cold with trade fully up to the average and Christmas prices ruling. FELIX.

The Right Cypress for Greenhouse Material.

Have you heard of Cypress Greenhouse Material that has not been satisfactory? If you have it does not follow that Cypress is not the best lumber to use. There is White Cypress, Yellow Cypress and Red Cypress; there is Cypress that grows on the high lands and Cypress that grows in the swamps.

All of these different kinds are not suitable for greenhouse purposes. Do you know which kind is best and do you know that kind when you see it? If not you would better buy from those that do know and will deliver exactly what they sell. We introduced Cypress for greenhouse construction and pushed it to the front. We know all about it. For fifteen years we have made a specialty of furnishing it, and during this time we have built up a reputation that we can not afford to jeopardize. We send out the best only.

Horticulture in the United States.

[Read by John N. May, Summit, N. J., before the Lenox Horticultural Society, on January 6, 1900.]

In reviewing the progress of horticulture for the last thirty years in this country, a very wide field is opened and one which can only be touched upon in a very limited manner, as to do it justice would take volumes.

The term horticulture as generally applied to-day, simply means an advanced stage of agriculture; yet the two are as distinct in their general application and results as almost any two professions with which I am acquainted. Agriculture in its broadest sense is almost exclusively dependent upon natural atmospheric conditions, for, notwithstanding all the skill and science put into the preparation of the soil for the various crops, the result wholly depends upon nature and the elements. Agriculture as practiced to-day by the larger proportion of the private gardeners and florists of this country is to a very large extent dependent upon artificial appliances, guided by the skill and experience of each individual workman, and they form a very large army of earnest students who are ever on the alert to improve upon the produce of preceding years. It would seem hardly necessary to instance any one particular thing in regard to this matter, yet to make myself clearly understood I would ask if a greenhouse filled with any kind of plant or plants would yield any returns if the gardener had not a good general knowledge of the requirements necessary for the full development of said plants, and these are all treated artificially or virtually so. If left to nature's care the result would be nil and a very large and important part of the gardener's education to-day is to know how to obtain the very best results from these and kindred structures, all treated artificially; hence the line of demarcation between the two branches.

Horticulture thirty years ago, with but very few exceptions, was in a very crude condition in this country generally; the private estates where any skill above that of a good laborer was required were few and far between, and even in many places where a skilled gardener was employed anything like embellishment of the grounds was considered a waste of time and money. The lawns in spring were made to furnish a crop of hay, and after this was cut and cared for by the gardener the cows did what trimming was necessary for the rest of the season; and these were termed nice lawns. Just picture to yourselt any one of the beautiful lawns surrounding the beautiful residences in Lenox being so treated to-day, and you can readily go back three or four decades for the contrast. The great improvements not only as regards the lawns but all other parts of the estates have not been done by magic, but by steady, earnest, skillful application on the part of the men put in charge, and a growing taste for the beautiful among the wealthy classes, for be it said to their credit, I earnestly believe there are no people as a class so ready to appreciate the refined and beautiful as is our American public. We can see that around us in every walk of life. Travel through any of the European countries you may, you will find people of ample means living in the same old-fashioned houses, with scarcely a change in the exterior or interior in the past fifty or more years. In this country improved, modernized houses and grounds are springing up in countless thousands all over the country; in many, very many, instances nice houses less than twenty years old are being rebuilt or improved, enlarged or modernized generally; and so the taste for the beautiful improves from year to year.

With this naturally comes the desire to beautify the grounds, and the assistance of the practical gardener has to be called. In very many instances the future of such a place very largely depends upon what the first artist in landscaping accomplishes. If his work shows that of a master hand and the whole is finished off in harmony with the surroundings, making a complete picture in itself, the owner will invariably be pleased and gratified, and the foundation for future improvements will have been laid. But it is unfortunate that this is not always the case. In very many such cases, in very many such places, the work necessary to make the whole an artistic picture is sadly deficient, not always from the inability of the person employed to superintend the same but by the owner taking the advice of a number of different people, each one having a different opinion of what should or should not be done, with the result, oftentimes, of a conglomaration which in the main is anything but satisfactory. Where such conditions arise the gardener will find diplomacy the best policy to follow and considerable patience, reticence and perseverence will be necessary to overcome such obstacles. When, after trying every reasonable means to that end, it is found impossible to do so it would be far better to resign the position than continue it and have the credit, after it is all done, of having made a very incomplete and unsatisfactory finish. But as a rule such cases are quite the exception, as the beautiful lawns and grounds of so many nice places all over the country bear ample witness.

The above is only one division in which great improvements are constantly taking place in horticulture. In fruits what an improvement has taken place. The strawberries of to-day and twenty-five years ago are evidence of this improvement. Peaches, pears, grapes and a host of other valuable fruits have each and all been greatly improved within the same space of time. The varieties are far too numerous to enumerate.

Again, in ornamental foliage plants what immense improvements have and are constantly being introduced, the croton family probably having made the greatest strides of any. Their variety and glowing beauty justly places them among the front rank of beautiful foliage plants. Palms, dracænas, begonias, caladiums, marantas dieffenbachias, coleus, alternantheras and many other species have all been vastly improved upon of late years. The same remark holds good for flowering plants. Among these I think there are none where greater improvements have taken place than in the everyday geranium and where a conservatory has to be kept gay with flowering plants the whole year round, they are simply indispensable. Such varieties as John Forbes, Gertrude Pearson, Mme. Landry, Bellerophon, La Fraicheur, Crabbe and Mrs. Gladstone, grown and flowered to perfection, as it was my good fortune to see them recently, are simply grand, and there are a host of others equally good and desirable.

What immense improvement over the old Indian shot plant, as they were termed less than thirty years ago, are the cannas, those grand summer bedding plants. Pansies also come in for their share of glory, and what can be more gorgeous in beauty than a bed well filled with the better varieties of this queen of spring? The heliotropes, gloxinias and fuchsias all show the march of progress. In the front rank of all begonias stands Gloire de Lorraine, a glorious plant for greenhouse or room decoration. There are many others, also of recent introduction, that are exquisitely beautiful. Of azaleas, one of the very finest of all flowering plants, what an infinite variety of beautiful colors have been added to our list. Anthuriums, abutilons, bougainvilleas, acalyphas, cyclamens and hundreds of other species have all added their quota of improvements.

Passing on to the florists' flowers proper, first comes the rose, the queen of flowers. Here, I think you will all agree, has been made a greater advance than in any other one class of flowers. If there are any doubting this, let them compare some of the older varieties such as La Pactole or Safrano with American Beauty, the Bride, Bridesmaid, Marechal Niel, Souvenir de Wootton, Liberty and many others which have made their debut since 1860, and I think the most skeptical must be convinced. Turning to the hybrid remontant class, we have not made such marked advance but have added many gems to the list; to enumerate them would only be tiresome. From the rose let us pass on to the carnation. Here again the hybridizer has given us such grand varieties that it puts the productions of twenty-five years ago absolutely in the shade. About the time named the best known varieties were DeGraw, La Purite and Astoria; follow the development from these through all the innumerable varieties yearly and it will be readily seen that a steady advance has been made. Probably no variety has ever been more generally popular than that gem, Daybreak, but notwithstanding its many good qualities, it has finally given way to superior merit. In scarlet Portia held its own for a long time, but is now hardly grown at all, at least not by those who wish to keep abreast of the times. Wm. Scott held the growers tight for some time by its persistent blooming qualities. Lizzie McGowan was the favorite white for years; all these are now classed as back numbers and are being substituted by such varieties as Triumph, Cerise Queen, Flora Hill, White Cloud, G. H. Crane and others of equal merit. The coming season will see still greater advance in the varieties to be introduced. Most of them have already come before your notice in some form; suffice for me to say that they will all prove valuable where fine flowers are in demand.

Chrysanthemums claim our next attention; that they are not quite large enough for the ladies to carry as sunshades yet we will admit, but that they are fast approaching that size must be conceded. The rapid strides of development in this family is simply marvelous, color, form, foliage and distinctiveness having kept pace with size. Who can foretell where we shall get to? Their season, too, has been extended very much; now they can be had from the last of September till the first of January, if desired, by some of the later introductions. As a decorative flower during their season they stand pre-eminent at the top.

A few words for the annuals and herbaceous plants, for they deserve more consideration than they usually get. In the former are some of the most beautiful of nature's gems and of the latter we certainly are slighting many of the most useful and beautiful decorative flowers known, if they were only grown as they deserve to be.

I cannot close without a word for the vast improvement in horticultural structures. The designers and builders of these to-day are justly entitled to the highest commendation for the great improvements they have and are making in all kinds of greenhouses, not only for the commercial florist but for the private gardener also. Only a comparatively few years ago there was as much wood as glass on the roof of the greenhouses; the glass was of small size, with wide laps which quickly filled with dirt so that very little light in dark days was admitted to the plants. In such houses the gardener's ability was taxed to its utmost. All this has been changed; the modern greenhouse of to-day has scarcely anything to obstruct the sun's rays, ventilation, heating and all the best appliances are under full control. This, in conjunction with greatly improved varieties of plants and flowers, makes it much easier for the gardener or florist to produce a better quality in greater abundance at all seasons of the year than his predecessors ever could hope to do.

Thus the past has given us very many improvements horticulturally; what the future will do is to be seen. Personally I have no doubt whatever that it will bring forth greater changes than we have seen in the end of the nineteenth century, wishing you may one and all live to see and feel for many years the great advance and pleasures which the new century will bring with it.

A. B. Cartledge.

Alfred B. Cartledge, known to his intimates as "Bart," is a member of the firm of Pennock Bros., Philadelphia, and is the only son of the late Thomas Cartledge, who was a member of the same firm for nearly half a century and did much to build up the great reputation of that house. The younger Mr. Cartledge entered the employ of Pennock Bros. as a boy and went through the various departments in turn, and for a number of years had charge of the books. He is considered to be one of the best posted and most progressive of the retail florists of Philadelphia and the S. A. F. is to be congratulated in securing his services on its executive committee. He has been a faithful attendant at nearly all its conventions and has taken a lively interest in its proceedings from the first. Although of a somewhat retiring disposition he is one of the most companionable of men, his chief hobby, outside of the business, being shooting, of which sport he is very fond, and generally manages to get a week or two down in the wilds of Delaware or North Carolina every season. He has been secretary of the Florists' Gun Club of Philadelphia since its start until last election and was a charter member of the Philadelphia Florists' Club.

Vanda Coerulea.

The illustration shows three plants grown by Henry C. Fruck, gardener to Joseph H. Berry, Grosse Pointe Farms, Mich., which are remarkably fine specimens of the variety. The plants were obtained in their fresh state from Isaac Forstermann, Newtown, R. I., in 1891. They have been grown along in the East India house with plenty of moisture and ample drainage, crocks being used to secure the latter. The plants are not repotted; whenever they need more room they are slipped out of the small pot into one a size larger and sphagnum is packed in to fill the space between the ball and the pot. As shown in the illustration the plants have about 335 flowers. They are late bloomers and suffered somewhat this season because of division.

About Long Greenhouses.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—Will you please explain what the advantages are of such long houses as those of E. M. Wood & Co., illustrated in a recent issue of your journal? Would not the same space arranged in 250-foot houses, running 125 feet each way from the central corridor be easier to work, easier to heat and practically as cheap to build? A. B. C.

I am hardly competent to criticise Mr. Wood's 700-foot houses, never having handled any very long houses myself. I should prefer shorter houses, say not over 200 feet in length, from each side of a corridor. In my opinion they would be easier to heat and would cost less to empty and fill than a very long house would. A long house would cost less to erect not having so many gables. I think, however, the cost would be offset by the money saved yearly in emptying and filling and other advantages.

ERNST G. ASMUS.

Much would depend upon the location and the size of one's plant, but while the new houses built for Mr. Wood may be slightly longer than would be desirable, there is no question but what the length mentioned by "A. B. C." is much less than will under ordinary conditions give the best results. As I have not visited Mr Wood's place for several years and do not know the exact location of the houses, or his reason for selecting 700 feet as the length, I hardly feel like offering any criticism. As compared with five houses, each 280 feet in length, there would be little difference in the cost of building or heating. If the dimensions of the building site permitted, it is probable that for the average grower a range of either three or four houses from 350 to 450 in length, will be found most satisfactory. L. R. TAFT.

I do not consider myself capable of advising in the matter of the best length for rose houses but I can tell what our experience has been. We have all lengths of houses, from 100 feet to 600 feet and it has been our experience that the large house has the best atmosphere, most easily controlled in regard to heat, assuredly some less expense in building and, also, we find that men will do more work in a long, large house than they will in a short one. We have one house in use, 55x600, heated from the center and the only objection we find to it is that, the house being so wide, the roof necessarily has to be flat, and more or less drip comes from that cause. We also have a house 30x600 heated from the center and if we were to build more houses we should certainly build on the latter plan, as we like it much better than any other we have. O. P. BASSETT.

I do not know that I am prepared to judge of the long house built by Mr. Wood, for the longest house I have on the place is 245 feet. This house is heated from a central main. The flows rise under the bottom of the benches in the center of the house and fall to the end of the bench and, turning at the end of the bench, still continue to fall to the place of beginning, where they drop into the return main. There are also pipes on the sides of the house, which extend around the ends of the house to the doors. In this house we find a variation in temperature between the center of the house and the ends from 4° to 8°, according to the direction of the wind, and we expect to be obliged to change the piping in the house, putting more piping at both ends, in order to maintain an even temperature.

From my experience with houses ranging from 100 to 245 feet in length, I should imagine that if a house was too long it might be rather cold on the weather end of the house, unless it was very tightly built, as the pressure of the cold against the exposed end would have a tendency to drive the heat out of the further end of the house. However, this is a matter that can be easily remedied by extra piping and building the house properly.

As to the cost of houses, it is my impression that a house ranging from 250 to 500 feet in length and twenty-five to thirty-five feet in width can be built cheaper in proportion to the number of square feet of bench surface produced, than can the smaller house of, say, twenty feet in width and 100 to 150 feet long. The cost in a house should be reckoned per square foot of bench surface secured and not by simple lengths and widths and heights.

As to the cost of operating these large houses, that is a matter I have not as yet determined and it will require several years of careful records to determine just what it costs per 100 or 1000 flowers to grow stock in large houses. However, I do not apprehend that the building of large houses will increase the cost of growing stock. I rather think it will reduce it. C. W. WARD.

Regarding the 700-foot houses in course of erection by E. M. Wood & Co., of Natick, and the desirability of long houses in general, I must confess that it is a puzzling question. When so practical and competent a grower as Mr. Montgomery recommends to the head of his firm the erection of 700-foot houses, one's first thought is that it's all right because Mr. Montgomery advises it. On second thought, however, I am inclined to think with the Frenchman describing his new tea rosebud, that it is "very much elongated." Here at Richmond we think 400 feet about right for up-to-date construction.

There is a lessening of the cost of erection in a long house over the same area covered with shorter houses, on account of doing away with the cross ends; there is also a very material saving in pipe fittings and valves where long lines can be used. If, however, these long houses are partitioned off, and the piping is done for each section, then I can see no particular saving in long construction over shorter length houses. I can see one disadvantage in a long construction unless the house is partitioned and piped in sections and that is that the crop will come into bloom all at one time—a pretty large dose! This may be all right, if the growth is timed so as to hit important dates, such as Christmas and Easter.

For the small grower, however, I am sure that houses of moderate length are the more suitable. The lay of one's ground, the number of varieties to be planted, the location of the heating plant and several other factors may have a determining effect on the most suitable length to be used. If Mr. Montgomery would give us his reasons for preferring the 700-foot houses it would help each of us to work out his own problem of "how long shall I make my house?"

E. G. HILL.

In reference to the question of long greenhouses I would say that I know of no special advantage in such long houses as the ones mentioned. Were they to be used for pot plants there would be a very decided disadvantage on account of the long distance that plants would have to be carried when repotting, etc., unless potting or work sheds were placed at convenient distances along the house, but where used for cut flowers, planted out in beds or benches, it makes no material difference if the lot is level. If one end of the house is much higher than the other it would probably become much warmer than the low end unless there were frequent partitions across the house, practically making it a number of houses.

In some cases there may be local causes for building long houses, such as the shape of the ground to be occupied, etc. Were I building 30,000 or 40,000 feet of greenhouses, I would build them from 125 to 150 feet long, if the ground would permit, both for convenience and to have less exposure to the winds, as the houses to the windward would certainly shelter the others more or less, and we all know how the wind brings down the temperature on winter nights. So, considering all, I much prefer shorter houses.

JOHN BURTON.

To those of us who have so far operated rose houses not longer than 250 feet, houses of greater length seem too long, under our present arrangements, to be operated economically. At the same time, such level-headed people as E. M. Wood and his able manager, Alexander Montgomery, have taken all such matters into due consideration, and would not build houses 700 feet long if there were any difficulties in the way of operating them profitably.

During the time when the soil is being taken out and fresh soil brought in is when 700-foot houses appear too long, especially to the workmen; but in establishments where, say twenty men are employed, such houses would be very little harder to empty and refill than are houses half the length, and where half the number of men are employed and available for the work on hand. It is out of the question for florists who have been accustomed to empty and refill their greenhouses with handbarrows or boxes to think of building greenhouses much longer than 100 feet.

It would be better in my judgment for a florist having only the amount of space under glass which a house 700 feet long would cover, to have it in shorter houses divided in the center with a shed or a corridor running between. But with the necessary help employed which a large rose growing or other establishment calls for, where the different jobs incidental thereto can be put through quickly, I would rather operate the longer house than the smaller ones. One large job systematically arranged can be put through quicker and better than a number of smaller ones, and that is the difference, generally speaking, between one large house and the same number of square feet occupied by a number of smaller structures. The cost of building one large house instead of two or more smaller ones to cover the same space ought to be in favor of the former. L.

Florists' Association of Indiana.

The annual meeting of the State Florists' Association of Indiana was held at the agricultural rooms of the State House, January 9. President E. G. Hill opened the session with a speech in which he suggested: A more wise discrimination in the selection of varieties; a higher standard both in growing and methods of catering to the public; the use of the newer introductions; the raising of new varieties by individual efforts.

Mr. Hill said that many florists grow, as a matter of habit, geraniums, carnations and other all-important stock in varieties that are at least ten years behind the times, while with the same space and labor they might grow the very best up-to-date stock. A little of everything and much of nothing seems to be the rule of many. "Grow fewer varieties and only the best of them" was his advice. He also advised that every grower try his hand in hybridizing, which is interesting, instructive, costs little and, once in a while, turns out to be a very profitable occupation. Next Mr. Hill spoke of our society and how to extend its usefulness.

J. A. E. HAUGH.
(President-elect of Indiana Florists' Society.)

The discussion in regard to a fall show was opened by W. W. Coles, who stated that he did not fully realize the importance of the show, or to what an extent the people of the state are interested in the exhibition, until inquiries came pouring in from would-be visitors, who wanted to know why there was no show last year. He said he was in favor of shows and would exhibit even if only half of the premiums could be paid and made a motion that a show be held next fall. Mr. Coles was followed by Wm. Langstaff who shared Mr. Coles' opinions. After Mr. Coles' motion was unanimously carried, further discussion of the subject was postponed for the evening session and the election of officers was taken up with the following results:

President, J. A. E. Haugh, Anderson; first vice-president, Wm. Langstaff, Indianapolis; second vice-president, W. W. Coles, Kokomo; secretary, Robert McKeand, Indianapolis; treasurer H. H. Huntington, Indianapolis.

The evening session was opened by the new president, and after electing Messrs. Bauer and Smith, of Mapleton, as members, preparations for the chrysanthemum show were taken up. John Bertermann was first on the floor with a number of suggestions and offered to contribute $200 to a fund to be used for a guarantee. He was followed by A. Nelson, H. Junge and others. On motion of Mr. Junge the following committees were appointed.

Finance: W. W. Coles, H. W. Rieman, John Bertermann, Fred Dorner and H. H. Huntington.

Special Attractions: H. Junge, A. E. Nelson, John Heidenreich.

Premiums: E. G. Hill, John Hartje, John Bertermann, W. H. Rieman and H. Junge.

A resolution was adopted expressing sympathy for Ex-president Stuart, of Anderson, who is convalescing from a long illness. E. G. Hill invited the members to visit Richmond and the acceptance was made with a view to paying the call en-route to the Cincinnati carnation meeting on February 10. Mr. Hill was also instructed to extend an invitation to the American Carnation Society to meet in Indianapolis in 1901.

There were a number of good exhibits and the judges, John Hartje and W. W. Coles, recommended certificates of merit as follows: To Stuart & Haugh for White Cloud and Avondale, a pink sport of Armazindy; to E. C. Bissell, grower for I. W. Bernard, Marion, for Triumph and Flora Hill; to H. W. Rieman for cyclamens, cypripediums and a white seedling carnation; to Bertermann Floral Co. for a display of pot plants; to Sonnenschmidt & Junge for Marie Louise violets.

Those present from out of town were: Herbert Heller, New Castle; W. W. Coles, Kokomo; J. A. E. Haugh, Anderson; E. G. Bissell, Marion; E. G. Hill, Richmond. H. J.

J. A. E. Haugh.

The State Florists' Association of Indiana is to be congratulated upon its choice of a presiding officer to succeed E. G. Hill, for in J. A. E. Haugh they have an executive who combines character and ability with enthusiasm. Mr. Haugh for years followed the practice of medicine in Indianapolis, giving his leisure to the pursuits of floriculture. When at length he found the exactions of his profession too great a strain upon his physical resources, he formed a partnership with G. S. Stuart, of Anderson, Ind., and the two have gone rapidly ahead in their business. Stuart & Haugh are now the leading firm at Anderson and have a fine range of glass, some 25,000 square feet, under which they produce some excellent stock. Mr. Haugh is well known throughout the state, and has always taken an interest in the promotion of horticultural progress. His acceptance of the leadership of the state association presages a period of active endeavor under the impetus of the enthusiastic meeting at Indianapolis this week.

Chrysanthemum Society of America.

FROM THE PRESIDENT'S STANDPOINT.

The national chrysanthemum society, to whose care is entrusted the interests of the queen of autumn, has received a large amount of criticism, some of it just, and some strictures that have been unmerited. As its presiding officer I have to confess that it falls far short of what such an organization should be, or at least of what I felt persuaded it would be, when it was organized. That it would receive the help and the support, not only of those commercially interested in the chrysanthemum but also of a very large number of the private gardeners throughout the country seemed assured, but such has not been the case. The absence from the rolls of the society, not only of the private gardeners but also of a majority of the trade is most deplorable and, sad to relate, at no time has the society numbered over forty members. The lack of enterprise in those interested in the chrysanthemum has been quite unaccountable. The present officers hold position not from choice, but rather from necessity, in fact I was not consulted as to my willingness to accept the position which I now hold. I am sure that Mr. May, Mr. Smith and myself each feel that it would be better if we occupied less prominent positions from the fact that we are so largely interested commercially. It may not be amiss to insert here the secretary's reply to my inquiry for data concerning the membership, the revenues and the source of revenue:

"Total number of members twenty-four, as follows: Jas. Hartshorne, E. G. Hill, W. N. Rudd, W. K. Harris, G. P. Rawson, John Burton, E. D. Smith, J. M. Gasser, Fischer & Ekas, Eugene, Henry and Paul Dailledouze, J. Condon, J. W. Withers, A. B. Cartledge, Edwin Lonsdale, T. F. Beckert, Fred Dorner, John N. May, Theo. Bock, E. M. Wood, Paul M. Pierson, Henry Rieman and Harry Papworth. To show you the resources of the society I give the following: Since the inauguration of the committees for judging seedlings the amount received for entry fees from fall of 1894 to and including fall of 1898 amounted to $522, of which J. N. May has contributed $50, Pitcher & Manda $18, Theo. Bock $16, Nanz & Neuner $14, E. G. Hill & Co. $56, Thos. H. Spaulding $84, N. Smith & Son $80, J. Condon $10, G. P. Rawson $10, Henderson & Co. $10 and fifty-nine others make up the balance. It might be well to state that the dues are but $1 per year and we would be pleased to have the co-operation of all who have the welfare of the chrysanthemum at heart. Urge the private gardeners to join us. I think this will give you a fair insight as to the present condition of the society!"

One private gardener, Mr. Papworth, of New Orleans, decorates the rolls; where are the great number of private growers who, oftener than the commercial florists, have been to the front with fine exhibits and who have in days past sold their seedlings at very remunerative figures? Nothing has been so keen a disappointment as their absence from the society's membership. Then we have not been blessed with one name from the roll of our horticultural literateurs, and these same gentlemen have been quite diligent in their prodding and free with their suggestions. Certainly, the paltry annual fee of $1 has not kept all these worthy gentlemen from enrolling their names.

It cannot be said that the officers have not helped support the society. With those other members interested only commercially I feel like asking right here, where are Mr. A., and Mr. B., and Mr. C?

I confess that I am terribly tempted to write out the list, and especially of those who have been the beneficiaries of the society's work. I can answer for it that all of the present members are more than willing to do their share of work, and are willing to contribute of their means to make the society national in fact as well as in name.

The critics cannot gainsay the fact that the society's finances are in first class shape considering the large (?) membership enrolled. Surely they will give us credit for having so good a showing, but we can almost hear the lash fall on account of our not having expended the sum now in the treasury.

The possibilities before the Chrysanthemum Society of America are large and wide. We should hold a great November show each year, moving the same from one city to the other as the years roll around. This should not simply be a chrysanthemum show but should be a great autumnal festival where all seasonable florists' products might be shown.

To the criticism that "the commercial fellows are running things," the answer is that they were drafted into the service; they had to take the helm. We would be only too willing to have our friends, both retailers and private growers, take the management and hold the rudder for a time.

One thing the society has done, and done well and that is, it has kept large numbers of inferior varieties from being offered and sold. A variety that runs the gauntlet of the society's "points" is recognized as having some good claim for recognition; but this is resurrecting the old theme, "Seedlings versus Certificates."

I would like to suggest a lot of names for officers and executive-committee men for the beginning of the next century. It would be a very pleasing task! I may suggest such a list at another time, a roll-call of chrysanthemum growers that one might conjure with! E. G. HILL.

CARNATIONS.

CARNATION PERU.

The accompanying illustration shows the character of the blooms of the new carnation of F. B. Tinker, of Peru, Ind., which has been named after the town in which the raiser and disseminator carries on his business. The flowers are pure white, fringed, and average three inches in diameter. The variety is a pro fuse and continuous bloomer, and very fragrant.

CARNATIONS REGISTERED.

James Allen, gardener to A. C. Lambert, Paterson, N. J., registers Belle Vista, a cross between Wm. Scott and Daybreak, in color a light pink, petals large and broad, a clean strong grower; habit and growth resembles Scott and it is a very free bloomer.

J. E. Sibley, registered by Philip Heilig, should be J. C. Sibley.

PACKING CARNATIONS.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—What is the best method of packing field-grown carnations for shipping a long distance. I find the roots do not hold the earth very well and to leave much earth on the roots makes them heavy for shipping.

O. F. C.

My experience in packing field-grown carnations for shipping has been somewhat varied, as I have sent plants to California and Texas with no loss, but then I have sent plants packed in the same manner to places which would be reached the next day and the plants were a total loss. My method of packing is to tie the plants up into bundles of three or five, according to the size of the plants, and leave little or no dirt on the roots, but have the roots well covered with damp moss. These bundles are then stood upright in a box and usually reach their destination in good condition. I have frequently received plants that were simply packed tight into a box, tops upright and the roots on a bed of wet moss, without being tied up, but this style of packing is apt to cause the plants to heat around their base with the result that the lower leaves decay and rot immediately after planting. For long distances excelsior should be placed between the bundles and care should be used not to have them squeezed together tightly.

A. M. HERR.

TREATMENT OF EARLY CUTTINGS.

For some unforeseen reason more carnation cuttings are being delivered in January than in any previous year. Whether these cuttings, struck in the early part of December, are the proper thing or not will probably be determined within the next two or three years, but results will depend to a great extent on the manner in which these early plants are handled.

In the first place, above all other things, do not put these cuttings in an out-of-the-way place where they do not get the full benefit of the sun and air; unless it is absolutely impracticable to pot them up, do not plant them in flats or benches. They should be potted into rose pots and shifted into 3-inch pots as soon as they show the least sign of being root bound; they can be grown in this latter size until planting-out time in April.

There are two treatments that have been equally successful with me, the first of which is to pot the cuttings into only ordinarily rich soil and place them on a bench where they get the full benefit of the sun and can be given an abundance of air and then growing them on the dry side with a temperature as nearly 45° as is practicable. As soon as the rose pots get reasonably full of roots they are shifted into the 3-inch size and if they fill these pots with roots before planting-out time they are knocked out of the pots, a portion of the dirt taken off the ball and are replaced with some fresh soil in the same pots. The use of poor soil and growing them on the dry side induces harder growth and more good working roots than the next method and seems to put the plant into a position to stand harder raps in the field than if grown in rich soil.

The other method is to use regular potting soil, rich in fertilizing material, and give the plants an abundance, but not an over-supply, of pure water, and growing them in a temperature of about 50°. Give all the air possible, shifting as soon as they need it and if necessary repotting into 4-inch pots before planting out. This treatment will give you good, healthy, long-jointed plants, which will make exceptionally fine stock for early planting. This treatment is given by the only grower I ever had the pleasure of visiting who has made a success of indoor culture and with most varieties this method followed up by a summer in a field of rich loam, without check to growth, will give results almost as good in quality of bloom and length of stem as that produced by indoor culture and will result in almost twice the number of flowers from October 1 to January 15.

THE LATE WM. F. EATON.

Such little incidentals as keeping the plants absolutely free from green fly and red spider and the pots clear of weeds need not be mentioned, except in the shape of a reminder to most growers. To those who are careless of these things a full measure of success will never come.

The topping of these plants is a matter of taste. With me they are allowed to form at least three or four good joints before the top is taken out, as I like a plant that has plenty of base to it and is not burying its lower branches in the dirt all the time to make a harbor for insects and disease.

Mushrooms for the Million.

[Read by George C. Watson, Philadelphia, before the Southampton Farmers' Club, Somerton, Pa., January 9, 1900.]

To most of you the subject of mushroom growing will doubtless appear to be rather a frivolous affair, an oddment that you feel justified in considering with an inward smile and outwardly with an expression of resigned patience and pity; patience called for by courtesy to the speaker and as a sacrifice to your reputation for good manners; pity for the being who could become so far bereft of everyday common sense as to approach such a subject with a serious soul.

"A mushroom?" I think I hear you exclaim, "that ridiculous thing that springs up in a night and disappears again with almost equal celerity? Take that seriously? Ask a farmer to listen to such nonsense while he is engrossed with the mighty responsibilities of wheat and corn and potatoes?" Verily, it does seem rather a fool-hardy thing to approach a person like our old friend, the laird of cockpen, whose mind is taken up with affairs of the state, with such low down things as mushrooms; but for all that, I make bold to do so, even if with a meekness exceeding the meekness of Moses, and will do my little prettiest to exalt the virtues of this much neglected esculent.

In the first place I would ask, did it ever occur to you that the nutritive value of a pound of mushrooms exceeded the nutritive value of a pound of beefsteak? Very likely not, and yet careful chemical analysis has proven this to be true. Analysis has shown also that mushrooms contain from twenty to thirty-five per cent of protein, while bread only contains eight per cent, oatmeal ten per cent, potatoes five per cent, and barley meal six per cent of protein. The mushroom, like the oyster, is also rich in iodine and Dr. Boerhave states that he can cure phthisis with this diet and as a method of introducing iodine into the system this is certainly a pleasant medical treatment.

So much for the intrinsic food value of the mushroom. When we come to consider its flavor and gastronomic possibilities it is difficult to convey in words an adequate idea of its virtues, combining as it does the delicious flavor of both herb and flesh but unspeakably superior to both and, as Robinson well says, only the spirit of the immortal Brillat-Savarin could do justice to it. Stevenson sings the praises of the onion, hailing that odoriferous bulb with dulcet phrases:

> "Rose among roots, the maiden fair,
> Wine scented and poetic soul
> Of the capacious salad-scented bowl."

Law echoes him, and even Tennyson had nerve to sing the "Lady of Shallott;" but our literature is sadly lacking in adequate appreciation of that far superior esculent, the mushroom, which greatly outsavors the belauded onion. While neglected by the poets and recognized only by a few philosophers like Captain McIlvaine and the late Col. Ingersoll, the merits of the mushroom will yet be recognized and will in time, when we become more civilized, and begin to realize the endless bounties of the Creator, be a regular article of food on the tables of the humblest.

Why should only the city people have of the best on their tables? Isn't the farmer and suburbanite also entitled to have such little additions to his table as mushrooms on toast? Additions that he can himself produce with little expense all the year round and additions that give a sort of poetry to a repast and please the palate to the great promotion of good health. Horace tells us that "a savory dish, a homely treat clears up the cloudy foreheads of the great," and I think he might have added "the small" also. Then there's the only original Thomas Walker who avers that "a dainty meal is something pleasant to look forward to and the expectation of it gives a wholesome edge to the appetite and makes business be dispatched with alacrity."

Promise one a dish combining in one little morsel the flavor of a spring chicken cooked to a turn, with the juiciness of a tenderloin and the nutty sweetness of an almond and it would be a lazy person indeed who would not then dispatch business with alacrity.

There is a popular impression that the mushroom is a plant of extraordinary rapidity of growth, but this is not so in reality, for, on examination, it is found to be just as methodical as a potato in its growth and development. And, come to think of it, the potato is not a bad illustration of the process of underground growth which the mushroom goes through. The thread-like filaments or mycelium of the mushroom are somewhat analagous to the roots, stems and leaves of ordinary plants, the visible part, stem head and gills being, in fact, the fructification, although in such apparent preponderance to the other parts. The seeds or spores of the mushroom are borne on the gills under the cap. They are so small as not to be visible to the naked eye and nothing is known of their life history after they fall from the plant. How then do we cultivate? I may explain this best by again referring to the potato, for when we plant them it is not really seed we are planting but a part of the underground stem. The mushroom mycelium when once found can be propagated in a medium of horse droppings and is then made into bricks which are dried and hold the vitality in a state of suspended animation until wanted. In this form it will keep good for several years. These bricks of mycelium or spawn are a staple article of merchandise and can be purchased at any seed store, just as you would a package of radish seed.

In preparing a mushroom bed procure good fresh manure from the horse stable, shake out the longest of the litter and put the remainder in a heap; turn it over three or four times allowing two or three days between each turning. At the last turning it will be found to have lost its rank, sour smell and will then be in good condition to make into a bed. If the bed is to be made in an ordinary mushroom house it is advisable to give it a depth of ten inches in front and nineteen inches at the back. The material should be firmly beaten or trodden down hard, and after a few days, when the temperature has fallen to about 75°, it may be spawned and afterwards covered with two inches of soil. The growth of the mushroom plant goes on under the soil and in five or six weeks the fruit or fructification appears above ground. The bed will remain in bearing from two to five months. Such, in brief, is the process of raising a crop of mushrooms. There are of course many details that require some experience to master, and which are fully explained in the books of culture to be obtained at the seed stores. One could not expect to know the right condition of wetness or dryness of the manure for making a mushroom bed if ignorant of age, kind, quality or any other particular of manures in general. When the book says "fresh" manure the adjective "fresh" is more than likely to be ignored. It is this element of heedlessness to plain instructions that generally lands the amateur at the gates of failure. Mushrooms are an easy enough crop to grow but they require certain conditions and good sense and good judgment are necessary in providing these conditions. Of course anyone can follow the book but a farmer would be more likely to follow the book correctly than a person who did not know a turnip from a mangel wurzel.

Although any one with a good dry cellar or outhouse who is within reach of a horse stable can grow mushrooms, yet those who would find most pleasure and profit in raising them are suburban and rural people—farmers, truckers, florists—in fact any one living at or near where horses are kept.

As to the profit in this crop: Looking at it in the broad sense, the sense of adding a new article to the diet, it is almost all profit, for the cost of raising them, outside of the labor, is small—less than that of the eggs and bacon you have for breakfast. In the narrow sense of the word profit, the raising of the crop on a considerable scale for marketing, it can be said that the returns are good considering the time, labor and other elements and comparing them with that for tomatoes or other crops more familiar to the average farmer. Two pounds of mushrooms to the square foot is considered to be a fair average crop, which would net eighty cents at the average price of the past season in the Philadelphia market. At this rate a space thirty yards long by a yard wide would net $240, which is not to be sneezed at in these days of thirty-cent potatoes and sixty-cent wheat!

But it is not the commercial culture of mushrooms that I would like to see extended so much. The metropolitan markets are already pretty well supplied. What I preach now is the country and suburban individual—your own cheek, your own family, the comfort and pleasure of living, think of these and grow mushrooms, and grow them all the year round—in the outhouse or cellar in winter and in the pasture in summer. It is easy, pleasant and profitable, and I feel sure that many of you will live to call down blessings on my head for giving you the hint. And more than that I think you will in the happy future which I see unfolding for you, have a desire to get the government to make me an annual appropriation of $50,000 or so to entertain worthy persons and introduce them to heretofore undreamt of gastronomic delights in devouring the lowly but delicious mushroom! I am confident that if you manage to carry that thought and desire to fruition that I will do more with the money to promote commerce and increase the revenue than would any tariff scheme you could ever devise. I would plan a campaign that would embrace the length and breadth of the state, enlisting the chef from Doomer's under my banner as chief of staff, and confident with the assistance of that able artist that I would carry everything before me, for I hold, with Paulus Emilius, that it requires the same kind of spirit to manage a banquet as a battle, with this difference that the one should be made as pleasant to friends as the other is formidable to enemies. Paulus was the most successful general and entertainer of his day and I have always thought this saying of his was a particularly happy one.

If I have omitted to tell anything you would like to know, ask and I will answer to the best of my ability. If I have bored you by making this paper too long I can only plead as an excuse that I would have made it shorter if I had had time.

ENTHUSIASTIC MEETING OF THE FLORISTS' CLUB.—OFFICERS TELL OF PAST AND PLAN FUTURE.—HORTICULTURAL EXHIBITION IN HIGH FAVOR.—ANNUAL DINNER NEXT WEDNESDAY.—CARNATIONS SHOWN.—INVITATIONS ACCEPTED.—COMMITTEES APPOINTED.—LANDSCAPE ARCHITECTS CONVENE.—OFFICERS ELECTED.—STATE OF THE MARKET.—CUSTOM HOUSE CHANGES PROMISED TO IMPORTERS.—EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE TO MEET.—VARIOUS ITEMS.

The Florists' Club meeting on Monday evening, January 8, brought out a most harmonious and enthusiastic gathering and the large number present, as well as the large interests which they represented, was the best augury the officers-elect could wish for in assuming the duties of this important year of the club's history. President Plumb made a brief address setting forth the prosperous condition of the organization, thanking the members for their support during his administration and bespeaking for his successor the same generous consideration. Messrs. Nash and Allen then escorted President-elect O'Mara to the chair amid much applause.

President O'Mara in his address spoke appreciatively of the worth, amiability, untiring devotion and love for the craft displayed by the retiring president and expressed gratitude for the honor conferred upon himself by his election. He made announcement of the work already undertaken by the officers and trustees recently elected, in the assignment of special committees on convention work, the arrangements in the grand exhibition hall whereby the central space is reserved for a horticultural exhibition, and referred to the coming meeting of the executive board of the national society as the first of the series of great horticultural events which New York has in prospect. Vice-president Herrington, being called upon, said that the proposed horticultural exhibition is the opportunity for which the private gardeners have long been waiting and spoke hopefully of the outcome. He and also Treasurer Weathered and Secretary Young expressed thanks for their selection as officers of the club and promised to do all in their power to make this a grandly successful year. It was announced that the annual dinner will take place at the St. Denis Hotel on Wednesday evening, January 17, and that the executive committee of the S. A. F., and a number of prominent men in public life would be present as guests on that occasion.

The exhibition committee reported on two vases of carnations, that Genevieve Lord exhibited by H. Weber & Sons had scored eighty-six points and was entitled to a certificate and that Roslyn, staged by C. Besold, was awarded honorable mention. An invitation to attend the Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Club smoker on Wednesday evening, January 10, was accepted with thanks and Messrs. A. Wallace and W. J. Stewart were appointed to represent the club as per invitation of the Dutchess County Horticultural Society at the annual dinner of that body in February. Messrs. F. L. Atkins, J. P. Cleary and Wm. Marshall were appointed house entertainment committee for 1900 and Messrs. W. I. Brower, C. H. Allen, H. Dailledouze, A. L. Miller and J. E. Lager the committee on awards. A vote of thanks to the retiring officers was recorded and then the treasurer began selling dinner tickets. They "sold like hot cakes."

The American Society of Landscape Architects' annual meeting was held at the Hotel Martin on the evening of January 9. The election of officers and other business took place while the members sat around the festive board and the affair was charmingly social and informal. The officers elect are: President, John C. Olmsted; vice-president, S. Parsons; secretary, Downing Vaux; treasurer, Mr. Lowrie. Mr. Carl, the art critic, was a guest of the society. Several ladies, including Miss Bullard, of Bridgeport, and Miss Jones, of New York, were also present. The matters discussed were the principles of the profession and the great necessity for a higher education of the public in gardening art. Many amusing anecdotes were told illustrating the perverted taste frequently displayed in the adornment of grounds, the use of tin palmetto trees in the grounds about the state house at Columbia, S C., being one case cited. That too many trees and not enough shrubs are planted, as a rule, seemed to be the unanimous opinion.

Business in the flower stores is very slack. A heavy crop of everything is now being received and the lack of demand for it has broken prices down below the average for the season, giving the Greeks the opportunity to handle roses and carnations on the street at summer figures. While the prices are low, quality is generally high. The stock coming in is remarkably good in all lines. Carnations are accumulating and even the fancy sorts move slowly owing to the heavy receipts. Adiantums are scarce.

A number of importers and others directly interested met at the appraiser's office on Tuesday, January 9, on invitation of Appraiser Weightman, to discuss methods of improving the customs service as applied to handling and examination of nursery stock. The visitors were received courteously and at the close of the conference were informed by the inspector that he thought it would be wise to make a new special and perishable classification as applied to plants, bulbs and seeds, so that hereafter no further delays might be experienced in passing them through. He also promised special delivery from public stores, these goods taking precedence of non-perishable stock, and agreed to provide competent packers to repack goods taken out for examination and requested that importers report any instance where such repacking is not properly done and further asked to be notified if it should appear that these new rules do not work satisfactorily, so that another conference might be called, it being his determination to give all possible help to the horticultural importers. There were present Messrs. Hulsebosch, Ouwerkerk. O'Mara, Prosser, Bobbink, Siebrecht, Kelsey, Berkhans, Ruuyard, Darrow, Elliott, Rolker and Joosten.

The executive committee of the S. A. F. will meet on Tuesday, January 16, at the Murray Hill Hotel. It is expected that the sessions will extend over three days.

E. C. Horan shows some nice chrysanthemums in his window still.

Alex Burns is making a study of problems connected with carnation fertilization.

Ernst Asmus is preparing to build six more greenhouses.

Visitors in town this week: Carl Jurgens and Carl Jurgens, Jr., Newport, R. I.; Robert Craig, Philadelphia; A. N. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn.; Benj. Dorrance, Dorranceton, Pa.

BUSINESS BRISKS A BIT. — DEMAND FOR GOOD STOCK EQUALS SUPPLY.—SURPLUS OF POORER GRADES. — SUPERLATIVE FUNERAL DESIGNS.—ANNUAL MEETING OF HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY. — FLORISTS' CLUB TO HAVE A SHOW OF CARNATIONS. —MANY EXHIBITS ASSURED.—EXTENSIVE BUILDING OPERATIONS.— AN OLD-TIME CARNATION AND VARIOUS NOTES.

There has been nothing out of the ordinary in the market this week; trade is picking up after the usual respite following the holidays and the cut of tea roses is somewhat reduced, while the opposite is true of Beauties and carnations. The latter are not only in greater supply, but are very generally of first-class quality and well worth the prevailing prices, which are, however, maintained with some difficulty. Brides and Bridesmaids are reported going off crop with many growers and some of the new price lists quote top qualities at 8 cents instead of 6 cents. Harrisii lilies are coming in nicely and are selling fairly well at $2 to $2 50 per dozen. Violets are very plentiful and are not in very great demand. There is a story afloat that one of the growers who took a contract to supply a retailer with 1000 violets a day through the season has a bright prospect for a law suit because his cut suddenly became very light just before Christmas. The retailer says his contract was at 90 cents a hundred and declares that the holiday wholesale price of $1.50 to $2 proved too great a temptation for the party of the first part. Bulbous stock is no longer a serious over-supply.

There has seldom been a funeral which has made so much business for Chicago florists as that of E. J. Lehman last Monday. There were seven carriage loads of flowers at the obsequies, a complete exposition of designing as it is practiced here, and at least two of the pieces were worthy of comment. Those closest to the deceased creator of The Fair gave Lange an order for a plaque which cost them $500; it was a triumph of the art. The piece stood nine feet high, edged with American Beauties, more than 500 being required to complete the elipse. Naturally nothing but the best of stock was used. Otto Young, Mr. Lehman's partner, entrusted his order to Schubert and the urn of violets, capped by callas, was a beauty and a marvel. It was about four feet high and required countless thousands of violets, all that were available on Sunday. The work was excellently done.

The annual meeting of the Horticultural Society of Chicago was held at the Sherman House January 9, Vice-president Wienhoeber presiding in the absence of President Chadwick. W. C. Egan resigned the secretaryship in favor of W. N. Rudd as secretary and treasurer, Mr. Egan taking the latter's place on the executive committee. Two retiring members of the executive committee, Messrs. Hauswirth and Sanders, were re-elected. A resolution was presented extending the number of aforesaid committee by two, same being held over for action, as customary, until next meeting. The usual annual reports, showing that the society is in good condition financially, were read and approved. Fifteen new names were presented for membership. The committee appointed to ascertain what degree of support might be expected from the trade in future exhibitions presented a report in which all prominent local firms and some outside the city pledged themselves to give all the aid in their power. With the foregoing exceptions, all the former officers were re-elected.

At its last meeting the Chicago Florists' Club decided to hold an exhibition of carnations at its next meeting, January 19, and Room 204, a spacious, well lighted apartment, in the Masonic Temple, has been secured for the purpose. The society's certificate will be awarded all meritorious exhibits, either of carnations or other stock, and it seems that the interest now manifested will result in some good displays. All stock intended for this show should be shipped to reach Chicago on the morning of January 19, addressed to McKellar & Winterson, 47 Wabash avenue, prepaid and marked "For exhibit" on the outside. It will be properly staged by the committee and at one o'clock will be passed upon by the judges, W. N. Rudd, Emil Buettner and Andrew McAdams having accepted invitations to serve in that capacity.

A big bunch of perfect blooms of that seldom seen variegated carnation, Rosa Pieser, came to Kennicott Bros. Co. this week from an out-of-the-way town in Iowa and gave the younger members of the firm much pleasure, for it is named for their mother. This was the first pink penciled carnation to be consigned to Kennicotts', coming some years ago from John Milne, of Fairbury, with whom it originated. It was thought to be a great thing, but when sent out for trial burst so badly that it was never introduced, although all the plans had been laid, and nothing has been heard of it for several years.

J. A. Budlong has placed an order for 450 boxes of glass and is preparing to to build three houses for American Beauties as soon as the frost is out of the ground. The structures will be 26x300 and will embrace all the latest improvements, including some changes in the benches not heretofore tested in this vicinity. This is only one of the numerous building operations now well in hand and there are rumors of other extensive work of this character at Bowmanville.

The J. C. Moninger Company has the order for the cypress for the Wietor Bros.' big range of new houses and Adam Schillo, who seems to be high in the favor of the greenhouse men north of the city, is supplying the lumber for benches and other purposes, some 160,000 feet in all.

J. F. Powell, of Waukegan, who has large interests at Melbourne, Fla., on the famous Indian river, where the palmetto finds its favorite clime, has gone into the preserved natural palm leaf business and has been taking some good orders for supplying Chicago manufacturers.

C. W. Scott, representing Vaughan's Seed Store, is making a western trip. Vaughan is taking in half a carload of Japanese fern balls this week.

J. A. Grossman is making arrangements for rebuilding the eight houses which the Weber Bros. ran up to the end of the chrysanthemum season.

Bassett & Washburn are cutting a very fine lot of carnations and among them all there is nothing better than the red Bradt.

John Zech has been confined to his home since Monday and his physician fears appendicitis.

Visitors: C. H. Frey, Lincoln, Neb; F. A. Belt, Sterling, Ill.

RHINEBECK, N. Y.—The shipment of violets from Rhinebeck to New York wholesalers for Christmas are estimated at over 300,000 flowers.

NORMAL CONDITIONS PREVAILING.—A LONG PERIOD OF PROSPERITY IN SIGHT.—SHOW AT HORTICULTURAL HALL.—MEDALS AND CERTIFICATES FOR CYPRIPEDIUMS.—OTHER GOOD EXHIBITS.—ANNUAL MEETING OF THE SOCIETY.—OTHER NOTES.

Weather normal; business ditto. There is no special demand in evidence and certainly no scarcity of cut flower material in any grade or any seasonable variety. The usual winter call for funeral flowers and design work is apparent and clerks in the retail stores are kept fairly well occupied but the gaieties of the season are not yet fairly started. A long period of busy times is promised, as Lent comes in very late this year and all are well prepared to take advantage of it.

There was a very fine exhibition at Horticultural Hall on Saturday, January 6. Primulas were well represented in the various classes, P. Sinensis being shown by Mrs. J. L. Gardner, Mrs. B. P. Cheney and J. W. Howard, P. obconica and P. stellata by Mrs. Cheney and Mrs. Gardner, the prizes being awarded in the order named. R. & J. Farquhar staged thirty plants of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine nana compacta, Dr. Weld a handsome seedling amaryllis and W. N. Craig and Mrs. E. M. Gill vases of freesias. The orchid display was superb. From J. E. Rothwell came plants in bloom of six varieties of yellow Cypripedium insigne including Sanderianum, Youngianum, Wm. Millie Dow, Ernestii, Laura Kimball and Sanderæ, for which he received a silver medal, also certificates for the first three varieties named. Oakes Ames also received a certificate for Sanderianum and exhibited besides Cypripedium ×Leeanum var. Clinkaberryanum. Honorable mention was given to the Botanic Garden for a delicate little orchid from the Philippine Islands, Platyclinis uncata. W. N. Craig showed a vase of blooms of fine types of Cypripedium insigne.

The annual meeting of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society on January 6 brought a goodly number of members to Horticultural Hall. It was announced that the building committee had decided to suspend all action on the proposed new building until spring owing to the high price of building material. A resolution was passed instructing the committee to submit plans to the society for inspection and approval before signing any contracts. W. J. Stewart presented a motion, which was adopted, that the president appoint a committee of five members to decide on what changes should be made in the constitution and by-laws preparatory to entering the new building. President Appleton made a brief address which was received with approbation and ordered to be printed for distribution.

Mrs. Rogers has sold out the lease of her store in Washington street and will probably re-open in another location.

Philadelphia.

A QUIET FORTNIGHT.—PRICES TAKE A TUMBLE.—FLOWERING PLANTS MAKE WINDOWS GAY.—MISS LIPPINCOTT AND OTHER CARNATIONS.—JOTTINGS.

Things have been quiet since the first of the year, amounting some days to dullness. Some really first class flowers have gone begging and prices have taken quite a slump. The extra Beauties can now be purchased for $6 per dozen, while those selling for from $3 to $4 for the same quantity seem plenty good enough for the average retail buyer. The best teas are quoted at $10 per hundred; $6 to $8, however, buys very good stock. Liberty roses, of which variety some grand flowers have been sent in by Robert Scott & Son, are now scarce, as much of the wood is being used in grafting. Carnations are also feeling the depression and prices are down, $1 50 now buying really good flowers, in fact, only the select are higher, these bringing from $3 to $6. Good, bright Scotts are still popular with the masses, who think that 35 cents to 50 cents per dozen is enough to pay. Freesias are in at $2 to $4 per hundred. Azaleas, most of them very well flowered, now brighten the shop windows and a few very nice rhododendrons sent in by Wm. K. Harris make showy window plants. Easter lilies are now being anxiously looked after by the growers. None of the crops show much disease as yet, although it is almost too early to feel safe about the matter.

There is considerable interest being taken in the approaching meeting of the carnation society at Buffalo and it is likely that this neighborhood will be quite well represented.

John Kuhn's new carnation, Miss Lippencott, a bright Daybreak pink in color, is being sent out by Henry Michell. It is a very fine flower and is, we should say, a good one to plant for next season in place of the old favorite. Of the favorite carnations this season Flora Hill is the great white, White Cloud being a good second. Scott and Dana lead in the pinks, with Daybreak in fair demand. Eldorado is the best yellow. Cartledge sells very well for a red, although not a good red in color, yet its shade is good and it is often preferred to Portia on account of its good size. Croker, America and Crane sell well among the fancies, their grand flowers bringing the difference in price from those who can afford to pay for them.

The ladies' night at the club, January 24, will be a very enjoyable affair. There will be prizes for all the different games to be played, both useful and farcical. Ladies and gentlemen with good voices will contribute and refreshments will be served as usual. K.

New Jersey Floricultural Society.

Long tables well laden with appetizing viands, interspersed with numerous bunches of Olympias, bougainvilleas and so on, a double line of jovial and expectant faces all around the hall, an atmosphere of good cheer, cigars and other things, these were the conditions prevailing when President Duff took his station under the big elk's head and called the New Jersey Floricultural Society to order last Thursday evening. It was the occasion of the annual installation of officers and fifty members with their guests, the latter including J. N. May, J. Lang, J. I. Donlan, J. W. Withers, S. Butterfield and W. J. Stewart, were present.

The secretary's report for the year showed that the gratifying number of thirty-six per cent of the membership of the society had been present at the meetings and the treasurer's figures indicated a substantial balance well invested to the society's credit. Malcolm Macrorie was then called upon to install the new officers, which he did in his customary dignified and impressive manner. Then the president placed in Mr. Macrorie's hands the treasurer's books and the ceremonies were completed by the appointment of the various committees for the ensuing year, after which seats were taken at the tables and the doors of Orange hospitality were opened wide.

Appetites appeased, the pent-up oratory was unloosed by the president, who, after a few words of kindly welcome, called upon Dr. J. B. Ward to speak for the State Horticultural Society. Dr. Ward waxed eloquent as he told of the triumphs of New Jersey horticulture and the grand soil and climate which have contributed so much to her prosperity and scored a ten-strike when he asserted that "horticulture in its broadest sense is the highest development of agriculture." W. J. Stewart then responded for the Society of American Florists. He congratulated the New Jersey society on its prosperity and asked for its support and co-operation in making the coming New York national convention the greatest horticultural event of our times. President Duckham, of the Morris county organization, spoke for the private gardeners, referring to the skill, broad knowledge and ability required to fill the position of gardener with success and, on behalf of his society, thanking the Orange brethren for their kind and hearty welcome. J. N. May responded for the commercial florists who, he confessed, are growing primarily for dollars and cents but nevertheless have done much for the advancement of horticulture. He added some interesting reminiscences of his late western trip and described the wonderful progress in geranium and carnation culture which he had observed. J. B. Davis, in response to the toast "The Ladies" made the hit of the evening and fairly bubbled over with wit, eloquence and poetry in adulation of the Queen of Hearts. His high aspirations in this respect were a surprise and delight to his friends who will know just where to place him hereafter. Henry Bird's theme was "Twenty Years Ago." He made a broad gauge speech covering the beauties of nature as seen in retrospect and a multitude of subjects in a very sentimental and romantic manner and concluded with the expression of a firm conviction that "the florist of to-day must know something about everything and everything about something." J. W. Withers spoke for the horticultural press. He claimed for New Jersey that it heads the list with the largest quantity of glass in any state in the Union and declared the horticultural press to be in an equally prosperous condition. Addresses were also made by John McGowan, Geo. Smith, Dr. Kitchen and others.

Interspersed with the talking were songs by Messrs. Butterfield and Smith, violin solo by Mr. Bennett and cornet solo by Mr. Taylor. When the New York delegation took its reluctant departure at midnight it was evident that lots of fun was yet in store.

NEW BRITAIN, CONN.—C. T. Andrews, confectioner and florist, has gone into bankruptcy. Liabilities, $3,000 assets, $2,000.

WYNDMOOR, PA.—Under new postal regulations mail formerly addressed to growers at Wyndmoor, Chestnut Hill, Philadelphia, should be marked to Wyndmoor, Montgomery Co., Pa., via Lavorock, Pa.

ATTLEBORO FALLS, MASS.—The Attleboro Falls Horticultural Society held its annual meeting on the night of January 1. It is proposed that the work of the society include a scheme of village improvement hereafter and public support is promised.

C. H. GREEN, of Fremont, Neb., has sent to this office some sample blooms of Marie Louise violets which for size, color, fragrance and length of stem are equal to any we have seen.

WM. GALLAGHER, of Little Rock, Ark., has sent us an excellent chrysanthemum bloom (for this season of the year) claiming that it is a sport of Wm. H. Chadwick. This hardly seems possible, the latter being a distinctly incurved variety, while Mr. Gallagher's flower is as distinctly reflexed. The flower, however, is good and of a pale pinkish tint.

Japanese Fern Balls.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—Please state how Japanese fern balls should be handled in order to secure the best results? W. W.

Japanese fern balls are usually received from abroad in a dormant condition, and the first thing to be done with them is to give them a good soaking in water, for they are likely to be dry after so long a voyage. They should then be hung up in a warm and partly shaded house. A palm house in which a night temperature of 60° to 65° is maintained will furnish about the right conditions in which to start them. In a short time the young fronds should appear and the chief care during this period is that the fern balls shall not be allowed to get too dry, else the tender foliage is likely to suffer. The best method of watering is to dip the entire ball in a tub of water. After the fronds have developed the fern balls may be removed to a lighter and more airy house, in order that the growth may be hardened somewhat before the plants are offered for sale.

From the fact that these fern balls are usually composed of a small mass of vegetable matter more or less covered with the rhizomes of certain davallias, D. Mariesii being most commonly used for this purpose, they are liable to suffer from lack of nourishment if kept on hand for any length of time, and to remedy this an occasional dipping in weak liquid manure will be found beneficial, for most ferns will respond to such treatment providing the manure water is not too strong. W. H. TAPLIN.

Some Recent Fires.

KENNETT SQUARE, PA.—A defective flue in the houses of C. J. Pennock resulted in a fire on January 2, but little damage was done.

TOUGHKENAMON, PA. — Fire caught from the furnace in the mushroom house of Wm. Sharpless a few days since but was extinguished with little loss.

COLUMBUS, O.—Affleck Bros. suffered the loss of four houses and a barn on New Year's day. The loss is estimated at $7,000, with only $500 insurance.

SUMMIT, N. J.—On the night of January 9 the Kent Place Nurseries, owned by the De Forest estate, were burned.

ELWOOD, IND.—Wm. Woernek lost a rose house, a carnation house and two plant houses by fire December 29, He was uninsured but will rebuild at once.

WAUPACA, WIS.—During W. Shaw's holiday visit in Chicago his greenhouse caught fire from an over-heated furnace, but the blaze was extinguished before great damage was done.

THE FIRST STATE DINNER.—SEASON OPENED AUSPICIOUSLY.—LAVISH USE OF FLOWERS.—STORY OF THE FINE DECORATIONS.—TRADE QUIETS DOWN.—EXTRA CARNATIONS FROM VIRGINIA.

The first state dinner of the season was given Wednesday evening at the White House, where the President and Mrs. McKinley entertained seventy guests in honor of the members of the Cabinet. The company was welcomed in the East Room, which has been newly furnished and was handsomely decorated in red and green. The three large chandeliers, eight mirrors and the gold studded ceiling were festooned with smilax and asparagus. The columns were twined with the same, requiring about 500 strings six feet long, over half a mile of greens. The mirrors at the end of the room were banked with poinsettia, Adiatum cuneatum and Davallia Mooreana. The two on the east side were banked with a variety of crotons and Erica persoluta alba, used for the first time in decorating this room. The two mirrors on the west side were banked with fine-colored crotons, the most prominent varieties being Reedii, Dayspring, Chrysophyllum, Williamsii, Andreanum, Rothschild, Mortii, Lady Zetland and Johannis. Adiantums, davallias, Pandanus Veitchii and marantas were also used. The main entrance was banked on both sides with Areca lutescens, crotons, Nephrolepis davallioides furcans and marantas in variety. The fire places, four in number, were filled with palms, ferns and Dracæna Sanderiana. Under the center chandelier surmounting the divan was a medium sized specimen of Latania aurea. Under each chandelier on either side of the divan was a pyramid of ferns, marantas, crotons, Pandanus Veitchii and Curcuma Wallisii, surmounted by a fine specimen Licuala grandis. The east window, facing the main entrance, was tastefully banked with tall palms. In the center of each of the large mirrors on the east and west sides was suspended a large wreath of English holly finely berried. The decoration of this room was done under the supervision of George H. Brown.

The guests were presented to the host and hostess by Col. Bingham and Maj. McCawley. Mrs. McKinley received seated in one of the large chairs brought from the Blue Parlor. Shortly after 8 o'clock the President led the way to dinner with Mrs. Hay, Mrs. McKinley following immediately after with the Secretary of State. As has been the rule at all formal dinners of this administration the long table was placed in the Red Corridor and extending from end to end of the apartment. Here, as in the East Room, the decorations were more elaborate and much more beautiful than usual, a harmony of color being faithfully observed. The floral decorations was entirely in pink, the center Adiantum Farleyense and Begonia Gloire de Lorraine; on either side of this were tall crystal vases of Bridesmaid roses, then two flat pieces filled with pink primulas and small ferns. Then two more vases of Bridesmaid roses, and one flat piece at each end filled with pink begonias and ferns. The ceiling was decorated with southern smilax, and the walls with smilax, asparagus and palm leaves. In each of the two niches was a very fine specimen of Anthurium Ferrierense. The mirror rests were banked with adiantums and Roman hyacinths. In the Blue Parlor the decoration was a vase of extra fine poinsettias and Asparagus plumosus nanus. The State dining room was used as a smoking room, some fine palms being used. These decorations were under the supervision of Henry Pfister, head gardener at the White House conservatories.

Wm. R Smith has been confined to the house for a week or so with an abscess in his mouth, but he is improving and hopes to be out again in a few days.

The cut flower trade has quicted down to some extent and the boys are glad to get a little rest. Flowers are plentiful, such as carnations, roses and bulbous blooms, but violets were scarce all last week until Saturday.

A. B. Davis & Son are sending in some wonderfully fine carnation blooms from Purcellville, Va. Among them are Daybreak, Bradt, Genesee, Flora Hill, John Young, Evelina, C. A. Dana and Mrs. Jas. Dean. The Messrs. Davis have at present three houses 25x125 devoted to carnations, and the coming spring will build a house 50x300 feet. Their soil and climate are very favorable for the development of this flower, the conditions being almost exactly similar to those of the carnation belt of Pennsylvania.

TRADE DULL.—BEAUTIES THE ONLY SHORTAGE.—CARNATIONS NOW OF FINE QUALITY.—PLANTS SELL WELL.—PURVEYORS OF PLEASURES PREPARE PLANS.

Trade can be called but fair and stock of all kinds is plentiful with the exception of Beauties. There has been an increasing demand for Beauties the past season. Carnations are more plentiful and so far sufficient for all demands; they have vastly improved in quality the past few weeks and the stores never before showed a finer collection of the divine flower. Violets of choice quality have been selling well, but a large quantity of second grade flowers is on the market and these sell slowly. George & Allan are sending in a few Von Sions, the first yellow daffodils in the market here. Plant trade is reported fair. Azaleas and cyclamens hold a place of prominence in this line and prices hold up well.

Messrs. Charles Jones and Frank Ball have decided to call a meeting in order to make arrangements for the June outing and W. Murphy and Ben. George will be given honorable positions as assistants; it seems as though this is rather early to speak of outings, but when Charlie does a thing, he does it well. H. SCHWARZ.

OBITUARY.

MRS. J. B. NUGENT.

Mrs. J. B. Nugent died on January 10, aged 77 years. She leaves a husband, two sons and two daughters, one son being J. B. Nugent, Jr., of Young & Nugent, the New York commission men. Three years ago Mr. and Mrs. Nugent celebrated their golden wedding in a very joyous manner, surrounded by a host of relatives and loving friends.

MICHAEL BUTLER.

Michael Butler, one of the oldest of the Newport, R. I., florists, died on Saturday, January 6, aged 71 years, after a painful illness of several months. Mr. Butler came to Newport from Ireland in June, 1848, and a year and a half ago observed the fiftieth anniversary of his arrival here. In 1851 he engaged in business as a florist and gardener, in which he continued until advancing years forced him to retire from active work, J. J. Butler, his son, carrying on the business since. The grounds of many of the fine summer residences of Newport were laid out and planted by Mr. Butler during his half century in floriculture. For a number of years his business was carried on with a partner, under the name of Smith & Butler. Mr. Butler was a devoted churchman and an uncompromising prohibitionist. He was the most active of the founders of the Father Mathew Total Abstinence Society, being its active president for thirteen years and its honorary president afterwards. He leaves two children, J. J. Butler and Mrs. Chas. J. Moore.

W. F. EATON.

William Freeman Eaton died on Tuesday, January 9, of Bright's disease. He was 35 years of age. His death, after only two days' illness, was a great shock to those in the trade at Philadelphia, among whom all were his friends, as his bright, sunny disposition made him a favorite with all those who in any way came in contact with him. His first connection with the business was when, at 10 years of age, he entered the employ of Frederick Lucking, of North Fifth street, as errand boy. About ten years later he left Mr. Lucking and spent several years with Mr. Wagner, of Tioga, whose service he left to go into business for himself, buying out C. F. Bell, at 1108 Girard avenue, where he has since conducted quite a successful business. Mr. Eaton had not the desire to spread out, being of the opinion that a small business well conducted, where the proprietor could personally superintend the details, was more profitable than one involving a large outlay and the attendant risks and expense that cuts so into the profits; and it may be said that he succeeded admirably on these lines. He took an active interest in the affairs of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia and was often seen at the meetings. A special meeting of the club was called, at which resolutions were adopted expressing the deepest sympathy for his bereaved family. Expressions of the high appreciation in which he was held were offered by many of the members present. Mr. Eaton leaves a wife and four children. Interment was on Friday afternoon at Northwood Cemetery. The grave was lined and the surrounding lots covered with palms by his intimate friends of the club. A large number of designs, including one from the club, were also sent. The services were largely attended, showing the esteem in which he was held by all. K.

BROCKTON, MASS.—At the last meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, the following officers were elected: President, John McFarland; vice-president, Henry Duly; secretary, Robt. Newsham; treasurer, Wm. Hathaway, Brockton, Mass. All correspondence should be addressed to the treasurer.

ALEXANDER RODGERS, Pres; ALBERT MCCULLOUGH Vice-Pres; S. F. WILLARD, Wethersfield, Conn., Sec'y and Treas.

VISITED CHICAGO: M. H. Smith, of Muscatine, Iowa.

C. S. CLARK, of Wakeman, Ohio, is very busy now shipping seed corn to his customers.

PEA and bean growers report liberal advance contract orders already booked for 1900 crop.

THE Agricultural Department will send out fifteen million packages of seeds the coming season. By their fruits ye shall know them.—Boston Transcript.

THE Salzer Seed Company, of La Crosse, Wis., is filling an order for sixteen carloads of seed potatoes to be shipped to Brenham, Texas. There will be from 8,000 to 10,000 bushels in the shipment.

A RECENT action of contract by Thos. Griffin against Jos. Breck & Sons Corporation, Boston, to recover $400 damages for breach of an alleged warranty that seed bought from them was Turnip Blood beet seed was decided by Judge Bishop in favor of the defendant.

Seed Trade in Kansas City.

Fourth city in the United States is the rating accorded Kansas City in the amount of grass, field and garden seeds handled here. Last year the local wholesale business done amounted to $1,500,000 and showed an increase of about ten per cent over that for the preceding year. The market for the entire year was strong and healthy and prices were a shade higher throughout than those for 1898. The early spring business has been especially large.—The Kansas City Journal.

Government Wants Catalogues.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—Will you kindly insert the following announcement in your next issue:

The Department of Agriculture often receives letters asking where the seeds of certain varieties of vegetables and flowers can be purchased. In order that these questions may be readily and accurately answered the Division of Botany is preparing a list of dealers and varieties offered, and would request that all seedsmen forward their catalogues to the Division as soon as issued so that the list may be made as complete as possible. The varieties they offer can then be included in our list and enquiries regarding them promptly answered.

Seedsmen are requested to send catalogues to The Seed Laboratory, Division of Botany, U. S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C. Yours very truly,

A. J. PIETERS,
In charge of Pure Seed Investigations.

BUTTE, MONT.—The Butte Floral Co. is erecting two houses 20x100 at Gregson Springs, eighteen miles from here, and expects to increase the number to ten or twelve in the spring. They will heat with natural hot water. The company has incorporated with $15,000 capital. The officers are Wm. J. Day, president; John L. King vice-president; King, secretary and treasurer.

NEW TOMATO FOR 1900

Livingston's MAGNUS

This very distinct and most promising new variety, of the color of BEAUTY and ACME, is the latest addition by Livingston to the Tomato family. It is thicker, heavier, and more solid than either of the above, making it easily the most handsome sort in cultivation. The form is perfect, uniform, large and attractive. Flesh very firm. It is a robust grower, with short joints, setting its fruit clusters closer together than most varieties, and is therefore a heavy cropper. We have tested it for several years for forcing in greenhouses, and it has excelled all other varieties for this purpose.

THE NURSERY TRADE.

AM. ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.
W. J PETERS, Pres.; D. S LAKE, Vice-Pres.: GEORGE C. SEAGER, Rochester, N. Y., Sec'y.

H. R. COTTA, the Freeport, Ill., nurseryman, has filed a petition in bankruptcy. He says it was the big freeze of a year ago which broke him.

G. B. SPITLER, W. B. Hunter and E. R. Hurlbert will establish a nursery at Mt. Sion, Ill., near Decatur. Mr. Hurlbert was formerly with the Spaulding Nursery Co., Rochester, N. Y.

THE Newport Nursery Co., Newport, R. I., has made an assignment. The failure is said to be most disastrous and the liabilities, as represented, will not warrant the payment of ten cents on the dollar.

C. L. YATES, of Rochester, nurseryman and publisher, says that the trade is enjoying widespread prosperity, that business is booming, better wages are being paid and that political differences are most to be avoided.

CHASE BROS., of Rochester, are quoted as saying that nurserymen who have been discouraged by low prices for several years are much more cheerful as the result of last year's business. Plantings by orchardists have increased and higher prices have been realized. We are getting back to the former conditions when trees and shrubs sold at living prices. The farmers are more prosperous and therefore there is greater demand for trees to be planted.

On Monday afternoon last, previous to the monthly Florists' Club meeting, the boys had a royal good time at the bowling alleys. The feature of the event was the strength of the weak members and the weakness of the strong, the "scrubs" administering a sound thrashing to the "experts," who have been wondering ever since what it was that struck them. ETHEL CROCKER

Absolutely the BEST PINK CARNATION ever offered the trade.

A fact fully borne out by its record, being equally good with Craig, Hill and myself (an assurance that it is not a success in one soil and a failure in another). By its having been shown at the flower shows and clubs since early in September (an assurance that it is not a good late carnation but an all season variety). In color, size, fragrance and stem it is just what the "storemen" want. In habit, constitution and freedom of bloom it is just what the grower wants. It produces more flowers to the square foot than any other known variety, and is never out of crop from September to July. With 18 000 stock plants to work from there is no danger of it being overpropagated, and all orders entrusted to me will be filled with cuttings selected from the plants and the order filled by myself, thus doubly assuring good stock. Honest sample blooms furnished, prepaid, at $1.00 per dozen—amount deducted from all orders for 100 or over. Up to date, every sample, excepting one, out of several hundred sent, has brought an order.

Price per 100, $10; per 25, $2.50; per 1000, $75; per 250, $18.75. HERR'S PANSIES, good little plants, at 75 cts. per 100; $4.00 per 1000. Price list of standard vars. ready now.

ETHEL CROCKER

is absolutely the best pink Carnation ever offered the trade. This is none too emphatic, and there are many others who think as we do. It will grow with you because it grows anywhere. This year it has been grown equally successfully by Hill, Herr and ourselves. It will grow in any soil or location. In color, size, fragrance, stem and keeping qualities it is just what the "storemen" want. In habit, constitution and freedom of bloom it is just what the grower wants; never out of crop from September until July. We have 6000 plants, 3000 of which we are growing for cuttings alone.

Below are a few expressions of opinions from the knowing ones. After reading them there will be, we think, no doubt in your mind as to which is THE ONE to grow for pink next season.

WINNER OF CERTIFICATES AT NEW YORK, PHILADELPHIA, BALTIMORE, CINCINNATI and CHICAGO.

ITS KEEPING QUALITIES.

The undersigned Committe, having examined the vases of the new carnation "Ethel Crocker," report as follows:

"There are two vases which contain seventy-five flowers. The water in the vases has not been changed for four days, nor have any flowers been renewed, and after being on exhibition the above length of time, we find fully ninety per cent of the blooms salable; none of them show any disposition to go to sleep and only five or six are commencing to fade, and under these conditions we cheerfully recommend it as a wonderful keeper."

ROBERT CRAIG & SON,

Gentlemen: We had, however, the pleasure of seeing "Ethel "Crocker in all her glory. We wish you would book our order for 2000 rooted cuttings of this variety and would be pleased to receive the stock out of the first batch sent off. We feel sure this variety will enjoy a large sale and predict for it a most brilliant future. For size, length of stem, color and fragrance it surpasses anything we have seen growing. Yours very truly,

HALLIDAY BROS.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 3, 1899

ROBERT CRAIG & SON,

Gentlemen: The new pink carnation "Ethel Crocker" which you have been sending us is most satisfactory. At this early date the flowers are up to the midwinter standard of the old favorites, in fact it is larger, the form is perfect and the color, almost exactly that of the Bridesmaid rose, is ideal. The stem supports the flower admirably. We believe it will become very popular as the few we have been receiving have been snapped up at once. We congratulate you on having such a good stock of this variety.

Yours respectfully, JOS. KIFT & SON.

FRAMINGHAM, MASS., Nov. 23, 1899.

ROBERT CRAIG & SON.

Gentlemen: Kindly book my order for 500 rooted cuttings of "Ethel Crocker," as I think it one of the finest fancy carnations for commercial purposes. Very truly yours,

WM. NICHOLSON.

FLATBUSH, BROOKLYN, N. Y., Nov. 21, 1899.

MESSRS. ROBERT CRAIG & SON,
Philadelphia, Pa.

Gentlemen: After viewing your new carnation "Ethel Crocker" we feel justified in ordering 2500. The color seems excellent and promises to be a free bloomer; the variety has apparently an exceptionally good constitution and stem, and the calyx is all that could be desired up to this date. The dozen plants we have growing are all that could be expected, having received them too late for comparison with other varieties, which we regret.

Yours very truly.

DAILLEDOUZE BROS.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 18, 1899.

ROBERT CRAIG & SON,

Gentlemen: Your new carnation "Ethel Crocker" is without doubt by far the finest pink carnation for Fall use we have handled yet, in fact, the finest we have seen on the market anywhere.

Very truly yours.

PENNOCK BROS.

HAGERSTOWN, MD., Nov. 25, 1899.

ROBERT CRAIG & SON,

Gentlemen: In my judgment "Ethel Crocker" is a star of the first magnitude, possessed of every good quality and sure to win admiration of every one.

Very truly yours.

HENRY HOLZAPPEL, JR.

Extract From American Florist, Philada. Notes, Oct 14, 1899.

I neglected, in my report of the Florists' Club meeting, to speak of a vase of "Ethel Crocker" carnation exhibited by Robert Craig & Son. It attracted a great deal of attention and all the carnation experts present seemed to be of one mind in declaring it to be the finest pink they had ever seen. It was quite the equal of any of the present favorites in their best midwinter stage, which, when one considers the early date, Oct. 3, speaks volumes in its favor.

From Florists' Exchange, Philada. Notes, Oct 7, 1899.

Robert Craig & Son exhibited a vase of the new California carnation "Ethel Crocker," which created quite a sensation. The flowers are 2½ to 3 inches in diameter, stems stiff: in fact the flowers are remarkable for so early in the season. The above firm has a house of this variety for flowering this season and it certainly should take well.

From American Florist, New York Notes, Oct. 14, 1899.

On the exhibition table Mr. Craig had a vase of the beautiful new pink carnation, "Ethel Crocker" which was highly commended by the exhibition committee and duly admired by all, the carnation giving every promise of being a winner.

From Florists' Exchange, New York Notes, Oct. 14, 1899.

The following exhibit was made by Robert Craig & Son, to whom a vote of thanks was tendered:

Vase of the new California carnation "Ethel Crocker." The color of the flowers showed up very prettily under artificial light, being a deep, salmon pink. The stems were of good length and held the blooms up well. The exhibition committee awarded the variety honorable mention, and expressed a desire to see it again later in the season.

Write to us about Crocker, Olympia, The Lawson, The Marquis, Genevieve Lord or any of the standard sorts you may want, of which we have a goodly number, including Crane, America, Maceo, Gomez, Melba, White Cloud, Bradt, Etc.

BREATHING SPELL FOLLOWS THE HOLIDAYS.—STOCK IS ALL RIGHT.—KASTING PREPARING ENTERTAINMENT.

Trade has been rather quiet the past week, as it always is for a little while after the holidays. Stock is in good shape now and plentiful enough, although narcissi and hyacinths are the only over supply. Good Beauties can now be obtained at 60 cents each, wholesale. Roses are all right, but carnations are not quite up to grade. Primroses and tulips are selling well in pots and pans.

Vice-president W. F. Kasting is hard at work upon the arrangements for the February meeting of the American Carnation Society and his committees are keeping pace with him. There can be no doubt of the completeness of the local arrangements for the big event.

The matrimonial fever seems to be contagious, no less than six of those in the trade here having wedded within four months. The latest is Jacob Boehler, better known as "Palmer's Jakey."

Recent visitors: J. V. Merrion, Chicago; E. A. Butler, Niagara Falls; S. B. Smiley, Lancaster; Jerry Brookins, Orchard Park.

GENEVIEVE LORD.

THE peer of any light pink Carnation ever offered to the trade. A commercial triumph. Its beautiful color, large size and its matchless length and stiffness of stem make it, beyond a doubt, the queen of its class. There is nothing like it. We offer it to the commercial grower as a money getter of the first magnitude.

As an exhibition flower, it ranks high. It will take care of itself in its class. It has carried off the highest honors wherever shown. The blooms are now being sold in the most critical market and bringing highest prices. It will not be over-propagated. Our book will close as soon as the limit is reached. Order early and be sure.

$75.00 per 1000, $10.00 per 100, $2.00 per doz. Delivery Feb. 15th.

A GOOD SEASON AND BRIGHT PROSPECTS.—BEERS DOES DOUBLE BUSINESS.—A UNIQUE FUNERAL DESIGN.—NOTES OF OTHER DEALERS.

In my rounds about town and chats with the florists, I find them all of the opinion that the spring outlook was never better. Carl Beers, who has 32,000 feet of glass, says his stock and spring supply will be the largest and best on record and at his winter garden in the heart of the city, a novelty of the past year, and one appreciated by the people, everything looks flourishing. Mr. Beers says his business has practically doubled within the past year. He recently constructed a floral design worthy of mention for its novelty and difficulty of execution. The friends of the late Sumner L. Crosby, the leading taxidermist of eastern Maine, conceived the idea of reproducing in flowers one of his best works as a set piece for his obsequies. The original from which the piece was reproduced, was two large ptarmigan, stuffed and occupying a large, convex glass case within a gilt frame 3½x4½ feet. This work was entrusted to Mr. Beers and was executed in a highly creditable manner.

Buckley & Preble, agents for F. H. Moses, report last year's business very good and the outlook for spring excellent.

Adam Sekenger's stock is all looking finely; orders are generally good and the outlook is promising.

Mrs. Allen, A. F. Noyes and others report business good and signs of a good spring. V. V.

Denver, Col.

The Park Floral Co., operating twenty-four greenhouses with a glass area of 60,000 square feet, is probably the largest concern in the trade west of the Missouri river. A. B. Seaman and J. A. Valentine are the proprietors of this fine business, which was established in 1894, the former being a wealthy attorney and the latter the experienced manager of the concern. The greenhouses are near City Park and the down-town store is at Sixteenth and Champa streets, in charge of Mr. Grimshaw, formerly with Thorley, in New York. The Park Floral Co. caters to the best trade of Denver and Colorado and in the greenhouses Mr. Valentine and his score or more of assistants bend every effort to produce stock of highest quality. From the nature of things they require a diversified stock and everything is grown, from cut flowers to bedding stock, from mignonette to palms and ferns. One-third the glass is devoted to roses, all the standard and many old favorite sorts being grown. American Beauty is given 6,000 feet of glass and the new rose, Mrs. Robert Garrett, is doing well. Carnations occupy 10,000 feet of space and in the list of varieties nearly all the familiar names are to be found. All the new sorts are grown and grown to the highest possible point of perfection. Next year Mrs. Lawson will be given a heavy trial. Business has been good this season and promises well for spring.

Clear Cypress Greenhouse Material.

This with us means the best growth of Cypress Lumber and the best grade of that growth; and from this grade all the sap—bright sap, which only experts can detect—as well as stained sap, knots and other defects cut out. Others do not equal our quality if they do beat our prices. It is not hard to see the reason: You can not buy gold dollars at fifty cents each. Experienced growers know that the best is not too good and cheapest in the long run.

Latest Facts About New Carnations.

[Read before the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, January 2, 1900, by Albert M. Herr, of Lancaster, Pa.]

The term "new carnations," is one of considerable latitude but I will start with the introductions of last season and those on my own place.

G. H. Crane seems to stand out as the most prominent of last season's new ones, and perhaps deservedly so. It is a good scarlet, apparently, from the first to the last flower produced, and in this respect it supersedes that grand variety, Jubilee, which is the scarlet for the months of December, January, February and March, but not of much value for any other portion of the season. From all that I have seen of Crane, up to date, it does not look as if it would produce any more blooms to the plant, than well grown Jubilee! It is not to be classed as a cheap scarlet, although I have yet to see the first flower of this variety that was not salable, and this is another point it possesses that few scarlets can lay claim to. Quite a lot of stem rot seems to have developed among it for a first season carnation, and if this proves to be characteristic of the variety it is doomed. It is to be hoped that selection and care will rid it of this trouble.

America lacks some of the good qualities of G. H. Crane, as a scarlet, although with me, and at the few places where I have seen it growing, it promises to outbloom Crane by a good big percentage. As an offset to this, however, is the fact that it is not quite so uniform in quality, and a portion of the flowers can not be classed as firsts, and early in the season a considerable portion of the cut comes under this class. With me it is rather a brighter scarlet than Crane but is not so full a flower. In growth it is somewhat stronger, and taken all in all, it looks to me as if it might prove a rattling good thing in places where it can be well grown.

Maceo, a rich dark maroon, very pretty in good light, but said by most growers to be too dark, is proving a good producer, and a nice, healthy grower, so it is to be hoped that it is not too dark in color. Gomez, its companion, is a lighter shade, and seems to hit the popular fancy better than the dark one. It also has freedom of bloom, length of stem and good growth in its favor, but has been a disappointment in the size of its blooms; it has, however, been improving slightly the past few weeks and even with the medium sized flowers produced early in the season, it is worth a place on account of its color and other good points.

Melba has also been a disappointment on account of its size, but it is better to-day than many varieties considered a fair size.

Gov. Griggs, the rival of Daybreak, falls a little short on some points but looks to me as if it might be with many growers a good one to have in stock, as there are some buyers who cling to this shade of pink and have little or no use for any other.

Glacier, the new white, has not been as extensively tried as it really deserved to be, although it falls short of the ideal white by a number of points. This ideal white may be in the houses of one of the hybridizers to-day, and it is to be sincerely hoped that it is, for a good commercial white is badly needed. Since making this statement a few months back, I have received some plants of an ideal white, in the grower's estimation, but they are up to date badly lacking in the points I am looking for. I also have received a number of sample blooms, but to a grower the flower is only an introduction to the variety and about as much use in judging the merits of a variety commercially as the reading an introduction to a book is towards forming an idea as to its literary merits. I would rather have 1000 plants of a white carnation that could fill the want in this color to-day, than the best $5000-bond ever put on the market. Before putting it on the market I would want to be sure it did fill the bill, for the great majority of growers are getting tired, and justly so, of filling their houses with varieties that do not pay them. The lack of this important feature was never more forcibly impressed upon me than in a recent conversation with a grower who grows good carnations, and is apparently as successful as the majority of growers. He claimed that they figured on an actual loss in their carnation house every season by carefully kept accounts, and only grew them to supply their customers, "who buy roses and other cut stock," with a complete assortment of flowers. There is some food for reflection in this.

Iris Miller, an offense of my own, is not doing so well with me as it did last season, and while it is a magnificent large flower, it is too grassy in growth, and lacks blooming qualities.

Elsie Ferguson, a burnt orange in color, has all the commercial points necessary to make it a paying variety, but the storemen declare it is to be no good as a seller. Some day the buyers will get tired of the old round, red, white and pink, and then a really beautiful odd color, such as this is, will command a good figure.

Leslie Paul is almost an ideal flower, form, substance, calyx and stem being just about perfect, and the color is the brightest I have ever seen in the Tidal Wave shade, red or dark pink. It is, however, late in coming into bloom and requires special culture to bring a crop in for the holidays, a fact that may prevent its becoming popular. Growers who can procure fancy prices for fancy stock will do well to take it up, and my own experience leads me to consider it a good sort for almost all growers.

Evanston, Uncle Waller and several other scarlet sports from Tidal Wave are scarlet Waves and nothing more; in fact their being scarlet Waves is sufficient recommendation for them, as Tidal Wave was in its time a rattling good sort, and to many growers is just as good to-day.

There are some other sorts of last season that should be reviewed in this paper, but not having seen them or tried them, I am not in a position to form an opinion.

Among the real new sorts I am also at some disadvantage, although I have seen No. 666 and wished I were the owner of the stock, not alone on account of its size and form, nor the price it brings as a cut flower, the latter being a novelty price that will drop down to normal figures as soon as there are more plants to cut from, but on account of its apparent good habits as a grower and the fact that it seems as good a bloomer as many varieties of one-third its size. In color, according to my ideas, it is not any better nor even as good as some of Sievers' that the New York men told me were absolutely no good at all, but as these same men are paying $4 per dozen and over for this variety, my ideas of color are evidently countrified and of no account. The owners of No. 666 know a good thing when they see it and will no doubt hold on to it a few years before letting it get out among the growers. They may well hold on to it, as it seems almost beyond the limits of the carnation to get one out that will overtop it in size and form.

Governor Roosevelt, the new crimson or maroon, is in about the same position in its class, and is so good that it can easily be held back a few years without fear of a better one coming out to take its place. It is to be hoped that the owners of both these sorts will keep them healthy and in good shape, so that when we ordinary mortals get them we can also have some of the benefits to be derived from their superior qualities.

Being in the pink race myself and not having seen any of my three rivals growing, my ideas on this color would naturally be prejudiced. I will say, however, that I believe Ethel Crocker to be more than is claimed for it and that it stands a good chance of being a second Scott, with its merits not fully recognized until next winter.

New carnations are getting to be a serious question with growers and it is to be hoped that the American Carnation Society will take some action relative to bringing out their good points and incidentally their bad ones. In a paper read by Fred. Dorner at the Chicago meeting of this society, a series of exhibits was recommended, that it would be well for originators to carry out. The main points of the paper were, to have an exhibit of the cut blooms of a variety being introduced once a month at some point in the United States, have these flowers judged according to a scale of points adopted by the society, and these reports all filed with the society in February and consolidated with the report on the variety in question at that meeting. This would give buyers an idea as to the merits of the flowers in the earlier part of the season and while, as said before, flowers alone are a poor thing to judge a variety from, they are an introduction. No honorable power will refuse to truthfully answer any question asked, as to the growing and blooming qualities of the variety, and the two would save many a dollar being invested in good spring varieties.

Sometimes it seems a pity that the trade papers and the writers of essays of the sort I am now reading are not more outspoken, as to the faults of some of the newer carnations, and yet when we see the occasional gross injustice done a variety, by some one who has made a failure of it, we are glad that condemnation is withheld in most cases.

WM. MURPHY.
President of the Cincinnati Florists' Society.

Wm. Murphy.

The recently elected president of the Cincinnati Florists' Society, whose portrait appears herewith, was born July 4, 1857, in the state of Illinois. His parents moved to Delhi, O., in 1866, where his father located as a market gardener. The lad's love for flowers led him to devote a portion of his time to their cultivation and, through the increasing demand for plants and flowers he gradually drifted into the florist business. His first greenhouses were built in 1883 and were devoted to miscellaneous stock for market. In 1886 Mr. Murphy started to make carnations a specialty and a few more houses were added, and to-day his plant comprises twenty acres of fertile land 30,000 feet of glass and all this is devoted to the culture of carnations. Last fall Mr. Murphy housed 40,000 plants and at present 200,000 rooted cuttings are on the benches. Mr. Murphy is a member of the S. A. F. and has been an active member of the Cincinnati Florists' Society, in which he held several positions of trust before being chosen its president. "Will," as he is familiarly called, is well liked by all who know him and is an all-around good fellow.

ROSES.

WHAT IS THE TROUBLE?

ED. AM FLORIST:—Under a separate cover I send you a package containing two plants of tea roses taken from my benches. Please tell me what is the trouble, prescribing a remedy if possible. There seems to be quite a number of the plants affected. I have taken a good many of the plants from the benches and burned them. I have never fed the plants with any kind of liquid manure and up to a short time ago they looked fine and produced good blooms. I fear I will lose them all from the way they look now.

W. J. M.

One can easily determine that "W. J. M." has a bad lot of eel worm at the roots of his roses; the samples sent were very bad and if all the plants in his houses are affected as badly as these, his chances of getting many good flowers from them are very poor. By leaving the soil to get just a little on the dry side and then giving the whole a good soaking with lime water, made from fresh lime, and repeating the application every fifteen or twenty days for the next three months, may help them considerably, but the plants must never be allowed to suffer for want of water, as in that case the nemetodes effect the roots worse than ever. When clearing these roses out of the house eventually I should advise him to make a big fire and burn the plants, soil and all, then thoroughly clean the benches, giving a thorough washing of hot lime, and try entirely new soil for next season.

If "W. J. M." will take up one of his plants now affected and wash the soil out of the roots, he will find any number of little gall-like lumps on the roots, many of them not larger than a good-sized pin head. Each of these contain numbers of eel worms; how many it is exceedingly hard to determine. I found ten in one of them under the microscope, so that it may safely be said there are hundreds of them at each plant (thousands would probably be nearer the mark) all living upon the vitality of the plants, and as far as I can learn from all sources there is nothing yet found that will destroy them. All one can do is to treat the plants liberally to that which will assist them in resisting the inroads of these pests when once they are affected.

JOHN N. MAY.

WHY ARE BEAUTIES SCARCE?

Although I have no statistics to bear me out, I think it is generally understood that there were more American Beauty plants started last summer than usual and that it was fair to expect as many or more flowers this winter. The result has been a disappointment quite general so far as I am aware. The Beauty has always been an uncertain cropper; no one feels sure of what the result will be for any season's planting, but heretofore Jones has been successful when Smith made a failure. This season appears to have put them all in the same boat. If these premises are correct, and I think they are, the cause of this condition naturally suggests itself for determination.

After preparing the benches with the proper soil there are three details which require the grower's skill and watchfulness in order that his Beauties attain perfection. These are light, moisture and temperature. Two of these are within the control of the grower, temperature and moisture. Light is beyond him, but fortunately this is so gradual in its changes from strong to weak and back again that we should be able to adjust the other two accordingly.

Moisture should conform to temperature. Temperature should conform to light. Light we must take as nature gives it to us and we must supply heat and moisture as nature demands. It follows, therefore, that the rules of action cannot be the same through an entire season. The growth of roses is truly a chemical process, for which the grower must furnish the requisite environments for nature's best work.

Light, then, is our chief factor, a fact which is partially recognized in most cultural directions as to temperature. But one temperature will not answer for all conditions of weather. The heat should decrease for darker or shorter days because forced growth on a deficiency of material means slender building and the moisture, in excess of requirements, contributes to the support of vegetation which is detrimental to the rose, black spot for example. Therefore you are more likely to injure your plants by too much than too little heat from October to January.

It appears to be quite evident that here is where the mistake so generally made this season may be found. Most winters when the weather has been blustering, at times severe, there has been a greater variation in the temperature maintained by the numerous growers; this season has been so mild and gentle that every one maintained the maximum temperature.

Temperature alone, however, does not account for all the trouble. Reverting again to the light, which is the all important element in our calculations, we must not place more plants on a bench than can be afforded light. If you will examine a perfect specimen of American Beauty rose, you will notice that the amount of foliage on each flower cane is much larger than on any other of the popular varieties; the stem is stiff and thick. The amount of light required by such a stem is at least as much as is needed for four canes of the Bridesmaid. Following this estimate to its conclusion, you will require four feet square for each American Beauty plant which you intend to grow to perfection. In place of this we find house after house of this rose grown like smilax, canes so slender that they must be held up with a string, and the only foliage in anything like normal condition along the south edges of the benches where the pathways afford some light.

Our growers understand these points in a general way, but they have not appreciated their vital importance. If they will give their Beauties more bench room, maintain a lower temperature until the days begin to lengthen, and administer air and moisture with greater care, I am sure they will have more satisfactory results. Begonia Silver Bronze.

This plant of neat habit is a cross between B. decora and B. Silver Grey, with beautiful undulated foliage, the color being a most charming combination of minute specks of strawberry red, pea green and silver rose so minutely scattered as to give the appearance from a distance of one color. Short scarlet hairs further ornament the leaves. The under surfaces of the leaves and petioles are a rich terra cotta red. Introduced by Sander.

BEGONIA SILVER BRONZE.

CARNATIONS.

CARNATIONS REGISTERED.

By H. B. McKnight, Jersey City, N. J. —Sir Thos. Lipton, color same as Scott, flowers measuring from three and one-half to three and three-quarters inches across, and with a calyx that does not burst in any temperature; stems eighteen to twenty inches long. A cross between Scott and Tidal Wave resembling the latter in growth but taller.

By M. E. Kraus, New Haven Conn. —Elm City, color, white; flowers are large, finely shaped and with strong fragrance; petals heavy, of good substance and nicely fringed; calyx strong and never bursts; stem strong, holding the flowers erect. Plant is a good grower, not making unnecessary grass, and it is now in its fifth year.

ALBERT M. HERR. Sec'y.

IMPROVEMENT BY SELECTION.

To some growers the process of improving a variety by selection may not appeal so strongly as does the quicker but more uncertain one of hybridization. My father has always been an advocate of improvement by selection and has followed it up in a practical way with some truly wonderful results, so that I owe much of my enthusiasm on the subject to his success. Results are quicker with plants that reproduce themselves true to color and habit from seed, but they are just as sure with plants that have to be propagated from cuttings. The natural capacity of all plants to vary furnishes the basis on which the breeder by selection works.

Food supply is an important factor in causing variability. The first and most common variation resulting from an excessive food supply is a general increase in size, which at first is relatively the same in all parts of the plant, stem, leaves, roots and flowers. If excessive nutrition is kept up for several years the plants will be found to vary in other directions, some of them increasing the size of their flowers more than their leaves, stem, etc., and by carefully watching for this form of variation, propagating from it, and continuing the process of selection for a few years this increase in the size of the flower can be made a fixed type and a valuable acquisition to our list of profitable varieties.

This process of following up a variation in order to secure a fixed type can be used in a number of directions, but in following up the improvement by selection it is best not to attempt more than one or two changes at a time or you will find but little progress, If you are working to increase the floriferousness of a variety, follow that up alone and do not attempt to have the flowers produced come up to the exhibition standard as that can be attained later on by good culture and attention. The same rule applies to fixing a type of earliness in a variety; secure that point first and then the quality of the flowers can be brought out later on. By this looking after the one point we are aiming for we must not, however, lose sight of all others, as it is quite as necessary to maintain the general health of the plant.

If hybridizers and introducers of new carnations were to follow up a careful system of selection, starting with their second year stock, and carefully rouge out all plants that show any signs of weakness or disease, and all plants that do not produce the requisite number of blooms, it would probably take a year longer to work up enough stock to put the variety before the public, but when it was introduced it would stand much more of a chance of success.

This system of selection can and should be followed up in a more general way by every grower of rooted cuttings, but for commercial purposes it need not be done so carefully as where you are attempting to fix a certain type. For general purposes the only points necessary to watch are that no cuttings are taken from diseased plants, or from plants that have been shy in the production of bloom and that all cuttings taken are from the base of a flowering shoot. Some growers will not take a cutting from the flower stems, claiming that they are too weak and spindly; they do not make as fine looking plants but they will produce more flowers. The ideal cuttings are the three or four which can be taken right at the base of the flowering shoot, as they have both floriferousness and vitality, and the man who is growing his own cuttings with plenty of stock plants to cut from, will get the best results by selecting this style of cutting.

The worst possible cutting to use is the one selected chiefly for its size and good looks and taken promiscuously from the plant without regard to any other point. This process kept up for a few years will ruin almost any variety; the cuttings will make fine plants but the free blooming ones will be fewer and fewer each season. ALBERT M. HERR.

Ornamental Bedding at Denver.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—I notice in a recent issue some views of the ornamental bedding at Fairmount Park, Philadelphia, and thinking that your readers may be interested in the way in which we do these things in the "wild and woolly west" I forward the accompanying view of the flower garden at City Park, Denver, Col., which, if I may be pardoned my opinion, will compare very favorably with anything of its kind in the country. The combination of colors we secure here, owing, doubtless to our climate, cannot be surpassed anywhere. High horticultural authority has assured me that our geraniums were never excelled for size of trusses and the colors are perfect. The double and single whites retain their snowy tint without a trace of the pink shade so noticeable in the east.

A. J. GRAHAM, Supt.

WITH THE GROWERS.

JOSEPH HEACOCK, JENKINTOWN, PA.

Jenkintown is a suburb of Philadelphia and is celebrated chiefly in the popular mind as the home of the merchant prince, John Wanamaker, and the place from which Philadelphia receives a large part of the unexcelled American Beauty roses which do so much to drive our belles crazy with delight and our beaus with despair during the winter months.

These flowers emanate from the establishment of Joseph Heacock, which is located here, and thinking a few notes would be interesting to your readers in regard to this place your scribe made a pilgrimage the other day and subjoins jottings taken on the fly for your edification.

The greenhouses are built on the face of a hill, facing southeast, and comprise about 75,000 feet. The aspect and location is excellent and the construction of the houses is up-to-date in all particulars. The most recent addition is a palm house 25x160, with a ridge elevation of thirteen feet, solid beds and cement walks around the walls and a narrower walk down the center. This house has only been finished about two weeks. The unusual location of the walks gives more head room in center for the plants and also obviates the water soaking the wooden sides while spraying, thus adding to the life of the house. A simple thermostat is in each house and works well. It is of inexpensive construction and rings a bell on change of the temperature. They are a great success. Another wrinkle noticed was the roller doors on the newer houses—a good thing—light in construction and work like a charm.

Ten of the houses are devoted to American Beauty, which rose has been a money maker here this season, the best on record taking it all through, although a bit off at Christmas. The cut during October was something phenomenal and good prices were realized. At this date the plants look exceptionally well with the exception of one house, where a touch of spot was noticed. This was probably caused by its being the earliest one planted, the severe check of transplanting in August being put forward as the solution of the trouble.

Brides, Meteors and Bridesmaids are the other roses grown. This will be the last season of Meteor here. No money in it. It was learned that Liberty was not to take its place here. Why? Well, after careful figuring the conclusion was reached that at the high figures the introducers are asking for Liberty the glass would make better returns put into some other crop, which is an interesting point, if true. Now let Alexander B. Scott show a waiting world that this is a fallacy by bringing forward some logical arguments to prove his faith in his protege. He is too generous a soul to rob the poor, hard working florist in that way, I am firmly convinced, and yet here is a hard-headed Quaker like Mr. Heacock who claims the figures are against him. Let us have some light here. Brides were not as successful here as usual, but the Bridesmaids have done and are doing well.

Adiantum occupies one house but is to be discontinued after this season as the room is wanted for the palms. The palm houses are the largest and most modern on the place, and probably occupy one half the area. Kentia Belmoreana is the favorite, house after house of this fine sort being seen in fine condition and all sizes from the seed bed to ten dollar specimens. Arecas come next in quality and they are indeed a splendid lot of plants, a house of specimens priced at from ten to twenty-five dollars being a show in themselves. Two small houses are devoted to cocos. Latania and phœnix are the only other varieties grown in any quantity.

A small house of Cypripedium insigne was noticed and was said to have paid well, much better than the previous season, but that was doubtless on account of the combine on prices.

I must not forget to mention two houses of carnations which are the special pets and property of Mr. Heacock's sisters—Miss Pattie and Miss Jane Heacock—and these certainly deserve all praise; the plants are the pink of perfection and show great care and cultural ability. The varieties grown are White Cloud, Mrs. James Dean and Victor, also a few Flora Hill, but they say this isn't in it with White Cloud; others say the same and there is undoubtedly truth where all are agreed. BANQUET OF THE FLORISTS' CLUB.—MEETING OF THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF THE S. A. F.—THE AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.—BUSINESS DULL.—REMOVAL.

The annual banquet of the Florists' Club was an unqualified success. President O'Mara presided and John N. May officiated as toastmaster. Over one hundred members and visitors were present, taxing to the utmost the accommodations of the dining hall at the St. Denis hotel. The members of the S. A. F. executive committee were all present excepting Lawrence Cotter. Boston was further represented by J. A. Pettigrew, W. S. Ewell and F. R. Mathison, Philadelphia, was represented by John Burton, Robt. Craig, Edwin Lonsdale and Wm. K. Harris; Washington by Benj. Durfee, and Buffalo by W. J. Palmer. Officers of several allied societies were also present. The table was loaded with baskets and vases of the finest floral productions of the country's best growers. An orchestra furnished the music, ably assisted by vocal accompaniment of the boys at that end of the table. Everybody was in the happiest possible frame of mind. As coffee was being served President O'Mara welcomed the guests and his predictions of success for the coming convention were received with unbounded enthusiasm. He then introduced Mr. May, who called upon President Wood to respond for the S. A. F. Mr. Wood told of the faithful work of the executive officers and hoped for a million dollar home in future for the society in New York city. Wm. K. Harris spoke for Schuylkill horticulture and modestly read a logical poem. Robt. Craig's subject was the American Rose Society. He told of the high place held by the queen of flowers in the literature of all times, quoted from Robert Burns, complimented Mr. Harris' article, advocated the establishment of a rose journal, said the American Rose Society was a child of hope and solicited support for the coming exhibition. J. D. Carmody evoked much merriment by his talk on saints and sinners and his claim that all florists, especially those of Indiana are saints. Indiana, he said, is supplying the world with saints and is all right. W. N. Rudd responded for Prairie City horticulture and incidentally applauded the aims and work of the national society. C. W. Ward spoke for the American Carnation Society, urging every member of same to also join the S. A. F. Alderman Morris made a grand and patriotic speech for the city of New York, with complimentary allusions to Boston, Philadelphia and the world. J. Forsyth Johnson spoke for suburban horticulture, W. J. Stewart for Beantown horticulture, John Westcott for sports and Philadelphia's destiny; J. F. Sullivan for Detroit, Benj. Durfee for Washington and W. S. Ewell finished the program with a stump speech. A song was also given by C. F. Plumb, recitation by J. P. Cleary and poem by J. Austin Shaw, while the "Duke of York" was effectively rendered by Edwin Lonsdale, amid the usual difficulties.

The executive committee of the Society of American Florists had a very full attendance at its sessions in this city this week, there being only one member absent and he with unquestioned good cause. W. J. Palmer, of Buffalo, was a visitor in the capacity of a sort of bodyguard to Ex-president Rudd during his sojourn in New York state. On Thursday afternoon the members of the committee together with the officers of the New York Florists' Club were the guests of Mr and Mrs. C. W. Ward at Queens, Long Island, where they were entertained with unbounded hospitality.

The executive committee of the American Rose Society met here Saturday and elected Leonard Barron secretary in place of Paul M. Pierson, resigned. The committee also perfected arrangements for the coming exhibition to be held at Eden Musee, Twenty-third street, March 27–29, and will provide place in same for carnations, orchids and any other good things.

Little can be added to last week's report on the business conditions as they exist here at present. Weather is balmy, receipts of flowers heavy, quality medium, demand slow and values very low for the season.

J. K. Allen announces his intention to move to 106 West Twenty-eight street.

ROSES OFF CROP.—PRICES GRADUALLY SINKING.—DEATH OF MRS. HUGH GRAHAM.—COMMENTS.

The weather is very mild, not at all like winter. Still while there is plenty of sunshine most of the roses seem to be off crop or quality, particularly Brides and Bridesmaids. Prices are gradually sinking to a lower level. The finest Beauties go slow at from $6 to $7.50 per dozen. A very fair size and the best mover is being offered at $3 to $4 per dozen. Teas range from $6 to $10 with few touching the top figure. Carnations are in good shape, but cheap, as stock has to be fancy to bring $2. A few of the extra select sell as high as $4 to $5, but the quick movers bring but $1.50. Violets are now down to $1 for the best double, with Californias at 50 cents 75 cents. A few tulips are coming in at from $1 to $4. They are very poor, however. Romans may almost be had for the asking. These French hyacinths seem to have almost always been a drag. Away back in the 80s, when roses were scarce, if you bought no hyacinths you got no roses. To-day demand and supply alone regulates the price and $1 to $1.50 is the most they will bring. Valley is in fair demand at $3 to $4. There are still a few cypripediums at about $15. Plants are moving slowly. There is some fair blooming stock, azaleas, primroses, Chinese and the new Obconica, which seems to take quite well.

A VIEW IN ONE OF JOSEPH HEACOCK'S PALM HOUSES.

W. K. Harris sent in a fine bougainvillea. It was very well flowered and made a grand show in Pennock Bros.' window. Mr. Harris is also forcing a few magnolias and selling the blooms at 25 cents each. There is quite a demand for gardenias, but no one about this city seems to want to supply it.

There are still no complaints about Begonia de Lorraine. A few plants are coming back to have more flowers put on them, like the beans on the Irishman's stick, but all appear to have been satisfied and seem to think they have had the worth of their money. Some of the plants that were a little shop-worn at Christmas and were sent back by the stores are now almost as good as new.

Robert Scott & Son are having great success with their Liberty cuttings; also with their grafted stock, which is taking nicely. There are orders, however, for all of it and more, which will have to be supplied later.

Quite a contingent of grand and past grand officers of the Florists' Club attended the annual dinner of the New York brethren last Wednesday evening and report having had a most enjoyable time.

I regret to report the death of Mrs. Hugh Graham, which occurred last Wednesday. She was prominent in public work, being an active member of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, particularly in the prison work of that organization, and was much beloved by all who knew her.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. have lost considerable stock recently through the dishonesty of one of their errand boys, who for some time has generally gone out with his pockets full and sold the same at 5 to 10 cents per pound for 50-cent fancy to the Greeks. Their increased demand led to the discovery and two of these gentry are under arrest for receiving stolen goods.

Don't forget the ladies' night; it will be full of enjoyment until the wee small hours K.

MARKET CONDITIONS. — TRADE POOR.—RARE CYPRIPEDIUMS.—LANDSCAPE ARCHITECTURE AT HARVARD.—NOTES AND COMMENTS.

Extremely low prices for the time of year and a remarkably light call for flowers for all purposes mark the two weeks' period since New Years. The production of rose and carnations, especially the latter, seems considerably above the normal and stock has accumulated in a most discouraging manner, much of it to be disposed of to the street dealers at absurdly low rates. Just how long it is going to last is a pertinent question with both growers and wholesalers. It has been the rule that the first half of January has always made a poor showing but the first half is now gone and no indications of improvement are discernible as yet. There is a fine variety of material offered and it covers a very wide range, as chrysanthemums jostle yellow daffodils in the florist windows and sweet peas and wallflowers are already seen here and there. The florists have been looking forward hopefully to the long period for business before Lent should come in but nothing has so far materialized that they can get much encouragement from.

Mrs. Lawson carnation is making a wonderful record as to sales. Mr. Galvin reports that already 315,000 rooted cuttings have been received. He says that those who want to procure stock this spring should order at once, as delivery will begin February 1 and the demand is unprecedented.

Oakes Ames exhibited on Saturday, January 13, at Horticultural Hall, two pretty and rare hybrid cypripediums, C. Miss Evelyn Ames an American seedling between C. Calypso superbum and C. Leeanum superbum, and C. Marwoodi, a cross between C. Niveum and C. Harrisianum.

The Harvard faculty has decided to give from the Lawrence Scientific School a new degree in landscape architecture. The new department will comprise about twenty courses of study in architecture, landscape gardening and allied branches and they will be given at the Botanic Garden, Bnssey Institute and Arnold Arboretum.

A. P. Calder has removed to 396 Boylston street, the location lately occupied by Chas. Fohn.

Judge Hoitt and Jas. Rough are industriously exchanging confidences on the pigeon raising question.

Wm. Edgar grows quantities of Adiantum tenerum for the cut fronds which sell well for use in large work.

The mild winter has so far been very favorable to all out door material. There have been no serious ice storms and the ground is frozen but slightly.

Norris F. Comley has issued a pretty calendar on which is a photograph of the chrysanthemum vase which won first prize for him last November.

Prof. Chas. S. Sargent has gone to Europe.

DARK RAINY WEATHER REDUCES SUPPLY. —ROSES OFF CROP.—PETER REINBERG TO BUILD AT BOWMANVILLE.—O. P. BASSETT OFF TO PHILADELPHIA.—EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF THE S. A. F. AT NEW YORK.

This has been a peculiar week as regards the cut flower situation. While the weather has been dismal, reducing the local trade to the minimum, shipping orders have continued fairly numerous and stock has been so short that it has been difficult to take care of late comers. Bride and Bridesmaid roses seem to be off crop very generally and in short supply; in fact, when one sort goes off crop at the same time with the Reinbergs, Bassett & Washburn and Wietors it makes little difference what the other fellows are cutting; there is bound to be a shortage, great or little according to the state of trade. This has been a season of feasts and famines, and all because of the weather; first a period of bright, warm sunshine would rush in the stock and then couple of weeks of cold, dark, damp days would shut off production almost as suddenly as the snuffing of a candle.

The carnation exhibition of the Florists' Club, held at the Masonic Temple, January 19, was a decided success. The exhibitors and exhibits were as follows: J. F. Wilcox, Council Bluffs, Iowa, roses; carnations Jubilee, Lily Dean, Mrs. Frances Joost, Red Bradt, Gen. Maceo, America, Mrs. Bradt, Wm. Scott, Argyle, Flora Hill, New York, G. H. Crane and Mayor Pingree.

H. D. Rohrer, Lancaster, Pa., carnations Lily Dean and New York; Miller & Sons, Bracondale, Ont., Canada, carnations Lady Muito and Lady Van Horne; H. Weber & Son, Oakland, Md., carnations Genevieve Lord, Seedling No. 110 and Seedling No. 30; John S. Forster, Evanston, Ill., carnation Mystic; Wietor Bros., Chicago, Ill., carnations, sports of Armazindy.

Anton Then, Chicago, Ill., carnations McGowan, Wm. Scott, Evelina, Flora Hill, Argyle; Red Bradt, White Cloud, Mrs. Bradt, Triumph, Daybreak, Jubilee, Primula Forbesii and P. obonica.

Chicago Carnation Co., Joliet, Ill., carnations Morning Glory, Mrs. J. J. Mitchell, Seedling No. 64, Seedling No. 48, Mrs. Potter Palmer, Chicot, Seedling No. 32, Seedling No. 99, Genevieve Lord, Mrs. H. N. Higinbotham, Mrs. G. M. Bradt, Argyle, Gold Nugget, G. H. Crane, Seedling No. 106 and General Maceo. Lake Geneva Floral Co., Lake Geneva, Wis., carnation Catbird. Brown & Canfield, Springfield, Ill., carnation Albertini, Omaha Florists' Club, Omaha, Neb., various carnations. Crabb & Hunter, Grand Rapids, Mich., carnations Irene and violets. H. N. Bruns, Chicago, Ill., lily of the valley. H. McAdams, Chicago, Ill., orchids. Stuart & Haugh, Anderson, Ind., carnation Avondale. Jos. Heinl, Jacksonville, Ill., Ismene calathina. John Felke, Chicago, Ill., carnations Melba, Armazindy, Argyle, Mrs. Bradt and sweet peas. Schramm Bros., Arlington Heights, Ill., violets. Guardian Angel Orphans' Home, Chicago, carnations No. 999 and Guardian Angel. Bohemian National Cemetery, Chicago, Ill., carnation, seedling from Tidal Wave. Bassett & Washburn, Chicago, Ill., Red Bradt and seedling No. 1, Daybreak × McGowan. E. G. Hill & Co., Richmond, Ind., carnations California Gold, Mary Hill, Ethel Crocker, J. W. Riley and Indiana. J. B. Goetz, Saginaw, Mich., carnation seeding No. 1. Logan Avenue Greenhouse, Danville, Ill., carnation, sport from Rose Queen. Philip Heilig, Jr., Franklin, Pa., carnations Christmas Rose, J. C. Sibley and Philip Heilig, Jr. J. C. Murray, Peoria, Ill., carnations Evanston, Wm. Scott, Flora Hill, Mayor Pingree and Daybreak. McKellar & Winterson, Chicago, carnations Albertini. J. N. May, Summit, N. J., carnation Olympia. R. Witterstaetter, Sedamsville, O., carnations Rosemond, Elinora, Estelle and Enquirer. Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago, Ill., Liberty roses. M. Becker, Chicago, carnation Armazindy. E. T. Grave, Richmond, Ind., carnation White Cloud.

Awards and scores were given thus: Anthon Then, honorable mention on all carnations, as well as exhibit of primula plants. Fred. Dorner, special mention on Morning Glory; also honorable mention on collection of seedlings. Chicago Carnation Co., on seedling No. 48 (white), 80 points; No. 64 (pink), 77 points; on Mrs. J. J. Mitchell, 80 points; No. 55 (pink), 85 points; Mrs. Potter Palmer, 60 points; Chicot, 80 points; seedling No. 32 (red), 60 points; seedling No. 99 (pink), 80 points; seedling No. 106 (red), 80 points; Genevieve Lord, 85 points. J. F. Wilcox honorable mention on carnations, and special mention Brides, Bridesmaids, Beauties and Golden Gate. Omaha Florists' Club, honorable mention on vases of carnations. Lake Geneva Floral Co., honorable mention on improved Tidal Wave. Brown & Canfield honorable mention on Albertini, Jno. N. May on Olympia, scored 85 points. H. D. Rohrer honorable mention on Albertini, New York and Lily Dean. Miller & Sons, honorable mention on Lady Muito and Lady Van Horne. H. Weber & Sons honorable mention on Genevieve Lord, on seedling No. 30 (pink) 88 points, and on seedling No. 110 (white) 87 points. J. C. Murray honorable mention on carnations standard varieties, and on Princess of Wales. Philip Heilig, Jr., honorable mention on six seedlings, also on a vase of Christmas rose carnation. Wietor Bros. scored 90 points on sport of Armazindy. Bassett & Washburn honorable mention on Red Bradt; also scored 80 points on seedling No. 1. Bohemian National Cemetery, honorable mention on red seedling from Tidal Wave. Logan Avenue Greenhouses honorable mention on sport from Rose Queen. E. G. Hill & Co. scored 85 points on California Gold, 95 on Mary Hill, 88 on Ethel Crocker and 90 on Indiana. J. W. Rider on variegated white-pink scored 86 points. J. B. Goetz honorable mention on red seedling. R. Witterstaetter scored 100 points on Enquirer, 98 on Opal, 97 on Estelle, 93 Elinora, and 91 on Rosamond. Orphans' Home scored 90 on sport of Armazindy. M. Becker, honorable mention on Armazindy, and 90 points on sport of same. Ernst Asmus honorable mention on vase of Liberty rose. E. T. Grave honorable mention on vase of White Cloud. H. N. Bruns honorable mention on exhibit of lily of the valley. A. McAdams honorable mention on exhibit of cattleyas (cut blooms and plant). Crabb & Hunter scored 92 points on Irene and received honorable mention on violets. Stuart & Haugh on Avondale, 90 points. John Felke honorable mention on four vases of carnations, also on vase of sweet peas. Schramm Bros., honorable mention on exhibit of violets. J. C. Vaughan honorable mention on vase of seedlings.

Peter Reinberg is going to build again. This time it is a range of ten houses, 25x 265, for American Beauties. Mr. Reinberg has an idea that he doesn't get Beauties enough from his houses at Summerdale and he is convinced that none of the usual causes account of the trouble so that the difficulty must lie in a peculiarity of the location; for this reason the new houses are going up at Bowmanville, about a mile west of the Reinberg range and in a territory famous for its Beauties. Mr. Reinberg plans to build these houses in the most approved manner. He is now in the market for material and has already made a number of purchases, one including four boilers and 30,000 feet of iron pipe of Henion & Hubbel. The Garland gutter will be used throughout.

O. P. Bassett goes to Philadelphia to-day for another look at Liberty, growing in the houses of Robert Scott & Son. He expects to bench about one-twentieth of the total number of Liberty cuttings propagated this year.

W. N. Rudd has been in New York this week to hand the presidency of the S. A. F. over to E. M. Wood at the annual meeting of the executive committee. Mr. Rudd went east in a very satisfied frame of mind, this being the most successful season he has had with his carnations and the police having just recovered from a pawn shop the watch which was among the things of which his home was robbed a few weeks ago.

Frank Beu, a grower at Mayfair, has rented a counter at E. C. Amling's and will hereafter do his own wholesaling. Mrs. Beu will have charge of the counter, and will be ready for business to-day.

Walter and Mrs. Kreitling will celebrate the fifteenth anniversary of their marriage this (Saturday) evening at Kindergarten Hall, 10-12 East Van Buren street.

Vaughan's seed store is being fully redecorated and painted for spring trade.

VIOLET SHOW AT THE CLUB ROOMS.—EXTRA FINE CARNATIONS SHOWN.—PLANS FOR LARGE PARTY TO VISIT BUFFALO.

On Saturday, January 13, the regular monthly show was held at the rooms of the Cincinnati Florists' Society with violets a special feature. Corbett & Wilson captured first prize, Crabb & Hunter, Grand Rapids, Mich., second, and J. R. Goldman, Middletown, third. W. K. Partridge, of Lockland, O., made a very creditable display of roses and carnations. He was awarded first on Flora Hill and Jubilee and an award of merit on his general display. Sunderbruch Sons were first on Bradt and Melba. George & Allan first on Brides, Bridesmaids, Perles and Meteors.

R. Witterstaetter had a fine collection of carnations, although he was not awarded a cash prize, as only standard varieties were entitled to same, but the public went wild over his exhibit; his Opal was grand and the same may be said of Melba. Among his new sorts was Irene, a large and well formed pink, which scored eighty-five points; Estella, bright scarlet flowers, large and full, stem strong, calyx perfect; Elinora, a beautiful white and the largest bloom on the table, scoring eighty-six points; 550 A., another white and a rival of the former but with petals fringed and very fragrant. Enquirer, cerise pink and so far the winner of the McLean Gold Medal, showed up to better advantage than in December.

Among the violets there was a new variety, Imperial, grown by Corbett & Wilson, the flowers resemble Marie Louise when at its best, but the stems are longer and if anything it is a shade darker. Princess of Wales was in the lead among singles.

In the evening the regular monthly meeting was held, with President Murphy in the chair. A vote of thanks was tendered Mr. Partridge for his generous donation, namely, that his collection of cut blooms be sold and the money turned into the treasury. A committee was appointed to arrange for a pilgrimage to the Buffalo carnation meeting next month. We expect to get a low rate of fare and to send a large party. Those interested are invited to address Frank Ball, care of the Cincinnati Cut Flower Co., or Richard Witterstaetter, Sedamsville, O. H. SCHWARZ.

MEETING OF FLORISTS' CLUB.—HORTICULTURAL ASSOCIATION OF PENNSYLVANIAS' EXHIBITION.

Trade is about the same as the previous week. Stock is abundant and prices moderate.

The Florists' Club met on the 11th inst., and re-nominated the present officers to serve another term. Several new members were taken up, the meeting then adjourned and the members spent a few pleasant hours at Davis' howling alley.

The Horticultural Association of Pennsylvania held its forty-first annual meeting in Old City Hall, Market street, on the 16th and 17th inst. The meetings were very interesting and well attended. They have a membership of over one hundred active members. The address of welcome was made by the Hon. Wm. Diehl, mayor of Pittsburg. The hall was prettily decorated with laurel wreathing, wild smilax, holly and groups of palms. The stage was banked also with palms. The exhibitors were as follows: Gustav and J. N. Ludwig, best display of cut flowers, furnished by M. W. Woodroffe & Co, Philadelphia, whose representative was M. J. Fisch, long stemmed Beauties, Brides, Bridesmaids, a fine bunch of Ethel Crocker carnations, besides a number of other varieties of carnations too numerous to mention. In this same exhibit were orchids, furnished and grown by John Murchie, of Sharon, Pa., also three vases of freesias, the finest ever grown, by Ernest Fischer, of Castle Shannon, Pa. E. C. Ludwig's display consisted of Meteors, Brides, Bridesmaids, mignonette and several varieties of fine carnations. He also had some table plants. L. I. Neff showed fine strains of Chinese primroses in pots, also Brides, Bridesmaids, narcissus and Roman hyacinths.

The Mrs. Thomas Lawson carnation was placed on exhibition but as it had suffered during shipment it did not make a creditable showing.

Decorative plants were exhibited by Randolph & McClements, who had a fine display of large palms grouped on the stage, besides one of small plants, such as crotons, dracænas, ferns, palms, etc. John Bader had a large group of palms, such as arecas, kentias, latanias, etc. Blaha & Foss showed two large groups of fine assorted palms. Vegetable and fruit exhibitors were G. H. Beckert and G. Robinson & Co., each having a fine display of all kinds of fruit and vegetables. Wm. Lowe had a basket of flowers made of different vegetables which was very much admired.

The exhibit of the Horticultural Fruit Growing Association, consisting of many varieties of apple and other fruits, was very tempting and much admired. Several cases of wild smilax, donated by the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co., and laurel wreathing and holly received from Thomas Ulam, greatly added to the decorations of the hall. G. O.

TRADE FAIR.—STOCK ABOUT EQUAL TO DEMAND.—ELABORATE WEDDING DECORATION.—BEAUTIES SCARCE.—VARIOUS ITEMS.

Trade the past week was all we could expect, considering the weather, and generally speaking the flowers are not what you could term A 1, still very good. Violets are looking up some and with a little sunshine all will be able to keep up to the demand. Carnations are at their best.

The Crosby-Barnheart wedding was the feature of the season. Crabb & Hunter used hundreds of palms about the house, and on the table a flat basket three feet in diameter made of Bride roses.

Hopp & Lemke, who decorated the church for this same wedding used mostly American Beauties. With all the flowers grown about Grand Rapids most of the Beauties had to be shipped from Chicago as they are here, as everywhere else, very scarce.

The new carnation, Irene, received a certificate at Cincinnati and scored as follows: Color, 21; size, 17⅓; calyx, 4⅓; stem, 19; substance, 8⅓; form, 10⅔; fragrance, 4⅓. Irene carnation will be shown at the Chicago Florist Club's special carnation meeting Friday, January 19, and will also be displayed at the Kreitling celebration, Saturday, January 20.

Grand Rapids growers and florists, like the rest of the world, are interested in all new flowers for we, like the rest, wish to keep up with the times.

GEO. F. CRABB.

Providence, R. I.

The January meeting of the Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Rhode Island was held on January 11. The newly elected officers were as follows: President, James Hockey; vice-president, Wm. Hill; secretary, Alex. Rennie; treasurer, F. Macrae. The committees appointed were: Essays and discussions, Wm. Appleton, Jr., James B. Canning and Lawrence Hay; investigation, R. W. Grum, I. Z. Dodge and J. F. Schillinger; entertainment, Wm. E. Chappell, T. J. Johnston and N. J. Pierce; awards on exhibits, M. Sweeney, W. S. Nichol and Alex. Millar.

After a short session the club adjourned to the rooms of the Providence Athletic Club where a real up-to date banquet was served. The tables were beautifully decorated with potted plants and cut flowers through the kindness of T. J. Johnston and N. J. Pierce.

After supper the usual weed was passed and when fumigation was well under way, President Hockey after a few well chosen words of welcome introduced ex-President Wm. E. Chappell as toastmaster for the evening, who in a humorous way introduced the speakers.

Toasts were drunk to the success of the club and sister organizations.

At 12 o'clock the annual banquet closed by all singing "Should old acquaintance be forgot." Every one went home with fond recollections of the best time the club ever had.

Before the meeting the members assembled at the store of T. J. Johnston, where Secretary Rennie was presented with an elegant combination desk. This was a wedding present from the members of the club. In a few well chosen words Mr. Rennie thanked the members for their beautiful token of esteem.

Funeral work has been no small item for the past month and white flowers are at a premium. LITTLE RHODY.

New Haven, Conn.

The cut flower business has been very good since the holidays, somewhat differing from former years, when as a rule it has been very quiet. Funeral orders were the greater part of the work done, with quite a number of teas and coming-out parties. Cut flowers of all varieties were never more plentiful than at present. Every one of the local growers are cutting more than they can use. Carnations are a drug on the market of the ordinary sorts, while fancy varieties bring good prices. Local florists are all looking forward to the Yale Junior Promenade, which takes place on the 23d of January. Violets are the flowers mostly used, and one florist disposed of 30,000 in two days at the last Promenade of 1899.

Charles A. Monroe, who for a time has been in the flower department of Ewen McIntyre, has severed his connection with them to open a floral establishment of his own on Chapel street near Temple street.

John N. Champion has been appointed vice-president of the Society of American Florists for the state of Connecticut and is to report at the convention next August in New York city.

Recent visitors: J. K. Beach and John Reck, Bridgeport, Conn; A. N. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn.; A. Herrmann, New York, A. MacHutchings representing August Rhotert, New York; Paul Berkowitz representing H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, Pa. G. H.

THERE are indications of a still further decline in prices on glass of from two and one-half to five per cent.

As we go to press the telegraph brings information of the death of Mrs. H. F. Michell, at Philadelphia, on January 19 after a brief illness. Mr. Michell has the sympathy of the trade.

WE are in receipt of calendars from Jno. D. Imlay, Zanesville, O.; H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, Pa.; Jerome B. Rice & Co., Cambridge, N. Y.; W. Atlee Burpee & Co. Philadelphia, Pa.

THOSE who are in the market for car load lots of greenhouse glass are obtaining very reasonable quotations, lower in fact than a year ago, but are experiencing much difficulty in securing assurances of delivery.

FRANK HAYES, of the H. M. Hooker Co., Chicago, who has just returned from a visit to Pittsburg, the seat of the industry, states that beginning with the middle of January the output of greenhouse glass will be the largest ever known.

Height of Water Tank.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—I am about to erect a water tank to supply 4,000 to 5,000 feet of glass, and want sufficient force to keep smilax and such stock clean. Will you kindly advise me as to the lowest practical height the bottom of tank should be above ground. J.

In syringing for the mealy bug and similar insects, a head of water of thirty-five or forty feet is desirable. This, of course, would be measured from the level of the water in the tank, and it can be arranged to have it nearly full when the syringing is to be done. The force of the water will be materially affected by the size and length of the connecting pipe and hose. When the distance to the tank is not more than 100 feet and the pipe leading to the house is 1¼-inch or larger, with 1-inch distributing pipes, a strong stream can be secured through a short length of ¾ or 1-inch hose, even though the head is somewhat less than recommended above, but while sixteen feet to the bottom of a tank with 12-foot staves will give fair results under favorable conditions, it will be better if twenty-five or thirty feet can be secured. English Conservatism.

In a general way we are compelled to bow our heads and admit the superior wisdom in all (but a few) things horticultural of the inhabitants of the little island which lies in between Ireland and the continent of Europe. We are constrained, however, to smile a little at their conservative point of view. For some years a discussion has been going on in their horticultural papers as to the advisability of exhibiting flowers on long stems in place of on boards, "not to abandon the board system, you know. Never! but just to try a few vases of long stemmed blooms for variety." Apparently with fear and trembling they have tried a few classes of chrysanthemums and carnations and, having found that the heavens did not fall, a few rash individuals are even now actually advocating the showing of roses on long stems. With characteristic caution, however, one of these advocates admits that it would waste a lot of good wood and says "Still further, because rose wood is so hard, it is just possible that flowers set up on long stems may not keep fresh in water." We will have to refer them to Walter Coles' nine-foot three-inch (?) American Beauties shown at the World's Fair flower show.

On a different subject, but apropos, is the following method of propagating coleus, gravely set forth in a half column in the Gardeners' Magazine. "Take each cutting about 4 inches in length with the lowest pair of leaves trimmed off. Insert these near the rim of three and one-half-inch pots, which are filled with compost of equal parts of loam, first cocoanut fiber and coarse silver sand, passed through a ¼-inch sieve. The pots must be thoroughly well drained and used in a clean dry state." They are to be put under hand glasses and if properly handled and shaded "there will be few if any failures," especially if they have been put in the pots firmly and "the base of each well banked up with compost." As Miss Bennett would say, "Wouldn't that jar one?"

Definitions and Deductions.

"Foresight, provident care of futurity; foreknowledge accompanied with prudence in guarding against evil."—Webster's Dictionary.

A perusal of the cut flower market reports of the recent holiday season and a comparison of the same with the story of similar annually recurring events in recent years, brings the conviction that nobody needs to cultivate the latter mentioned ingredient in the attribute above described more than the commercial bulb forcers of this country at present. With the AMERICAN FLORIST within the reach of every grower, foreknowledge based upon experience truthfully recorded is open to all and there would seem to be no rational excuse for failing to exercise that ordinary prudence commonly known as "horse sense" in conduct of a business which, while yielding a very narrow margin of profit at best, exists, nevertheless, under conditions of peculiarly easy control as to output.

It certainly looks like a singular perversity that leads a bulb forcer to put in, for Christmas, Roman hyacinths or any other bulbs in quantity several times greater than the recorded facts indicate the demand at that time can possibly take care of. If this persistency in bucking against the inevitable is not perversity of a very suicidal type, what line of reasoning does the grower follow in thus sacrificing material for which he has had to pay cost, freight and duty, throwing away his labor and coal and in addition to bringing disaster upon his own specialty, likewise injuriously affecting more or less every branch of the cut flower industry?

When at such times we see crate upon crate of white bulbous flowers disposed of for less than their cost value and quantities more going to the rubbish heap for lack of a buyer, when in the spring time the plant auction rooms are encumbered with rubbishy low-grade verbenas and such stuff that is most likely doomed to go toward filling up the docks, or, if sold at all, to bring a price barely covering cost of marketing, while other material such as bright-colored double geraniums from more prudent growers, sell readily at five to ten times the money, one is possessed of an almost irresistible impulse to seek out the foolish manipulators, and with a good grasp on their coat collar, shake them up to a realization of what everybody else but themselves can plainly see. They "have not time to read trade papers," but they have both time and means to waste in disregard of that foresight which to a business man means just the difference between prosperity and disaster. And "this is no dream."

TRADE PROSPECTS GOOD.—BATCHELORS' COTILLIONS.—DECORATIONS AT DIPLOMATIC DINNER.—MILES-REDER WEDDING DECORATIONS.—NOTES.

From the announcements of the receptions, teas and cotillions, some of the florists will have something to do between this and Lent. Roses, violets and carnations are fine and plentiful, and the good ones bring fair prices. Bulbous stock is abundant but not much in demand.

J. H. Small & Sons had the decoration for the first of a series of the Batchelors' cotillions which took place at the National Rifles' Armory, Tuesday, January 9, and was a pronounced success, both in attendance and decorations. The predominating color was red. The walls and ceiling were covered with southern smilax, the windows being covered with red draperies. In the space between the windows were boxwood wreaths four feet in diameter, tied with broad red ribbon. The stage was draped in red, over which was festooned southern smilax caught up with wreaths; at each end of the stage large palms were effectively grouped, and at the head of the steps leading to the stage, from which the buffet supper was served, were two fine specimens of Kentia Forsteriana. The balcony at the lower end of the hall, where the orchestra was stationed, was covered with red draperies and decorated with southern smilax and boxwood wreaths. The flower favors used were made of Meteor roses placed on pyramids at either side of the stage.

The first diplomatic reception at the white house January 10, was well attended. The decorations in the east room were similar to the decorations for the dinner of January 3, with the exception that cut flowers were used on the two mantles on the east side, which were banked with Roman hyacinths, Wm. Scott carnations, Golden Gate, Bride and Bridesmaid roses. The transom over the main entrance was decorated with palms, variegated pine apples, ferns and azaleas, the south mantles were banked with ferns, cyclamens, Erica persoluta alba and the north mantles with ferns, Erica persoluta alba and poinsettias. In the east window were three fine specimens of Kentia Forsteriana; among the crotons the following were extra fine colored, Lord Bellhaven, Dayspring, Andreanum Chrysophyllum Mortii, Reedii, Johannis. The ferns used, Adiantum 'Ballii and cuneatum, Davallia Mooreana, Nephrolepis davallioides furcans. The center of the room was left free.

J. L. Loose had the Miles-Reber wedding decorations. The church was decorated with palms and white roses in large bunches on high supports to represent standard plants in bloom. The house was handsomely decorated with smilax, palms and poinsettias. The bride carried cypripedium and lily of the valley. The bridesmaids, Bridesmaid rose.

The American Rose Co. are making a fine display in their window with Begonia semperflorens gigantea rosea, which they are using and blooming as a table decoration. The window was well filled with bunches and cornucopias, having around the sides a large centerpiece and horseshoe filled with Asparagus Sprengerii and begonia blooms. A week before Christmas they finished a large house 64x216 feet, to replace five houses destroyed by the storm late last summer and planted with 21,000 carnations, their white seedling "Luna," from the field, which are on a fair way for a good crop by Easter.

J. H. Small, the senior member of the firm of J. H. Small & Sons, recently suffered a severe stroke of apoplexy. His many friends will be pleased to learn that he has quite recovered again and is strolling about when the weather permits.

Heating Apparatus.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—I have a greenhouse 13x25 feet which I wish to heat by hot water, the heater to be placed in a cellar twenty-five feet from the greenhouse. What kind of heater would you advise using and how much will it cost, including proper piping, to put the same in operation? O. O.

Without knowing more regarding the size, height and construction of the house, and where it is located, it is not possible to give a definite answer, but if it is an ordinary even-span house, without glass in the side walls, it is probable that about 160 square feet of radiation will be required to maintain a temperature of 60° in zero weather. To supply this, and the amount necessary for the connecting pipes, a boiler should have a rating of at least 225 square feet, and a slightly larger size would be desirable.

The conical or base burning boilers made by several advertisers in this paper will answer well for a house of this size and can be purchased for about $75. Two and one-half-inch pipes will answer as the flow and return, and the required radiating surface in the house will be supplied by using 320 feet of 1½-inch, or 260 feet of 2-inch pipe. At the present prices the cost of heater, pipe, fittings and labor will not be less than $150.

WHERE?

There should be no question as to where to buy cut flowers. There are a dozen wholesalers in Chicago, but now that we're in our new quarters we don't take a back seat for any of them, neither on quantity or quality of stock handled, certainly not on quality. We've made a clean record this season; filled every order promised and most of the late orders by wire. If you are buying of us now we think we may expect you to stay with us; if you're buying elsewhere we should like a trial order.

THE NURSERY TRADE.

AM. ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.
W. J. PETERS Pres.; D. S. LAKE, Vice-Pres.; GEORGE C. SEAGER, Rochester, N. Y., Sec'y.

C. M. Hobbs, of Albertson & Hobbs, Bridgeport, has been re-elected president of the Indiana Horticultural Society.

GEORGE ELLWANGER, of Ellwanger & Barry, Rochester, recently celebrated the eighty-second anniversary of his birth.

STARK BROS. have a big force at work upon their new nursery seven miles south of Huntsville, Ala., and will be in shape for business there before many weeks.

H. S. TAYLOR & Co., Rochester, write: The opening of the new year finds more activity in the nursery business than ever before. Trade seems to be picking up in all quarters and there is evident prosperity from the way the orders come in and the manner in which various concerns are branching out.

THE act known as the Barlow bill, providing regulations for the importation of nursery stock, which failed of passage in the LVI. Congress, has been reintroduced by Congressman J. W. Wadsworth, of Geneseo, N. Y., at the request of C. L. Watrous, chairman of the committee on legislation of the American Association of Nurserymen. Col. Watrous will call his committee together at Washington late this month to urge its passage.

LYNN, MASS.—The Houghton Horticultural Society held its annual meeting on Monday evening, January 8. It took several ballots to settle the results as to officers, which were finally elected as follows: President, W. B. Allen; first vice-president, William Stone; secretary, R. S. Wood; treasurer, C. W. Emerson. The reports of the officers indicated a prosperous condition. The thirty-fifth anniversary of the society's founding was observed on Wednesday evening, January 10.

"Subject to Change Without Notice"

That is a line you see on every price list, also in every wholesale adv. This line, so simple, still with so much meaning, and with all it is like the weather man, a future forecast, for no dealer or grower of flowers can see to-morrow.

This subject is forced on us in a strange way. Last week Mr. Grant, of the Review, and Mr. Howard, of the Florist, and Mr. Sanders, of the Exchange, came to our store, as we suppose they go to all others, and asked our view of the week's trade just past and what we thought the price would be for the week to come.

Our answer was, see our adv. Now that goes to show what we thought at the time, and said so.

But so far as our guess was, it only lasted the remaiuing part of the week, and we did uot think at the time that the different papers did not appear to the reader till the end of the week; and unless Uncle Sam was prompt, some did not get their paper till Monday, and by Monday all had changed, for Saturday afternoon local trade got brisk and cleaned up the market and the dull weather made stock very scarce on short notice, and we, in this case, had to fall back on the opening line.

With these few remarks we want to say that this proves what we have ALWAYS CLAIMED, give the COUNTRY BUYER the CHICAGO MARKET PRICE at the time of shipment. It WE can't fill your order it is not to be had.

Yours Respectfully,

OUR PASTIMES

Announcements of coming contests or other events of interest to our bowling, shooting and cycling readers are solicited and will be given place in this column.

Address all correspondence for this department to Wm. J. Stewart, 67 Bromfield St., Boston, Mass.; Robt. Kift, 1725 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.; or to the American Florist Co., 324 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

DURING the recent congress of bowlers at Baltimore the secretary presented a report giving statistics which he had collected regarding bowling in the United States. He said that he had located east of Salt Lake and not including New York City 8,200 buildings used in the game making a total of 24,600 alleys valued at $6,150,000. The salaries paid amount to $600,000 and the investment in the plants $2,500,000.

At Chicago.

One evening last week a Florists' Club team went to Argyle Park to afford practice for a team which has won some fame captained by George Stollery. Here is the score:

STOLLERY'S BEAUTIES.				THE POSIES.
Players.	1st	2d	3d	Players.	1st	2d	3d
G. Stollery	178	190	160	Asmus	149	182	143

F. Stollery	129	153	147	Wintersom	131	157	128
H. Unger	174	174	168	Bulluff	142	158	115
M. Johnson	159	167	202	Coulson	195	166	176
Totals	800	816	828	Totals	783	801	747

At New York.

Last Monday evening found the usual party of jolly bowlers at the alleys, and scores were recorded as follows:

Player	1st.	2d	3d
Siebrecht	158	159	126
Bartholomæ	133	109	116
Burns	148	122	168
Tracedly	116	152	228
Lang	175	156	188
Hafner	125	137	115

Taylor		97
Donlan	127	99	128
Stewart		119
Luscher	114	137
Moody	119	150

At Philadelphia.

The balls and pins are flying at a great rate on the alleys of late, the interest turning to match games, of which there have been several during the past two weeks. The "seconds" have been defeated on the home alleys, an unpardonable offence, and by the same team on their alleys. They now feel, as one of them puts it, like "two cents." The "firsts" have done better, however, defeating one of the strongest teams in the city on the home alleys, but by a close margin, and then doing the trick again on their own play ground. It was a great victory as they, the "Young Mænnerchor" have only lost on their own alleys twice before since the club was organized ten years ago. The score follows:

FLORISTS.

Commercial Violet Culture

BY PROF. B. T. GALLOWAY,

Chief, Division of Vegetable Physiology and Pathology, U. S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

This work is thoroughly practical and discusses fully: Varieties and their Origin; Localities where the Crop is likely to Prove Profitable; Requirements for Success; Construction of Houses and Frames; Heating Houses and Frames; Soils and their Preparation; Manures and Fertilizers; Propagation, Selection, Planting, Watering, Cleaning and Feeding; Picking, Bunching and Marketing; Diseases and their Treatment; Insect Enemies and Methods of Combating them; Cost of Producing the Crop, Profits, etc.

Superbly illustrated with upward of 60 plates, plans, diagrams, etc., including Working Drawings of Model Violet Houses; Plans for Complete Heating Systems; Photographs Showing Methods of Handling Soil, Preparing the Beds, Bunching the Flowers, Packing for Shipment, etc. Numerous illustrations showing the characters of the more important diseases are also given. PRICE POSTPAID, $1 50. Bound in Flexible Covers of Royal Purple Cloth and Gold; 224 Pages; Small Octavo. Prospectus free.

BEST METHOD OF HEATING GREENHOUSES. A collection of thirteen leading essays, selected from a large number submitted in competition. Each essay is accompanied by diagrams illustrating the system advocated. Price Postpaid, 10c. New catalogue of trade books just issued.

For Sale by THE FLORISTS' EXCHANGE, 6 and 8 Duane St., New York.

ETHEL CROCKER

Absolutely the BEST PINK CARNATION ever offered the trade.

A fact fully borne out by its record, being equally good with Craig, Hill and myself (an assurance that it is not a success in one soil and a failure in another). By its having been shown at the flower shows and clubs since early in September (an assurance that it is not a good late carnation but an all season variety). In color, size, fragrance and stem it is just what the "storemen" want. In habit, constitution and freedom of bloom it is just what the grower wants. It produces more flowers to the square foot than any other known variety, and is never out of crop from September to July. With 18 000 stock plants to work from there is no danger of it being overpropagated, and all orders entrusted to me will be filled with cuttings selected from the plants and the order filled by myself, thus doubly assuring good stock. Honest sample blooms furnished, prepaid, at $1.00 per dozen—amount deducted from all orders for 100 or over. Up to date, every sample, excepting one, out of several hundred sent, has brought an order.

Price per 100, $10; per 25, $2.50; per 1000, $75; per 250, $18.75. HERR'S PANSIES, good little plants, at 75 cts. per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

Heacock's Specimen Palms.

How is your stock of Arecas; does it not need replenishing? I have to offer in assorted sizes the most perfect and symmetrical plants of

Areca Lutescens

Ever seen anywhere. They have never received a check from the seed pan to the present time, and are entirely free of insects or blemishes of any kind. The foliage presents that broad, heavy "Kentia like" appearance showing the vigor and strength of the plants. They are beautiful from all sides and from the pot up, having an abundance of lower leaves, there being at all times plenty of table room to encourage the bottom growth.

I offer the choice of this stock at the following prices:

15 inch pots,	7 to 8 feet high,	very bushy	= $25.00
14 "	6 " 7 "	" " "	= 20.00
12 "	bushy, 6 feet high	= =	$10 to $15.00
9 "	" 5 " "	= = =	5.00

This is my first offering of Arecas since last Spring. Great attention has been given to the stock so that it will stand well with the decorator. If you need palms at all you need some of this stock. Each plant is a decoration in itself. They are easily worth their cost, if only for the added attractiveness they will give to your store. The packing is done with the greatest care and shipping facilities with express and freight are such that orders can be forwarded with great promptness and dispatch.

TRADE THE SAME.—BUFFALO FLORISTS' CLUB MEETS.—VIOLETS, ROSES AND CARNATIONS.—VISITORS.

Trade remains about the same, enlivened by the occasional funeral order. Flowers quite plentiful especially violets, which are selling at all prices. Roses are still in fair supply. Pretty primrose plants at Scott's and Adams, are having a good sale. Palmer, Rebstock and Anderson are putting in very attractive windows.

W. J. Palmer, Sr., of Buffalo, and W. N. Rudd ,of Chicago, journeyed to New York Monday.

Harry Balsley has been with us again and will be here in February, where he will irrigate either the florists or their plants, possibly the latter.

W. C. Stroh, of Attica, is sending in some fine violets. C. T. Guenther, of Hamburgh, N. Y., our rose grower, is sending in some excellent maids, all are seen at W. F. Kastings. J. Bernhardt Wiese, of the Chippewa market, is having a big run on carnations at his stand.

Palmer & Son and The White Evans Penfold Co., who have space in their store, have issued a very artistic calendar of a poinsettia designed by D. B. Long. It is his best design so far.

ELM CITY

Seedling of Lizzie McGowan and Mme. Diaz Albertini in its fifth year. The flowers are large, fine shaped, and of strong fragrance. Petals are heavy, of good substance and nicely fringed. Calyx is very strong after the style of Mme. Albertini and none bursting, the stem strong, holding the flower erect. The plant is a good grower and free bloomer, not subject to stem rot or any disease. Rooted cuttings ready February 1 at $1.50 per Doz. $10.00 per Hundred. $70 00 per Thousand.

Cash with order. We shall prepay express charges where money accompanies the order. Orders filled in rotation.

M. E. KRAUS, 320 Davenport Avenue, NEW HAVEN, CONN.

Helpful Reminders.

Your hydrangeas should he on a bench in a cool house to start growth slowly, after which some of them may be moved into warmer quarters for Easter forcing if desired. Dormant stock should not be given heat until considerable foliage is developed, which, in turn, comes with the development of new roots.

The Crimson Rambler rose must be started along now to be ready for Easter. If you grew your plants in pots over summer, as has been recommended, bring them on slowly until the foliage is out and raise the temperature in February, when sunlight is more plentiful. If you wish to use field-grown stock there is not a moment to spare, because the roots are sure to be in a less satisfactory condition and require more time. Although I consider own-rooted plants best for garden planting, recent observations convince me that budded plants have the largest number of fiber roots and therefore will more readily start and maintain an early growth.

If you wish to grow your own stock of cyclamens for next winter, the seed should be sown now.

All stock plants of geraniums should have full light now to develop foliage for last cuttings, which should not be taken much later than February 1.

For general purposes a few pots of Spiræa Van Houtte and S. Anthony Waterer, Deutzia gracilis or D. Lemoinei are valuable. C. B. W.

GENEVIEVE LORD.

THE peer of any light pink Carnation ever offered to the trade. A commercial triumph. Its beautiful color, large size and its matchless length and stiffness of stem make it, beyond a doubt, the queen of its class. There is nothing like it. We offer it to the commercial grower as a money getter of the first magnitude.

As an exhibition flower, it ranks high. It will take care of itself in its class. It has carried off the highest honors wherever shown. The blooms are now being sold in the most critical market and bringing highest prices. It will not be over-propagated. Our book will close as soon as the limit is reached. Order early and be sure.

$75.00 per 1000, $10.00 per 100, $2.00 per doz. Delivery Feb. 15th.

POT-GROWN LILACS FOR FORCING.

We can still supply a fine lot of pot-grown Lilacs, bushy, well-budded dwarf plants. This is always good stock for the retailer to handle, either as cut blooms or to sell as pot plants. A night temperature of 60 to 70 degrees will develop their flowers in three weeks' time, and a continual supply of fine flowers can be had from now until Easter at but small expense and labor. The varieties we offer are,

Charles X.—Red, $6 per doz., $45 per 100.

Marie Legraye—White, $6 per doz., $45 per hundred.

Mme. Lemoine—Double white, $6 per doz., $45 per 100.

AZALEA MOLLIS.

This hardy Azalea is used extensively in all European cities for early forcing; they are great favorites on account of their varied and brilliant coloring.

We offer a fine lot of bushy plants, twelve to fifteen inches high, well covered with buds, at $6 per doz.

ACACIA ARMATA.

A pretty spring flowering variety which produces its flowers in globular heads from the axils of the foliage in such a manner as to completely envelop the plant in a pleasing light yellow; an excellent plant for Easter forcing, succeeding under the same culture as the Azalea; a nice lot of bushy plants, 12 to 15 in. high, 5 inch pots, 50c. each; $5 per doz.

The Lilacs and Azalea Mollis can be shipped by freight without injury in any kind of weather.

HENRY A. DREER,

714 Chestnut St. PHILADELPHIA, PA.

Pteris Deweyana.

A most desirable new fern, now offered for the first time by the raiser, J. H. Ley. It is a most distinct cross between P. Cretica Albo-lineata and P. serrulata. Habit dense and very dwarf; fertile fronds erect, smooth and narrow, barren fronds very bright and beautifully undulated; produced in quantity, never rusts; hard, and grows very freely from spores.

GREENHOUSE WOODWORK.

Open-air-dried Cypress Lumber is more durable, and better suited to Greenhouse conditions, than kiln-dried stock. But you cannot get it from those that are engaged in the business in a small way—even though their entire business is confined to greenhouse material—for it takes a long time for the lumber to thoroughly dry and this means an investment in lumber that only those of large capital can make. The only way to have air-dried lumber is to buy green lumber and hold it until it dries. Those that order dry lumber from the producers of Cypress get kiln-dried stock. It is cheaper for them to kiln-dry than to hold the stock long enough to season it in the open air. We carry a large stock and fill all orders with open-air-dried Cypress clear of knots, sap and all other defects.

Palm Notes.

After the holiday rush is over there is experienced in most trades a period of slack business, and this is quite apparent in many florists' establishments at about this time. There is, of course, the regular routine work to be attended to, flowers to be cut and packed, much care required in firing, watering, ventilation and the moving about of successive crops of forcing stock, but in spite of all this there is not quite the same rush and bustle that characterizes the weeks preceding Christmas.

And during this temporary lull is a good time to make preparation for the spring work and to take a general survey and make some plans for the stock of next fall. The palm department in particular (and this has become quite an important one) will bear some investigation at this time in order to know just how we stand and what the prospects are for the following season. This is a good time in which to get the stock thoroughly cleaned, an operation that should always be done before repotting, for newly potted palms often receive a check from being pulled about and loosened around the base by careless cleaning.

The choice of insecticides now offered is quite a wide one, and, if the circulars of the manufacturers may be accepted as proof, there should be but few insects in existence in our greenhouses, but it remains an unfortunate fact that even yet a sponge and a bucket of soapsuds often seem to be a necessary evil in the palm houses. Tobacco water used as a dip has some value, but its continued use not only makes the foliage look muddy, but in some instances, notably with Latania Borbonica and Livistona rotundifolia, permanent injury to the tips of the leaflets and also to the roots often results.

In the use of strong soapy solutions for dipping palms it has been found that the exclusion of light, or rather of sunshine, from the freshly dipped plants for from twenty-four to thirty-six hours will allow of the use of a much stronger solution without injury to the tender foliage. The best method to follow in such an operation is to give the plants a complete dipping, then shake off the surplus solution from the foliage and lay the plants on their sides on the bench, and immediately cover them over with sheets of common unbleached muslin, or if the plants are small they may be readily covered with newspapers.

The plants should remain thus covered for at least twenty-four hours, after which they should be dipped in clean water and set up again. By following this plan I have been enabled to use a solution of double the strength of soap without injury to the young leaves of Areca lutescens and the kentias, and at the same time made a corresponding increase in the mortality among the insects.

Repotting is almost at a standstill among the palms just now, the kentias being about the only species among the general stock that may be profitably shifted on at this season, unless it may be a few particularly pot-bound subjects, and even in the latter case they may be tided over until the spring potting by an occasional watering with liquid manure.

As to what will be most needed during the coming season, it may be said in a general way that perfectly grown plants of any ordinary species will be likely to command a ready sale, for there does not appear to be any great surplus of good stock, and the plant buying public, in our large cities at least, is yearly becoming a more discriminating body.

But it would not be wise on the part of a horticultural scribbler to prescribe the quantities and species required for the varied trade conditions of our country, this being a question to be decided in accordance with the past experience of each dealer, although it may be safely remarked in passing that kentias are always popular and seldom unsatisfactory to the purchaser, while latanias, arecas and Cocos Weddeliana still retain a goodly measure of favor.

In some localities and for certain purposes, especially for store decoration, Phœnix Canariensis has been more in use for two or three years past, this being perhaps the hardiest of the date palms, and soon forming a shapely plant; but the phœnix generally has not met with a very large sale here, though very enduring and beautiful when well grown.

If one could raise rhapis from seeds readily and grow them on rapidly, there would doubtless be an assured future for these palms, there being few if any kinds that have tougher foliage than the rhapis, or that are better adapted for draughty and unfavorable locations. There are also customers who desire a large mass of foliage rather than a single symmetrical specimen, and for this class a few of the combination plants will be found attractive.

And these combination plants also utilize some rather indifferent stock that may be grouped together in a pot in such a manner as to hide the sparseness of the individual plants, these groups not being confined in all cases to one species, but sometimes including individuals of two species tastefully arranged together.

Begonia Gloire de Lorraine.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—You would confer a favor on several subscribers by requesting Mr. Lonsdale—or some other successful grower—to tell how he treated Begonia Gloire de Lorraine to obtain the results about which we have read so much recently. I and some neighbors have had the plant two years but have not been able to do much with it.

BUCKEYE.

Replying to inquiry by "Buckeye," we also had some trouble during the two years prior to the last one in the growing of Gloire de Lorraine. More than one cause may be at the bottom of our last year's success. In addition to knowing more about the treatment best suited to its requirements, I believe it is becoming acclimated. One of its necessities is a warm and comparatively dry atmosphere. I have plants in my own house which have been there since Thanksgiving Day, and they are very nearly as good to-day as they were the day they were taken in. Nearly all of the begonias are excellent house plants, and this new one is no exception to the general rule. They do not require much moisture on their leaves.

The cause of some failures may be on account of the watering being done carelessly with a hose. A night temperature of from 65° to 70° is about right, and although I feel satisfied they do not like a moist, stuffy atmosphere, they should never be allowed to suffer for want of water at the root. The sport from Gloire de Lorraine, which has very delicate pink flowers, is also a more compact grower, and the foliage is also more robust than is the parent. In the European horticultural journals it has been announced that in Scotland a variety with white flowers has been secured.

"W. S.," in a contemporary, said December 28: "There are plenty of people who rebel at its purplish pink flowers," meaning the coloring of the original Gloire de Lorraine. John Welsh Young criticised it also for the same reason when he first saw it in bloom here. But there are lots of people who prefer the darker color. One celebrity, when he saw the two varieties together at the chrysanthemum show held in Philadelphia last November, said: "You can't have a pink too pink." Here follows an unsolicited letter received December 26, 1899, by the writer of these notes from Pennock Bros., Philadelphia, which is interesting:

"We wish to tell you how much we are pleased with the sport from Begonia Gloire de Lorraine having delicate pink flowers which you sold us. It is of value not only for the exquisite color and largeness of its flowers; but what is of even more importance than these qualifications to the retailer is its lasting qualities. In decorating our window last week, two of these plants were put in amongst a number of "Lorraines," and while the "Lorraines" lost some of their flowers, the sport is to-day in as good shape as when put in, and in decorating again yesterday they were used. Our customers seemed to like it, for they were the first to sell, and had we known these two were in the window, they could have been sold many times over. Thinking you would be interested in knowing how well it has done with us." etc.

This is a case where Dame Nature was not satisfied to change the color alone of the flower of a variety, but has given the plant a more robust constitution, presumably so that it will better withstand the vicissitudes of plant life after it leaves its own greenhouse home. I believe watering too heavily over the foliage is the cause of much of the trouble with florists who have hitherto failed in successfully growing this gem among flowering plants for the winter season.

CARNATIONS.

CARNATIONS REGISTERED.

The following varieties have been registered with the American Carnation Society by Thomas Greaves, Montello, Mass.:

The Crawford, in color variegated, red and white, a sport from McGowan; has been growing four years and keeps getting better every year; a fine clean grower, blooming all the season through.

The Copley a rich cerise and a sport from the Crawford, grown two years and has proven a splendid grower, being more robust than the Crawford.

THE SELECTION OF VARIETIES.

When it comes to a selection of varieties for next season we are facing a difficult proposition for the reason that we are not all near enough to New York, Chicago, Philadelphia or St. Louis to get a paying price for fancy stock. Consequently we must try to get such varieties as combine freedom of bloom with not lower than a medium quality flower. There are enough such varieties to make a nice list, but not all of them will do well in every soil. There are any number of instances of this.

Genesee, in this section, actually did not produce enough flowers to pay for the time required to bring it from the field and was such an utter failure that I have never even recommended it to a grower for trial, but about a week ago I received a letter from a firm in West Virginia which grows as good carnations as are grown in the United States and they consider Genesee as just the thing for a medium grade white. Possibly Genesee did not like our limestone soil and probably when the cuttings were sent out we happened to get some that were taken from blind branches; their behavior would lead one to that conclusion.

Another instance is where W. P. Craig, in a recent issue of the AMERICAN FLORIST says "Leslie Paul won't trot." My experience with this variety is that it will not only trot but that it will trot in fast company. I have one house of it that came too late for the holidays and another that produced as many flowers as any one could ask, so that there seems to be a difference in the trotting according to the driving. I am not prepared to say that the early crop can be made a feature of the variety, but I fully believe that it can.

Mayor Pingree is a variety which is being dropped from the lists of most growers, and yet I can, with a little care, get as many high grade blooms from this sort as from some more common kinds. The fate of this variety emphasizes the fact that if the retail men want to have a supply of fancy carnations they will eventually have to make some arrangements with the producers to grow them specially and in a manner that will leave a fair margin of profit for both.

The carnation has the brightest of futures before it, and if the retailers will give us growers a helping hand to increase the quality of our cut and decrease the quantity, there can be no question as to where the flower will stand with the buyers. Estimate carefully what a high quality of flower can be produced for and make an offer to the retail men you supply; then grow as many of these fancy grades as you can dispose of, instead of filling all your houses with stock selected alone for the quantity of flowers it will produce.

Where contracts of this kind cannot be made it is not policy to take up much room with fancy sorts and the grower will have to select such varieties as will produce enough flowers to make them a paying crop at low grade figures. It will pay to grow a few fancy sorts, even at a loss, as an educator for the buyers of cut flowers, and thus gradually but surely work up a market for the high grade stock. In making your selection of sorts it is well to have one good white, one good pink, a good scarlet and two or three of different shades, and there is no place in the country where these selections can be better made than in Buffalo, February 15 and 16, as all the good flowers and most of the growers will be there, so that you can see both the flower and the grower and get from them a fair idea as to the merits of the variety.

ALBERT M. HERR.

BEGONIA GLOIRE DE LORRAINE. LARGE PLANT A YEAR OLD, SMALL ONE TWO MONTHS.

Erica Culture.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—Please let me know through the columns of your paper how to treat ericas—good plants in 5-inch, 6-inch and 10-inch pots—which so far have given only a few scattering blooms and are now starting to grow.

A SUBSCRIBER.

In the first place I am somewhat in the dark, as "A Subscriber" does not mention whether it is hard-wooded or soft-wooded ericas he wishes to get information upon but I will take it for granted that they are soft-wooded varieties, such as Erica Caffra, E. hyemalis, E. hybrida, E. gracilis, E. persoluta and E. Wilmoreana. All these are soft-wooded kinds and tree growers and bloomers. So we will suppose "A Subscriber" has some of the above-mentioned varieties, good plants in pots, healthy and started into growth and have given but few scattered blooms. There are two causes which would bring about this result. In the first the plants may have been grown in too much shade and moisture and a high temperature, the wood not being ripened by exposure to good light, sun and dry air during July, August and September. Secondly, and it may be the case of "A Subscriber," the plants may have been well grown and well ripened, but when housed in October were not given enough air. The ventilators should be open day and night when ericas are first housed. Moisture and warmth will cause the tops of the shoots to continue growing and the flower buds which have been set will become blind. The whole plant will start into growth again and few blooms will open or mature.

How to treat plants in the stage of "A Subscriber's" and get them into good condition for next holiday season—December 1900—would be to keep them in a house with a temperature of 40° to 45° until March 1 and then cut them back to within one inch of last year's growth. When they have grown out again three to four inches, pot them, if the present pots are well filled with roots, and keep them growing under glass at a temperature of 50° to 60° until June 1, when they can be placed outside in a light, airy place. The pots should be plunged in ashes and stood upon ashes with moss placed between to keep the air and sun from drying out the roots. Ericas should never be allowed to get dry. In potting the center of the ball should be placed to stand one inch higher than the new soil, keeping sufficient depth between the old ball and the edge of the pot to hold water. This will prevent the crown root from injury by over-watering. All ericas require good free drainage, and peat soil with a good sprinkling of sand suits them. Ericas require an abundance of dry air and as little artificial heat as possible, and will, when ripened, come into bloom at 45° beautifully. When the plants are growing in the spring and early summer they will stand more moisture, but should not remain damp. A free circulation should be kept up or the foliage will mildew and rot, destroying the plant.

Ericas imported in September or October will be damaged if kept very close in transit; but many cases I have seen where good plants have been grown and received sound and they have been ruined by placing them in a moist atmosphere to rush them into bloom; they will not stand this treatment. If the flowers are well formed and on the way to open they will be useless, having no color or substance.

JOHN G. GARDNER.

Lord & Johnson's Boiler Explosion.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—Being unable to concur with your correspondents, Lord & Johnson, as to the cause of the boiler explosion, described on page 680 of your issue of January 6, on the evidence therein submitted, I would respectfully ask them to advise us as to which valve was opened, the main flow or the main return, also as to the nature of the air cock in use, and if automatic, if they are usually prompt in action? If they will kindly state these facts and also either by sketch or otherwise describe the flow and return connections, showing relative levels and positions of valves and style or make of boiler, etc., it may enable myself or others to reach an opinion as to the actual cause of the trouble mentioned.

HENRY W. GIBBONS.

I have read the comments of Lord & Johnson, of Owatonna, Minn., on their boiler explosion, with considerable surprise. I think they must be mistaken as to the amount of steam or the steam gauge must have been wrong. It would be impossible to blow up a boiler with only one pound of steam. If all the valves were wide open at once one pound of steam simply would not pull any water out of the boiler; it would not produce vacuum enough. We do know, however, from experience that twenty or fifty pounds would draw the water out if the valves were suddenly opened up full, and some of the pipes and fittings would be apt to break from sudden expansion. I always caution my firemen when turning on steam from a banked boiler, or one with much pressure on it, to open the main valve very slowly until everything warms up. J.

Referring to the Lord & Johnson explosion, after careful reading and much reflection I consider it a very singular case. What I would like to know is the correct cause for it, as I firmly believe that given is a mistake. I have my own opinion and if some one knows better would be pleased to be corrected. I do not believe that steam under less than one pound pressure would carry the boiler water away while issuing through a partly open valve as is given in the article; but I do think that inasmuch as the steam was shut off both at return and flow ends while under pressure, the pipes produced a perfect vacuum owing to condensation of steam following and no air entering. This would cause the contents of boiler to rush forward at the slightest opening of valve, and I do not think more pressure would prevent it. However, I have run steam plants and see no necessity for shutting of valves as outlined, as the checking of fire in boiler will effectively stop the heat; I would not shut either flow or return main, but allow the steam to die down and air to fill coils; upon return of steam the air would have to be expelled gradually, and no ill results could follow. While the manipulation of valves as given is certainly unnecessary in a steam system, it may prove dangerous under certain circumstances as experienced. It would certainly be funny to expect of a greenhouse man to prevent steam entering pipes until fifteen pounds of pressure has been reached where very often the entire heating is done with less than two pounds of steam. There is another method for causing the same accident, and that is in attempting to regulate heat by flow valves alone as is done in hot water heating sometimes. This under some circumstances will fill the coils with condensation water, as the pressure through reduced valve is insufficient to return water against boiler pressure; yet the steam goes through and condenses, and seriously lowers water in boiler. When the heat given off becomes insufficient, the valves are opened more, the pressure being equalized, the water in coils will rush to boiler, which may be red hot at places, causing damage. This is an important subject to some of us, and a little science in heating from some expert would be welcome. F. WINDMILLER.

The Wieland-Risch Floral Company.

The Weiland-Risch Floral Company, of Evanston, Ill., is one of the new concerns which have stepped to the front, refusing to permit their seniors to occupy the public eye to the exclusion of the young and energetic element which is just now playing so prominent a part in the trade. The more remarkable is the pace of this firm because neither of its members has as yet attained his twenty-sixth year.

It is probably true that these two young men own and operate more glass than any one of their ages in the country. John P. Weiland is the partner charged with the growing and also with the maintenance of the establishment. He was for several years foreman at M. Weiland's place at Evanston and in that capacity established a reputation as a grower of high grade stock. John P. Risch has charge of the office and sales department, and the extent of the general shipping business transacted is an evidence of his ability and thorough acquaintance with the conditions which prevail in this trade.

The range of glass here illustrated, 50,000 square feet, was erected last spring at a cost sufficient to cover all the latest improvements and to secure the highest grade of workmanship. The heating medium is hot water under pressure and two of Kroeschell's largest boilers are operated. The cypress for the range came from the John C. Moninger Co. and the Evans Challenge Ventilator was installed. The first year of the firm's existence has proven so profitable that recently additional land was purchased, upon which a second range of houses will soon be built.

Carnations and roses are the principal items with the Weiland-Risch Company and in carnations the list of varieties is thoroughly up-to-date. The sorts here are G. H. Crane, America, Melba, Gen. Maceo, Gen. Gomez, Glacier, White Cloud, Mary Wood, Mrs. Joost, Mrs. Bradt, Gold Nugget, Gov. Griggs and Mrs. Jas. Dean. Besides this there are several seedlings of excellent promise and some very fine blooms are now being cut. In roses they are growing Beauty, Golden Gate, Kaiserin, Bride and Bridesmaid. Next year the Mrs. Lawson carnation and Liberty rose will be grown extensively.

FLOWERS FOR THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.—STATE OF THE MARKET.—ROSES OFF CROP.—RETAILERS ACTIVE.—THE ENTERTAINMENTS ON LONG ISLAND.—DAILLEDOUZE AND WARD HAVE FINE STOCK.—BROOKLYN IN EVIDENCE.—JOTTINGS.

Haste to get an account of the affair into last week's paper made it impracticable to mention in detail the list of donors of floral decorations for the table at the banquet of the New York Florists' Club. Where the gift represents some novelty being introduced by the donor a good advertising reason may be seen for the act but in other cases the contributions represent pure generosity and the various parties who responded so liberally with the rarest and best of their valuable product are entitled to the fullest recognition and gratitude. The table was resplendent with vases of choice flowers and potted plants. The work of arranging was intrusted to Wm. I. Brown, who displayed fine taste in its carrying out. Among the contributions were Liberty rose from Ernst Asmus, carnations No. 666 and J. Whitcomb Riley from Dailledouze Bros., carnations from J. H. Taylor, lilacs from C. W. Ward, anthuriums and oncidiums from Siebrecht & Son, Asparagus Sprengerii from W. H. Siebrecht, Bignonia venusta from Paul Gindra, mignonette from Robt. McMillan, carnation Olympia and mignonette from J. N. May, mignonette from C. H. Allen, carnations and smilax from J. G. & A. Esler, cypripediums, cattleyas and asparagus from A. Herrington, mignonette from Rudolph Asmus, cypripediums and asparagus from W. A. Manda, cattleyas from Lager & Hurrell, heaths and azaleas from A. Schultheis, galax and leucothoe leaves from H. A. Bunyard and smilax from John Young.

The past week finished as it began, so far as cut flower business was concerned. The crop of Brides and Bridesmaids being generally off, a good stiffening up in this single item was experienced, which has continued over into the present week. There is an abundance of everything else, violets especially coming in by the million and prices far below the average for this date. In general, there appears to be more activity among the retailers, with prospects that, once well started, it will continue without serious interruption until Lent sets in. To make up for the three weeks of dullness in the early part of the month is, however, a very difficult thing.

As mentioned briefly in our issue of last week, the executive committee of the S. A. F. together with the officers of the New York Florists' Club were entertained at dinner by Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Ward at Cottage Gardens, Queens. After a survey of the contents of the splendid carnation and geranium houses the guests repaired to Mr. Ward's residence, where a most elaborate dinner awaited them. The menus were all hand work, each adorned with a handsome carnation flower in water colors. One of the choicest blooms was laid at each plate and vases of handsome seedlings decked the tables. It was an occasion long to be remembered by the participants and an appreciative vote of thanks was passed by the visitors before saying good bye to their hosts. Early in the day a visit was made to the carnation houses of Dailledouze Bros., at Flatbush, and many expressions of delight were heard from those who for the first time saw the wonderful productions of this famous establishment. In the evening, after leaving Mr. Ward's, several of the party returned to Flatbush and enjoyed a game with the local club on the bowling alleys.

Heard at the Florists' Club dinner: "Chicago is pre-eminent in Indians that can make more noise than any other body of men on earth."—Rudd. "Read history if you want to talk with me."—Carmody. "This is a warlike age."—Duke of York.

Brooklyn's existence floriculturally is not likely to be overlooked so long as she can send two such representatives as Messrs. Mallon and Wier to illumine daily the precincts of Twenty-eighth, Twenty-ninth and Thirtieth streets. Just now they are endeavoring to agree upon some common ground as to the maximum limit of special discounts on funeral design orders secured through political influence.

John H. Taylor says that when studying at the Bussey Institution under Jackson Dawson upwards of twenty years ago, he obtained from seed fertilized there a carnation of the size and type of G. H. Crane but it was discarded because too tall and too slow to develop. That class of carnations would not pay to grow commercially in 1880.

The various sub-committees of the Florists' Club in charge of different departments of preparatory convention work, met at the club-rooms on Monday evening and completed their organization.

STATE OF THE MARKET.—GOOD TRADE AND APRIL WEATHER.—STOCK PLENTIFUL EXCEPT ROSES.—VISITORS OF NOTE.—MUSHROOMS FOR FLORISTS.—THE QUESTION OF FUEL.

Very likely February has something severe in store for us but just now there is plenty of sun and overcoats to spare. The rose crops are still a little off. There is a good demand for choice Brides and Bridemaids at from $8 to $10, and it takes quite a hustle to get enough to fill orders. Beauties seem to be in quantity to meet the demand; the quality is good in all the grades and prices range from $1 for shorts to $6 per dozen for the four-foot stems. Carnations are fine and plentiful at from $1 to $2, the fancies bringing $4 to $6. Triumph shows up well, its beautiful shade of pink and its full fringed flower making it quite a favorite. Growers say it is a continuous bloomer so that it bids fair to become a standard sort. White Cloud with some growers is doing fine; Messrs. Craig & Son and Joseph Heacock are sending in some grand flowers of this variety. Violets, particularly the single sorts, are now at their best. Princess of Wales and California are particularly fine; the flowers are large and the color that rich dark shade so much admired. Just a few double daffodils are making their appearance and in a week or so the market will no doubt be overstocked, as it generally is after the crops get started. Romans are still moving slowly. Lily of the valley is in better demand and is fairly well cleared up every day, at from $3 to $4.

Wednesday was "Ladies' Night" at the club and there was a goodly attendance of the wives, daughters and sweethearts of the members. There was some good singing and Mr. Westcott's famous punch, served "with or without," was pronounced delicious. The contests on the shuffle boards and bowling alleys were hugely enjoyed. At bowling the prizes were won by Mrs. Thompson, Mrs. Stoer and Miss Kennedy. At shuffle board the prizes went to Miss Edna Craig, Mrs. John Habermehl and Mrs. Rannear. Messrs. Green and Stoneham bowled a three ball match won by the latter, who was presented with a bottle of Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup amid great laughter. During the evening President Wm. K. Harris read the following original poem:

A WOMAN'S KISS.

When life began, with all its aches and pain—
When misery seemed to wreck the infant brain—
What eased our torture, with that earthly bliss
That lulls to sleep? It was a mother's kiss.

Our early years, they seem to pass too slow,
Yet out of every act some sport would grow;
But youth, with all its joys, longs for that bliss
That can only come through a sweetheart's kiss.

Pass on to sterner years of riper thought,
Wisdom dearly gained by youthful follies bought,
Teaches man that wedlock is his truest bliss,
When he returns his wife her evening kiss.

In this struggle in life for wealth to gain,
The setting sun may close each day in pain.
But the gloom of the day will melt in bliss
When tender fruits of wedlock plants a kiss.

There's "Bachelor Bearn" in his lonely retreat—
He never hears the tread of dear little feet;
He knows not the taste of Heaven's choicest bliss
Sent by God to man through a woman's kiss.

The city was graced on Friday last by the presence of W. N. Rudd, of Chicago; Messrs. Cowell and Palmer, of Buffalo, and J. D. Carmody, of Hoosier fame. They visited the Deacon and the Duke and also inspected the Craig carnation establishment, where so many of the new kinds make their bow to this city, and also paid a visit to the stores and commission houses.

Mushrooms as a side issue is an idea that commands the attention of some of the growers hereabouts. George C. Watson's paper, recently published, is being much discussed for the fact that two pounds per square foot can be raised during the life of a bed is news to many people. Mr. Watson says that this statement is no exaggeration, as a grower told him recently that he expected to get two and one-half pounds per foot from a bed now in bearing. The market price of mushrooms is now 35 cents per pound in this city and at this price they are fairly profitable, particularly when raised in a house with another crop.

The fuel most economical for the grower is a much discussed and always alive topic. It would seem that in a matter of such importance there should not be such a diversity of opinion, as for the different systems of heating, steam and hot water, there should be certain sizes of coal which, from experience and results obtained, should be without doubt the best and most economical. Some few years ago coke was used extensively in this city, but a rise in the price turned the growers to coal and the problem now is, which is the most economical kind, hard or soft, and if hard which size will give the best results, broken, egg, nut, pea or buckwheat?

Mr. Troy, of the Rosary Flower Co., of New York, was a recent visitor. K.

GREAT IMPROVEMENT IN TRADE.—HEAVY CUT IN ALL LINES.—NO ADVANCE IN PRICES.—EWELL HAS FINE BULBOUS STOCK.—A LECTURE AND OTHER ITEMS.

A marked improvement is noticeable all along the line in the cut flower trade. This is in accord with experience in past seasons, when invariably a strong current of business has set in about the middle of January, following the two weeks of inactivity that succeed the holiday rush. The full effect of the present awakening is not shown, however, in the market price reports because of the mild, April-like weather that prevails generally and is keeping the plants busily blooming in every greenhouse, big or little, all over this section of the country. With the severe winter conditions ordinarily prevailing at this season the rural establishments would be at a standstill and the demand would revert to the wholesale houses of Boston. This time the country demand is light and the growers for the city markets have the clerk of the weather to blame if their returns are not up to past records. Roses are showing the most activity at present and fairly good quality flowers of all the standard varieties are going as fast as received. Carnations are moving more slowly, as the crop at present is very heavy.

Bulbous stock begins to assert itself. Warren Ewell, who is the mainstay of this market on such material, is experiencing a lively demand for daffodils, tulips and such things and is bringing in some splendid Kaiser Kroon tulips. Von Sion narcissi are equally good and the demand for them is excellent.

O. B. Hadwen, of Worcester, delivered a very entertaining and instructive lecture at Horticultural Hall, last Saturday on ornamental tree planting. Mr. Hadwen has a record of over half a century of observation and practical interest in his subject and his lecture was full of good advice.

The Boston Globe published an article on the flower vendors of the city last Sunday which was illustrated with characteristic drawings and was chiefly interesting to the wholesale fraternity from the fact that it located the source of supply of the street gamins at the Park street market. Explanations and delicate compliments have been in order ever since.

The Market Gardeners' Association held their regular meeting at Rawson's greenhouses last Saturday. They had a good time. Mr. Rawson, being now a florist as well as market gardener, will extend similar courtesies to his colleagues in the flower trade at a later date.

John Smith, formerly with Doyle, has taken the place of John Walsh in M. J. Killion's store at Forest Hills, Mr. Walsh being obliged to resign on account of ill health.

President E. M. Wood has gone south on a short yatching trip.

STATE OF THE MARKET.—ROSES STILL VERY SCARCE.—BULBOUS STOCK TO SPARE.—SPEAKERS AT THE CLUB.—THE KREITLING CELEBRATION.—CARNATION CHICAGO IN FAVOR.—GARLAND'S GUTTER SELLING WELL.—LOCAL JOTTINGS HERE AND THERE.

During the week roses have been in very short supply and prices have stiffened quite a little. Of other lines there is an adequate supply, including carnations, violets, Romans, narcissi, lily of the valley, callas and Harrisii, to meet all demands. Business is good, particularly shipping trade, and the call for funeral flowers is very large. It is said that out of town orders are more numerous than at any time since the holidays. Qualities are not quite what they should be as a rule because of the sudden changes in the weather, but there are some splendid carnations and a few superlative Beauties in sight.

Following last week's successful exhibition the Florists' Club held a well attended meeting devoted to the discussion of the exhibits and the carnation as a factor in the trade. Among those who held the floor were E. G. Hill, Geo. F. Crabb, Fred. Dorner, Jr., E. E. Pieser, W. S. Heffron, F. F. Benthey, J. G. Hancock, Anton Then, Edgar Sanders, the Collins brothers, Phil. Hauswirth, President Hartshorne and others.

Some of the growers are having troubles with their lilies. It is claimed by several that they bought Harrisii and got longiflorums. One man has about 4,000 bulbs 5-7 under way and is getting hardly more than one flower to a bulb. The Harrisii disease does not seem to be unusually prevalent this season.

Carnation Chicago (Red Bradt) was the only flower used last week at the West Chicago Club House ball and reception of the Schnitzelbank Athletic Club. It was worn by members and guests and considered by them superior to all other flowers, even American Beauties.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Kreitling had the assistance of very many friends at the celebration of the fifteenth anniversary of their marriage last Saturday night, and to those who know the estimable couple further comment upon the felicities of the occasion is unnecessary.

The establishments of Bassett & Washburn, Emil Buettner, P. S. Peterson and the Reinbergs are given illustrated notices in recent issues of Moller's Deutsche Gartner-Zeitung, published at Erfurt, Germany.

John Mangel has become entangled with the state factory inspector through employing a boy under age, a matter on which every one should be careful as a violation of the law means a fine eventually.

F. W. Taylor, of the Pan-American Exposition, was in town this week and reports that good progress is being made in all departments of Buffalo's big show.

Weitor Bros. will use Garland's iron gutter in their entire new range, believing it to be an economizer of space and a saving in cost of construction.

At Washington Park they have a particularly fine display of azaleas, plants carried over from previous seasons. The primroses, too, are good.

T. J. Corbrey is afflicted with his old trouble, having been ill since the holidays, and intends to strike out for the coast again about March 1.

John Porte, formerly with Mr. Kanst at Washington Park, has been appointed landscape gardener for the Illinois Central railroad.

McKellar & Winterson have made arrangements to handle Jacob Rusler's new carnation, Pink Beauty.

The plantsmen say that there is an unprecedented and unexpected demand for rose cuttings.

Local demand for Crane carnations is said by some to be greater than the supply in sight.

J. B. Deamud recently received from Vermont a large shipment of very fine hardy ferns.

The first lilacs have made their appearance at Hunt's.

WATERTOWN, N. Y.—Greene & Underhill have opened a branch store at Gouverneur, with Harry Rogers in charge.

KANKAKEE, ILL.—Chas. Schafer, of Chicago, has purchased three and one-half acres of land east of the water works, consideration $1500, and will erect greenhouses.

SOME NOVELTIES OF THE PAST YEAR.—SEEDLING POINSETTIAS.—NEW CHRYSANTHEMUMS TOO NUMEROUS.—POOR HOLIDAY TRADE IN PLANTS.—MANY NEW ORCHIDS.—THE SWEET PEA CONFERENCE.—WM. ROBINSON.—INSECTICIDE LAWS.

During the past year a large number of plants received attention at the hands of the floral committee of the Royal Horticultural Society and perhaps none will be looked after with greater interest than the white sport of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine. It is hardly white enough to suit some critics, but it is sure to have a great future and may improve in further culture, as has been the case with its parent. This has been seen in better form than ever and is a universal favorite. Mrs. Leopold de Rothschild is another sport for which the R. H. S. awarded a certificate; the flowers are larger than those of the parent and of a brighter hue. I may also mention Begonia Moonlight, a variety raised some twenty years ago and nearly lost to cultivation. Grown as a companion to the above it is equally valuable. The flowers are creamy white, shown up well on dark marbled foliage. With good culture it makes a grand plant, but as in the case of Lorraine it is not all who succeed with it. One great secret is to get good short cuttings with a number of eyes at the base; they should be taken off close to the old stem.

Growers of poinsettias should see that they get the best variety. Seedlings have been raised from time to time, and though few have received distinctive names there is a wide difference both in the growth and color of the bracts. The variety which has been exhibited by Messrs. Cripps & Sons the last two seasons is the best I know, the bracts being broad and rich in color. If it had been offered under a new name it would have made a lot of money for the owners.

New chrysanthemums are much too numerous to mention. Exhibition growers, of course, try them all; but to those who do not follow them so closely and grow only for the cut flower trade I think Lord Ludlow will prove useful, and I shall be surprised if Matthew Hodgson does not remain a standard variety. The trade in blooms of these ever popular plants seems to have been better than usual the past season, that is, for those who were fortunate enough to have had a good stock; but the excessive drought was very disastrous to those who could not command a good supply of water.

Owing to severe weather, and the trade being generally dull on account of the war and from other causes, pot plant growers have found the past Christmas one of the dullest on record. Throughout the autumn there had been a considerable drop, and then the frost coming just as things might brighten up a little, it made a very bad finish to an unusually slack season.

Although we have lost several of our most enthusiastic growers of orchids, there seems to be no abatement in the popularity of these beautiful flowers and anything new, either garden variety or importation, commands a high price. Numerous garden hybrids have been added, the last I note being an unusually large cypripedium.

The projected sweet pea conference is bringing forth a good many comments. I could understand having a special exhibition of these popular flowers to give the public a chance of selecting their own particular shades of color, etc., but my idea of a conference is to settle various distinctions which can be definitely perpetuated, and this cannot be the case with annuals which, though they may be kept true to some extent by careful selection, and even improved from year to year, there can be no such thing as a definite registration of varieties.

The first number of the Garden, under the new proprietorship, shows some change in style, and the letterpress and illustrations are all that can be desired; but having been so long associated with it in the past it seems like losing old and pleasant friends. However, we hope that the new friends we have to make may prove as pleasant as those we lose. I think the whole gardening fraternity owe Wm. Robinson, the founder, a debt of gratitude for what he has done in garden literature. He not only founded one of the best garden papers, but by his persistent attacks on various matters which needed reform, he brought his contemporaries to a better realization of their duty.

To those who use insecticides and fumigants, some inconvenience will be caused by the action of the Pharmaceutical Society, which has obtained a verdict that it is against the law for any one except certified chemists to sell such wares. Manufacturers are, of course, chemists and they can supply direct; but for those who only require small quantities it is more convenient to obtain supplies of local sundriesmen, and it has become such a general thing for nurserymen and seedsmen to supply this material with other goods that some hardships will be felt. Being purely a technical offense, we hope the law will soon be amended.

I do not think any gardener would be likely to use these as a means to bring about his own end, except by accident; and any restrictions bearing upon the dealers from whom they may be purchased would certainly not minimize this risk, for at the present time very full instructions are given as to the danger of leaving them exposed to those who do not understand their properties. Insect life has become so troublesome that any delay in procuring the necessary means of eradication may prove very disastrous. H.

SEEN AT A GOOD GROWER'S.—FRASER DOES MANY THINGS WELL.—THE CLUB MEETING.—FLOWER SHOW MATTERS SETTLED.—A CARNATION EXHIBITION PLANNED.

One of the places to see American Beauties grown to perfection is at the Ruxton Floral Co.'s old place, now owned by Wm. Fraser, and the houses of Perles and Brides are equally admirable. Another attraction is a house of cucumbers, grown to single stems trained vertically, with fruits eighteen inches long and not yet ready to cut. Tomatoes are trained in the same way and the stems are loaded with clusters of fruit. Mr. Fraser uses English Forcing cucumber and two varieties of tomatoes, Lorillard and Sutton's Best of All. He does not find it at all necessary to fertilize the flowers, as the fruit of both tomatoes and cucumbers set too thickly. The mushroom house is well worth imitating, and in fact the whole place shows the same skill and judgment that gave Mr. Fraser his reputation while on Gay street.

The last club meeting was well attended. The chrysanthemum show committee made a final report in which it stated that all debts are paid and thirty-nine per cent returned to contributors to the guarantee fund Wm. Fisher sold the most tickets, amounting to $33.50. We are to have a carnation show at the club hall on February 26. At the last session Halliday Bros. showed a bunch of their red carnation Matt. Richmond, and several varieties from P. Welch's place were on exhibition. The question box was, as usual, the chief feature of the meeting. MACK.

MORE EXCELLENT DECORATIONS AT THE WHITE HOUSE.—FINE WORK BY AMERICAN ROSE CO.—PERSONAL DOINGS AND OTHER MATTERS.

The second state dinner of the season was given January 17, by President and Mrs. McKinley, when the decorations in the East Room, where the company was received, were as elaborate as on the previous occasion and the floral decoration of the long table was the most elaborate seen this winter, consisting entirely of orchids and adiantums. The only decoration in the Blue Parlor was a fine specimen of Dendrobium nobile on the mantle. The decorations were under the supervision of Henry Pfister, head gardener of the White House conservatory, and Geo. H. Brown, the public gardener.

The American Rose Co. had the decoration for a dinner of twenty covers, January 20, given by Secretary and Mrs. Gage in honor of the President and Mrs. McKinley. The materials used were principally Begonia semperflorens gigantea rosea, Asparagus Sprengerii and their white rose Ivory.

A. Gude & Bro. are cutting a quantity of very fine American Beauty roses from houses that were not finished until last November.

C. W. Wolf, formerly with Patterson Bros., now with A. Gude & Bro., was married January 10, to Miss Pauline K. Sayer, of Washington.

O. A. C. Oehmler, formerly with J. Louis Loose, is now with Z. D. Blackstone, whose windows are and have been looking very fine through the holidays.

J. H. Small & Sons and A. Gude & Bro. have each contributed $25 to the fund to purchase a home for Admiral Schley.

C. F. Hale is very much interested in a new chemical fire extinguisher.

Last week being cloudy good roses and violets were somewhat scarce but this week they are of better quality and more plentiful. Business is fair. P. G.

BUSY TIMES IN THE KENTUCKY METROPOLIS.—STOCK SCARCE.—GROWERS LOSE BY FAILURE OF HEATING APPARATUS.—SOME GOOD CARNATIONS.—VARIOUS ITEMS OF INTEREST.

Trade is good in all lines and stock is scarce, particularly roses; the Anchorage Rose Company is getting $12 per hundred for the best stock. The season is so mild that F. Walker & Co., are filling many orders for nursery stock. Wood & Stubbs report a good seed trade, one order for spring amounting to $1200; they have an original catalogue of sixty-four pages. Nanz & Neuner also have their catalogue out and it is the largest of its kind published in the south.

Two of our growers have suffered from the failure of their heaters. Henry Pfeifer's loss was heavy but George Schultz kept up the temperature by charcoal fires in the houses until Mrs. Schultz was overcome by the gas.

C. H. Kunzman is cutting some remarkably fine blooms of the newer carnations. He has a cerise seedling which promises to be a world beater.

Last winter killed the cane brakes near Louisville so that we have to look elsewhere for our stakes.

Chas. Rayner will visit his old home in England during the approaching summer.

L. W. Wheeler, representing Vaughan's Seed Store, was a recent visitor who found his stay profitable.

Victor Mathis is cutting some particularly fine stock, both roses and carnations.

Jacob Schultz has purchased 100 boxes of glass for delivery in March. W.

Madison, N. J.

The Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Club had a smoker last Wednesday evening. Everybody was jovial—the rival quartettes, one black and one white, the little darkey with the cornet, J. Austin Shaw, the poet; J. P. Cleary, the tragedian; President Duckham, who conducted the services with impressive seriousness, the hilarious delegation from the metropolis and the local gardeners and florists to the number of two score.

Previous to the minstrel entertainment a brief business session was held and the officers of the past year—President Duckham, Vice-President Totty, Secretary Atkins and Treasurer Charlton, were all unanimously re elected. Then the president took his position as manager. He was composure personified as though he had faced the ordeal before. A colored aggregation picked the strings of the melodious guitar and one infantile prodigy excited unbounded enthusiasm with cornet solos. As the president consulted a list of good things in his vest pocket, there followed a quick succession of musical treats, an original topical ditty with the cheerful refrain "These bones shall rise again," proving especially popular. Then the Florham quartette came on the scene and gave good evidence of the musical abilities of the Anglo-Saxon race. Three of these gentlemen—Messrs. S. McCallum, Geo. Coombs and John Dowing, are employes of A. Herrington at Florham Farms. J. Austin Shaw's "poem," Cleary's "Fagin" and A. J. Bunnell's "Nimble Dick" were among the other enjoyable numbers that were put on as the sandwiches and punch were passed around. Just a little seriousness was intermingled, Mr. O'Mara speaking hopefully of the indications of the time soon to come when all the local clubs and societies would see their way to the establishment of an interstate horticultural association and Mr. Stewart endorsing Mr. O'Mara's views as to the benefits to follow from the coming national convention.

When, at a late hour the entertainment came to a close, it was the unanimous conviction of the participants that the Morris County boys know how to get up a royal good time.

STILES, WIS.—Otto J. Foss proposes to embark in the florist business here.

SANDWICH, MASS.—W. C. Chapman, the introducer of the Cape Cod pink pond lily, died at his home in Spring Hill, on January 8, aged 75 years.

NEW YORK.—The National Florists' Board of Trade, of this city, intimates that on and after March 1, 1900, the concession of two dollars offered members of the S. A. F. in 1898, on their subscriptions for credit and information lists, will be withdrawn.

THE season has thus far been so mild that growers are not suffering because of the advanced price of coal.

ROSARIANS of this country will learn with regret of the death of Mrs. Wm. Paul, of Waltham Cross, Eng.

FEW of the strong concerns making window glass are willing to book large orders for greenhouse sizes at prevailing rates.

THE issue of the Garden (London) for January 13 comes to hand without the colored plate so long a regular feature of this publication.

OUR DIRECTORY for 1900 is now ready, with many changes and new features of the greatest value to all branches of the trade. Price $2.00.

BEDDING plants for the approaching season will be in rather more than usual supply, of the best varieties, generally well grown and should command advanced prices.

THE act now pending in congress, relating to the importation of trees, shrubs and plants, expressly excepts from its provisions those commodities commonly known as florists' stock.

THE appearance of the official publication of the Canadian Horticultural Association is promised for February 15. It is to be a semi-monthly journal for the trade and professional gardeners.

THE advertisement of W. A. McFadden, Rosebank, Cincinnati, in our issue of January 20, stated the cyclamen plants averaged three blooms each. The number of blooms should have been twelve.

MUCH of the work upon the twelfth census is being taken up in advance and valuable statistics compiled. Among the industries so treated are the flower and nursery trades, also seed growing, it being the intention of the Department to secure an early report from all interested parties and to this end blanks are being sent out.

A Good Investment.

AM. FLORIST CO.—I wish you would please discontinue my adv.—"50,000 gladiolus bulbs." Your paper certainly reaches the trade, as I have received more orders than I can fill.

Dielytra Spectabilis for Easter.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—When and how shall I start Dielytra spectabilis to bloom at Easter? W. W.

Dielytra spectabilis is one of the easiest plants to force into bloom that can be taken in hand—it responds to heat so readily. To bloom for Easter, four weeks should be ample time in a temperature of 50° to 55°—not higher, or the growth made will be too soft to stand well. E. O. ORPET.

Small Connecting Pipes.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—I am building a house 20x60 feet, and intend to have four runs of 4-inch pipe on side, heating with hot water. Will one 2-inch flow and one 2-inch return suffice to connect the boiler with the 4-inch pipes? G. & B.

From the statement that there are "four runs of four-inch pipe on side" it is not quite clear whether there are four runs on each side, or only two, but as four would most likely be required that will be considered as the number in use. The four runs of sixty feet each will make more than 250 square feet of radiation and this is considerably more than can be supplied, especially when in the form of 4-inch pipe. If this pipe is cast-iron hot water pipe, it probably measures four inches in diameter outside and in that case fair results could be obtained if a 2-inch flow is used to supply water to two 4-inch pipes, one of which carries the water to the farther end of the house, while the other brings it back to the starting point, where a 2-inch pipe joins it to the boiler. For four 4-inch pipes it will be best to have 3 inch, or better yet 4-inch, connections with the boiler, and then run two of the pipes as flows and the others as returns. If it is not possible to use connections larger than 2-inch, the circulation will be greatly improved by running the large pipes as near the boiler as possible. L. R. TAFT.

OBITUARY.

M. KROHN.

M. Krohn, the well known florist at 2324 Fifth avenue, Rock Island, Ill., died Sunday night, January 21, from blood poisoning resulting from a small cut upon his finger.

JOSEPH NICOL.

Following an illness of nearly a year Joseph Nicol's demise came upon January 17, at his home at Kingston, Ont. Mr. Nicol was born at Montrose, Scotland, sixty-three years ago. He came to this country when quite young and for thirty years had been in the florist business near Kingston, conducting a well ordered garden at Cataraqui.

JOHN PEARSON.

The trade in Memphis, Tenn., loses one of its oldest gardeners and florists by the death of John Pearson, which occurred January 19, after a short illness with pneumonia. Mr. Pearson was an Englishman and a thorough gardener, having obtained his training in the famous establishment of Veitch & Son. He came to this country twenty-five years ago and held several positions in private places before locating at Memphis. He was engaged by Avery Lamb as foreman for the Memphis Floral Co., afterward embarking in successful business for himself. Mr. Pearson endeared himself to the trade and general public by his courteous manner and kindly disposition. He leaves a widow.

ALFRED NEUNER.

The death is announced of Alfred Neuner at a watering place in Germany, where he had been sojourning some months for the benefit of his health. Mr. Neuner was well known to seedsmen throughout the country. He was born at Stuttgart, Germany, about forty years ago, and coming to the United States entered Vick's establishment at Rochester, N. Y., as a boy, rising rapidly to an important position in the catalogue department. Later he was a member of the firm of Nanz & Neuner, of Louisville, Ky., but retired from that concern on the occasion of its reorganization a few years ago. Removing to Chicago he was employed at Vaughan's Seed Store about two years. Poor health compelled him to relinquish his position and he returned to Germany last January.

J. M. HODGSON.

New York and Newport are deprived of a familiar figure through the sudden demise, at eleven o'clock on the night of January 24, of J. M. Hodgson. Mr. Hodgson was born in England seventy years ago and came to this country while yet a young man. He acquired a thorough knowledge of the florists' trade and thirty years ago established a business of his own in New York city, his store at 561 Fifth avenue being now one of the best known in the city. A quarter of a century ago he opened a branch at Newport. He has always catered to the most fashionable trade at each place and his large show houses at Newport are among its noted attractions. Mr. Hodgson's death was due to apoplexy. He leaves three daughters and one son, who is a partner in his father's business. Interment will be at Newport.

MRS. R. J. MENDENHALL.

Abby G. Mendenhall, wife of R. J. Mendenhall, the well known Minneapolis florist, and one of the foremost women of the city, died January 11, as the result of a sudden and severe attack of pneumonia, contracted while in pursuit of her favorite work among the missions of the city, in all of which Mrs. Mendenhall has always taken an active interest. Mrs. Abby G. Mendenhall was born in West Falmouth, August 1, 1832. She was one of the two daughters of Capt. Silas

Swift, a merchant sailor. On her mother's side, as well as on her father's, she was descended from a long line of Quaker sailors. Her ancestors have for many generations been prominent in the charitable associations in connection with the Society of Friends. On February 11, 1858 she was married to R. J. Mendenhall, a native of North Carolina, and in April of that year the young people moved to Minneapolis.

FOR SALE CHEAP—Up-to-date store fixtures for florist; cooler, wall case, counter, etc Detailed description cheerfully furnished by F. DANZER, 745 Milwaukee Av., W., Detroit, Mich.

FOR SALE—Four greenhouses well stocked, with fine residence, all as good as new; hot water heating, city water, electric cars, R.R. MORITZ TITTEL, 1939 W. Leland Ave., Jefferson Park, Chicago.

FOR SALE—Who wants a chance to secure a home and a business for little cash; dwelling and 400 ft of glass; no competion; good thing for florist or lettuce grower; only $400 required. AI CHANCE, care American Florist.

FOR SALE. A first class greenhouse bus'ness about 80 miles from Chicago. Have 11,000 square feet of glass and considerable valuable ground. Located in central part of city of about 20,000 population makes the property quite high priced. Any live florist with small capital can purchase a fine range of glass very reasonably; doing a fine business. Can give long lease of ground with privilege of buying or will sell part of ground. Everything is as good as new and a bargain—a chance you won't often get. Good reasons for selling. Don't inquire unless you mean business. Ad's Florist, care Am. Florist.

We've thousands of readers and hundreds of advertisers. Each helps the other.

STATE OF THE MARKET.—FUNERAL WORK HEAVY.—PLANS FOR THE EASTER SHOWING AT PHIPPS CONSERVATORY.

Trade is still fair and prices about the same. All stock is plentiful except roses. There are few social affairs to keep flowers in demand but what is lacking in this direction is made up by funeral work. One funeral last week brought numerous orders to Gus & J. W. Ludwig, E. C. Ludwig, Thos. Ulam & Co., L. I. Neff, Mrs. E. W. Williams and Randolph & McClements. The last mentioned firm had the house decoration.

There is no special exhibition on at Phipps conservatories just now but Superintendent Wm. Falconer is formulating plans for the coming Easter display, which gives promise of being the finest floral exhibition ever seen in this city. Several novelties will be shown.

G. O.

LAFAYETTE, IND.—Mrs. Chas. W. De Paw is preparing to embark in business as a rose grower and is planning to build several houses in the spring.

CINCINNATI, O.—Carnation Irene was exhibited here by Crabb & Hunter, Grand Rapids, Mich., and not by Witterstaetter as reported last week. Irene will be introduced next year.

VISITED NEW YORK: Alfred J. Brown, Grand Rapids, Mich.

TAYLOR & ANGEL, seed dealers, of Evansville, Ind, lost $3,000 in a recent fire.

THE demand for high priced beans, peas and onion seed is not so fierce at present.

CATALOGUE houses are finding the increased cost of paper a not inconsiderable item.

THE American Seed Trade Association, with a good programme, will meet in Chicago, June 12.

VISITED CHICAGO: J. E. Northrup, of Northrup, King & Co., Minneapolis; F. H. Henry, of Henry & Lee, New York.

OUR DIRECTORY for 1900 is now ready, with many changes and new features of the greatest value to all branches of the trade. Price $2.00.

GROWING contracts for peas and beans are now being made with the farmers; quite an advance over last year is being demanded and paid by the jobbers.

SOUTH HAVEN, MICH.—The Michigan Seed Company have shipped five cases of seeds and bulbs to Washington, D. C., to be forwarded to the Paris exposition.

THE Albert Dickinson Seed Company is loser to the extent of nearly $500, through the pilfering of postage stamps by one of its employes, who is now under arrest.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS. — The Chappell-Miller Co, 408 Main street, has sold its florists' business to Wm. Schlatter & Son.

AURORA, ILL.—Emil Leuba went away from here December 29, leaving all his belongings behind him. It is feared some mishap may have befallen him.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.—The plans for consolidating the Amateur Horticultural Society and the Hampden Horticultural Society have fallen through. The former organization will celebrate its eleventh anniversary February 2.

GENEVIEVE LORD.

THE peer of any light pink Carnation ever offered to the trade. A commercial triumph. Its beautiful color, large size and its matchless length and stiffness of stem make it, beyond a doubt, the queen of its class. There is nothing like it. We offer it to the commercial grower as a money getter of the first magnitude.

As an exhibition flower, it ranks high. It will take care of itself in its class. It has carried off the highest honors wherever shown. The blooms are now being sold in the most critical market and bringing highest prices. It will not be over-propagated. Our book will close as soon as the limit is reached. Order early and be sure.

THE NURSERY TRADE.

AM. ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

W. J. PETERS, Pres.; D. S. LAKE, Vice-Pres.; GEORGE C. SEAGER, Rochester, N. Y., Sec'y.

J. MERRICK & Co., nurserymen, have moved from their old location on Common street to Main street, Waterville, Me.

CHARLES H. STUART, of C. W. Stuart & Co., the Newark, N. Y., nurserymen, has gone to Riverside, Cal., to seek relief from a throat difficulty.

EDWIN A. KANST, of the South Park system, Chicago, states that since Carolina poplars have been substituted for elms upon the down town boulevards very few of the trees have died.

Tree Planting in Chicago.

There has been an unusual amount of tree planting in Chicago this season and not the least of the operations have been those in charge of Jacob F. Foster, superintendent for the South Park Commission. During the last four months more than 205,000 young trees and shrubs have been planted in the parks and boulevards of the South Side. The plantings were approximately as follows: Jackson Park, 94,000; Washington Park, 65,000; Drexel boulevard, 19,500, Midway, 15,000; Drexel Square, 11,000; Garfield boulevard, 2,500.

Of this vast quantity of stock, embracing many varieties, only an insignificant proportion was purchased, nearly the whole number being taken from the nursery at Jackson Park, where 60,000 trees and shrubs remain. This year's work will increase the nursery stock to 200,000. Fred. Kanst, who has charge of the work, has now been landscape gardener at the South Parks for twenty-six years. In Jackson Park, the site of the World's Fair, the work of reconstruction this winter will cover some sixteen acres.

SHORT!

It is when stock is short that you find out what a commission man can do. Stock is short now, very short, particularly roses, but we're filling orders just the same, even most of the late ones by wire; filling them with good stock---we're headquarters for that kind. Everything billed at Chicago market rates at time of shipment.

At Flatbush.

A practice game of five frames opened the fun at Flatbush on Thursday evening, January 16. The score showed that the two best men were C. Wocker and Alf. Zeller, and, according to time honored precedent, these gentlemen had the privilege of picking sides. The good judgment of Mr. Wocker, even when the available material was more or less handicapped by the weight of the Florists' Club banquet of the night before and another big dinner at Mr Ward's is plainly shown in the following scores, a perusal of which will undoubtedly put a premium on shares in certain of the players who have never been at a premium before. And the pots were captured by J. I. Raynor and W. J. Stewart, respectively.

Oceanic, N. J.

At the semi-monthly meeting of the Monmouth County Horticultural Society Prof. Byron D. Halsted delivered his lecture on "Parasitic Fungi Under Glass." Although it was storming, ninety-four members were in attendance. Prof. Halsted stated that carnation rust was an old pest in Europe and that it doubtless came to us on imported stock near 1889 and within the last ten years has spread throughout the country. He showed by illustrations how rust can be quickly distinguished by the plump gray blisters produced upon the leaves and stems, and showed how it spreads. The fungous diseases of violets and their remedies were very thoroughly described. Mildew on roses was discussed and shown by illustrations as a surface feeder which does not send its filaments deeply into and between the cells of the leaf. Rust on chrysanthemums was also shown by illustrations and a very lively discussion followed which was participated in by Dr. W. Whitmore, Rev. Dr. Kneip, Prof. Walling, Frank McMahan, A. Stewart, H. A. Kettel, N. Butterbach and others.

After the lecture, refreshments were served which were followed by cigars and good cheer. The committee reported upon N. Butterbach's seedling carnation, No. 11, in terms of highest praise, styling it the best yellow to date. B.

ETHEL CROCKER

Absolutely the BEST PINK CARNATION ever offered the trade.

A fact fully borne out by its record, being equally good with Craig, Hill and myself (an assurance that it is not a success in one soil and a failure in another). By its having been shown at the flower shows and clubs since early in September (an assurance that it is not a good late carnation but an all season variety), in color, size, fragrance and stem it is just what the "storemen" want. In habit, constitution and freedom of bloom it is just what the grower wants. It produces more flowers to the square foot than any other known variety, and is never out of crop from September to July. With 18 000 stock plants to work from there is no danger of it being overpropagated, and all orders entrusted to me will be filled with cuttings selected from the plants and the order filled by myself, thus doubly assuring good stock. Honest sample blooms furnished, prepaid, at $1.00 per dozen—amount deducted from all orders for 100 or over. Up to date, every sample, excepting one, out of several hundred sent, has brought an order.

Price per 100, $10; per 25, $2.50; per 1000, $75; per 250, $18.75. HERR'S PANSIES, good little plants, at 75 cts. per 100; $4.00 per 1000.

A GRAND NEW WHITE Carnation.

Seedling of Lizzie McGowan and Mme. Diaz Albertini in its fifth year. The flowers are large, fine shaped, and of strong fragrance. Petals are heavy, of good substance and nicely fringed. Calyx is very strong after the style of Mme. Albertini and none bursting, the stem strong, holding the flower erect. The plant is a good grower and free bloomer, not subject to stem rot or any disease. Rooted cuttings ready February 1 at $1.50 per Doz. $10.00 per Hundred. $70.00 per Thousand.

Trade conditions are healthy for the weather has been such as not to bring out too many flowers, and roses are in short supply, as are the better grades of carnations, common sorts being about equal to the demand. Bulbous stock is now somewhat short and violets none too plentiful.

Chas. Chadwick, who recently suffered from fire, has his houses closed in and is getting ready for an immediate crop of lettuce. He is also stocking up liberally on rooted carnation cuttings for next winter's stock.

Eli Cross has returned from New York, where he went to meet his sister from England. GEO. F. CRABB.

LAWRENCE, MASS.—Paul R. Burtt, of Lowell, has opened a branch office here with F. H. Baldwin as manager.

LENOX, MASS.—The annual ball of the Lenox Horticultural Society on the evening of January 23 was a most brilliant success. The decorations were very fine.

POT-GROWN LILACS FOR FORCING.

We can still supply a fine lot of pot-grown Lilacs, bushy, well-budded dwarf plants. This is always good stock for the retailer to handle, either as cut blooms or to sell as pot plants. A night temperature of 60 to 70 degrees will develop their flowers in three weeks' time, and a continual supply of fine flowers can be had from now until Easter at but small expense and labor. The varieties we offer are,

Charles X.—Red, $6 per doz., $45 per 100.
Marie Legraye—White, $6 per doz., $45 per hundred.
Mme. Lemoine—Double white, $6 per doz., $45 per 100.

AZALEA MOLLIS.

This hardy Azalea is used extensively in all European cities for early forcing; they are great favorities on account of their varied and brilliant coloring.

We offer a fine lot of bushy plants, twelve to fifteen inches high, well covered with buds, at $6 per doz.

ACACIA ARMATA.

A pretty spring flowering variety which produces its flowers in globular heads from the axils of the foliage in such a manner as to completely envelop the plant in a pleasing light yellow; an excellent plant for Easter forcing, succeeding under the same culture as the Azalea; a nice lot of bushy plants, 12 to 15 in. high, 5 inch pots, 50c. each; $5 per doz.

The Lilacs and Azalea Mollis can be shipped by freight without injury to any kind of weather.

Since the holidays trade has been very steady and as a whole very satisfactory to both grower and storeman. Of the newer varieties of carnations G. H. Crane seems to be the king-pin of the 1899 list, with Gomez and America well up in the race. Melba has not been exactly a howling success and is not as desirable with us as Mrs. James Dean. Maud Adams is like the little girl who "when she is good is very, very good, but when she is bad she is horrid." In white varieties Flora Hill has had the lead but now has to concede first place to White Cloud. Mrs. Bradt is popular and though more plentiful than last year, none have gone to waste.

Roses of the best quality are in good demand and fair supply. Lange will plant a house of Liberty for next year.

Lilies are plentiful and selling well. There is still considerable disease noticeable among the Harrisii, but longiflorums, both Japan and Bermuda grown, are very good.

H. F. A. Lange has just completed his store alterations, and now has one of the best equipped establishments in New England. A. H. L.

HOLYOKE, MASS.—E. D. Shaw has sold an interest in his business to J. B. Bellamy and the business will hereafter be conducted under the title of E. D. Shaw & Co.

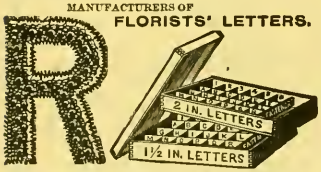
AMERICAN FLORIST CO., 324 DEARBORN STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Nashville, Tenn.

The floral trade in this city suffered a very decided falling off immediately after the holidays and has continued very quiet ever since. There has been an abundance of flowes and potted plants. Azaleas were never prettier and primroses and cyclamens have made good decorations and had a fair sale. Roman hyacinths and narcissi continue abundant and useful in funeral work. Roses are very good, both in color and form, but are selling at a very low price for the midwinter season. Carnations are much sought after and are of good quality. One dealer is showing a fine supply of Harrisii, calla and speciosum lilies.

M. C. DORRIS.

Omaha.



On January 10 the Nebraska State Horticultural Society held its annual meeting at Lincoln and, as usual, the florists were in evidence. J. H. Hadkinson and Louis Henderson, of Omaha, and L. Chapin, of Lincoln, read essays and Chapin Bros. and W. J. Hesser exhibited plants and flowers. J. H. Hadkinson, W. J. Hesser and L. Henderson were re-elected as officers of the society.

We are having very mild weather, which is appreciated, as coal is high. Business is brisk and steady.

Cypress Greenhouse Material.

We are the pioneers in Clear Cypress Greenhouse Material. We discovered that Cypress is better than any other wood for greenhouses from top of posts up and we introduced it, and fought for it against many prejudices, and finally succeeded in bringing it into general use.

Others have attempted to follow where we lead, others are trying to reap what we sowed, but we have the experience and are recognized as experts in greenhouse construction.
